Fred Leone's departure won't go unnoticed

By Marcelo Cancelli

Fred is leaving.

Just about everyone here at LHSC knows who Fred Leone is, or at least knows something about this son of Italian immigrants born in Avis, Pa. Fred works at the Eagle Wing Snack Bar and one cannot think of him without thinking of the 'PUB,' as the snack bar is known to the students, and vice-versa. To anyone who visits the 'PUB' Fred's unusual, unexpected humor causes some reaction.

"I like his humor," says Juan Soaje, an international student from Argentina. "It is harmless and really adds to what the PUB is."

Well, Fred is leaving. And with him, all of this original humor that we've all been accustomed to. After the Student Cooperative Council (SCC) decided to lease the snack bar and leave it open for bids, Fred decided not to bid for it. "I didn't like the wording of it (the contract). I even showed it to a lawyer and he advised me not to take it," Fred said. "I'll just go somewhere else and start again."

Fred, with his son Pat, leaves after working at the snack bar for more than three years. He started there in January 1980 working "anywhere from 85 to 100 hours a week," as he remembers it.

"I don't think the SCC is going to find anybody with that much dedication," says Kate Coyne, one of his student employees. "The students are going to miss him and he the students. We, the workers, like him a lot," she added.

Several students who were asked about Fred's departure agreed that there will be a big change in the PUB after Fred is gone.

"I think the PUB will have a different personality," said Kevin Lafferty. "Fred is part of the campus so things will definitely change after he's gone."

Other students mentioned changes in food quality and prices. "The food is going to be different that's for sure," said student Ann Merli. Nick Stork, another student, commented on the fact that prices will be higher. "Besides having higher prices with this new company, there's the fact that Fred's part of the campus. After he's gone, coming here will be like going to Pizza City," Stork said. "It won't be the same."

As Soaje puts it, "I don't think they'll ever get somebody as nice as Fred. He's always so patient, he's always in a good mood; and he's truly concerned about the students. He's a friend and I don't understand why he has to leave. I think that if the SCC had conducted a poll around the campus, Fred would remain here in spite of any money problem there might be."

Fred's good humor is probably his best known characteristic. He explains it by stating his philosophy of life. "I've been through the second World War in Europe. I've seen all the horrors of it. I've lost my wife and I lost the good business I had downtown in a fire. But why should that make me a sour old man? I respect the students and I want them to feel at home. I don't consider them or anybody who comes here as customers, I consider them as human beings, not better and not worse than me. They're friends, good company for meals. You got to have fun working."

SCC president John McNamara explained that there was a need for leasing the snack bar. "Twenty-two out of twenty-three senators voted for it. We were losing $16,000 with the snack bar and leasing was the best solution," he said. "Of course Fred is a nice guy; of course he gets along with the students, but in business you can't deal with personalities. You have to deal with the facts, and those were that we were losing money and that some change was badly needed," added McNamara. He also mentioned that Wayne Clickner, an inspector for the State Department of Health, visited the campus many times and recommended the leasing of the snack bar after deeply investigating the financial problem with it. "We worked with Fred, but we just can't go on in deficit," said McNamara. "I hope he opens up his new business and does very well. I'll sure go visit him."

Fred said he felt the SCC was ruled by "incompetent individuals, though, not all of them. They are people who don't have a mind of their own, who don't ask questions when they should be asked, and who don't want to listen to suggestions toward solving the problem of the deficit. They want to do what they want to do."

There seem to be no doubts that Fred is going to be missed, and that things might change in certain ways. McNamara stated that the food quality and prices will not

Let's hope that life in the PUB will always be as entertaining as always.

Lawyer advises SCC to reconsider Reynold's hiring

By Mike Flanagan

Because of the recent approval to rehire Howard Reynolds as interim PUB director, the SCC may find itself being sued again.

SCC President John McNamara received a letter last week from SCC lawyer Mike Hanna, who stated that the Pennsylvania State Attorney General's office is "extremely upset" over the prospect of re-hiring Reynolds.

In the letter, Hanna advised the SCC to withhold any decision regarding the matter (re-hiring Reynolds) until an opinion is received from the Attorney General's office. "I think it is ridiculous that an Attorney General's office would even consider suing a student government," McNamara said.

