S.C.C. predicts Meatloaf concert a success

By Biff Miller
Eagle Eye News Editor

If ticket sales continue to flourish today and tomorrow, the Meatloaf concert scheduled Saturday may be a sell out success for the S.C.C.

"If it is not going to be a sell out, it will be very close," said Kelly Beck, Social Committee chairperson.

Beck said so far, over 2,000 tickets have been sold - 750 to students and the rest to the general public.

Students are waiting until the last minute to buy tickets, said Beck.

Tickets will be on sale today in the business office and tomorrow from 12 - 9 p.m. in Thomas Fieldhouse.

In order to cover the cost of the concert, the S.C.C. uses part of the student activity fee.

"We want to provide students with a big activity associated with the University," said Beck.

According to Leland Spangler, director of student activities, the Meatloaf concert is comparable to the success of the Lisa Lisa Cult Jam concert in November 1987.

Any profit from the concert will return to the student activity fee.

If students show support for a spring concert, scheduling another next semester is a possibility, according to Beck.

The Urge opens for Meatloaf Saturday night at 8 p.m. in Thomas Fieldhouse.

A crowd of over 3,000 is anticipated.

PUB UPDATE: Architects continue to work on PUB expansion plans

By Biff Miller
Eagle Eye News Editor

Construction plans for the new Parsons Union Building are evolving this semester as architects continue to engineer a new design for the original building.

After the student referendum for the PUB expansion passed last spring, it was approved by the Administration and Board of Trustees at the University, said Paul Knappenberger, vice president of the S.C.C.

Then it was sent to Harrisburg and the Pennsylvania Department of General Services (P.D.G.S.) selected an architect firm to work on the expansion.

Initially, the S.C.C. had selected the Nutech firm to work on the feasibility study for the project, said Knappenberger.

But the P.D.G.S. appointed the project to Smith, Miller, & Associates Inc. architect firm.

"I am comfortable with the new firm," said Leland Spangler, director of student activities and member of the PUB Expansion Committee.

The new firm met with the PUB expansion committee at the beginning of this semester to discuss some changes they made with the expansion plans.

"They made positive changes with the feasibility study," said Knappenberger.

Smith, Miller, & Associates said the PUB will be twice its original size.

The bookstore and snack bar will be larger, and a multi-purpose room will be added to the snack bar.

"The building will provide many new services to the students," said Knappenberger.

So far, there had not been an increase in the student community center fee. The fee, now $10.00, will not be increased until September 1990.

This increase will help pay for the expansion, said Knappenberger.

Other State schools, including Mansfield, Millersville, Shippensburg, and Clarion are also working on construction of a new student union building.

The PUB Expansion Committee expects actual construction to begin next September.

S.C.C. senate changes fundraising policy

By Terry Day
Eagle Eye Editor in Chief

At yesterday's senate meeting, the Student Cooperative Council (SCC) senate voted unanimously to change the fundraising policy.

The policy change states that all organizations wishing to engage in fundraising activities must complete the fundraising regulation form and submit it for approval to the SCC treasurer (Andy Wendel) the Monday, the week before the fundraising event.

The reason for the change was because Student Life is not having time to inform the residence hall of the fundraisers in their halls, said SCC President Troy Weaver.

Also, the SCC senate moved to start a memorial scholarship in memory of those students who passed away while at Lock Haven University.

"The awarding of the scholarship will be done through the LHU Foundation," Weaver said.

The SCC may donate $1,000 to start the scholarship according to Weaver. After the scholarship is started, it will be funded by donors.

The name in which a donation was made will be inscribed on a plaque.

PUB Administrator Stephanie Perry reported the problem of vandalism in the recreation room.

Perry said mainly the vandalism occurs with people breaking into video games.

To alleviate the problem, the video game room will open the same hours as the recreation room, Perry.

Also, the senate discussed the possible changes in the University calendar and the problem of parking.

Joan Bayer was awarded the Senator of the Month for October.

Eagle Eye holds computer day Saturday

Interested in learning about one of the most efficient computer systems presently on the market?

The Eagle Eye staff will demonstrate use of the Macintosh system on Saturday November 11, 1-3 p.m. in the lower level of the P.U.B., office 2.

This system is used in lay out and design of the campus newspaper.

Major newspapers, such as U.S.A. Today and the Philadelphia Inquirer also use the Macintosh I and II system.

