Auditorium, Library and Blue Room Get Facials and Messages During Vacation

COLLEGE IS BEAUTIFIED

In the past year, Lock Haven State Teachers College has undergone many improvements. Old students felt like freshmen at the sight of new teachers, fresh paint, varnish, and the general renovations. Freshman students were impressed with the atmosphere of their new surroundings.

The auditorium is a work of art in itself. Daydreaming classes in the auditorium find themselves lost in contemplation of the ivory and tan basket-weave design. The stage has taken on a new air of spaciousness. The curtains have been placed on a single-track, revealing a lovely Grecian arch, hitherto concealed. The cream tone of the side walls also gives an effect of enlargement. The seats have been varnished, and the floors freshly waxed. (Ask Miss Russell how the floor struck her.)

The Blue Room is no more! Ceiling and walls have been re-furnished repainted in ivory and brown. Harmonizing drapes will soon add the finishing touch. Don't forget: it's now the Reception Room, and not the Blue Room.

The three rooms of the library have had new ceilings in cream tile effect, while the walls have

MISS FADDIS

College Extends Welcome to Four New Members of Faculty Staff

Vacancies in Dramatics, Mathematics, Grade and Kindergarten Departments are Filled by the Misses Brong, Waldron, Holmes and Faddis, Respectively

SUCCESSFUL YEAR WISHED FOR NEW-COMERS

For the past two weeks of the new school year, Miss Holmes, Miss Waldron, Miss Brong and Miss Faddis have been capably filling the vacancies left last year through advancement, resignation, and death of former faculty members.

Miss Holmes is an honor graduate of both Lock Haven High School and Lock Haven State Teachers College; she received her master's degree from Columbia University. Formerly she was a grade supervisor at Willimantic Teachers College, Willimantic, Connecticut. She succeeds the late Bertha M. Rowe, as Fourth Grade Supervisor. Miss Holmes is the daughter of C. C. Holmes, of Sallona, Pa.

Miss Waldron, although not a graduate of the Teachers College, is a former resident of this vicinity. She returns, after an absence of twelve years, to succeed Mr. Smith in the mathematics department. Beginning in 1922 Miss Waldron taught in the Lock Haven High School for two years. Since then she has taught in the Williamsport High School for two years until 1926, when she left for Providence, Rhode Island, where she taught in the Providence Teachers College.

Miss Brong, a graduate of Hood College and Columbia University, takes the place of Miss Mabel-Louise Arvy as head of the dramatic department. Play-productions for the ensuing year are being planned by Miss Brong.

Miss Faddis succeeds Miss Jessie Scott Ilmes as Kindergarten Supervisor. She is a graduate of Waynesburg College and Columbia University.

The student body, through its organ, the College Times, takes this opportunity of publicly welcoming the new members of our college faculty and wishing them success in their new undertakings.

CHAPEL PROGRAMS

The first chapel program was held in the recently renovated auditorium Friday, September 11. Dr. Armstrong made a brief address of welcome to the freshmen and then introduced Rev. Beahm, representative of the County Ministerium. Rev. Beahm assured the students of a cordial reception at any of the local churches, and urged them to attend services.

Monday, September 14, the president of the Ministerium, Dr. Bucke, again asked the students to attend church and Sunday School. He particularly addressed the freshmen, as yet unfamiliar with the local churches, and told them to regard the ministers as their friends, and to approach them with any problem.

Welcome, Little Ones

Dear Freshmen,

You have been with us two weeks and you are very welcome. Do you realize that it is very pertinent at the beginning of your freshman year that you stop to consider the student body and the place you will occupy in it. How can you make yourself an asset to your college?

The average college freshman hopes, whether he admits it or not and no matter how he defines it, to become a happy, satisfied part of some desirable social situation, out of which may grow permanently valuable experiences. Very often he sees himself—don't we all?—magically able to assume such a position at a moment's notice, and waits in suspense, during the first few weeks of school, for the magic netism of which he confidently believes himself to be the possessor, to have its expected effect.

Don't just wait. Act! What are you to do? In simple terms, you must start things for yourselves. There are numerous easy ways for each of you to make yourself conspicuous, even at the beginning of your freshman year. You can do those things that will make you attractive to those you want for your friends, and you can, much too easily, do things to make yourselves unattractive.

If you have simply made no effort so far, your prospects are still fairly good. You will find it quite easy to discover, by observation, what traits of personality and behavior are possessed by those whom you hope to have for your friends. Your next step, naturally enough, is to put into practice for yourselves similar traits. At the same time you will need, of course, to make some sort of approach to any individual whose friendship you hope to have.

