Conference Center opens after testing

George Marshall, vice-president for the administration, discussed the testing done at the Sieg Conference Center. The Center was recently reopened after a two year shut-down.

The Sieg Conference Center, the university's recreational facility in Lamar, is open again, following testing that found no evidence that the facility was responsible for the high level of bacteria in the nearby stream. The Center has been closed for approximately two years, and was just reopened this past spring, according to George Marshall, vice-president for the administration.

Marshall said that the center was closed because a local resident complained that raw sewage was being dumped into the stream from the Center. "We were never convinced that it was a source of pollution," said Marshall.

Dr. Paul Klens, professor of Biology, conducted tests in the area, along with official of the Department of Environmental Resources (DER). Klens said that both he and the DER technicians obtained the same results, even though both had used different methods.

Klens said that there is a high Escherichia Coli count in the area, but that this is probably due to a contamination from areas other than the Center. He said that there is a fish hatchery located upstream, and that several homes upstream have primitive sewage systems, which might be contributing to the problem.

Escherichia Coli inhabit the intestinal tract of warm and cold blooded animals. These bacteria are evidence that sewage contamination has occurred.

Klens said that samples were taken above and below the camp, from a small tributary above the camp, and from either side of the stream by the bridge.

Klens said that the tests were done over the period of time that the Center was shut down. "The important thing that a lot of people don't understand is that you don't just take one sample at a particular site," said Klens.

Both Marshall and Klens agreed that the sewage system at the Center is in functional working order and that raw sewage contamination of the area from the Center does not seem to be occurring.

Marshall said that the Center is used by a variety of groups. Conferences, class activities, civic functions and dinners are held there. There are also accommodations for 40 people to stay overnight.

Sieg Conference Center will be closed on November 15 and will open again in the spring. Marshall said that the closing is an annual occurrence because of the amount of money it would take to heat the center if kept open in the winter.

Jungle Queen winner of first annual Bedrace

By Kim Wilkinson

Lock Haven University's (LHU) First Annual Bedrace enticed students, faculty and townspeople to line Main Street to watch this new contest on Saturday. The race was held between the Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) house and Luigi's. The race was approximately three-tenths of a mile.

Eight teams, consisting of six people each, participated in this race. Four people pushed the bed, while two people rode in the bed.

The winning team was High Hall's "Jungle Queen." The team ran the course in one minute and 40 seconds. The (homemade) bed was covered with green leaves. The jungle queen and a gorilla were pushed by four men in loin cloths.

Its members consisted of: Scott Cambell, Nick DeLiberis, Mike Ditto, Paul Epley, Barry McGlumphy, and Rona Wagner.

Wagner commented on the team's success. "Everyone was really psyched. We even had a breakfast high in carbohydrates for extra energy."

The second place team was the Elks Club of Lock Haven. They ran the race in one minute and 52 seconds.

And in third place was the Lock Haven Rotary Club. Their time was one minute and 54 seconds.

The prize for the most pledges was given to Association of Federal, State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME). They earned $198 in pledge contributions.

The "Best Dressed Bed" award was presented to the Anthropology, Sociology and Social Work Club for its bed entitled "Marriage and the Family." The bed also had a baby basinet pulled behind.

Other participating teams were: Association of Pennsylvania State College and University Faculty (APSCUF), Gross Hall and the Lock Haven Express.

Mary Breid, a LHU faculty member, won the raffle by guessing the exact time the winning bed crossed the finish line.

The proceeds of the Bedrace will be donated to the United Way. The race totalled $529 as of Saturday, but donations are still coming in, according to Lisa Braubitz, a member of the Bedrace committee.

Braubitz said, "Our goal was to start a project that would continue through the upcoming years to donate toward a good cause."

The committee was comprised of Steve McCole, Joe Platko, Robin Cameron, Chris Iero, Steve Evans, Tammy Graves, Leslie Jakubowski, and Matt Riley.

Phi Mu Delta winners announced

By Kim Wilkinson

The Phi Mu Delta (PMD) 9th Annual Marathon winners were released Friday.

