"Legislative Appreciation Day" planned for April

By Jennifer Brady
Staff Reporter

The SCC voted unanimously at Wednesday's meeting to settle a negligence lawsuit out of court for $20,000 instead of facing a possible $300,000 fine (see other story for details).

In other business, SCC Vice President Steve Donaldson said that the SCC donated $150 to the Tau Beta Sigma sorority's fund.

The fund is being raised to start a memorial honoring student John Ross. Ross was killed in an auto accident over the Christmas break.

The sisters will be holding a spaghetti dinner in the future to help raise funds for the memorial.

Another major issue discussed at Wednesday's meeting was transportation.

SCC members casted a majority of votes approving a faculty member's recommendation that the University handle transportation in the future instead of the SCC.

Associate professor of foreign languages, Robert Mullen, said that under the current system, student athletes drive to their competitions.

Since they are fatigued after competition, Mullen stated, there is the possibility that they could become involved in an accident. He recommended that professional drivers be hired.

McNamara said, "I think we'll be saving the students a lot of money when the SCC's two vans and station wagon become state vehicles."

The vehicles will be turned over to the University on July 1, 1987.

The SCC's transportation funding report indicated that for the 1987/88 fiscal year, the SCC would only have to cover total catastrophic insurance costs.

Currently, the SCC is responsible for gas and maintenance, vehicle insurance, bus transportation, mileage costs and vehicle replacements.

McNamara added that he would rather see the money go into student activities.

The SCC will continue to provide transportation to small clubs, but instead of owning the vehicles, the SCC will lease them.

In other business, McNamara discussed what happened at the Council of Trustees' meeting on February 19.

He said that President Craig Dean Willis' report revealed that enrollment for Spring '87 is the highest ever.

Also in the report, Willis said that LHU will hire a fundraising consultant to help the alumni association raise money. He added that the SSHE Board of Governors will be on campus April 22, 23 and 24.

McNamara said that a "Legislative Appreciation Day" has been planned for a date in late April.

In explaining what the SCC Executive Board hopes to accomplish by having this event, McNamara said, "Often, the only time our legislators hear from us is when budget time comes. This event is to thank them for their past support."

Bob Rote, SCC public relations director, said the legislators who have tentatively agreed to come are U.S. Representative William F. Clinger, Jr. from the 23rd District, State Representative Russell P. Letterman from the 76th District and a staff member representing Senator J. Doyle Corman.

Rote added that he has also requested Lock Haven's Mayor Diann H. Stuempfle and one Clinton County commissioner to attend the event.

The legislators will meet with Willis and with acting Vice President Mary Pursell for breakfast and a tour of the campus.

The meeting concluded with comments for the good of the organization.

A new honors seminar course, that has been offered to only a few selected students, is part of the curriculum at Lock Haven University this semester.

This three credit course entitled "Utopia and Human Nature," is being taught by Dr. Nelson DeLavan and Dr. James T. Knauer.

"The idea for a seminar such as this has been around for many years. It was not a spur of the moment decision," said DeLavan.

DeLavan went on to say that a program such as this has been in production over a series of semesters and was finally implemented this term.

"It was by invitation only," said Knauer. "We chose the candidates on G.P.A. and teacher recommendations."

The 15 students involved in the seminar include Theresa Burns, David Degarmo, Chris Fischer, Rosemary Glantz, Kathleen Houser, Deb Kreidler and Debbie Markowitz.

Glantz said, "I think the course is very interesting and should definitely be offered again."

The other students in the class are Mark McCoy, John Murphy, Eric Otiende, James Pilugh, Jainene Scaff, Brad Seth, Taiji Watanabe and Marchelle Whitesel.

Pilugh commented, "The honors seminar is extremely thought provoking and rewarding. It has increased my understanding of society."

Comprised mainly of reading and classroom discussion, the course includes studying such classical utopian thinkers as

SCC votes to settle $20,000 negligence suit

By Jennifer Brady
Staff Reporter

It was determined that a $20,000 out-of-court settlement would be the appropriate avenue to take regarding a negligence case filed against the SCC in May of 1981, during the Senate meeting held Wednesday, March 4.