Everyone is welcome to attend the demonstration.

Students will also have an opportunity to meet the Eagle Eye Staff and voice their opinions concerning the newspaper.

Be sure to enter the Eagle Eye's
"Read All About It" contest!
All articles are due
November 28 in the Eagle Eye office.

OPINIONS/EDITORIALS

Aspects of journalism: How it all started...by Biff Miller

Do you ever experience the, "I wonder if I should really be studying this major" syndrome? I experienced it my entire first year at Lock Haven University.

I decided to study journalism right before I graduated from high school. Unfortunately, I spent most of my high school days struggling through advanced science courses because I was sure health science was right up my alley.

One day, as I was reflecting on my future as a physical therapist, I discovered some things: the thought of broken, strained, or sore anything made me queasy, I would have to wear a boring white coat everyday, and people would always be asking me for backrubs.

Then it hit me. All my life I had been hiding the fact that I loved writing in a journal, I thought Andy Rooney from "60 Minutes" was God, and I enjoyed interrogating anyone about anything.

Yes, I will become a journalist, I said, and tore up all of my pamphlets from big universities with great programs in health science. Lock Haven University it was, and I would soon learn to be Barbara Walters.

Maybe I should rephrase that. Journalism majors at LHU have the choice of studying in the print, advertising/public relations, or broadcast medium. And at first I was interested in the Barbara Walters broadcasting career, but then decided print was geared toward my personality. I really couldn't picture myself wearing make-up that could only be removed with a paint scraper and having a "wig" hairdo just because I'd be on TV. No thanks. (And I didn't have a lisp.)

The blessed Eagle Eye was a big factor in my decision of print. I liked the atmosphere.

The staff (there was one then) was always working away and using neat words like "flag," "headlines," "lead." And everyone was always in a grouchy mood. I mean, no one even faked acting cheerful, it was great!

While working at the Eagle Eye, I held interviews with big-wigs on campus and put my gift of annoying interrogation to good use. Fun, fun, fun.

This favorable attitude towards my career lasted until I heard something like, "Those crazy journalism majors! They barely make any money, they'll be living on the street when they graduate from college."

Yikes, I thought, that meant no BMW, no big house in Connecticut, no croquet court in the back yard.... Maybe those white coats wouldn't be too bad, I could add a scarf every now and then, and I could charge a little extra for requested backrubs. Thus the "I wonder if I'm really studying the right major" syndrome appeared.

This lasted right through my freshman year and even into this past summer when again, I made a startling discovery...

Hidden away, in the dusty corners of my attic, are boxes labeled "My Stuff." I decided that since I'd be moving off-campus this year, it would be a good idea to see if anything of use was in these boxes.

At the very bottom of one was a 30 minute tape, dusty and without a case or label. Being the inquisitive person I am, I decided to give it a listen.

The beginning was muffled and static-y as if someone was blowing their nose directly into the microphone. Then it happened...the one indication that I was meant to be a journalist was revealed.

A squeaky 5 year old voice was talking. Not about anything important and not to anyone, just talking. The voice was asking questions like a miniature reporter and then making up answers. The vocabulary was unreal. Words like "astounding," "horrible," and "atrocious" engorged the recorded script.

Some kid on that old tape thought she was a news reporter. That kid was me.

At first I wondered if I had some sort of mental impairment. After all, I was not only the interviewer, but the interviewee. But then I realized that even at the young age of five, I was acting out my destined career.

This is how the "I wonder if I'm really studying the right major" syndrome disappeared. So, I'm headed in the direction of the controversial, shameless reporter. I'll be living a life of threats and accusations made by angry readers, deadlines I'll break my back to make, and stories I'll search for endlessly. But I will do my job, and I'll love every minute of it.

Faculty Corner

University Lecture Series continued with discussion on Poland

The Lock Haven University Faculty Lecture Series continued with a presentation on Poland. The presentation, "Poland at the Cross Roads," was held on Tuesday evening at 8:15 in Ulmer Planetarium.

The lecture was presented by University professors Charles R. Kent, Francis M. Perna, Ph.D., Blaise Kruppik and Lawrence T. Farley, Ph.D.

The faculty members discussed the events and changes in Poland since 1980. The lecture also looked at the implications of these events, in Poland, for other East Central European states and Western Europe, as well as the American perspective.

All were welcome to attend the program. There was no charge for admission.