This you can do without much trouble by exchange of comment on subjects of mutual interest—first finding out what such subjects are, naturally—or by taking advantage of opportunities to do simple favors. There are many such opportunities, only needing to be recognized, and time and again they lead to very happy results.

To sum up, each of you has near at hand the very best assistance in gaining a desirable and happy social life within the school. It is through your own efforts that you are a success or a failure.

BE A SUCCESS!

NEW DECORATIONS

been refinished. Several hundred new books have been added to the library, and many books have been rebound.

Routine revarnishing has been done in the dormitories, and new blinds have been placed throughout the building.

The girls of the Y. W. C. A. are enjoying their newly-decorated room. Re-papering and painting were done last spring.

And don't forget . . .
The new roof on the power-house will protect us from the stormy blasts this winter, when it's our turn to bank the fire before retiring.

How To Do It

1. Girls are not permitted to wear anklets in the dining room at any time.

2. Students attending lecture courses in the auditorium should dress in the same manner as they do for dinner.

3. It is essential that we have it quiet in the library; otherwise we defeat its purpose.

4. All students have been requested to refrain from loitering in the square and adjoining halls at all times.

5. It is courteous to attend all functions as well as chapel meetings and classes on time.

DO YOU?

How To Say It

ATTACKED-DROWNED

Do you insert another T in "attacked," and pronounce it "attacked?" If you do, you're wrong; pronounce the word as if it were spelled "attacked."

Do you insert another D in "drowned?" If you do, you're wrong again; pronounce the word as if it were spelled "drown'd."

POSSESSIVE CASE

Which is right: "James' I's throne," or "James's I throne?"

Answer: Since the "I" is part of the king's title, the apostrophe should follow it. In this case, however, as in many other similar ones, it would sound better to say "the throne of James I."

"Times" Snooper Exposes Students

MANY SENIORS RETURN

Well, here we are hard at it again, but weren't the first few days nice? Greeting the old gang, pilfering the dorm for sweets brought from beloved homesteads, (ahem, this will have to be reported), reunions with the last year's boy friend all helped to make it grand, (ah, remember how you worried all summer if your charms would still enchant the one and only?). It seems the freshman crop is—well, you supply the adjective. Anyway, to get back to my subject, the first eagerly anticipated days were grand. The trouble is they slipped away on wings. September 9th was a big day for freshmen, all of them, (I wish I could display my knowledge concerning the number of young hopefuls), no upper classmen in sight, and registering was fun.

The freshman class meeting was enlightening, too, for there one could stare openly at everyone except the two sitting directly next. To stare at them required a little diplomacy, but by clever shifting you managed to do it. Football material among the freshmen seems to be good (we hope). As you all know, Bill Bowes has left us, but don't think for a moment that the Bowes family is unrepresented; ah, no, we now have with us the Bowes family. We heard rumors drifting about, or maybe straight goods, that some of the freshman girls said, "Lock Haven State Teachers College, James." Ain't it too elegant? And it seems that a certain young miss had waterfall in her home, or do I mean swimming pool? Ah, but this is enough gabbing about freshmen. We must be getting to the upper-classmen.

September 10th sure did rind them up. Everyone seems to be back, two year seniors and others who we thought had deserted us. Eleanor Wood is with us again and Marg Harmon, who cut school last year to gab about the country. Just about all the football fellows are back, too. It looks like a good year. By the time of the first chapel, we felt like singing, "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." Everyone really should attend chapel the first day, because you might never again see every seat occupied for chapel session. Maybe I'm wrong; this year may be different.

I hear the freshman girls got the jump on the rest of us, having a pajama party. More fun. But just wait, maybe the freshman fellows will be having a little get-together around the monument one of these nights, or am I getting ahead of myself? Oh, there was a lot doing that first week. Just about everyone turned out for the tea (fair sex, I mean); each freshman was accompanied by a big sister; all actually survived the receiving line. Once in, all was well. There were nice refreshments (the cookies did hold out), certain people were so surprised that someone might have the temerity to turn two, and that would ball everything up, wouldn't it? We'll be having lots more teas. By the next one I'll expect all freshmen to have progressed to the point of being as a main topic of conversation to, let us say, the next dance.

Before we realized it, the old routine had us in its clutches. The search for books was on. Oh! this was a delightful novelty for the freshmen. What could be more gratifying than finally discovering a long sought for book? On the other hand, if you didn't find a second hand copy, you now have in your possession a brand new book spottier in its perfection for your library. Don't keep it that way; it might arouse suspicion.