Laurie Gurney and Stacey Radd (both of Zeta Tau Alpha) were the first place winners. They finished the 48 hour marathon and had the most pledges. They raised $639.79 in pledges, according to John Newcomer, PMD president. The couple won $500 prize money.

In second place were John Fedak (PMD) and Terry Lubnow (Tri-Sigma). The couple raised $500.23 in pledge donations. They won $300 in prize money.

Mike Rabbit (PMD) and Deb Yeager

(PMD little sister) were in third place, earning $203.81 in pledge money. They won $100 prize money.

Fourth place winners were Geoff Glenn (PMD) and Kathy Kleppinger (PMD little sister). They donated $125.98 pledge money. They won $50 prize money.

And in fifth place, Dawn Howell and Shelly Weaver earned $120.60 pledge money. They also won $50 prize money.

Newcomer said 13 couples began dancing September 30th. "Only seven couples finished." He added that he did not know why so many couples had dropped out.

A total of $2602.99 was collected from the dance marathon. Newcomer said this was about $1600 less than what was received last year.

"For the number of people in it this year, the return was good," said Newcomer. "I'm pleased about it."

The proceeds of the PMD Dance Marathon will benefit the Infant Development Center of Clinton County, UNICEF and the Jeffrey Scott Dubois Memorial Scholarship. The scholarship is donated to an outstanding senior soccer player at North Penn High School, Lansdale, Pa., in memory of a PMD brother who was killed in 1979.

Bed Race turnout is sub-par

This past weekend, LHU sponsored its First Annual Bedrace to benefit the United Way. This was a chance for students to give of themselves to a worthwhile cause. And it offered a chance to compete with other student organizations and Lock Haven groups. Out of eight participating teams, only three were totally comprised of LHU students.

Much time and effort went into the organization of this project and only a handful of people were responsible for the work.

Many groups appeared enthusiastic when first approached about the idea. Slowly but surely, people backed out of the race giving such excuses as time factors, hangovers, fishing trips, studying, etc.

The students involved in planning this race were depending on the participation of their fellow students. As usual, groups backed out, making LHU look apathetic once again to every towns person involved.

Students are always complaining that there is nothing to do. Lately, it seems that whenever something different is offered, no one takes advantage.

Debate the issues tonight

A new experiment will be attempted at Lock Haven tonight - The Open Forum. According to student organizer Joe Kirkland, the forum is designed to give students a chance to argue, discuss, and debate relevant issues.

The topic of tonight's forum is x-rated films on campus. Kirkland said that although the forum will begin with the x-rated movie question "all subjects are fair game." He continued, "We hope students will begin to examine the university more closely, and discuss how we can make Lock Haven a better place through the forum."

Dr. James Knauer, professor of Political Science, when asked his views on the forum said, "It's a great idea and student's should take it upon themselves to encourage each other to express their opinions." Knauer added that too often in the past students have organized events and then expected faculty members to pat them on the head.

Kirkland, a member of the History, Political Science, and Economics Club which is sponsoring the event, said that the forum could be a way to combat apathy on campus and he hopes the forum will become a monthly event. He ended by saying, "A few students have organized the event, now it is up to all the rest to make the forum a success."

The Open Forum will be held in the Hall of Flags at 7:30 p.m.

Robert's Rules are being ignored

Dear Editor:

As responsible students interested in good government, we feel that a situation existing in SCC Senate meetings must be brought to light.

The situation is this: the perversion and ignorance of Robert's Rules of Order that is tolerated by the present administration. It would seem that the Executive Board either does not know even the rudiments of accepted parliamentary procedure, or they are ignoring these time-tested rules for their own benefit.

Article 9 of the SCC Constitution clearly states the rule of parliamentary authority: "All Senate meetings of the SCC shall be governed by the rules of parliamentary procedure as laid down in the current edition of Robert's Rules of Order."

We have attended every Senate meeting since the beginning of this semester, and never have seen or heard of any organization that violates its own constitution so often and so brazenly. For instance, at the SCC Senate meeting on October 12th, John McNamara rose to speak on a subject after debate was closed. This is a clear violation of Robert's Rules, which states: "Whenever from the nature of the question it permits no modification or debate, the chairman immediately puts it to a vote." Debate was formally ended, so no further commentary should have been allowed. There are numerous other violations of parliamentary procedure that we could name, but space is limited and the example we gave is most clear.