Reynolds was reinstated by the SCC on April 20, after being dismissed from his job as PUB director last year by the SCC. In return, Reynolds filed suit against the college and the student government and received $85,000 in an out-of-court settlement. Fifty-five thousand dollars was to come from the SCC and the other $30,000 from the state. The SCC has paid Reynolds $25,000 thus far.

Because it was approved to reinstate Reynolds, there stands a chance that the SCC will not have to pay Reynolds the $30,000 (plus 10% interest) it owes him. If Reynolds is hired full-time on October 1, he will not require the SCC to pay the money it owes him. The first of October is the day that the interim period ends. The Commonwealth, however, paid its $30,000 when the amount of the settlement was decided, and stands to gain nothing from the re-hiring. According to McNamara, the state feels that it also should receive some money back if the SCC indeed hires Reynolds full-time and does not have to pay the $30,000.

"The statement was made that some influential person called Harrisburg and was making a fuss about re-hiring Howard," McNamara said. "I'm not sure if that should make the SCC more determined or what."

"It (the possible suit) doesn't make sense. Why doesn't the state admit they made a mistake? I don't think we ruined our reputation by admitting we made a mistake. It takes a bigger man to admit a

No damages reported in dormitory fire

A small fire caused the evacuation of Woolridge Hall late Wednesday afternoon. According to Law Enforcement Officer Jeffrey Johnson, the fire occurred when a trash can in the first floor room of Joy Anderson caught fire.

Johnson said that Anderson had been making decoupage placques, which are made by burning the edges of paper to provide a decorative edge and then snuffing the paper on wood. Johnson said that Anderson put the ashes of the paper into the trash can and went to the cafeteria. The ashes caught fire in the trash can, which was noticed by a floor fire marshall who called Law Enforcement. Johnson said that he responded to the call and called the Lock Haven fire company, which sent several engines, and a rescue vehicle. The fire was extinguished and Anderson said that there was no damage to her room.

Johnson said that there have been no major fires at Lock Haven, only minor fires. He said that the speed in which fire trucks reach the campus is very good. "Our response time up here is a matter of one to two minutes after they're (the fire engines) dispatched," said Johnson.

From the Editor's Desk

Well, this is it, my last editorial, and boy am I going to have some fun with this one. I'm going to discuss the social, political and educational aspects of this institution of higher learning. I will start with the latter.

It's 3:00 p.m. on sunny Friday afternoon in May and you're sitting in an Intro. to Music class, wondering just why you're there. Certainly this course is not going to help you get a job, but you need it in order to graduate. Before I go any further, I'd like to mention that I could pick a number of classes in this regard. I'm just using Intro. to Music as an example.

A college degree obviously aids in your ability to get a job, and because Intro. to Music is a stepping stone to graduating, it may indirectly help you get a job. But, once you leave LHSC, chances are it will not do you diddly-squat, on the surface anyway.

Will the course make you a better person? Well, the way I see it, only an idiot turns down knowledge. I realize that Intro. to Music will most likely not help put bread on my table, but I did learn that Music used to, and still does, play a major role in society.

I feel that if you simply write the course off as a waste of time, you have no business being here. We're supposed to be here to learn, and regardless of the apparent insignificance of the course, you should want to gather information pertaining to the given subject matter.

Do we do that here? No, not by a long shot. What it comes down to, I feel, is this - is LHSC simply a job training institute, or a place where we can learn to become better people? I would like to answer that the latter holds true, and so would the administration and faculty, but we would be seriously mistaken.

The wheels of the world spin on politics, and here the wheels are spinning very rapidly. Which direction they are headed seems to be the question at hand here.

The confusion that surrounds the main political unit around here, the SCC, can make you exhausted just thinking about it. I can't ever recall being hit with so many stories, allegations, etc. from so many people, about so many people. I hear one story about a person, and then hear the exact opposite from another about that same person.

Howard Reynolds is certainly a good example of this. Some say that he is going to be the financial savior of the SCC, and others have nothing but unkind words for the man. "Believe me, I'm telling the truth." Oh, brother.

