Margaret Mead Will Lecture Here Nov. 8

Dr. Margaret Mead, world famous anthropologist and author, will speak in Price Auditorium on November 8 at 8:15 p.m. She is probably best known for her book, Coming of Age in Samoa, first published in 1928.

She is presently curator at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. She has been a Columbia University professor of anthropology, director at Columbia, and professor of psychiatry at the University of Cincinnati.

Department Reorganization Is Underway

A reorganization of the academic departments at Lock Haven State College is presently underway. This is a result of the provisions in the collective bargaining agreement between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and all state college faculties.

Under the new agreement, every member of the faculty bargaining unit is to belong to an academic department. Each department must have a chairman, to be elected by the members of that department.

In the new organization, the School of Arts and Science will consist of 12 departments, as compared to seven in the past. Previously established departments remaining the same include art, music, and psychology. The remaining departments are either combinations of previous departments or newly formed from existing academic disciplines.

Each department will be under a division director. The division of humanities will consist of the departments of English, philosophy, speech-theatre, art, music, and foreign language.

The division of social sciences will consist of the departments of psychology; history political science, econometrics, sociology, anthropology, and social welfare.

The division of natural and mathematical sciences will consist of the departments of biological sciences, chemistry, physics, geo-sciences, mathematics, and computer science.

The School of Education will consist of the department of basic studies and services and the department of specialized studies. Working under the dean will be a director of instruction and a director of field experiences.

Under the new organization, there will no longer be a dividing of responsibilities and titles between elementary education and secondary education.

The School of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation will consist of three newly designated departments. They are the department of basic physical education, the department of professional physical education, and the department of health education, safety, and recreation.

According to Who's Who, Dr. Mead has also done research in child development, in the ethnology and cybernetics of seven oceanic cultures, and in the native languages and applications to the field of national character. Besides Coming of Age in Samoa, some of her later publications are Themes in a French Culture, and American Women.

Representative Gerald Ford, minority leader, and Washington columnist, Jack Anderson are two other speakers coming under the auspices of the SCC Cultural Affairs Committee. Ford of Michigan will speak February 13, 1973 while Anderson is scheduled to speak March 19. Both are scheduled to speak at 8:15 p.m. in Price Auditorium.

Learn To Meditate — Enroll in 'TM' Course

Students will have the opportunity to explore the mysteries of transcendental meditation by means of a course to be offered at Lock Haven State.

The principals, practices, and benefits of transcendental meditation (TM) will be explained at an introductory lecture Wednesday, October 18 in Ulmer Planetarium. This lecture, to begin at 8 p.m., will be given by Greg Sarnow, a Penn State student and TM instructor, and Hal Masover, a full-time TM teacher in Williamsport.

A second preparatory lecture will follow in which the mechanics of the meditation technique will be discussed. This will be held in the first week of November.

Both of these lectures will be presented free of charge.

The course itself will be conducted for four consecutive days during the first weekend of November for a period of an hour and one-half per day. The instruction will be on a one-to-one basis. Fees for the course run $35 for high school students, $45 for college students, and $75 for full-time working adults. Included under this fee are the four days of individualized instruction plus a list of advanced programs and group meditations.

Greg Sarnow, who has been practicing TM for two years and teaching it since May, described it as a simple, natural mental technique which expands the conscious capacity of the mind and provides the body with deep rest. He emphasized that TM is not a religion, philosophy, or way of life. It is easily learned by anyone.

The meditation method is practiced for 15 to 20 minutes twice daily. In an article appearing in Today's Health, one author and participant of TM wrote, "Meditators claim that 20 minutes of meditation each morning and evening brings them happiness, reduces tensions, gives them more energy and creativity."

Concerning the goals of transcendental meditation, Greg explained that education is one of the prime targets of TM because "it is felt by students all over the world that the educational system is lacking in a basic way." It is the belief of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi that what is lacking is a subject that deals with expanding the container of knowledge. This course focuses on expanding the container of knowledge; consequently, it supplements all other subjects. Greg had the privilege of studying with the Maharishi this past winter in Spain and Italy.

