SCC van burns while helpless students look on

By Chris Fischer
and Kate Kinney
Staff Reporters

A Student Cooperative Council, Inc. (SCC) 1980 van was gutted by fire while enroute to the LHU vs. Cheyney football game on Saturday, Nov. 8.

According to a press release sent out by Robert V. Rote, SCC Public Relations Officer, "At approximately 10:45 a.m., five members of the Black Cultural Society (BCS), noticed smoke coming from the van's engine . . . and within minutes the van was consumed by flames."

The incident took place on the eastbound lane of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, approximately four miles before the Allentown exit.

None of the five students was injured, but the van was "seriously a fire hazard," said Pamela Davis, one of the BCS members in the van.

Davis said that the van "had no fire extinguisher . . . no handle on the inside of the sliding (side) door . . . the trash basket was already filled when we got the van . . . and the fire department said that we couldn't have gotten out of the back doors, because the locks were broken."

"The fire department said we wouldn't have gotten out, if there would have been more than five of us," Davis said.

Wayne Gibbs, the van's driver, pulled the vehicle off to the side of the road, Davis explained. "We thought it was only overheating."

As they were getting out of the van, according to Davis, "the smoke was so heavy, you couldn't see the person in front of you."

Davis proceeded to feel the hood of the van and it was cool to the touch, but as she lifted the hood open, she said she saw flames shooting up from the engine.

"We couldn't get any cars to stop, and flames were coming out the sides of the hood," said Davis.

BCS member Ellen Tunstall and another student in the van went for help to a nearby house.

According to Tunstall, they called the police, and by the time they returned to the van, it was consumed in flames.

Finally two men from one car, and a Lutheran Pastor from another, stopped on the westbound lane to assist them, said Davis. One of them had an extinguisher, but it didn't help.

Tunstall said, "Everyone was very calm."

The other BCS members in the SCC vehicle besides Davis, Gibbs and Tunstall, were Kimberly Brown and Kimberly Evelyn.

"By the time the fire department came, the van's total inside was in flames," Davis said. "The fire department was wondering why the van burned so fast."

The Eagle Eye was referred to and contacted Ed Dutton, special project coordinator for the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation's Bureau of Driver Licensing in Harrisburg, PA, to check on any safety regulations that may apply to SCC vehicles.

He said that since the van was probably registered as a passenger vehicle and not under pupil transportation, but owned and operated by the SCC for student transportation, the van would fall under a "gray area . . .

not defined in regulations."

"It wouldn't be a bad idea to have a first aid kit and a fire extinguisher on board, no matter what," Dutton said.

In Rote's press release, he wrote, ". . . there was some loss of personal property such as books."

According to Davis, books are just the beginning of the personal property lost. Other items lost to the blaze include four winter coats, eyeglasses, a term paper, two umbrellas, radios, wallets, a watch, etc.

Davis met with Law Enforcement officials, SCC President Kevin McNamara, SCC Vice President Stevan Donaldson, and SCC Administrator Jean Nestlerode about the incident.

Davis said, "Law Enforcement has been asking questions . . . 'what is the maintenance of the van?'"

"Kevin McNamara is taking it very well," Davis said. "They were all understanding, until I brought it up about the lost articles." Continued to page 4.

Minority groups at LHU discussed in the Hall of Flags

By Amy Barner and Melissa Kauffman
Staff Reporters

Minorities at Lock Haven University are being discriminated against, according to panel members in a discussion last week.

Jennell Dixon, Kym Zions, Robert Baker, Eric Otiende, Deborah Kreidler, Linette Dunbar, and Diane Young were the panel members discussing "Minority Groups At LHU" in the Hall of Flags, Robinson Hall.

University students, faculty, and townspeople asked questions trying to pinpoint the problems minority students are having, and tried to come up with some solutions.

Baker said that he "would like to see something done to give others a taste of other cultures."

"The greatest disease is ignorance," said Otiende during the discussion.