University professor represents Lock Haven at conference

University professor of Education, John E. Rockwell Ed. D., represented Lock Haven at a conference in Southampton, New York. The conference took place November 8 and 9, was sponsored by the Northeast Regional Center for Drug Free Schools and Communities and the U.S. Department of Education.

The purpose of the conference was to determine ways the Center can encourage public schools to become part of the drug-free school program.

Rockwell was selected based on his experience in working with student teachers and children from the inner cities.

At the University, Rockwell supervises student teaching in both Bucks and Montgomery Counties, as well as locally. He has also been asked to serve as a member of an area drug-free school council representing Bucks County and including Neshaminy schools in Langhorne, Pennsylvania. Rockwell joined the University in 1967.

Thefts and flying eggs plague students

By Sharon Brooks
Eagle Eye Staff Reporter

A group of students driving by Bentley allegedly threw eggs at fellow students.

The incident, according to Richard Hepner, Director of Law Enforcement, occurred at 8:10 p.m. one night this week.

A manhole cover was removed from in front of Bentley Dining Hall last Thursday night, said Hepner.

The reserved parking signs were also stolen from out front of Bentley Dining Hall last Thursday night, said Hepner.

A gold nugget ring was stolen from the girl's bathroom in Gross Hall, said Hepner.

The ring was mistakenly left on the sink after its owner washed her hands.

These incidents are still pending further investigation.

A bike that was stolen from out front of Smith Hall was recovered by Law Enforcement Officials last Thursday.

The bike was valued at $600.

Law Enforcement officials received a call last Friday night at 11:57 p.m. concerning two suspicious individuals wandering aimlessly around the seventh floor of McEntire Hall.

The individuals turned out to be students from another residence hall.

A hall director has witnessed several students using the emergency phones for personal use.

Students are reminded that the phones are for emergency use only!

Starting next Tuesday through Friday the drive from the bottom of the hill up to North Hall will be closed because the road is going to be repaved. The one way road that goes past Gross, McEntire, and High Halls will temporarily be a two way street.

Alcohol abuse is the main cause of campus vandalism

By Amy Barner
Eagle Eye Features Reporter

Darkness has fallen over Lock Haven and the hour is late. The party downtown is over so "Fred" decides to go back to the dorm. After making the climb up the hill to the dorms he reaches his. In the lobby he sees the candy machine and decides to have a candy bar. After he puts his money into the machine, he realizes his change is stuck in the machine and the candy bar isn't going to come out.

He smashes the machine with a chair to get back his change and causes a little over $500 worth of damage. Later, restitution is made by "Fred", but it could happen again. No one knows what a drunk person will do next, or again.

This is just one incident in the problem of vandalism, criminal mischief and theft, and alcohol on Lock Haven University's (LHU) campus.

According to LHU Law Enforcement Officer Gary Barrett the majority of the vandalism and criminal mischief on campus is alcohol related.

In 1987, LHU reported 77 cases of criminal mischief with the damage/loss totaling $3442. In 1988, 44 cases of criminal mischief were reported with $5818 in damage/loss. There were fewer incidents than 1987 but the incidents were so serious that the amount of damage doubled.

Because these acts of vandalism are mostly alcohol-related they usually occur during the night. Last year one of the big acts of vandalism was the damage done to signs on campus, such as breaking and stealing wooden signs. The biggest though was to vending machines.

The following are some cases of campus criminal mischief from December 1988:

December 2- Nine vehicles were vandalized along Railroad Street. Windows were smashed as were the mirrors on the drivers sides. (LHU Law Enforcement works with the city police to patrol this area.)

December 8- A resident assistant from High Hall reported water coming through a ceiling. The officer investigating found a shower head had been broken off.

December 9- A student found his bicycle in front of Parsons Union Building damaged. Estimated damage was $30.

December 15- A dry chemical type of fire extinguisher was discharged causing dust all over. Someone then pulled a fire alarm in the same dorm making everyone think it was a drill.

Barrett says that with the college working on cracking down on the alcohol problem it has helped to cut all types of criminal mischief.

In 1989 there hasn't been as much criminal mischief. Barrett says that there is the occasional spray painting on the back wall of Zimmerli Gymnasium and the destruction of bulletin boards in any of the campus buildings.

Who are these vandals at LHU? Officer Barrett says in most cases they are male freshmen and/or sophomores. He says the majority of the problems happen on Friday and Saturday nights. These times are alcohol related-party nights.