The case, Hughes v. SCC, involves a student who drowned in a canoeing accident when she was not required to check out a life jacket by former SCC employee and student Steve Loud.

Former SCC lawyer Richard Callahan said that evidence indicates the SCC was negligent.

Rather than allow the case to go to court on March 16, and risk, according to Callahan, receiving a fine of about $300,000, the SCC unanimously voted to settle out of court.

In a letter to SCC President Kevin McNamara, Callahan indicated that the city of Lock Haven, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the University's Board of Trustees and the Pennsylvania departments have also settled out of court for about $75,000.

Jean Nestlerode, SCC accountant, said, "Money has been set aside in a ready asset trust for the purpose of settling this case."

McNamara said, "It is not going to affect any clubs or other organizations because the money has already been budgeted."

SCC Vice President Steve Donaldson said, "It was the best thing the SCC could have done. If the case would have gone to court, and we had lost, our budget is $400,000, so we would have lost all our funding."

students

Plato, Thomas More, Edward Bellamy and B.F. Skinner.

The honors students will be evaluated on their participation in class and by doing four papers -- each of which must be six to ten typed pages.

"In all of my 19 years of teaching, this course has been the most challenging. It's something I will look back on in years to come," said DeLavan.

Because of the interest in honors seminars, both professors have future plans in regards to a regular honors program. Knauer is coordinating LHU's efforts towards this program.

"We (LHU) may not have another honors seminar next semester, but if the desire is there, we hope to have a honors program some day," agreed both.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

Tonight I attended the airband contest in Price Auditorium. Everyone who went had to pay a dollar to get in. Each person who paid got a piece of paper to vote with. I felt this was an unfair method in choosing the winner.

One band was made up of Alpha Sigma Phi brothers and the other band consisted of residents from McEntire Hall. This method of voting made it a popularity contest. Of course, fraternity brothers are going to stick together and show up to vote for their band. The McEntire residents aren't as close and loyal as a fraternity.

The part that really killed me was for each dollar more you donated to SAMS you got another vote. I heard the fraternity brothers telling each other to gather their money to get more votes. The McEntire residents could have done that too, but we aren't as close to the people who were in the McEntire band.

There should have been judges who were totally unbiased. Lock Haven wants to send its best band to MTV, not its most popular.

Sincerely,
David Rispoli

Dear Editor,

Never let it be said that the professors and administrators here at Lock Haven are interested only in teaching and picking up their checks while neglecting activities on campus. Instead, let it be noted that they do care and will help if asked.

We (the Donkey Basketball Selection Committee of High Hall Council) have asked 20 of these individuals to participate on the faculty/staff team for the Donkey Ball tournament on April 28, and 14 of them agreed to play. Furthermore, three of the six who said no cited physical reasons for their decline while another had a class commitment. When I tell people that we have 14 so far (with seven yet to ask), they all seem surprised.

First, let me thank those professors and administrators who did agree to play, and second, let me offer a word of warning to those who are chosen to play on the two student teams. Co-Honorary Captains Dr. Charlie DeSanto and Dr. Kenneth M. Cox will be leading a tough team, determined to successfully represent the great faculty and administration here at Lock Haven.

Sincerely,
Rick M. Ansel
President High Hall Council

"Lazyitis" can hit anyone at LHU

By Joe Jones
Editorial Columnist

We're getting towards the middle of another semester and all has gone pretty well so far. At the halfway point, most people have managed to remain on top of their classwork and attend all of their classes.

If you're like me, however, a storm is approaching, "lazyitis."

Yes, "lazyitis," a chronic disease that can hit anyone. Worse yet, its effects can be catastrophic.

A victim of this disease usually doesn't wake up until noon. He or she says goodbye to morning classes and hello to cutting class and minus letter grades. Even if a class doesn't have a cut policy, you still wind up falling behind.