Otiende said he felt there should be a longer orientation period for international students geared toward everyday life in the U.S.

Also, foreign students in the audience described problems they had adjusting to the American way of life.

"Everything is geared to American students," one foreign student said.

Amola Jhaveri, an international student, said that they didn't know about "things like using phones, how to open bank accounts, what kind of clothes to wear, and explanation of University credits."

Another topic discussed was the recent fights between black and white students.

A question asked by a member of the audience was "Were they (the fights) really racial?" and "Are they going to be a serious problem in the future?"

One black international student spoke about being called racial names.

Many of the students said that they felt that the problem has to do with integration.

One point that was brought up during the discussion was that very few white students attend the yearly black festival.

Richard S. West, coordinator of Human Relations and Minority Affairs, suggested that a workshop be put together where students would be exposed to different cultures.

After discussing the various problems on campus, one student said, "Ignorance is the fact. How do we deal with it?"

One townspeople said that a change was needed in the entire community but should be started in the University first, where more of the problems exist.

"My wife and I are believers in John Lennon's 'Imagine,' he said.

It was decided that a panel discussion would not solve the problems and more positive action should be taken.

After the discussion, Sallie Sadler, a psychology professor, asked interested students to join in making two groups.

One group, under Associate Dean of Students Timothy Susick, will plan more weekend activities on campus, and to help avoid the clustering of many students in one place.

The other group will concentrate on making the campus aware of problems of minorities on campus, and help take affirmative action concerning the problems.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

McEntire housing policy discussed

Dear Editor,
I would like to discuss the matter of housing policy on campus. Specifically, I would like to examine the policy in McEntire Hall. On Thursday, Nov. 13, there was a fire drill held in that dorm in which the main purpose, according to Jen Mills, a fire marshal, was to examine each student's room for such things as lounge furniture and desks unbolted from the walls. Counselors specifically told the fire marshalls to look for these things upon entering the rooms. As I understand the law, fire drills are for the purpose of being prepared for evacuation in the case of a fire or other emergency. They are not to be used for other purposes such as spot inspections or breaking up parties.

If you live in McEntire Hall, you are subject to garbage being thrown out of windows, stolen laundry, broken light covers, garbage in the stairwells, destruction of the elevators, and numerous false alarms at 2 a.m. I feel that the Hall Director Should examine her priorities and redirect her energies to protect and insure the student's safety and living conditions, first and foremost.

Sincerely,
Jill Brady

Weekends are made for letting off steam

Dear Editor,

Ever since a cold day back in my youth when I saw Yale steal Princeton's mascot, I looked forward to my own jovial days in college. This dream ended upon entering Lock Haven University. Besides the prohibitionist atmosphere that exists on campus, I've held my tongue, until now, on several points. Simply because I live in North Hall does not mean that I am a garbage throwing pig as suggested in an earlier "Letter to the Editor". At 7 p.m. on a Friday night, I am aggravated that I must turn my stereo down to a barely audible level or risk being evicted from my residence. And now I find that a fellow student is burning mad at the inconsideration of some students who participated in a harmless snowball fight last week.

Let us all keep in mind that grades and studying contribute to a build-up of tensions during the week, and the weekend is the time for most students to blow off a little steam. Secondly, let's remember this is America. A little fun or loud music should not result in evictions, expulsions, or arrests.

If students had wanted an atmosphere like the one we are being forced to live in, we could have all signed up for a four year stay in a Tibetan monastery. Let's all keep cool heads and not let our emotions or our imaginations run away with us.

Sincerely,
Mark J. D'Agostino

Professor responds to student's letter

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter in response to Ricard T. Fisher's letter of Nov. 21. I have never been challenged by such stimulating and thought provoking questions. Not only did Mr. Fisher display his depth of thinking, but also his ability to critically analyze all facets of a football program. Comparing Lock Haven University with Lock Haven High School and Penn State University showed great insight. After all, the programs are so similar.