There is so much mudslinging going on with the SCC that it hinders its performance as a political unit. This subject has been beaten into the ground, but all the constructive criticism has gone for naught. The mudslinging continues.

Fred and Pat Leone, I feel, were victims of this sort of mudslinging, and I also feel that their departure is going to sadly weaken the overall quality of the Eagle Wing Snack Bar. Yesterday, I bought the daily special, which consisted of a huge plate of delicious rigatoni, a salad and two rolls, all for the astronomical price of $1.50. Just think, you may be getting your meals from a vending machine.

I could go on and on, but I'd probably run out of ink. I just hope that the SCC can reach its potential as a political and as a social unit at LHSC... or LHU, whatever. Maturity is the key, and it is seriously lacking within our student government. That doesn't include you, Brian.

I'm sorry to say that I don't have very many nice things to say about the social life here either, but that's more our fault than anyone's. Partying is the number one source of entertainment around here, and it probably always will be. Parties can be a lot of fun, but sometimes a change of pace is in order. Unless you have a car, it's very difficult to go anywhere and do things.

The intramural sports here are very well organized and a true asset to the social life here. I believe that there were more than 50 baseball and basketball teams registered. If you're not the athletic type, though, that doesn't do you much justice.

The Greek organizations do very well for themselves, and I guess that is why there are so many fraternity brothers and sorority sisters here. Please don't give me this malarkey that they always need to be around each other, and use each other as a crutch. It's simply that there are more things to do if you're Greek.

Well, if you're a GDI who's not athletically oriented and don't party, I'm sorry to say that this institution does not have much to offer in the way of a social life.

I did not intend for this editorial to attack this institution, but I'm sure some people will take it that way. This is simply how I feel. College has been the best thing that ever happened to me, but it should be better for future students to come.

This place is not all roses, and it perturbs me when it's made out to be that way. It's going to take a lot of work and understanding before this place can truly be a place where people can grow and have fun at the same time. It is certainly worth striving for. If there is one thing I can say about my time spent here-it's been real.

On Women

By Mary Kelly

I'm waiting for some kind of inspiration. I'm waiting for the words to come to make a last, impressionable message. As I open a letter for a job interview from a prospective employer, I think of the transition from Lock Haven State College to the 'real world.'

I am in the midst of turmoil; I have to stop being a kid, a student, and be a real woman. Sometimes, I cherish the moment; anticipation and anxiety envelopes me. I'm ready, with brief case in hand. It's difficult, though, to box away the Nikes, the sweat-shirts, the knapsacks and the memorabilia.

There are some things you can never forget-- the friends, the values you learned and developed, the experiences that made you the very person you are today.

Lock Haven State, with its generic education, has given graduates a hodge podge of mini-courses ranging from the ones that really give credit to the ones you learned in the P.U.B., at parties, or in town.

Truly, college is a unique lifestyle that offers the good life encased in a silicone bubble, highly resistant to damage. LHSC is a padded, incubated home that makes some never want to leave. But the truth is, you have to.

Many seniors are ready by their last year. This is a part of the education process-- you just get sick of it!

How prepared are we? What lessons will we pack away in our mental suitcases? Which ones will we carry forever?

Receiving a degree may not mean much to some people because they were forced to go. Some students don't appreciate it because it's an all-expense paid education.

I paid for it. I appreciate it. The graduation march is a constant dull hum in my head, and I want to learn the alma mater.

"Mary, your vacation upstate will be over soon," commented my brother.

Vacation? I guess it seems that way to some, but I hope I never have to borrow $10,000 from a bank for a four-year vacation in Lock Haven. I can think of better places to sunbathe.

It was a movie, a book, a screen-play. Each different episode emphasized some deciding factor in my life. Big decisions. Little decisions. Most of all, a commitment-- a four-year long commitment that demanded more devotion than a boyfriend! The commitment maintained a storyline, the mini-series had to end.

Guest Columnist

By Brian Hunt

My college career will soon end as far as Lock Haven State is concerned. I've put four years into here, and the prospect of not coming back leaves a smile on my face. That smile is a conglomeration of many things; I'll mention a few.

