Closed party issue debated

Chris Fischer
News/Features Editor

The Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) met with Tim Susick, the Associate Dean of Student Life, last Thursday night to try and hammer out their differences on the new closed party regulation.

"It was a positive meeting," Susick said. "I explained the rationale behind the move towards closed parties."

IFC Vice President Troy Shuey (ΣΠ), also conveyed that it was a positive meeting.

Shuey said, "Things were thrown around. We've now got a better understanding of what the University wants."

All fraternity parties for the spring semester 1986 will be closed because of an earlier ruling by Susick.

Debate goes on

The exact definition of what a closed party is the main obstacle in the negotiations between the IFC and Susick.

This topic was not even touched at last Thursday's meeting.

"We've no specifics on what is a closed party yet, we haven't gotten that far," said Susick.

Shuey said that a lot of the debate is over the number of people that will be allowed on a closed party list. He said, "So far we have no tight definition."

Susick and the IFC will meet again next on Thursday, December 5. Susick expects this meeting will get into the specifics of the matter.

Shuey emphasized that a decision really has to be formulated before the end of the semester.

About five years ago, the Greek population on campus stood at 18 percent. Currently, below 7.5 percent of LHU students are Greeks.

Susick said, "We're not trying to tarnish the Greek image, but to improve it."

However flowerless the ways
Of grim November

However dull and drear her days
We should remember

One happy time she sets apart
For royal living

A gift to cheer and bless each heart
It is Thanksgiving!

Greeks decorate for Christmas

Michelle Moody
Greek Columnist

On Saturday November, 23, 40 LHU Greeks strung Christmas lights in all the trees that line Main Street in the city of Lock Haven, for the holiday season.

The event was co-ordinated by the All-Greek Council and Julie Brennan, the Executive Vice President of the city's Chamber of Commerce.

Brennan said, "The Greeks responded very well. We wanted to get the community involved, not just the downtown businesses."

The hanging of the little white lights in the trees was done in conjunction with the Lock Haven Christmas Committee of the Lock Haven Business Bureau.

Traditional decorations

Brennan explained that the city is going with a "traditional old fashion Victorian" theme for its decorations this year.

All-Greek President Paul Pasqualini

said, "We were happy to do a community service project for the area."

Greek organizations that participated were; Alpha Chi Rho, Alpha Sigma Tau, Zeta Tau Alpha, Sigma Kappa, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Tau Kappa Epsilon, and Phi Mu Delta.

The Christmas parade in downtown Lock Haven is scheduled for 5 p.m. on December 7. The parade will be the climax of Christmas preparations, and will include the arrival of Chris Cringle.

The All-Greek Council is also contributing Christmas gifts to the Infant Development Program. The gifts will be given to the area children of the program.

"In the past, All-Greek hasn't done much, but now we're getting a direction and we're doing things for the community," said Pasqualini.

In December, the All-Greek Council will team up with the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Student Co-operative Council to sponsor a campus wide social event. Details have this event have not been finalized yet.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Walters:

This article is in response to your sports editorial printed in the November 22 issue of the Eagle Eye.

First of all, let me make it very clear that this is not an attack on Coach Fisher or the team, but rather on your presentation of the facts. It is my intention to convey the facts in a more realistic manner.

The accomplishments that you referred to in your article (Coach of the Year, PSAC title) are accolades of the past. Let me focus on the more recent past.

Fact I: Three consecutive losing seasons in the past three seasons. In addition, you stated that Coach Fisher has had only four losing seasons. Let me remind you that he has been head coach for only eight seasons.

Fact II: Coach Fisher's career record as head coach at Lock Haven is 33-47-1 for an approximate winning percentage of .407.

Fact III: Three-fourths of your article focused on the 1979 championship team. However, you failed to print the fact that it was an "inherited" team.

Also, we believe that the true mark of a collegiate coach is revealed four years after his initial season. This allows for the coach to recruit and build his team.

Once again, this is by no means a personal attack on Coach Fisher or the players. It is my opinion that Lock Haven has seen good talent in recent years.

Sincerely,
Bob Reynolds

To the editor and all on campus,

Nov 21 was designated an international fast day by a reputable agency called Oxfam America, which funds self-help development projects and disaster relief in Africa, Asia, and Latin America and also distributes excellent materials to inform Americans on issues of development and hunger. I'm wondering to whom it is news that LHU was a participant in this effort. Information on this was placed all over campus, on campus TV, in the campus newspaper, on Cox Cable, and over 300 individual memos were sent to administration, faculty, and staff, inviting them to participate by skipping one meal or fasting from solid food all day and contributing food money to Oxfam, which is in a position to make good use of it. I need to say that over 350 LHU students volunteered their meal ticket numbers for Nov 21 so that about $300 worth of food and food-related products could be saved and given by Bentley food service to "More Than Bread," which helps local needy people.