"Alcohol is a powerful drug," Barrett says. He feels some students will leave LHU with alcohol problems. But he also feels that in the last few years LHU has been working with the campus alcohol problem and that they (LHU) have been doing a "wonderful" job.

The Office of Student Life is dealing more severely with alcohol and the problems it is creating. The cases that amount to less than $500 see most students making restitution and then being dealt with by Student Life. Barrett says this is helping to "curtail" vandalism on campus.

"One of the prime problems" with alcohol came with the tailgating that went on at Hubert Jack Stadium during football games. LHU stopped allowing this and Barrett says he saw it "curtail" a lot of alcohol related vandalism.

Little by little LHU is working, along with law enforcement, toward ending alcohol abuse and its consequential vandalism on campus. But it can only end when the students themselves realize what they are doing. Otherwise, as Barrett says, LHU will have to "discipline a little harsher".

The problem of limited parking space for commuter students

By Mark A. Yaple
Eagle Eye Features Reporter

It's 9:30 Wednesday morning and after hitting the snooze button for the second time, Tom realizes he has to hurry if he is going to make his 10:00 class.

Once he rushes through a shower and skips breakfast, it's grab the books and out the door. Tom then jumps into his 1978 Ford pick-up to race to the Lock Haven University campus.

He arrives at the commuter parking lot with plenty of time to spare. The only problem is there are no open spaces. After spending considerable time searching the other available lots and having no luck, Tom finds an open place to park in a street not too far from campus. Since it took longer for Tom to find a place to park than it did to shower and get ready for school, he enters class a few minutes late.

Tom isn't the only one in this predicament. He says there's always a dozen cars racing for one open space. The time at which Tom and others are arriving is the worst. Tom says that friends of his have no trouble finding a place to park earlier in the morning. Commuter students who don't have early classes, however, are faced with few options.

One option is to park off campus. This may not be a bad choice if you can get a spot not too far off campus. If you are early enough it won't mean being late for class. It does mean a longer walk to campus which could become an inconvenience in itself.

Another choice could be using one of the University lots illegally. Parking illegally may insure getting to class on time, but will most likely result in a parking fine ranging from $3.00 to $15.00.

This doesn't leave the commuter with options that are very promising. That is why the University has instituted a parking committee to try to find some solutions to the problem.

According to Lieutenant Dennis Grenninger, the parking committee chairman, the committee is very concerned and it wants to help everyone. Last year's parking committee initiated the proposal for the new parking lot next to Akeley. The lot, which has forty-five spaces, is for staff only.

Grenninger also said the committee has nothing definite so far this semester, but they are working on a few proposals to send to the president for his approval.

Grenninger and the rest of the University Law Enforcement and Safety Department realize the parking lots do not have enough space. According to the law, police have to ticket cars to ensure accidents aren't caused by illegally parked cars.

Grenninger also said the revenue generated from parking fines is being used to help to solve parking problems.

Money from fines helped to pay for the parking lot next to Akeley.

Students who ignore parking fines could lose University parking privileges for one semester if a student receives seven or more tickets.

The situation may seem uncorrectable when viewed with other campus problems like increased enrollment or lack of street parking near campus.

If the situation gets worse, students may be faced with the same problem Lycoming College students are facing. Because of overcrowded street parking near the college, residents are required to purchase parking permits from the city of Williamsport. If you are parked on the street without a permit, your car will be ticketed.

According to Joe Yalch, a commuter representative on the committee, the committee discussed several solutions at a meeting in early October. One of the ideas concerned buying or leasing additional parking areas. He also said a student made a suggestion to a committee member to have a parking garage built that could double or triple the amount of cars in one area.

Yalch, as well as the rest of the committee, welcome any ideas students may have to help solve the problem. If a student cannot attend a parking committee meeting held on the last Friday of each month, he or she can convey their concerns to Joe Yalch or any other member.

Until the committee finds a good solution to the problem, Tom will find himself racing for that one open space. On the other hand, he could take some advice from other students in the same situation: walk if at all possible or catch a ride with someone.

How Meat Loaf began and where he is going

Once upon a time (1951, actually) in a far away land (Dallas, Texas), was born a lad destined to be BIG named Marvin (Marvin Lee Aday). Marvin grew and grew, and his mother said, "He's okay, he's just eating." Then, one day, Marvin took a dare to let a VW run over his head. His friends all laughed, "You've gotta have meat loaf for brains to do that!" And that's how Meat Loaf got his name.