Oh, yes, we had a dance already, the one we mentioned. If you didn't get acquainted, don't give up hope, for there will be other dances. This one wasn't so bad though, what with an orchestra, free popsicles, etc. Then, too, the number dance was a pleasant little novelty, hunting the number corresponding to yours, the dance, and then romance. Pardon me, maybe it wasn't that way, but it did look like old times seeing the steady dance customers doing their stuff, plus couples of yore. You know, Mollie and Bill, Mary Ellen and Nolan, etc. It looked like the premier for some brand new teens, too, didn't it?

Oh, that is ancient history now. By this time you are deeply engrossed in your studies. Notice I'm giving you the benefit of the doubt. If you can't get a seat in the library, don't despair, there will be a wide selection in a few weeks. If you can't wait that long, study in the Day Room, for it is always

Good Ship North Embarks Again for a Year's Cruise Around College Halls

NEW BOOKS AVAILABLE

Beware, beware! Communism is flourishing successfully in this College. It is actually being practised by the students and instructors here. Since Communism is the cooperative control and operation of any enterprise by the masses, for the advantage and profit of said masses, many narrow minded and bigoted persons may seize upon this as an opportunity to cry from the house-tops that our educational system is opposed to the government supporting it. Such is the Loan Library; operated for the students, and by the students.

Started last September by the students of this College who felt the need of a library that would be capable of supplying good books that were strictly up-to-date, it finally has been—but by means of gifts and loans of books, and also by the purchase of books from the profits derived from the Loan Library's reasonable rate of two cents each day. Dr. North, who is in charge of the Library, free gratis, has set a goal for this year of a book circulation of twenty-five each day, thus giving an income of fifty cents daily, permits the purchasing of two new books weekly.

Since this Library is for and by the students, it is to your advantage to make use of this Loan Library. The greater the circulation of books, the greater the number of books from which to select.

As the books that are in the Loan Library become out of date, and this can be told by the decrease in circulation, they will be returned over to the College Library, as space is very limited in Room 26, where Dr. North conducts the Library.

Any loans of books, or gifts of books, to this Library will be greatly appreciated by both Dr. North and the student body. The best care possible will be taken of the books and the owner may reclaim them at any time desired.

Last year this Library started out with one book. Today there are seventy-three, an increase of seventy-two. That shouldn't be difficult to beat this semester, let alone the entire year. It's your Library, operate for you and by you through the good friendship of Dr. North.

Books may be secured at any time of the day that Dr. North does not have a class in session in Room 26, and he is present to loan you the books. However, the best time is between nine and nine-thirty each morning. Remember! There is a world of adventure, romance, and experience in good books.

Campus Organizations Give Varied and Pleasant Welcomes to the Little Freshman Friends

Tea-Sipping, Get-Acquainted Parties and Dances, and Many Other Socials are Means of Introducing Freshmen to a Gala College Season

HIDE YOUR TIME WELL—FRESHMEN

Off to a good beginning! The Y. W. C. A. started their year's activities entertaining the freshmen at the Big Sister-Little Sister tea on Friday, September 14. The girls in the dormitory and Day Room as well as the faculty started their tea-sipping at the usual Friday tea time. The Y. W. girls acted as hostesses while Mrs. Bossert, adviser of the Y., and the presidents of the organizations in the dorm and day room received the guests.

But this was not enough! The Y. W. C. A.'s, with the cooperation of the Y. W., planned for the get-acquainted dance the very next day, Saturday, the 12th. Special dances were scheduled which acquainted the upperclassmen with the freshmen. This was topped off with those delightful refreshments—popicles!

Y. M. C. A. plans for a membership drive are being launched immediately and further plans will be organized gradually. We hope many boys will join this fine organization and help to carry on its work. We are glad to announce that the reading room will be maintained.

All freshman girls are invited to join the Y. W. C. A. Plans for canvassing for members will be put into operation shortly. We know you will take advantage of this club and gain spiritual and social contact by being a "Y" girl.

The first meeting of the Art Club will be an outing held September 25. Members will meet in the art room at 7:30 o'clock dressed for hiking. Come and enjoy some good outdoor "cats."

The club is helping the Art Section of the Mountain Arts Association with an exhibit to be held October 1 and 2 for the P. S. E. A. This club will also make the place cards to be used at the P. S. E. A. luncheon. Further activities will be announced later.