Next time Mr. Fisher contemplates "challenging" the Eagle Eye readers with his questions, I hope he will reconsider.

Most of us would prefer to evaluate more relevant questions. For instance, is the coaching staff the problem with our football program? Does LHU have the same monies and resources as the PSAC schools? Is winning the only measurement of success? What is the role of intercollegiate athletics within the academic institution?

I'll bet even you and your athletic-minded friends had the answers to your questions. What do you know about the less obvious?

Sincerely,
Rose Ann Nell

Kanaskie's cagers post 83-73 victory on Sun.

By Bill Alexander
Co-Sports Editor

Although the men's basketball team defeated Salem College 83-73 on Sunday, to even their record at 1-1, Head Coach Kurt Kanaskie was not pleased with his team's performance.

"Sunday's game was by far the worst game we have played in our two years here," said Kanaskie. "We lacked intensity on defense, our shot selection was terrible and we looked like a poorly coached team."

Kevin Charney and Jeff Null lead the Bald Eagles with 16 points each. Eric Hearn and Dean Kriebel added 14, while Junior Price had 12 points.

Dave Myers lead the visiting Tigers with 15 points, while teammates Antoine Morris and Bobby Hill added 11 and 10 points respectively.

Friday night, the Bald Eagles visited Shepard College and came home with a 86-83 loss.

"We were up by three points at halftime and got a little erratic and lost the lead," Kanaskie said. "We had a shot to tie the game, but it was blocked and we lost by three. They are a very good team and we had an opportunity to win. If we would have played real well, we could have beaten them."

Charney and Kriebel lead the Eagle scoring with 18 points each. Null and Sean Lucas each added 12 points and Hearn had 10.

Terry Connally lead Shepard with 20 points, while Jason Paar and Bobby Boyd added 12 points.

The next game for the men is tonight at home at 8 p.m. against Susquehanna.

Jeff Null slams home two of his 16 points against Salem on Sunday.

Women hoopers place 3rd at Dutch Country Classic

By Bill Hunter
Co-Sports Editor

After a first round loss, the Lady Eagle hoopers clawed back to finish third in the Dutch Country Classic at Millersville over the past weekend.

"We turned the ball over 12 of the first 18 times we touched it (against Millersville). Our defense looked great, but turnovers and reckless passing almost cost us the second game," said Head Coach Frank Scarfo.

The Lady Eagles, under the leadership of first year coach Scarfo, are 1-1 and will host Shippensburg tonight at 6 p.m.

In the Millersville game, the Haven fell behind 35-21 at half time, but closed the gap only losing by 59-56.

Leading scorers and rebounders for Lock Haven were Donna Sergi and Lori Young. Sergi had 13 points and 12 rebounds while Young had 16 and five.

Their next opponent, Mercy College of Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., would fall by the same margin that the Bald Eagles did in the preliminary match.

Although Mercy put 61 pts. on the board, LHU scoring leaders Sergi and Young ended all hopes of victory.

With a total of 64 points, the Haven was paced with 19 from Sergi, 15 from Young, 12 from Kelly Meyers and 11 from Lisa Klepp.

The Lady Eagles were 24 of 60 from the floor and shot 60 per cent from the line making 17 of 28.

Dissatisfied with Friday's play, Scarfo substituted Klepp into the starting line up for Saturday's game. Klepp had 11 points and eight rebounds against Mercy, including the game winning basket with :11 remaining in the fourth quarter.

"We've got to stop the turnovers if we are going to win Tuesday night," said Scarfo.

Tip off is scheduled for 6 p.m. at Thomas Field House.

Three wrestlers capture Turkey Bowl Championships ...LHU team places 2nd

By Scott Crispell
Sports Reporter

Lock Haven University crowned three individual champions and finished second to host, Navy, at the Turkey Bowl Wrestling Tournament on Saturday.

The Bald Eagles got titles from Dicky Howell (118), John Barrett (158) and Jody Karam (167).

