Letter to the editor

Dear Editor:

For an instant imagine the following:

Date: August 29, 1975
Time: 1:10 p.m.
Location: Ulmer Hall, Rm 301

As this scene begins eight of the nine students in World Regional Geography, GY340 have just entered with their new, but written in, $12.95 texts and $3.95 workbooks. Mr. Enger, course professor is about to address the class for the second time.

Mr. Enger: Administration has informed us as of noon today that GY340 will no longer exist as a course this semester.

(Enter Geo-science Department Chairperson, Mr. Green)

Mr. Green: As Mr. Enger has informed you, we have received a memo through proper administrative channels from President Hamblin, Vice Pres. Robinson and Dean Williamson cancelling this class. However they have been kind enough to allow you to take alternative courses in this department while waiving usual $5 drop/add fee.

Let me give you the whole story. At 3:30 p.m. on August 28 Mr. Green along with other various department chairmen attended a "budget reducing" session where they were handed a memo asking them to suggest possible ways of cutting costs, by submitting a memo back to the administration by 8:30 a.m. August 29. Some methods of cutting costs suggested by the administration included: (1) eliminating courses with small enrollments, (2) combining different sections and or labs in the same course, and (3) assigning each professor no less than 14 hrs. of class (Present contracts only allow for 12.)

After a meeting with the professors in the Geo-science department early in the evening of August 28, Mr. Green proceeded to construct a memo for the administration detailing their possible plans of action. This was submitted to the administration by 8:30 a.m. August 29.

By noon August 29 Mr.

Green was informed by a memo from the administration that it had been decided to cancel World Regional Geography.

Unfortunately the above story is real. The problem I wish to point out to those in administrative positions is not that this course was dropped, but that we the students were not informed of this decision until we had actually started the course, and we had purchased proper materials with expectations of finishing the course. While I understand that some budget cuts must be made, I believe that the administration should have had at least enough information to have informed us before the course began that the possibility existed that the course may be dropped. Certainly, I feel that if the administration finds it necessary to eliminate a course, the first time that the class meets is when they should be informed of the situation.

Finally, if courses must be cut, why is such a well-rounded general education course chosen for the hatchet? For an administration which seeks to encourage international education, I must wonder what reason causes them to take a step backward and eliminate a course of world study.

Greeks Speak

During the past week the new students have been happily finding out what fraternity life is all about, but the old problems that have been plaguing fraternities still continue. Last spring the fraternities were informed by the new building codes department that they were all in violation of several rules governing apartment type dwellings. These violations according to the city, included overcrowding, fire escapes, extension cord and electrical deficiencies.

When the college closed in May many people were concerned about the fate of the fraternity houses, but action taken by Lock Haven City Council has assured the groups in violation a chance to make corrections while still occupying the houses.

In a letter to City Council during the summer, Marc Bridgens, president of the Interfraternity Council, requested a time extension to January 1976 for fraternity compliance with the various municipal codes. Although the Council did not grant the precise time extension requested, they did agree that each fraternity would be evaluated individually on the basis satisfactory work progress. If it is found that the work is proceeding well, the fraternities will be free to operate and to continue such improvements.

At last report the fraternities have begun the work, and improvements are going well so it appears that what otherwise could have been a major problem has been solved to the satisfaction of both the city and the fraternities.

Slippery Rock

Name makes their fame

By PHILIP BURLINGAME
Assistant News Editor

An NCAA pre-season football special entitled "The Great Land Rush" mad some unusual references to nearby Slippery Rock State College during its ABC telecast last Friday night. The program reviewed the prospective top ten college football teams in the nation along with game film highlights from last year.

In an effort to show the lighter side of college football, host Keith Jackson referred to a humorous series of events that he had followed as a sportswriter in years gone by. The story began when an old time sportcaster started sending the scores of Slippery Rock's football games over the national news service wires simply because he was struck by the college's catchy name. People around the nation became very interested in Slippery Rock's team, believing it to be a contrived hoax. Newswriters were known to jokingly applaud when Slippery Rock victories were reported.

For some time interest in the "hoax" was widespread, but over the years the rumor was dispelled and most people forgot about the Rocket football team. For some obscure reason, however, the people at the University of Texas did not forget.

In an interview with Head Coach Royal, Keith Jackson reported that, over the years, relations between Slippery Rock and the University of Texas have become very warm and friendly. Apparently the Longhorn fans were charmed by the aspirations of a hard-working football team representing a small college in the woodlands of western Pennsylvania.

Following a brief look at the Slippery Rock campus the ABC cameras interviewed Head Coach Despirito. The Rocket Coach reported that after each of the recent successful seasons at Slippery Rock he received hundreds of congratulatory letters from University of Texas fans.

Students at the Rock may or may not be familiar with the fact that for many years a large number of people thought of Slippery Rock State as pure fiction. But because those people wondered about the existence of the college a very popular Rocket cheer was born. Its lyrics are simple, it's purpose is clear, and it can be heard at almost any Rocket athletic event - "Yes, there is a Slippery Rock!"

Frats dominate intramurals

Fraternities ran away with victories in last year's intramural competition, with TKE garnering the highest number of points in events including football, basketball, softball, volleyball, tennis, badmitten and swimming. Fraternities captured the top four spots while placing five in the top eight out of 20 teams.

Final point totals for all teams that participated in the 1974-75 intramural competition are as follows: TKE*146; Phi Mu Delta, 108; KDR,105; Lambda Chi Alpha, 77; First