If the SCC Senate wants itself to be taken seriously, a review of the parliamentary system is in order. Obviously Matthew Huber, the present parliamentarian, does not believe that any violations have taken place, as it is his place to declare any incorrect or questionable action "out of order." If this is true, then the speedy resignation of Mr. Huber is clearly in order. No legislative body can survive in proper working order with an incompetent parliamentarian. As for the rest of the Senate, a warning is in order. It will not go over well with the students here at Lock Haven University if the total rejection of an article of your own constitution continues. We heartily recommend that all those concerned, from the President to the most recently elected Senators, study Robert's Rules of Order and conduct meetings accordingly. It is a workable system.

Bed Race is a great success

Dear Editor:

It is my firm belief that a faculty member should not only teach, counsel, and evaluate students; but also have a keen interest in the students welfare by attending graduation ceremonies and participating in student activities, etc.

Based on my belief, I volunteered to be the Team Captain for the Bed Race when APSCUF decided to participate in the program sponsored by students for the United Way.

Although the race was a disaster for the APSCUF Team, as the wheels came off and we never reached the finish line, our spirit was high and APSCUF ranked second in donations.

Overall, the Bed Race was a great success. It gave the faculty, staff, students and community an opportunity to interact. I believe all of the participants and spectators had a good time.

May I take this opportunity to congratulate the sponsors for a job well done and I hope the Bed Race will be an annual event from now on.

I also would like to congratulate all the winners, particularly AFSCME or defeating us in both speed and donations. Next year APSCUF shall try to avenge the loss.

Hockey team escapes ESU, remains undefeated

By Dave Prusak

Senior Tracy Coates scored on a penalty shot with five minutes left in regulation to give the visiting Lock Haven University (LHU) women's field hockey team a 2-1 win over East Stroudsburg University (ESU) on Saturday.

Coates' goal broke a 1-1 deadlock, and enabled the Division II number one ranked Lady Eagles to escape with a still perfect 13-0 record.

The game had to be played at the East Stroudsburg high school field due to the poor condition of the university's turf.

The game was scoreless until LHU's Sherry Derr scored from just inside the circle with five minutes remaining in the first half. The goal was number nineteen for Derr this year.

The Lady Eagles maintained their 1-0 lead for almost twenty minutes in the second half. But at the 19:50 mark ESU's Lori Clayton fired a shot past LHU goalie Kate Murphy to tie the game. That shot turned out to be the first and last for the Lady Warriors on the day.

Then at the 30:15 mark Coates put her game winning penalty shot past the fooled ESU goalie. The goal was number seven for Coates this year.

LHU had twelve shots on goal to one for ESU. ESU's lone shot ended up in the net. LHU had eight penalty corners to five for the Lady Warriors. The ESU goalie made five saves.

After the win LHU's Coates said, "Our team didn't play that well. We were under a lot of pressure."

Coates, whose last three goals have come via the penalty shot, added, "The penalty shot was a big opportunity for me. I gave my usual fake like I was shooting left, and then shot for the right side. The goalie went for my fake, and I had the goal."

LHU coach Sharon Taylor said, "We didn't play very aggressively. Shots on goal were not followed up by our players. There was no sustained play to our offense. Their (ESU's) goal was beautifully executed."

Taylor said, "Tracy (Coates) played one of the better games of her career. Jamie Gormley played a good game at link for us. Bonnie Lassen played a good game at sweeper."

Taylor added, "Sherry (Derr) and Tracy (Coates) have supplied a lot of our offense lately. I'm looking for other people to score because we will need a balanced attack down the stretch."

The LHU JV's won 6-0. Freshman Donna Graupp, who saw action in the varsity game before leaving with an injury, scored three goals in the JV game. Cindy Frey, Kim Romano, and Denise Torelli added the other goals. Lori Sannella got credit for the shutout.