When Meat was just 15 years old, his fairy god person came to him with some advice: "Go West, young Meat," he/she/it decreed and disappeared into a cloud of dust. So Meat Loaf left for California and played the famous Huntington Beach circuit with a psychedelic cover band called Popcorn Blizzard (later renamed Meat Loaf Soul). They opened for "everyone you can possibly name except the Beatles, Stones and Jefferson Airplane." While working as a parking lot attendant in L.A., a customer convinced young Loaf to audition for the touring company of the then new musical, "Hair"... and he got the part! One night in Kansas City, during a rendition of "Let the Sun Shine In," Meat met fellow castmember, Stoney (a.k.a. Cheryl Murphy); and they went on to cut an album for Motown Records called, Stoney And Meatloaf. This album (as you may have guessed) was notable only for Meat's stentorian vocals, but it did yield a Top 40 single: "What You See is What You Get."

Finally, Meat Loaf's search for the Holy Harmonic brought him back to "Hair"- this time on Broadway. Off-Broadway, he met New York theatrical impresario, Joe Papp in an audition for a play entitled "More Than You Deserve," written by a crazed young composer named Jim Steinman. The two hit it off and the next thing he knew, Meat Loaf was singing Steinman originals in the critically acclaimed "National Lampoon Road Show."

From this was born the album Bat Out of Hell. But it was a long labor. It was hard to sell a concept that transformed rock n' roll into an operatic experience. What's more, there was no demo, so Meat and Jim found themselves enacting and re-enacting the songs' dramatic episodes in the cramped offices of record company execs. They went from skyscraper to skyscraper, office to office until Meat Loaf decided to make a film. Success! Remember Meat Loaf as "Eddie" in the cult film classic: "The Rocky Horror Picture Show?" Another success! In October 1977, more than a year later, the goose laid the platinum egg. Bat Out of Hell went triple platinum. Meat Loaf's heady combination of Wagner and Little Richard, Jim Steinman's powerful and quirky narrative pop songs and Todd Rundgren's production made Bat Out of Hell the longest charting record since The Sound of Music.

The second Meat Loaf/Steinman collaboration (Dead Ringer...Dead Ringer...Dead Ringer...) sold over 2 million copies overseas, and its title track duet with Cher hit #1 in England and spawned an award winning video at the Cannes Film Festival.

The release of Meat Loaf's third album,

Midnight at the Lost and Found (1983) proved that he could make it on his own. Meat then embarked on a world wide tour that packed all the big arenas. The following year, Arista released Bad Attitude with another title duet (this time with Roger Daltry of the Who) and celebrated single, "Modern Girl."

In 1987, Meat Loaf completed several short European jaunts in support of his album Blind Before I Stop- playing various festivals and selling out Wembley Arena twice.

In 1988 Meat embarked on a whirlwind schedule. His first live album, Meatloaf Live recorded live at the Wembley Arena was released. This record contains Meatloaf's greatest hits performed live for the first time. In February, March, April and May of 1988, Meat played to sell out houses in the United States, Great Britain and Europe.

This summer Meat continued to tour and played at festivals in Germany, Great Britain, Denmark and The Netherlands.

1989-90 basketball seasons begin next week

Bald Eagle hoopsters look to attain elusive state title in upcoming season

By Herb Samuels
Eagle Eye Sports Reporter

The men's basketball season gets set to start hopefully another successful season with a blend of experience and new faces.

Last year, the Bald Eagles started the season with a new head coach in Dave Blank.

Coach Blank emphasized defense and the Bald Eagles responded with a 23-7 record.

Last year's team lost only two players (guards Tony Bacon and Tim Glass), but both players were the heart and soul of the entire team.

The only other guard left with extensive playing time is junior Truman Greene. Greene averaged 8.7 points per game last year and played tough defense.

The other returning guards are sophomore Troy Evans and senior Michael Dolan.

The remainder of the guards are relatively new to the program. They are freshmen Kevin Bekelja, Tommy Johnson, Jonathan Prather, and sophomore David Wood.

Wood was red shirted last season.

"The big question mark is on the perimeter," Blank said. "They are so young."

Blank also said that Prather and Wood are the early favorites to fill the shoes of point guard Tony Bacon.