First and foremost I'm smiling from relief. No more will I have to deal with the shovels full of garbage that are constantly being dumped on me here. No more will I have to spend countless hours listening to the rantings of some senile professor trying to tell me what is important. And no more will I be seen pounding coffees in the PUB and trying to sort out some bizarre concept that doesn't even concern me. Not me folks, I've done my time and I'm out.

But maybe I'm being naive. Once I'm out on my own, I'm sure that the amount of frustration will be at least as much as I've encountered here. There will be just as many wasted hours and just as many worthless people to deal with. The popular definition of college is that it prepares one for life in the 'real' world. And though I might argue as to how it does this, I cannot argue that it does.

When I made the decision to go to college after high school, I was excited at the prospect of intellectually intriguing conversation, involvement with the ongoing social change, good friends and an overall stimulating environment. It took me one month to figure out that my idealistic view of college was not the case at all. Instead, I was faced with what seemed like a complete turnaround. I discovered, not so willingly, that college life just didn't meet my expectations of what it should be. The intellectually intriguing conversation was more concerned with variations in the marijuana crop than it was with, say, the importance of Proust in literature. My involvement with the social change was, at the heaviest, deciding what party to go to and why.

But the biggest disappointment was classes. Instead of firing my curiosity and imagination, too many classes merely bored me. It did not take long to figure out that my education was not going to come from the classroom exclusively. Too many professors are concerned more with how much they like you than they are with your achievements in class. And too many professors simply have stopped caring. How can they then make you care? What I concluded was that college life for me would be exactly what I made it--no more and no less.

Looking back, the fact that I learned more outside the classroom doesn't bother me. I wouldn't have it any other way. Learning is learning, and I cannot deny that four years here has taught me a great deal. I now have a degree in journalism, I've learned to appreciate the arts, and I've learned my personal limits. What more could I have asked for? Actually, I could ask for much more, but the fact that I don't know all I would like to know doesn't negate what I do, in fact, know. And there is still time to learn.

So the fact that my education did not, for the most part, come from where I thought it would is only a minor disillusionment. The important part is that I have learned; I have given and I have gotten. And I know that as I cruise out of this town for the last time, a small but significant part of Lock Haven State is going with me. Yes, I'm smiling, but that smile is much more than a simple sigh of relief.

Lacrosse team routs 'Rock' to take third

Junior Karen Kellerman gets into the action in a recent home game. Kellerman finished the season with 11 goals and 9 assists.

By Martin Pflieger

Playing in the consolation game of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference Championships at West Chester a few weeks ago, the LHSC women's lacrosse team displayed the kind of form that could have won them the PSAC title.

The Lady Eagles executed superbly in downing Slippery rock, 20-6. They lost their chance to play for the championship after a 13-6 loss to Kutztown in the first game.

"Slippery Rock was our best game of the season," said Rose Ann Neff. "It was a super way to end the season."

Lock Haven finished the season 6-4 overall, and 4-1 in the Pennsylvania Conference. They outshot their opponents 280-253.

Four of the five top scorers for the Lady Eagles are returning next year. Junior Joan Laird led the team in scoring with 27 goals. She had 5 assists. Senior Sandy Miller followed with 19 goals and 14 assists.

Junior Lisa Harding had 17 goals and 3 assists, junior Mary Beth Driscoll scored 14 goals and assisted on 4, and junior Karen Kellerman netted 11 goals and tallied 9 assists. Sophomore goalie Chris Cortelessa registered 94 saves on the season.

Lock Haven will lose four seniors to graduation, three of whom played varsity. Miller, Chris Sank, and Hilliary Herron were varsity starters this year.

The outlook for next season looks good, according to Coach Neff. "Our junior varsity team was 4-2-1 on the year and, we have some promising freshmen who should perform well for us next year."

Three Lady Eagles were selected to the Pennsylvania All-Conference team: Driscoll at center position, Laird at second home, and Herron at point.

"Hilliary (Herron) is especially deserving since many times the defense gets overlooked because there isn't much to take statistically. I'm very pleased with her selection," said Neff.

"Mary Beth (Driscoll) made our midfield work this year," continued Neff. "Joan (Laird) was our leading scorer and a dangerous threat on attack. Hilliary was the big stick on defense. All three are very deserving."