Booters lose to FDU, 3-0

By Rocco Pallotto

The Bald Eagle soccer team suffered only its second loss of the season, falling 3-0 to Division I powerhouse Farleigh Dickinson University at Teaneck.

"They scored early and that doesn't help, especially when you're playing away from home against a good side," stated Lock Haven Head Coach Mike Parker. "After that we played well for most of the remaining first half."

A pivotal play occurred right before the half. "We had a chance to score through (Steve) Paguia during the last seconds of the first half," said Parker. "If we could have scored there it would have been a different ballgame."

The LHU mentor pointed out that the second half didn't go quite as well. "The longer the second half went, the more they were wearing us down. You could tell they were a much better side than us, even though we were keeping the score close."

"They scored their second goal with about fifteen minutes to go and that was really the end of the ballgame right there. They just totally dominated us in the last fifteen minutes," Parker continued.

One good thing that did come out of the game was the strong defense the Red & White executed against FDU's John King. King was the Division I leading scorer last season. The Bald Eagles held him scoreless, although, according to Parker, "He played very well against us."

Senior Bruce Cocker played the entire game in goal for the Eagles. He kept the Blue & Maroon from scoring again when he saved a penalty kick. Parker seemed pleased with the overall performance turned in by his booters. "I thought the game was close, but you could tell they were the stronger side. I think we played overall as well as we could. They were just too good for us. It was a fun game and a nice experience for most of the players."

The Bald Eagles (9-2-1 overall) will travel to Bucknell tonight for a 7:00 game.

Tennis team struggles at States; Murgia is champ

By Dave Prusak

After finishing undefeated in Pennsylvania Conference play this year, Kim Muller's Lock Haven University (LHU) women's tennis team figured to be the favorites to win the Conference Championship at Shippensburg this past weekend.

LHU might have been the favorites, but the best they could settle for was a disappointing fifth place tie. Host Shippensburg won the team championship with 23 points. The Lady Eagle netters finished with 13 points.

The lone bright spot for LHU was at number four singles, where sophomore Roxanne Murgia was crowned champion by defeating Millersville's Debbie Bennis 6-2, 6-2. Murgia has come a long way this year, after watching teammate Holly Reitzel maintain the final singles slot through all of last year for LHU.

Reitzel, who captured the number six singles championship for LHU last year, had to watch play from the sidelines this year due to a back injury.

In other matches, LHU's Kelly Sherbine replaced Reitzel at the number one singles slot and lost her opening match 6-1, 6-2 to Lori Ruppen of IUP.

At number two singles LHU's Denise Lebert drew a bye, but then fell 6-3, 6-3 to Sue Dunlap of West Chester.

LHU's Edna Roth also drew a bye before dropping a 6-4, 7-6 decision to West Chester's Kathy Torch in number three singles.

In number five singles LHU's Gail Overdorf fell 6-2, 6-4 in round two. In number six singles LHU's Sharon Starzan made it to the finals, before falling 6-3, 6-3.

In number one doubles, LHU's Lebert and Overdorf won their opening match, but lost 6-4, 7-5 in round two. LHU's Starzan and Sherbine lost 6-3, 6-4 in number two doubles.

The LHU doubles team of Roth and Murgia lost a 6-4, 3-6, 7-5 heartbreaker in the number three doubles championship.

Behind Shippensburg in the point standings were Millersville with 17 and West Chester with 15. Edinboro had 14, while Slippery Rock tied LHU with 13.

Gridders drop 5th game

By Mark Mahoney

The LHU football team suffered its fifth defeat of the year, losing 17-0 in the rain at Slippery Rock on Saturday.

The Rockets defense held the Bald Eagles to just 158 yards total offense, while SRU quarterback Don Christian and fullback Charles Sanders accounted for 225 yards and two touchdowns.

LHU never penetrated the Rockets' 40-yard line.

LHU head coach Jack Fisher said, "We played an outstanding defensive football game, maybe our best of the year, but we just couldn't move the ball offensively."