Bacon led the team in assists with 219 (a school record) and steals with 73. He was also described by many as being the "coach" on the floor.

"The question is, can the new people mature quick enough to handle the presses and make the right decisions early," Blank said.

The guards have been learning from one of the best ever at LHU. Tim Glass has joined the staff as an assistant coach. Glass, was the team's Defensive Player of the Year last season.

Glass joins Steve Rice, Brad Bross and Norum Stay, the three assistants that did a solid job last season.

While the guards are an early question mark, the inside returns from last season, intact and more experienced.

They are led by senior forward Dean Kriebel. Kriebel led the team in scoring (19.1 points per game) and rebounding (8.7 per game). He shot 58.1 percent from the floor and 79.5 in free throws.

Kriebel was named to the first team in the Pennsylvania Conference West Division and a host of other individual awards.

"Kriebel is one of the premier players in the league," Blank said. "I would think he's one of the early favorites for player of the year."

The other returner at the forward position is senior John Jekot. Jekot scored 12.9 points per game and added 102 assists. His main weapon is the three point shot where he hit 45.7 percent last year, one of the best in the country.

"Kriebel and Jekot have to be the glue of the team with their experience," Blank said. "They have more minutes played than anyone else on the team."

At center, the ever improving senior Dirk Remensnyder returns to take his post. He averaged 8.7 points per game while collecting 5.1 rebounds per game.

On reserve will be junior Carl Brown and senior Stacey Porter. "Stacey came on down near the end of the season while Carl had a good sophomore year," coach Blank said.

The only new face in the entire front court will be freshman Rocky D'Angelo a forward-center.

Blank's main concern is how long it will take the guards to mature this season.

"If the guards take their time and catch up to the front court and the post players, we will be successful," Blank said.

The early schedule will determine the heart of the Bald Eagles.

After leading off with Baptist Bible College, they will travel to Hickory, North Carolina and compete in the Lenoir Rhyne Tournament.

Following that, the Bald Eagles take on Radford, an NCAA Division I school.

Among the rest of the early games, Division II power Philadelphia Textile comes to the Thomas Field House.

"There's not a weak sister in the bunch," Blank said. "But we want it that way because we have inexperience on the perimeter, and we need to get knocked around and get prepared for the conference."

The west division shapes up to be a contest that many teams can win.

"I believe Joe Miller of California (Western Division Player of the Year) was the only impact player to graduate," Blank said. Blank considers Slippery Rock, Edinboro, IUP, and his very own Bald Eagles, as favorites to win the western crown.

"When you have this many teams going for the top, four losses in the division is good. That's how deep the parity in this league is," Blank said.

While their are only two divisional games before Christmas break, eight big games down the stretch will be played at home in front of a full student body.

The Bald Eagles sported a 13-0 record at home last year. Their home dominance has only been handed two losses in the last three years at home.

"We have some great fans here. They're the best especially around spring time," Blank said. "We should have no problem filling the field house with our fans."

The Bald Eagles get the season rolling at the Thomas Field House, Saturday, November 18, when they take on Baptist Bible College. This season promises to be a good one, so don't miss the powerful debut of the 1989-90 Bald Eagles.

Lady Eagles hope to defend Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference Championship

By Merritt La Porta
Eagle Eye Sports Reporter

It's a brand new season for the defending Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) champions of women's basketball, and head coach Frank Scarfo isn't ready to talk about back-to-back titles just yet.

"Right now we're working on the basic fundamentals of the game," he said. "Our goals now are to go back to the drawing board and build a basketball team that will have its own personality, and to start from day one and improve every day."

If this year's team is anything like last year's team, then the rest of the Pennsylvania Conference will be in deep trouble.

Last year the Lady Eagles finished with a 22-9 record. In the conference playoffs they demolished the number one team in the nation, Bloomsburg, 78-59, and then defeated western division rival Edinboro, 70-62 for the title.

It was the first PSAC title for the Lady Eagles since 1985.

Although assist leader and point guard Cindy Richards and reserve forward Joy Redmon have graduated, eleven players return from the championship team. Their talents are combined with three new freshmen.

Leading the team into battle are senior captains Maryellen Jaskuta and Linda Ordiway. Jaskuta was last year's Western Division Player of the Year and became the fifth woman at LHU to surpass the 1,000 point mark finishing the season with 1,063 total.