The Education Club, one of the most select organizations on the campus, has planned many activities for the coming term. A schedule of meetings and topics to be discussed will soon be published.

The members, who are all upperclassmen, are selected on a basis of scholarship, personality, and actual contributions to the education system. Under the guidance of Dr. Rude, the sponsor, they solve real education problems.

The Women's Athletic Association entertained the Freshman girls at a play day. The purpose of this social affair was to get the freshmen acquainted with the activities and functions of the W. A. A., which is planning to have a record year. This organization belongs to the women of this college who determine its success. The W. A. A. is sponsoring the following athletic activities: Archery, Hockey, Clog and Tap Dancing, and a Women's Tennis Tournament. The extent and number of athletic activities for women will be determined by the interest shown. Later in the semester basketball and other activities will take the place of the fall sports.

The W. A. A. extends a cordial invitation to all freshman girls who are interested in advancing and improving athletic activities in our college.

JR. H. SCHOOL NEWS

Twenty-five student teachers in the secondary field are doing their practice teaching in the Junior High School this year. Miss Lillian Russell, the general supervisor, has announced that due to a scarcity of college secondary seniors and an increase of enrollment in the school, a new plan must be inaugurated whereby the college student will teach the entire year.

The training school, composed of 144 students, is now well organized. The curriculum has been expanded to include the largest Latin class in the history of that department. Safety and playground patrols are functioning, an interesting assembly program has been given, and others are being planned. Under the supervision of the practice teachers, clubs and athletic interests are being developed.

The Freshman Pajama Party

The Y. W. C. A. entertained the freshmen by holding a gay informal party in the "Y" on Wednesday, September 9. The girls were clad in colorful pajamas. Each one wrote her name on a slip of paper pinned on her back, which helped the process of becoming acquainted. From the "Y" room, the girls proceeded to the gym, where songs were sung under the direction of Helen Nichols. Amusing group games were played under the leadership of June Freed, Anna Banzaff, and Ruth Conn, after which the upper classmen conducted the freshmen through the main building. Refreshments were served by Isabel Fink and Jane Lord.

"DINKS, DINKS"

A new stylist has appeared on the campus—a new creator of fashions for men—not trained in the salons of Paris—not a graduate of a school of fashion design—just one of the fellows on the faculty. Mr. Bossert, the Track coach, has from the realm of magic abra-ca-dabra, or "sompin'" produced those tricky dinks of gray emblazoned with a maroon "L."

Freshman Boys Get Tortured

Hey fellows! How many cracks did you get? That has been the popular saying among members of the green members of the student body for the past few days. At last the time of year has come when the iron hand of the upperclassmen has reached out and grasped sixty supercilious Freshman boys, who, after having been registered only five days, felt in their own little minds that they were engineer, fireman and crew of the dear old Alma Mater.

Scornful upperclassmen met and conquered the cocky crew last Monday night in room 33 under the excellent leadership of the newly elected Tribunal, Officers of the Tribunal are as follows: President, Weldon MacDonald; Vice President, Mike Jusick; Treasurer, Hobart Mann; Secretary, Walter Montague.

It has been learned from one timid "Freshie" that we will see them attired in green dinks, green ties, fully buttoned coats and, last but not least, sunken chests will be adorned with a name card so that everyone may get acquainted much sooner.

Well, as we have other important things to do, we will say, Pardone me, kind Sirs, but we must leave you, Sir.

The Baker—Hughe always has something important to do, never doing it. Cultivating his friendship won't get you anything extra to eat. It has been tried before.

Miss Dixon—Women's Phys. Ed. instructor. If you work it right, you might get out of the spring festival.

The Waiters—Be nice to them, then they will not expect you to apologize when they spill soup on your lap.

Syd—Can do two things at once, talk and work. Or can he? We have seen and heard him talk plenty—.

Dr. Armstrong—Very important, the President of the College. It is to him that you will eventually explain something or other.

Mr. Hursh—The Supt. of the Grounds. You may want a screen for your window or a paint job done in your room.

Miss Staheup—The nurse. Sooner or later she'll get you if you don't watch out.

Mr. Bossert—Learn to be his classmate in time, or it will be to your sorrow. Incidentally he is only the Dean of Men.

Mr. Walk—Cultivate his friendship; it is very important. He is the Night Watchman.

Miss Poole—Only the Dean of Women, but don't let that modest title fool you. Verily she is, and has, the last word.

Mr. MacDougall—The Dean of Instruction. Friendship will not boost your marks, however.