Two factors have both saddened and angered me. For one, only seven brave students showed up at noon in Bentley to match their fasting with prayer (For the hungry and for us who have too much). That saddened me. The other angered me. I went to the faculty dining room around 1 p.m. on Nov 21 to check with the hostess on how many faculty, staff, and administration were fasting and what donations had been given. The hostess was not there, but the donation box was. It contained a 3 by 5 card folded about three times with this written on it: "What about our own people here in the U.S. first?" That was it.

Faculty and staff on this campus can moan and groan about the apathy and narrow-mindedness of students here. Where is the leadership? Some of you may blow this off by saying, "That naive, do-gooder nun--what does she know?" I'd like to talk with people sometime--if people would ever come to talk--and share some of what I know and think, and learn about what you know and think.

By the way, thanks to the three people who sent checks for Oxfam in today's mail. And can you guess how much--total--was put into the two donation boxes--in the faculty dining room and the PUB? $6.23.

Sincerely,
Sr Maureen McDonnell, O.P.

Thanksgiving Reflections

Thanksgiving - a time that brings a lot of pleasant thoughts to every college student.

First and foremost there is that wonderful bird that donates its life to the satisfaction of all student's that haven't tasted home cooking in months.

Second there's good ole' mom, scurrying around the kitchen producing all those wonderful smells and delicious looking food.

Third is a table piled so high with delightful dishes that it may collapse right in fat Aunt Bertha's lap.

Forth is that deep and inviting couch in front of a roaring fire with a bone-crushing football game on the idiot tube.

Fifth there's the first guiltless nap you've taken in 11 weeks.

That's a normal Thanksgiving. But, how about adding one more thought to that routine. Just take a few moments and really be thankful for the many benefits that you do have. That, I believe, is the original purpose behind the day.

Now it's time for the annual Editor/Hunter Curse. May the turkeys of every professor who plans on giving a test on Monday (First Day of Buck Season) crawl off their plates and flap their little drumsticks right out the window.

A TRIBUTE TO SUSAN HALL

By David Gittelman

I think the Eagle Eye owes Sue Hall an epilogue. Something that was missing from your front page story of Tuesday, November 19 was Sue Hall, the woman.

You covered Sue Hall, the incident, the tragedy, the "story." But I knew her, and there was something missing.

I hope you will print this for her friends, her family and her colleagues, so that they have something more to remember and treasure than our own individual memories and the reminder of a terrible, unexplained death.

Sue Hall was a hard worker. She was an "A" student, and had just decided that she wanted to major in French. At 27, she regretted not beginning college straight out of high school.

The burden of working part time and going to school part time was ever present in Sue's life. Her answer to the problem, however, was to work as long and as hard as she needed to in both aspects of her life to achieve a quality and standard she felt comfortable with. This quality was always of the highest.

Sue was a vital, alive person. Being around her energized me, and I'm sure she has affected others similarly. She had a highly-developed sense of right and wrong, and wouldn't stand for circumstances she thought were unjust.

She had a mind, and she had a mouth; she knew how to use both of them. She was never afraid or hesitant to form her own opinions and to stand by them, and she was never closed-minded enough to not listen to someone else's.

Sue was always very loyal, and she valued loyalty in others. She inspired friends to be good friends, and acquaintances to be cordial acquaintances.

Her sense of humor was perhaps the most outstanding part of her personality to one first meeting her (I remember, because it was not so long ago that I first met her).

She smiled a lot - it was her nature. She loved a good pun now and then. She would often launch into a funny accent or dialect when describing something.

Sue Hall always looked for the best in people. She almost always found something to like in each person.

When I think about Sue, and the fact that she's not here anymore, I think that I have lost a friend that I had only, it seems, begun to know at all.

I think that she would confide in me when she was mad at something that was going on; that she trusted me with things that were important to her.

I think that she had vacation time left that she won't get a chance to take, and that's not fair. I think that we used to talk about going out for a beer sometimes when things got rough, and we never got a chance to.

I think that people like Sue aren't supposed to just leave. And I don't understand why she had to.