Conquering "lazyitis" is a matter of self-control. It is up to you to try to overcome that something inside which causes you to have that lax feeling toward classes.

This semester, I'm using a new method to combat the disease. Even when "lazyitis" sets in, I usually get pretty good grades, but this semester I'm setting my eyes on dean's list, and to get there I also must continue to attend classes.

Also, remember that each time you miss a class you are throwing money away because each class represents a part of your tuition. So try to cure yourself of this serious disorder and you'll avoid a lot of pain later. And you'll save a lot of money, too.

Eastern Wrestling League Championships at Penn State

By Scott Crispell
Sports Reporter

The 12th annual Eastern Wrestling League Championships (EWL) get underway today at Penn State's Rec Hall.

The Nittany Lions, who finished the dual meet season as the nation's top ranked team, will head the seven team field as they search for their sixth consecutive team title.

Ten former champions return for this year's tournament. Ricky Bonomo of Bloomsburg (118), Tim Flynn (126), Greg Elinsky (158), Dan Mayo (177) of Penn State, Paul Clark (134), Mike Cole (142) and Dave Cowan (190) of Clarion are all back to defend the titles they won last March.

Bloomsburg's Rocky Bonomo (126), a two-time champion, defaulted in the finals to Flynn last year. Pitt's Gary Bolin won the crown at 142 two years ago. The Bonomo twins and Elinsky will be seeking their third individual EWL crown.

Here's a look at the top individuals in each weight class.

118 - After competing at 126 all season, two-time NCAA champion Ricky Bonomo of Bloomsburg drops to 118 and rates a slight edge over Penn State's All-American Jim Martin. Bonomo handled Martin in the finals a year ago, 13-7. Dickey Howell and Paul Kapper of Cleveland should make things interesting. Howell tied Kapper in the dual meet earlier in the season. This weight could send four wrestlers to nationals.

126 - Rocky Bonomo is healthy again and is favored to win his third EWL title. Penn State's Ken Chertow is coming off an upset victory over Ricky Bonomo one week ago.

Young overcomes adversity and change

By Chrs Sager
Sports Reporter

Changes and adversity haven't stopped the steady play of senior Lori Young throughout her four years here.

A knee injury in her sophomore year caused her to miss several games, but she returned to play on the state championship winning team.

Besides injuries, after three years of service under former Head Coach Fred Riley, she had to adjust to the style of incoming coach Frank Scarfo.

"The toughest adjustment for me was changing from a zone defense to a man to man," said Young.

According to Assistant Coach Carol Ritter, "Lori adjusted extremely well. I think she enjoyed the challenge."

Young, who is the all-time assist leader at LHU, has also picked up the scoring pace this year without her assist rate going down.

Ritter went on to say that Young has gained confidence in her shot and has taken advantage of scoring opportunities she did not take in the past.

Personal records are not as important as team accomplishments according to Young. "I wasn't even thinking about the assist record."

Jeff Husick could reach the finals while Pitt's Matt Gerhard could be a surprise.

134 - Clarion's Paul Clark returns to defend his crown. Tim Flynn of Penn State moves up to 134 after winning the 126 pound title last year. Willy Metzger is the best of the rest and should earn a trip to the NCAA's.

142 - This could be the deepest weight class in the tourney. Everyone has been ranked in the top 20 during the season and have taken turns beating each other.

Leading the way is Pitt's Pat Santow, a runner-up a year ago. Clarion's Mike Cole defeated Santow in the finals last year, but recently dropped a 13-3 decision to the Panther All-American. Joe Hadge of Penn State and Mike Lingenfelter could surprise the field. Lingenfelter dropped a tough 15-13 loss to Santow in last year's tourney.

150 - Jim Aberly of West Virginia was third a year ago and has been ranked among the top three in the nation all season. Dave Morgan of Bloom is close behind. Thane Turner owns a 4-4 draw with Morgan. Former champ Gary Bolin of Pitt should be in the hunt for the title.