Both of LHU's option quarterbacks, Doug Williams and Doug Pickell could not play due to injuries, so the starting job went to Dan Greer. The rain and the Rockets created problems for Greer, who was 3 of 10 for 21 yards. He was intercepted three times. As a result, the job of moving the ball was left to tailback Mike Kresovich and fullback Rich Zalonis.

"With Williams and Pickell hurt, we tried to run Kresovich, but we couldn't break him loose," said Fisher.

Kresovich had 88 yards on 27 carries on the day. It wasn't the usual Mike Kresovich day, as the Rockets kept him in check. Zalonis had 41 yards on 4 carries.

Fisher said, "I give credit to Slippery Rock's defense. We couldn't move the ball against them."

The Rocket's opened the scoring on an eight-yard pass play from Christian to tight end Barry McCracken in the second quarter.

Alan Lewitt added a 32 yard field goal at the end of the quarter, and the score was 10-0 at the half.

Tailback Charles Sanders scored a fourth quarter touchdown on an 18 yard run to make the final score 17-0.

Christian completed 12-of-26 passes for 134 yards and was not intercepted. Sanders rushed for 91 yards on 22 carries.

The Rockets are now 5-3 overall and 2-2 in the conference, while the Bald Eagles are 2-5 and 0-4.

Fisher concluded, "The spirit and attitude of the team is great. We have IUP and Edinboro coming up and we're going to get one of them."

Characterizations strong in play

by Andrew Ashenfelter

Shakespeare's gift of keen characterization is evident during the National Shakespeare Company's production of "Much Ado About Nothing" presented in Sloan Theatre on Thursday. The New York City based repertory group enhances this Elizabethan comedy with some strong performances.

In "Much Ado About Nothing" Shakespeare unravels one of his favorite themes, a war of the sexes which ends in the ultimate victory of love. The "merry war" in this instance concerns the banterings of Benedick and Beatrice, a young couple who are forever trading witty insults though it is obvious from the beginning they are meant for each other.

Benedick as played by Michael Perez earns his description as "the prince's clown." Whether he is wryly dubbing Beatrice "Lady Disdain," trying to rationalize his sudden switch from singing the praises of bachelorhood, to those of marriage or uncomfortably playing the role of a lover, Benedick displays a vibrant humor that never quite crosses over into frivolity.

Beatrice, in the hands of Kathryn Klvana, is an even match for her adversary, hurling verbal attacks and counterattacks against Benedick that sometimes seem to contain acid in them.

Even after the two bickering lovers have been tricked into confessing their mutual affection, each cannot resist flinging a few pointed barbs at the other. It is a subtle touch that is amusing and completely human.

Considerable liveliness is added to the play by the presence of Dogberry and Verges, a couple of Shakespeare's little people who brighten up so many of his plays with their homespun antics. Walter Mantani as Dogberry gives an amusing portrayal of a pompous night watchman who patronizingly looks down on the dull-witted Verges despite his own obvious incompetence.

However, both men appear to be sages beside their comrade, a shuffling, Huey-like gentleman, hilariously played by Mark Waterman, who seemingly has a force field of stupidity surrounding him. With typical Shakespearean irony it is these three inept, Elizabethan Keystone Cops that wind up as the heroes in the piece.

The colorful figures of the jousting lovers and the bumbling watchmen are enough to almost completely submerge the "main plot" of Claudio and Hero, two more conventional lovers who are separated only briefly by evil gossip. Ken Harper and Eleanore Tapscott as the couple are charming but not particularly interesting.

Skip Hamra provides one of the play's best serious moments as Leonato the aged father of Hero. Through a tearful and wrathful speech directed towards his daughter's supposed wantonness there is obvious war in Leonato between his belief in honor and a genuine attempt to understand the situation.

Competent performances were also turned in by Richard Perloff and Joseph J. Menino as the villains of the play and Herb Ellis, Jr. as the debonair Don Pedro.

Amongst the bright scenery representing a Sicilian countryside there is a fountain that never seems to spring to life without frequent pounding. Whether intentionally or not this fountain symbolizes much of what the National Shakespeare Company has achieved in "Much Ado About Nothing," a testament to the fact that life and love may be precocious but are well worth the trouble.