It's hard for me to be at all positive that Sue isn't a part of my everyday life anymore. But I remember the words to a song that's been in my life for a while now, and they sort of symbolize what I hope she has found. I thought of these lyrics as I drove home from her wake, and they made me cry.

I'll close with these lyrics, by Stephen Schwartz, from the show Pippin.

*Rivers belong where they can ramble
Eagles belong where they can fly
I've got to be where my spirit can run free*

Got to find my corner of the sky

Utica College captures Lady Eagle Classic

By Karen Merlie
Staff Reporter

Utica College women's basketball team, led by Maureen Fauscher, tournament M.V.P., won the 1985 Lady Eagle Classic basketball tournament with an impressive performance over West Chester.

It wasn't a championship performance for the Lady Eagles this weekend. Lock Haven was surprised by West Chester in the opening round, 72-67, and were throttled once again in the consolation game against Millersville, 81-66.

"We came into the tournament too confident. We thought we had it won before the start of play," commented senior-center, Helen Woltman.

Woltman surpassed the 1,000 point plateau at the 12:30 mark in the first half of the West Chester contest.

"It was exciting for me since I've only played two and a half years," Woltman said.

Lock Haven started out fast in the first half, and at one point, had a 10 point lead; but the momentum turned in West Chester's favor and they took a 31-29 lead into the locker room at halftime. West Chester outscored Lock Haven 18-7 in the final four minutes of the first half.

West Chester came out and put in 10 unanswered points to take their biggest lead, 45-35, with 14:00 remaining.

Lock Haven pulled within two with 5:49 left to go in the game, but let it slip away when West Chester's Cecilia Rodden got hot.

Rodden led all scorers with 26 points and she also added 12 rebounds. Also hitting double figures for W.C. were Denise Bortz; 12, Leslie Mensch and Sara Flanagan; 10.

Tina Martin was held to 16 points followed by teammates Lori Young and Donna Sergi; 13, Kelly Myers; 12, and Woltman; 11.

In the consolation game, it was a repeat of the night before. Lock Haven fell asleep in the second half.

Playing without the services of Woltman, Tina Martin's 31-point performance was not good enough to defeat Millersville.

Virginia Ackiewicz and Sue Heckler were the workhorses for the victors, scoring 24 and 20 points respectively.

Young and Sergi joined Martin in the double figures column with 12 apiece.

Millersville went on a 18-4 run in the remaining six minutes to close the door on the Lady Eagles.

Tina Martin was named to the All-Tournament team with a two-day total of 47 points which helped her pass the 1600 mark.

Joining Martin on the all-tourney team are Cecilia Rodden; West Chester, Peg Kauffman and Virginia Ackiewicz; Millersville, Regina Piecentino; Utica, and M.V.P. Fauscher.

"We need to go back to fundamentals and stop thinking about last year's success because everyone is out to get us," said Woltman, the newest member of the 1,000 point club.

Utica was crowned after defeating Millersville in the first round, 91-76, and then whipping West Chester in the final.

Lock Haven will travel to Shippensburg tonight to begin their tough conference schedule.

Mat-Town USA slated for this weekend

By Dave Walters
Sports Editor

Some of the nation's finest collegiate wrestlers from 12 teams will come to Thomas Field House this Saturday for the 10th annual Mat-Town USA wrestling tournament.

This year's tournament will be held while the student's are home for Thanksgiving break because Thanksgiving is late this year.

In attendance will be 23 nationally ranked wrestlers along with two top ranked wrestlers, according to the preseason rankings of Amateur Wrestling News (AWN).

Along with the host Bald Eagles, who are 37th ranked, will be third ranked Penn State, fourth ranked Oklahoma State, seventh ranked Lehigh, 20th ranked Rider College, Pitt, Temple, Slippery Rock, Old Dominion, Ohio University, Morgan State, and Bucknell.

The tournament will be a one day affair this year and will start with first round action at 9 a.m. Quarterfinals are scheduled for noon, semis at 3 p.m., consolation finals at 6 p.m., and championship finals will begin at 8 p.m.

The tournaments growth has increased in its ten year history, and with the additions of Penn State and Lehigh, attendance has risen.

Tickets are still available for all sessions. All inquiries should be made to the Lock Haven Athletic Department at 893-2102.

LHU wrestlers finish third at Navy Invitational

By Dave Walters
Sports Editor

Dicky Howell (118) and Brad Lloyd (167) captured first place finishes at the eighth annual United States Naval Academy wrestling tournament this past Saturday.

The Bald Eagles finished a strong third in the nine-team field. West Virginia won the team crown with 165 points and North Carolina State was second with 147.5 points.