158 - Two-time runner-up Ken Haselrig of Clarion is back for his final shot at an EWL crown. John Barrett has dropped some close decisions of late, but could put it together and place.

167 - Only two names here, Jody Karam and Greg Elinsky of Penn State. Elinsky has two titles under his belt at 158, Elinsky defeated Karam in the dual meet, 9-2. Karam won the 167 pound title two years ago.

177 - Penn State's Dan Mayo is the top gun with a 26-0 record. Clarion's Dave Cowan was champ a year ago, but has struggled all season. Jeff Karam could place.

190 - Bruce Wallace of Bloom and Penn State's Andy Voit have finished second here. Wallace was 2-1 against Voit this season. Bill Freeman dropped close decisions to Wallace and Voit. Should he turn either of those decisions around, he could reach the finals.

HWT - Todd Harrison of Clarion is the biggest and best of this weight. The battle for second should be between Penn State's Greg Haladay and Bloom's Jack Yocum. Mike Mazza will be giving up too much of a weight difference to place.

The top three in each weight class, as well as four "wild card" selections, will qualify for the NCAA championships at the University of Maryland on March 19-21.

Haven booters capture indoor soccer tourney

By Donna Carey
Sports Reporter

Led by Warren Westcoat, most valuable player of the tournament, Lock Haven's soccer team triumphed in all six games Sunday to win the first indoor soccer tournament of the spring season.

"We started out slowly, but we played better as the day went on," said Head Coach Lenny Long. "We were sound defensively, and we did what we had to do to win."

The Bald Eagles first victory, paced by Rob Eaton's two goals, ended with a 4-1 win against Nazareth College.

Westcoat led the surge in the second game by scoring on a 50 foot shot that glided into the corner of the net. Roy Mehl was credited with the game-winning goal as the Eagles coasted to a 4-1 win over Bucknell.

Andrew Monteith's unassisted goal and two assists capped the Eagles third win of the day over Millersville 4-1.

Following a scoreless first half, the Eagles beat rival East Stroudsburg 3-0 to qualify for the semifinals.

In the semifinals, the Eagles defeated their own alumni team 2-0 to reach the finals. Goals by Monteith and Tibi Kobolak were enough for the victory.

The finals brought a rematch against Nazareth. Just as before, the Haven came out on top 4-0. This gave LHU the win and the championship in the tournament.

Lacrosse team starts season over break

By Colleen S. Hackenberg
Sports Reporter

The lacrosse team is in full stride, both mentally and physically, in its preparation for the new season.

The team has already spent two weeks in the classroom setting goals, talking about strengths and weaknesses, and reaffirming values, and commitments.

"The team must run its offense more and be more consistent," said senior Karen Fry.

Head Coach Rose Ann Neff is also aiming toward a winning season.

Neff is working with eight returning letter winners and is looking to seniors Fry, Sue Baird, Lisa Coppock, Nora Sharkey, and Cathy Michener for leadership both on and off the field.

Freshman prospects are providing a lot of beginner talent added Neff. Key play could come from Sandy Teaf, Karen Learn, Stephanie Perry, and Katrina Heebner.

"How each individual understands her role on the team will determine our success on the field," said Neff.

The addition of Assistant Coach Lisa Hatley is another asset for the new season. She is particularly helpful in developing the goal keepers and in working on defensive aspects said Neff.

Neff believes the conference games will be very competitive, and the team is expecting a berth in the conference playoffs.

"Last year, we didn't win any non-conference games," said Neff. "This season we're looking to beat those teams."

Senior point guard Lori Young

Lori, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Young of Altoona is also a very good student, according to Ritter.

Currently student teaching at Liberty Curtin Elementary School in Beech Creek, Young plans to teach after graduation.

LHU Foundation offers more than 31 scholarships to help students

By Mike Leavy
Staff Reporter

"We help generate money from the private sector for LHU," said Lynn Lytle, Director of the Lock Haven University Foundation.