Miss Wentz—The Guardian of the "Sanctum Sanctorum." After you slip past her your troubles begin.

Mr. Smith—Director of Teacher Training. The last word in your practice teaching.

Mr. Fredericks—You are bound to have contact with him. He is head of the Physical Education Department.

Miss Russell—Our guide and counselor.

Mr. Hudson—Operates the bookstore. Some think he holds out on your mail.

Miss MacDonald—Librarian, teacher of Library procedure. You'll sleep, too.

Miss Bentley—Three times a day you will know of her.

Mr. Ritter—The Bursar. All who enter his office contribute something to mankind.

Extension Courses Offered

Extension courses are being offered at our college under the direction of Mr. Coxey. Classes were organized on Wednesday, in the room of High School, for the teachers in the Lock Haven area.

Similar courses are being offered at Altoona, Clearfield, and Williamsport.

Football is again leading the College activities program. Practices have been in session for the past two weeks and our boys are beginning to show real form.

Among the candidates who have been hard at work are Pete Mallura, ex-F. & M. Academy griddler, and "Spanky" Thomas, former Dickinson Seminary captain.

Did you notice the odd manner George Frethy and John Kruper are using to collect autographs?

Bill Brown, who had his hand injured, will be able to play again in a week or two. It is certain that every one will be glad to see Bill in action again on the football field—instead of on the dance floor.

Bill Hodrick will be playing a different position this season. Last year Bill was a backfield man but this year he has been moved up to the line to keep Johnsons from getting homesick.

Bill Hopkins seems to have found a new reason to play good football. Ask "Hoppy" what it is.

T. C. will have quite a husky bunch of gridders to put on the field this year. If you think this is untrue drop around and look at Len Johnsons and Vic Esposito for examples.

We have had news that Joe Shevock, great T. C. tackle of the past four seasons, has secured a teaching and coaching position at Portage.

We have a young lady attending this school who was quite a basketball player at high school. She hails from Clearfield. Miss Marjorie Woods.

Another gal, from Philadelphia, claims that she played tennis all summer; she would like to take a few lessons from last year's men's intra-mural singles winner. Who was he? Others may also apply to Doris Winand.

"TIMES" SNOOPER

quiet there. (Skip it, maybe I was thinking of Sunday.)

First few days are over, but before us stretches a long school year, yours to do with as you will. With classes, sports, clubs, sororities, fraternities, etc., we should have a busy year; yes, let's make it a good year, the best year we have ever had.

Boston Sinfonietta Remarks

To be honest, I am never very much excited before attending such entertainments; however, I am not bored by them. Since I can't appreciate the inner harmonies and the difficult movements of each composition, I find about half of my pleasure in the music and the other half in the peculiar antics of the musicians and audience.

As the curtains unfold my eyes glance at the entire orchestra. Most of the players are strong looking men; it strikes me as being strange that they go through life with their success intertwined in the bow of a violin, companion to a big bass viol, or always being shadowed by those large kettle drums. A hurried trip to Lock Haven, back to Boston, to Oshkosh, Wisconsin to New York, Philadelphia, Paris, London, and perhaps to Vienna; boom! boom! clang! clang! toot! toot! always making sounds called music. No, I wouldn't like that.

The conductor comes on the stage. He, too, is strong, and you can see from his eyes that he has a soul which carries him far above the tumult of civilization into another world—one of thunderous rhapsodies, quiet harmonies and strange dreamy melody. He is a philosopher interpreting life thru the beauty of music.

The music starts—though I cannot hear it. Instead, I see the French horn player, a queer looking fellow with a wistful look in his eyes; what is he thinking as he sneakily glances out into the faces of the audience? And the young trumpet player, does he not look hopeful? Oh! yes! there is the first violinist, the veteran of many a storm. Has he found the answer? His eyes seem so satisfied. In the back, the kettle drummer is busy banging his way through the composition, and, yes, through his life. He is courageous. "He" feels the pulse of each note.

Would I want to be a musician? No, I would rather play with actual life—just as a plain school teacher—than lead numbers of people through the ecstasies of a million melodies.

Football Squad to Leave Friday

While we were home spending our last week of vacation, the football candidates were hard at work preparing for a difficult season. The team—from what we have seen—should be a championship winner. Last week they played well in a practice game with Bucknell.

On Friday morning at 8:00 the team leaves for California where they will play their first game with the California Beaucats. Let's get out and give them a good send-off—to help them come from their first game victorious. We also know some of the fair sex who are going to California, too, on Friday.