Howell, who is currently ranked seventh in the nation, had little trouble reaching the finals as he scored one technical fall and two decisions. He won the decisions 7-3 and 6-1. In the championship finals, he faced Jeff Bowyer of James Madison University.

After the match was over, Howell was victorious, 2-1. Lock Haven's other entry, Craig Corbin finished sixth.

At 167, Lloyd, who seemed to be overlooked in Outstanding Wrestler voting, went through his first three matches registered 33 points and gave up just three. Lloyd met up with West Virginia's Gordon Taylor in the finals and scored a 14-3 major decision over the Mountaineer.

Senior Matt Avery picked up second after dropping a 4-1 decision to N.C. State's Mark Sodano. Avery scored one major decision and a technical fall enroute to the finals. Anthony Melfi finished sixth at this weight for Lock Haven.

Freshman John Barrett finished third at 158 by defeating William and Mary's

Kevin Turner by criteria after a 1-1 deadlock.

Joe Pecaitis, at 190, also earned a third place finish. He won a criteria decision after a 1-1 tie over W.V.U.'s Brett Smith. Bill Freeman, LHU's other big man at 190, finished fifth with an 8-2 win over Andy Scheffer of American University.

At 142, Ron Karns finished fourth after falling 8-0 to Bill Hershey in the consolation finals.

LHU's Greg Wykoff, who was an NCAA qualifier last year finished fifth after defeating James Madison's John Cheeks, 9-1.

The Bald Eagle wrestlers will be in action this weekend at the 10th annual Mat-Town USA tournament in Thomas Field House starting at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Opening Night at the Roxy -- Back to the Future

By Matt Connor
Co-Editor

What happens when an '80's hotshot finds himself trapped in 1955? Good Question. Back to the Future has all the answers. And then some.

Starring Michael J. ("Family Ties") Fox in the starring role, Back to the Future is, quite frankly, one of the most entertaining movies you can see this season.

The plot involves Marty McFly, a teenager in 1985, who, through the aid a slightly mad professor (played to the uproarious hilt by Christopher Lloyd) and his Delorian time-machine, somehow ends up in the 1950's.

A great deal of the humor in the film stems from Fox's frustrating attempts to communicate to a 1950's world with 1985 lingo, even to the point of convincing the mad scientist that he's from the future and is friends with him in 1985;

"If you're from the future," the doubting professor asks, "Who is the President of the United States in 1985?"

"Ronald Reagan." Fox answers.

"The movie actor?!" Lloyd replies with a laugh, "And I suppose Jane Wyman is the first lady!"

The film moves at a whirlwind pace. In fact, if you stop watching to ask the person next to you what a character may have just said, you'll almost surely miss something else.

As for the cast, Fox is one of the most amiable personalities to grace the screen for quite some time, and as mentioned earlier, Lloyd is delightful as the Edsel-minded professor.

Lea (All the Right Moves) Thompson, Crispin (Friday the 13th, the Final Chapter) Glover, and Wendy Jo Sperber all put in warm performances as Fox's wino mother, wimpy father and gorgeous girlfriend, respectively.

Directed by Robert (Romancing the Stone) Zemeckis with executive producer Steven Spielberg, Back to the Future has been an enormous financial success to date, grossing over $150 million.

Back to the Future is one of those movies that you can see over and over again without getting tired of it, which is probably the best review you can give to a film.

Back to the Future is now playing at the Roxy Theater on Main Street in town

Classical guitarist performed at LHU

The Central Pennsylvania Guitar Society presented guitarist Bill Hearn in concert last Saturday night in the Sloan Fine Arts Center.

The 8 p.m. program was co-sponsored by LHU's Music Department.

Hearn is an active performer of classical guitar, with a wide variety of experiences.

Hearn received his Bachelor's and Master's Degrees from Florida State University as a guitar performance major.

He has also done professional studies with such highly respected classical guitarists as Oscar Ghiglia, Eliot Fisk and Robert Guthrie.

In 1982, Hearn won the Florida Music Teachers National Association collegiate competition.

The Central Pennsylvania Guitar Society (CPGS), founded in 1983, is dedicated to the promotion of guitar performance of classical music.

The organization also publishes a society newsletter Guitar News, for the purpose of keeping its membership and the public informed of classical guitar activities in Central PA, as well as features specifically for guitarists.

Persons interested in the CPGS may write to the organization at: Calder Square, P.O. Box 10551, State College, PA 16805-00551.
