Senate to debate 'Water War', dorm funds, and CAS position

by ROBIN PLATTS
Staff Reporter

Do you live in a dorm? Are you a member of CAS? Are you concerned with who will be spending your money next year? If you answered any of the above in the affirmative, there will be something of interest for you at tonight's S.C.C. meeting.

Classified as the major item of interest, is the Senate Appropriations Committee's recommendation to make the Residence Halls a fee supporting organization. That means the SCC would receive the money from the dorm vending machines and then reallocate it back to the dorms upon their budget requests. Presently, the residence halls are self-support-

Experience school music in workshop

A Workshop on "Music Experiences for the Elementary Schools" will be conducted at Lock Haven State College on Friday, October 18, in the Sloan Fine Arts Center.

Under the direction of Dr. Faith McNitt of the college music department the workshop is open without charge to present and future elementary classroom teachers and to music specialists. Dr. George D. Curfman will conduct the workshop.

Dr. Curfman, professor of music education at Lebanon Valley College, is recognized for his workshops and for his contributions to

Today's Editorial

Not just another concert

With Homecoming Weekend slowly creeping up on us the perennial questions of, "Why don't we have a better rock group scheduled; Why do we have to waste money on parades, Peter Neros and fireworks;" and "Why don't we have more things for students to enjoy" once again circulate.

But if you were in State College last weekend you probably could answer those questions quite easily. Penn State's Homecoming consisted mostly of thousands of men and women over the age of 30 invading a "small city of young people".

But these alumni were given reasons for coming back to buy buttons with "Go Penn State", blue and white hats with "Penn State" enscribed on them and blue and white shakers. And one of the reasons was not having the BEATLES get back together for a special performance or a concert by Seals and Crofts. By seeing people standing in awe of new buildings, looking for buildings they remember but just can't find, and running across the street to embrace each other it became evident what Homecoming really was.

It wasn't a football game that was won, it wasn't a gigantic parade; it wasn't a concert by the college choir; and it certainly wasn't a rock concert. Homecoming is an atmosphere, a place and time to look at change, be it for the better or the worse.

A schedule of events just provides a medium for that exchange to take place.

To the "Security Guard"
c/o the Editor

To you unfair beseechers named below
In false disguise, security are called
In cases needing not for you to show
Your face appears and makes us all appalled.
In line of duty you are not awake
To open doors of Raub in mornings cold.
In serving students-duty you forsake,
But you in fun harrassment are too bold.
I know if you do not unlock the doors
At night you need not bother to lock again.
This gives you time to badger students more,
And we are enemies, the doors your friends.
But just for once get some more nightly sleep
And door unlocking try to keep.

P.S. If you do find this form in fun to scorn,
Oh curse the day security was born.

Reread Your Sociology

Why give respect where respect is not due? This is 1974 get your Stuff together Lock Haven!! This is especially for the person and their friends who thought that a false accusation would make niggers run and do as they sat!! The letter was written on Oct. 14, 1974 and was aimed at the entire black population on campus. A Stereotype of a Group. We were classified wrong according to what I learned in Sociology. We are not "This Group", but the "OUT GROUP". So from here on in get your sociology book out before you classify three or four individuals as representatives of an entire group.

The person begins by stating that certain students do not feel that they should take their trays up. This is fine. He continues by stating that he is a senior and has never seen this occur before. He should have torn his letter up then. I am a junior and ever since I have been here it has been done by black as well as white and still continues. Where has this person been for four years on sabatacle, or are they a transfer. I wasn't aware that their was such a program or I would have been on it too!! This person and their friends must be so scared of the blacks that they watch only us and can not see anyone else of course we are the most obvious, so I could understand it if they couldn't see anything but a boogie man in front of them!!! We are all individuals, each one acts as they want to and if anyone does not want to take up their tray, get on everyone. It is apparent that someone either needs to take a refresher course in sociology if they haven't had it yet, then it is mighty late since they are a senior, and it is a general education requirement.

We do think we're speacial and it is YOU LHSC who make us feel this way. We are better than you because you are ignorant. Wake up!! We are sick of this!! We pay to go here just as you, and we are here to learn and it is hard enough staying up here now, without YOU hassling us without looking at yourselves.

So before you make accusations have them backed up, we are not perfect, but we are individuals and each

Shootin' it with Shep

The St. Louis Cardinals, and the New England Patriots; usually the teams everyone wanted to play are still undefeated. In previous years the two teams were more or less the doormats of the league. This year, the majority of the teams in the NFL would rather play the Dolphins in Miami than play either the Cardinals or the Patriots anywhere.

St. Louis beat Dallas 31-28 on Sunday to win their fifth straight game. The Patriots easily knocked off Baltimore 24-0. The Dolphins continued to slip, bowing to Washington 20-17. They now trail Buffalo by one game and New England by two in the American Conference Eastern Division.

In other games of interest, the Green Bay Packers ran their record to 3-2 by knocking off the Rams 17-6. Buffalo beat Baltimore 27-14, the Eagles killed the Giants 35-7, and Pittsburgh tripped Kansas City 34-24.