Lock Haven also had four runners-up in Craig Corbin (118), Mike Lingenfelter (142), Joe Pecaitis (177) and Mike Pacholik (190).

The Bald Eagles cornered the market on the 118-pound crown. In the finals, Howell decisioned teammate Corbin, 4-3. Corbin turned an impressive win in the semi-final round. He beat fifth-ranked Jeff Bowyer of James Madison, 4-0 in overtime. This was Howell's third consecutive Turkey Bowl championship.

Jeff Husick lost a tough bout in the semi's to fourth-ranked Marc Sodano of North Carolina State. Husick gave up an escape and a riding time point and lost a 2-0 decision. Husick battled back to place third.

At 134, Willy Metzger lost in the semi-finals and placed fifth.

Lingenfelter turned in two impressive victories on his way to a second place finish at 142. In the quarter-finals, Lingenfelter beat tenth-ranked John Parr of Virginia, 7-3. Then, in the semi's, he squeaked by highly touted West Virginia freshman, Scott Collins, 12-10. Lingenfelter lost to Joe Cesari of North Carolina State, 5-0, in the championship round. Cesari was named the tourney's Outstanding Wrestler.

At 150, Thane Turner also dropped a decision in the semi's and wound up in fourth place.

Barrett gave Head Coach Neil Turner a second champion at 158. Barrett, ranked sixteenth in the country, defeated eighteenth ranked, Paul Radomski of Navy, 5-4, for the title.

Turner was very impressed with the performance of some of his veterans. He said, "Our goal going in was to win the team title. Naturally, after losing by just one-half point, we are very disappointed. But, I think we got good performances from our front line people. We needed a few more wins and places from our second line."

Karam won the 167-pound crown with a 5-2 victory over Derek Capanna of Virginia.

Pecaitis reached the finals at 177 before losing an 8-3 decision to Paul Green of Morgan State.

Pacholik won three matches to reach the finals at 190. However, he was pinned by Navy's Scott Kelly.

In the team race, the 35th ranked Bald Eagles scored 152.75 points to finish one-half point behind 26th ranked Navy. However, the Bald Eagles finished ahead of 12th ranked North Carolina State, 20th ranked West Virginia and number 24, Virginia.

The Bald Eagles will compete in the 11th annual "Mat-Town USA" invitational Saturday November 29, in Thomas Fieldhouse.

Also, at the East Stroudsburg Open, Brad Lloyd, who is red-shirting, lost in the finals to Penn State's top-ranked Greg Elinsky.

Wrestling gets under way Saturday at 9 a.m. and continues throughout the day, with championship finals scheduled for 8:00 pm.

Van fire

"They haven't contacted us at all about the lost articles," she said. "They said they'll get back to us."

She did say that the SCC did handle the five students' immediate concerns, such as new keys, books, and meal tickets.

When Nestlerode was asked about the lost personal property, she said, "I haven't heard a thing from the (insurance) adjustor."

"Anything we could do, we did do to help them," Nestlerode said.

She went on to explain that the SCC cannot interfere with the investigation into the incident being done for them by the Nationwide Insurance Co.

McNamara expanded on this point by saying, "By paying them (the BCS students) instead of letting the insurance company, we would be breaking our agreement . . . and they (Nationwide) could turn around and sue us."

According to Donaldson, the SCC collected a list of items the five students lost in the fire.

"The items lost totaled almost $1350 . . . we are in no position to fulfill that amount to the students," Donaldson said.

Nestlerode explained that the students are going to have to go through their parent's homeowner insurance policies, to appeal to Nationwide for compensation of their lost articles.

McNamara said, "We've done everything we can . . . the insurance company has to take care of the rest."

The SCC though, has offered the services of their attorney to any of the students, who may feel they are not getting satisfactory results from their insurance companies, McNamara pointed out.

A week before the incident occurred, the van had an oil change at a local garage, said Nestlerode, but declined to name the specific one.