"Maryellen is perhaps one of the greatest all-around athletes to wear a Lady Eagle basketball uniform," said Scarfo. "The definition of hustle is Maryellen. She plays at both ends of the court and is fun and exciting to watch."

Jaskuta led the Lady Eagles in scoring with 14 p.p.g. and in steals with 103.

Ordiway finished last year with 47 rebounds and was a vital part of LHU's victories in the conference playoffs.

"Linda has been a very steady player for us in her three years with the team," Scarfo said. "She's one of our finest perimeter shooters and she has a great jump shot."

Several other players give the Lady Eagles that extra added finesse on the court.

Senior center Amy Derus averaged 6.0 p.p.g. and grabbed 147 rebounds, and senior guard Kris Wiberg averaged 6.8 p.p.g.

"Amy has been a significant member of our basketball team," said Scarfo. "She's very strong around the basket and is a tough and physical player who makes a lot of things happen for us on the court."

"Kris will be one of the key people we want to have on the floor this year," Scarfo added. "She continues to improve every day and has come along tremendously since her freshman year."

Juniors Amy Barger, Donna Heller, Lisa Sporer, and Angie Wolfe return as the heart of the Lady Eagles' offense.

Barger proved her outstanding freshman year was no fluke by having an outstanding sophomore season. She was 75% form the free throw line and scored 9.1 p.p.g while grabbing 177 rebounds.

"Amy is one of the great low post players in the conference," Scarfo said. "She has a tremendous work ethic and we're very pleased with the progress she's made coming off a broken ankle from last spring."

6-2 forward Sporer was the team's third leading scorer with a 9.4 average and led the team with 236 rebounds.

"Without a doubt, Lisa is the top rebounder in the entire conference," said Scarfo. "She's also the most versatile player in the conference. She can play around the basket as a post player, she's very agile, and handles the ball like a guard."

Heller finished last year with 138 points and 26 rebounds, but will probably be best remembered for her three-point shot which got the Lady Eagles rolling on their way to victory over Bloom in the playoffs.

"Donna was a pleasing surprise to the program as it took her a little bit longer to get rolling. But once she started she was just outstanding. She can go inside and rebound, yet she's also got an outstanding shooting range."

Wolfe played her first season last year after having to sit out her freshman year because she was a transfer. She averaged 5.2 p.p.g. and snared 100 rebounds in her "rookie" season.

"Angie struggled at first last year, but once she began to play with confidence, she began to play superbly."

Three other players are ready to pick up where they left off last season and contribute to the Lady Eagles' winning ways.

Football preview

Bald Eagles look to win third game in a row in season finale

By Herb Samuels
Eagle Eye Sports Reporter

The football team strives for its third consecutive victory tomorrow when they renew their rivalry with Mansfield University.

"This is one heck of a rivalry," said Bald Eagle Head Coach Tom Jones. "The presidents of the universities are very close."

Mansfield sports a 4-6 record coming off a big loss to West Chester, 63-6.

"It doesn't matter what their record is, when we go up there it will be very hard to win," Jones said.

Mansfield has played one of the confusing seasons this year. They have beaten Millersville, Kutztown and Bloomsburg this season. Bloomsburg defeated LHU 24-7 earlier this year.

The Mountaineers got crushed by East Stroudsburg, 50-7. LHU beat ESU, 17-7 two weeks ago.

The conclusion is, if Mansfield is ready, they are tough to handle. Will Mansfield be ready this week?

"They'll be ready," Jones said. "It means everything to them. It will be a physical game I promise you that."

Earlier this week Jones expressed that this game is urgent to the Bald Eagles. "This is a need game. We've got to have it," he said.

On defense, Mansfield runs a "50" defense with a front five that Jones describes as "good."

"They are good up front and blitz a lot. They like to bring the linebackers, and at times the strong safety," Jones said.

On offense Mansfield shows multiple set formations and throws the football often. They like to spread the ball around and occasionally run the ball with success.

"They have a lot of kids on offense that can hurt you. They move the ball around," Jones said.

Mansfield's offense also features one of the most devious plays an offense can run.

The quarterback pretends to take the ball and roll-out to pass in hopes to suck in the defensive line and linebackers. In reality, the ball is on the ground and a huge offensive lineman picks the ball up and runs in hopes of running over the undersized secondary.

"They have a big tackle that stands at 6-foot-4 and weighs 270 pounds. They also have a center that weighs in at 280," Jones said.