For the past twenty years, the LHU Foundation has been an independent fundraising body that raises money for equipment and scholarships.

It has its own board of directors comprised mostly of alumni and local business people.

They get funds from various sources such as alumni, families of students, friends of LHU and other foundations.

Lytle said that the foundation expects to more than double their funds this year from the 1983-84 total of $41,000.

The money for equipment is usually given in the form of grants, she added.

A professor or department may request funds to purchase equipment that wasn't obtainable in the budget.

Lytle said that the main portion of the foundation's fundraising campaign is geared towards money for scholarships.

Currently, the foundation offers more than 31 scholarships.

These scholarships are only open to students who fulfill the requirements of the various programs.

One of the larger scholarships of interest to freshmen is the Presidential Scholars Program.

This program requires that students score a minimum of 1200 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, hold a ranking in the upper fifth of the class and have excellent citizenship.

This scholarship awards $1,500 to five freshmen annually.

According to Lytle, most of the scholarships are in memory of a loved one.

These initial funds are then invested and the interest is then used to pay out the scholarships, she explained.

The amount given out each year depends on the amount of the donations and the annual interest rate.

One of the ways this money is raised is through the annual phonathon.

Between November 16 and December 2 of last year, the LHU Foundation phoned people to ask for donations to the University.

The figures are not in on how much was made, but it is expected to have been a successful campaign, Lytle commented.

Brochures are also sent out encouraging alumni and others to give money to the school.

There are several gift clubs open for donors to join. For example, a donation of one thousand dollars or more puts the donor in the President's Inner Circle.

The Archway Society is for donations between $500 and $999. For membership in the Haven Associates, a donation between $250 and $499 can be made.

These programs, along with others, have helped the Foundation increase its amount of funds over the years.

Lytle concluded that the LHU Foundation has had much success in the past and is expected to offer an even wider array of scholarships and grants in the future.

Alumnus acknowledges ROTC program

By Abby A. Mylln
Guest Columnist

Six years after his graduation, alumnus John L. Yonkin acknowledges and praises the ROTC program at Lock Haven University.

Yonkin is recognized as the first LHU student to receive a full ROTC scholarship. He applied for the scholarship in his sophomore year after spending the previous year in the ROTC program.

At that time, the program included only eight students, a captain and one non-commissioned officer.

By Yonkin's senior year, however, approximately 15 to 20 students were active in the program, and it began to gain recognition among the students and faculty.

Upon graduating from LHU with a degree in secondary education English, Yonkin was commissioned to the Air Defense Artillery and was stationed in Fort Bliss, Texas.

Later, he served in the Eighth Infantry in Germany where he became a legislative officer.

After working only one year as a sales representative, Yonkin was promoted to regional manager at Baxter Travenol, a company involved with medical diagnostics.

He explained that he developed leadership by showing people how to get things done and also by motivating them to do what needs to be done.

Yonkin also noted that he owes much of his success to his ROTC training and the experience it gave him.

"ROTC put me a step ahead, and then some," he said.

When asked what he thought of the present ROTC facilities, Yonkin remarked, "I wouldn't know it was the same place!"

Circle K helps with area service projects

By John Cover
Staff reporter

One of the clubs on campus which is almost unknown to LHU students is Circle "K," a non-profit service organization on the college level.

In the past, Circle "K" has helped such organizations as "Parents Helping Parents" by baby sitting for them and "Adopt a Grandparent" by going to visit people in the county home.

Future plans for Circle "K" include helping "Special Olympics" by organizing the events and games.

They also try to help the college community in many ways. One of their latest efforts is the reopening of "Cheers."

"Cheers" is a non-alcoholic club for LHU students where they can go to dance to music or just hang out.

Matt Kane, member of Circle "K," said, "We had great success the first night 'Cheers' was open, but we lost money this last time with the beach party."

He also said that it seems the students don't want "Cheers" as much as Circle "K" originally thought.

The future of "Cheers" is uncertain and Circle "K" would like LHU students to help decide its fate.