According to her records, the van's inspection was not due until July 1987. The SCC fleet of vehicles is otherwise maintained by a student.

The last time the van was used for a recorded long trip, was back in September when McNamara took it to State College, PA. He said at that time, the van was equipped with a fire extinguisher.

Nestlerode said that the fire extinguishers disappear faster than they can replace them back on the vans.

The BCS students did return safely to LHU on Sunday, after being picked up and housed for the night by Gibbs' parents.

LHU receives $50,000 in grant

By Jennifer Pepper
Staff Reporter

A state senator visited Lock Haven University last week to deliver a check that will help to buy new computer equipment for Lock Haven University students and local businessmen to use.

Senator J. Doyle Corman, a member of the Ben Franklin Board of Directors, presented Dr. Craig Dean Willis, president of the University, with the first installment of a $50,000 Ben Franklin Partnership Grant.

The Ben Franklin Partnership Grant will go toward the advancement of the Lock Haven University Business and Micro Computer Application Training Center.

Dr. James K. Smalley, director of continuing education, has been a participant in the administration of the Ben Franklin Partnership Program.

The purpose of the program, according to Smalley, is to provide employees of local businesses and industries with computer training sessions and the opportunity to learn more about computer applications.

Smalley said that the Ben Franklin Project is to help fund businesses, in the hope that new jobs will be created in the area.

Another purpose of the program, Smalley said, is to teach existing industry about state-of-the-art computers, so that they can compete in the world and national markets.

Businesses which are already involved in the program include Hammermill, Champion, and Woolrich.

According to Smalley, the businesses and industries usually have their training sessions scheduled for the evening. This leaves the facilities available for student use during the day.

He added that the University is getting money from the grant to buy computer hardware and software that local businesses and industry can use.

"At the same time, there's no prohibition from our own students using it at times that it's not being used in the evening," said Smalley.

Smalley said that the courses for employees of local businesses have already begun. Some of the courses are Intro to the Business Micro Computer, Lotus 1-2-3, and Data Base Learning Programs.

"We'll be offering more courses and be getting more software and hardware in the coming spring semester," said Smalley. "We'll probably apply for a continuance grant for next year, also."

Besides the $50,000 presented at last week's ceremony, Smalley said that private industry, the University, and government agencies have, either in kind or in cash, provided the other $112,000 toward the project.

Mice running all over McEntire residents

By John Elder
Staff Reporter

Several residents of McEntire Hall have spotted mice running through their dormitory.

Denise Dugan, a sixth floor resident of McEntire Hall said that when she awoke at 4:30 a.m. last Tuesday, she found a mouse on her forehead.

"I felt it on my head, I waited until it got off, turned on the light, got my flashlight and looked all over the place," said Dugan.

She said her friends did not believe the story until the next night, when the mouse was again spotted in her room.

At approximately 1:30 a.m., they saw the mouse running through the room.

"It was a cute thing, just a little baby. I just don't like the idea of living in the dorm with a mouse," said Denise Dugan.

Dugan said that she and about eight friends tried to capture the mouse, but they had no luck.

Mike Nadolsky, student custodian and resident of the hall also encountered the mice.

"Last monday, I was sweeping up the trash, and a mouse ran out across my shoe tops," said the student.

Kellyisue Loftus, another sixth floor resident, said that on Saturday, November 15 at approximately 9:30 she spotted a pair of mice near the laundry room.

"They were running right at me," said

Loftus.

Mary Lou Case, coordinator for student life in McEntire Hall, refused to comment other than saying that she contacted maintenance and that "the problem is being taken care of."

Bob Marshall, a custodian in McEntire Hall, said that the maintenance department gets exterminators that are supposed to periodically control the pests.

"They're supposed to go through and put (mice controlling) packs around," said Marshall.

He also said, "I haven't seen that they've put any packs in this building yet this year."

He said that there was a problem with mice last year, but he has not seen any yet this year.

Head of Maintenance, James Meckley, was out of town and unavailable for comment.