My predictions came along a little better this week. I picked five out of seven correctly. It isn't great but it's enough to bring my season total up to 7-4. I think I'll take a shot at all 13 pro games this week and see how I do. So here goes:

Atlanta over the hopeless Saints; New England won't be able to handle the improving "juice" of O.J., so I pick Buffalo to upset the Patriots; Philadelphia will handle Dallas; Joe Namath usually has a good game against the Colts, the Steelers should have very little, if any, trouble handling the Browns; Washington easily over New York; it's St. Louis' turn for a day off against the Oilers; the Vikings will make Detroit their sixth straight victim; Los Angeles will rebound from their loss to Green Bay and beat

San Francisco; Miami is about due to come alive and really kill somebody it could be against the chiefs this week. Cincinnati invades Oakland with both teams spating 4-1 records and first place in their respective divisions. Look for the Beugals to go 5-1. The Packers should still be high from their upset victory over the Rams, but they won't have to be too high to beat the faltering Bears.

All I can say about college football is that I picked Ohio State to be number one and so far they arr. They anihilated Wisconsin 52-7. Number two Oklahoma needed a late field goal to beat Texas 16-13 and it'll only be a matter of time until they get knocked off. Penn State, currently ranked 15th, could possibly move up a place or two on the basis fo a 55-0 out of Wake Forest. No. 2 Oklahoma beat Wake Forest 63-0 two

Our basketball and hockey are due to begin their seasons directly. So before the baseball season is over, & before football is half started we have two more sports with which to saturate ourselves. This isn't even to mention golf and tennis which seem to go on continously and of course we can't forget bowling. The leaders in these sports should get together and develop some sort of arrangement to try to eliminate some of this situation. It's no wonder attendance is slacking off in most major sports.

Joe Paterno still opposes the using of freshmen in varsity football. He can't complain too much though. One freshman, Jim Cepalo, scored two touchdowns in Saturday's game with Wake Forest. Another, Randy Sidler, caught passes covering 24 and 17 yards.

State College High

School beat previously undefeated Cedar Cliff 42-27 lost Friday night for their 36th consecutive win.

Hale Irwin because the third professional on tour to win an "Eyes Right" award from the Society of Visual care. He won the U.S. Open in June while wearing a pair of wire-rimmed glasses. The other winners of this award were Arnold Palmer and Tommy Aaron.

LHS booters to battle Kutztowner's

By GARY BRUBAKER
Staff Writer

Following a tough 3-1 loss at the hands of powerful East Stroudsburg, the LHS Soccer squad will do battle with another tough opponent today at 3 p.m. on McCoilum Field.

Kutztown will provide the opposition for the Eagles as Coach Herrmann's crew goes into the match with a 5-2-1 record.

Kutztown, a newcomer to the Eagle's schedule this year has lost but one match this season- that being to East Stroudsburg, 4-2. The score was deadlocked 2-2 after the first 45 minutes with Stroudsburg breaking it open in the second half.

This Saturday the Eagles are on the road as they travel to Slippery Rock in a match which could very well decide the Western Conference Division title. Starting time for the match is set for 2 p.m.

Kung Fu local chapter organizes

A Karate Club has recently been formed here at Lock Haven and it is open to any member of the college community.

Mike Bonadio, a student at Lock Haven is the instructor for the class. Mr. Bonadio has his Black Belt and Mr. Pete Redpath the club advisor also has a Karate belt. Together they hope to show the practical knowledge of karate rather than as a weapon for defense or offense.

By attending the meetings every Monday and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Rogers Gymnasium the karate student may gain the various belts. The club is S.C.C. recognized and self-supporting through a one dollar joining fee for each practice session.

Village of the damned featured tonite in Ulmer Planetarium

A strange thing occurred one day in the pleasant village of Midwich in southern England. Suddenly, for no reason, everybody froze in whatever position they were in.

No gas or radiation was detectable. Then, just as it had fallen, the curse lifted. Other than a slight chill, the inhabitants retained nothing of what had happened.

Two months passed when the village doctor realized every woman of child-bearing age was pregnant—without male assistance.

talk "Continuing Mysteries of Pigeon Orientation," will be presented at 12:45 in Ulmer Planetarium, open to the public without charge. After the lecture, awards will be presented to outstanding students in science at the college.

Formally the Science Major Mixer, the Science Convocation is a gathering of students and faculty to maintain a high area of student-teacher contact. The convocation is intended to have an informal atmosphere so students and teachers may have a chance to share ideas.

The quiet peacefulness of the village reflected in the strangely pale, blond children. Unknown to the residents, the children hold power to force evil on adults.

MGM released this film in 1960, but misguided it. The film wasn't given a Broadway sendoff and received little promotion. Starring George Sanders and Michael Gwynne, the movie unfolds one of the neatest little chillers in recent film history.

"Village of the Damned" will be presented at 8:00 this evening in Ulmer Planetarium.