Keys to Victory: The Bald Eagle defense is playing its best games down the stretch and it's more than paying off.

They have to maintain this in order to bring home a "w."

Last week, free safety Dwayne Tooles was honored as ECAC Defensive Player of the Week. A repeat performance will more than stager Mansfield's passing game.

If the defense maintains the strong efforts, the Bald Eagles will be in good shape.

On offense, LHU will have to pick and choose their opportunities. They will have to take advantage of mistakes in the Mansfield defense.

Quarterback Jimmy Broadway has shown that he has the ability to do this. His touch-down pass to Carl Fisher last week proved he could read the defense and make the right decision.

Couple this with a good day from tailback Guy Wade, and the Bald Eagles may obtain their third victory of the season.

Prediction: When I predict a winner (whether it is LHU or not) the Bald Eagles have gone 0-8.

But when I have refused to pick one team or the other, the Bald Eagles are 2-0.

So, there is only one logical prediction, and that's none.

The game will be played in Mansfield tomorrow afternoon and will be well worth the one hour trip.

Three other players are ready to pick up where they left off last season and contribute to the Lady Eagles' winning ways.

Junior Angie Murphy had to red-shirt after four games due to a wrist injury while sophomores Franny Grant and Joanne Esposito will be looking for more playing time this year.

"Angie was an outstanding hustler in her freshman year and slowly but surely creeping her way towards some valuable playing time," said Scarfo.

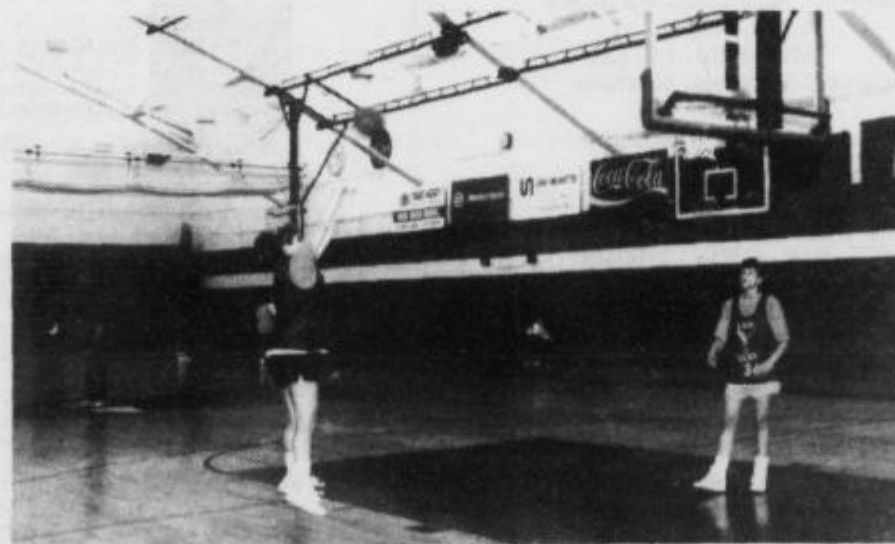

"Franny is one of the quickest players we have on the team and she's one of those people looking for significant playing time at the point guard spot."

"Joanne has been very pleasing at times. She seems to be shooting the ball much better than she did last year and is considerably more confident this year."

Three new faces will be vying for playing time also: freshmen Carol Holtz, Dalyann Fuller, and Marijo Martini.

"The freshmen are a little tentative as most freshmen will be at this level," said Scarfo. "There's great talent in the freshmen. We're pleased with the way they're progressing."

"Carol is progressing nicely as a point guard, Dalyann can be a swing guard and play a little bit on the wing. She has the ability and size to bang around and play on the base line. Marijo is coming along well also."

Scarfo believes one of the team's major strengths will be the base line game.

"We could potentially start 6-2, 6-1, 6-0, in Sporer, Barger and Derus," he said. "Rebounding and inside scoring should be a real strength for us as well as our play on the wing area."

Once again the Lady Eagles have one of the toughest schedules in Division II basketball, including a home game against Final Four participant Bentley College.

"Our schedule this year is equally as interesting as last year's, but it remains to be seen if it's going to be as difficult," said Scarfo.

The Lady Eagles open the season next Friday with the Lady Eagle Classic. Scarfo says these first few games will set the tone for this year's team.

"We're not going to win a single game this year based on what we did last year," he said. "We're going to evaluate our performance in these games and then go from there."