Recently, some U.S. universities introduced TM and the Science of Creative Intelligence (SCI), the intellectual side of TM, into their curriculums. Yale, Harvard, and UCLA, to name a few, now have regular credit courses in SCI.

A great deal of scientific research has been done on transcendental meditation in the last couple of years. Dr. Herbery Benson and Keith Wallace report in the February 1972 issue of Scientific American that TM provides the nervous system with a deeper rest than sleep offers. Other results in these experiments show that meditators have achieved lower anxiety levels resulting in less tension in the individual.

Sigma Pi Wins Scholar Award

Sigma Pi Fraternity of Lock Haven State College captured the Inter-Fraternity Scholarship Award. This is the second straight the men from Main and Fifth Streets have captured this elusive award. The happy moment was announced as part of the Halfive activities at the Homecoming game against Shippensburg. Rumor has it this fraternity intends on retiring the trophy next year but Sigma Pi has no intention of ending their dynasty.

What do they attribute their success to? Sigma Pi president Steve Wagaman replied, "It was a team effort all the way". That team effort of Sigma Pi produced an overall cumulative average of 2.501 for the year. Close behind the winner was Tau Kappa Epsilon with a 2.48 cumulative average, showing competition is keen in academics between the fraternities.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

It seems to me that some people didn't like the "James Gang." It also seems to me that some did. I know my date and I did, and so did many others, I'm sure. I felt they gave a good performance for the people, as much as Ralph did. I believe I read more opinions in the Eagle Eye. All were detrimental to the "James Gang." Damn it, they were good. I'm sorry some people don't like "jamming", but that's their style music. I suppose the ideal homecoming presentation would be three groups; "Santana" or "Sly", "Chicago" or "Three Dog Night"; and a group like the "James Gang" or "Grand Funk": three diverse styles of music with something to please everyone. Next time find out what the group plays before buying tickets.

Breather Over; Booters Face 3

The "short breather" of playing only one game in the past two weeks is over for the Lock Haven State soccer team.

Starting with a very important Pennsylvania Conference Western Division clash on Saturday at Slippery Rock State at 1:30 p.m. the Bald Eagles must play three tough opponents in the space of six days. The Eagle booters of Coach Karl Herrmann, 5-2-1 on the season, need a victory at Slippery Rock to keep alive hopes for a fourth straight Western Division championship.

Next Tuesday at home LHS will be seeking revenge over a powerful York College team coached by former Eagle soccer star Jack Klingaman. The past two years the Flying Dutchman have topped LHS. Then on Oct. 27 the home fi-

"We need a local salesman"

To the Editor:

I would like to apologize for an error I have made in a recent letter which was published October 5, 1972. The letter, which concerned itself with budget appropriations, stated that $4500 was donated to the BSU. That was a misunderstanding on my part. Since then, I have been enlightened. We only gave them $2,000.

For those who may not know, the BSU stands for Black Student Union. This committee is composed of Negro students of Lock Haven State College. Apparently, their wish is to remain separate but equal, and quite independent, of the other races and ethnic groups on this campus. That is, independent of us, our different cultures, but not our $2,000.

How can we build a world of peace, love, and understanding, when we cannot even congregate together as one whole human race?

Quite sincerely,
Kathy Hartman

nale on McCollum Field against the Millersville Marauders.

Last Friday the Eagle booters lost a 1-0 heart-breaker to nationally ranked East Stroudsburg State College. Despite the loss Coach Herrmann felt his team played its best game of the year. "It was soccer at its best on both sides," said the highly successful LHS mentor.

Barry Johnson of England leads the Eagles in scoring with seven goals and five assists. All-East performer Galen Hess has also scored seven goals with three assists.

SPLASH

AGAIN!

Interested in freezing for fun? The SCC is sponsoring Intercollegiate Canoe Race to be held November 5 at Lock Haven State. Presently, WACC is the only competitor.

The four mile trophy race is open to any two or three man or woman team of students interested in entering for LHS. Only the top two canoes, however, will be tallied into the score.

Last year the race was won by the increasingly famous team of George Bower and Peter Mathews. Anyone interested in entering should contact Bower in the SCC office.