Sports Column

The year in sports

By Chris Brooks
Sports Editor

In yet another exciting year of sports at the Haven, not every team enjoyed the spotlight, but every member of each team did put forth an effort in representing Lock Haven State College.

Looking back, we remember some of the more memorable moments of the year. On opening day in Jack Stadium before a partisan crowd senior Barron Grantham catches an 85 yard TD pass to defeat archrival Lycoming, 14-7.

Then, there was the LHSC - Penn State soccer matchup -- We all remember that one. After the Bald Eagles jumped on top 2-0, the Lions battled back to win in overtime.

Ahh, but sweet revenge. The field hockey team, who incidentally later went on to win a Division II National Championship, defeat the Lady Lions, 3-2, in a flickoff. Too bad the Centre Daily Times refused to honor the Lady Eagles' triumph.

Three Bald Eagle wrestlers capture Eastern Wrestling League Championships and four qualify for Nationals to highlight the wrestling campaign. Wade Potter, Ed Black, and Rick Petersen take EWL titles and Doug Buckwalter cops a second place. The four qualifiers were the most since 1976.

In the midst of a dismal men's basketball season, a young freshman emerges as a hero in a memorable matchup with Clarion. Jeff Jackman is the key in that game, Sophomore Mike Greene is also named second team All-Conference. On the ladies side, a pair of twins lead the Lady Eagles to a .500 season.

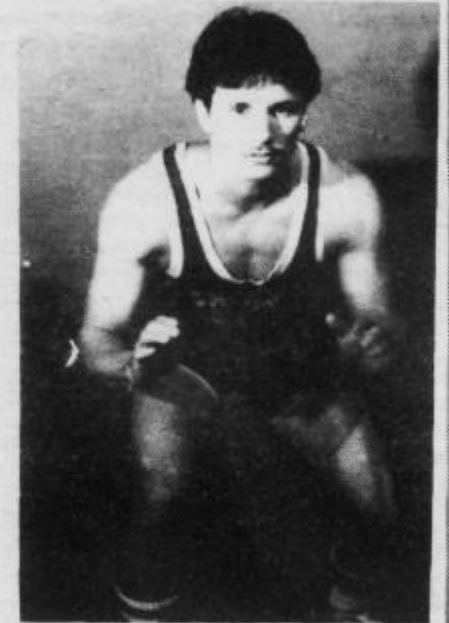

Bill Lingle, LHSC's premiere boxer at 146 lbs., places second in the nation for the second straight year and is followed by Tim Frymyer, Ken Cooper, and Dave Washington to the NCAA's.

The Lady Eagle Lacrosse team, though it failed to capture a PSAC title, did take third by defeating Slippery Rock, 20-6 (see above).

Well, that's it. There are many more, and we'd like to congratulate every athlete. To those who are graduating, Good Luck. A special salute to these seniors who gave some great moments in their four years at Lock Haven: Kelly Canavan (field hockey), Bobby Lynn (football), Bill Lingle (boxing), and Mike Millward (wrestling).

Kelly Canavan will be leaving Lock Haven with two field hockey championships.

Mike Millward leaves with 97 career wins for Jack Turner's Bald Eagles. He will surely be missed.

Bobby Lynn's shoes at receiver will be tough to fill. The LHSC football star leaves as the all-time leading receiver.

Bill Lingle leaves the LHSC squared circle with back to back NCAA runners-up.

320 seniors ready to turn the tassel May 21

By Holly Williams

Approximately 320 students will be awarded diplomas at commencement exercises next Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at the Hubert Jack Stadium, according to Dr. Harvey N. Sterns, dean of Academic Administration. Dr. Sterns said that 295 students have been approved by the college for graduation. He said that the number of graduates is slightly higher than it had been in the past few years. One student who graduated in August, and 20 students who graduated in December, will be participating in the ceremony. Twenty students graduated last August, and 111 graduated in December.

The ceremony has been planned for the stadium, but if it rains, the ceremony will be moved to the Thomas Field House. Practice for graduation will take place in the Field House at 1 p.m. on Friday.

Dr. Sterns said that a student must have passed a minimum of 128 credits, have a 2.0 grade point average, and must have fulfilled the necessary requirements in the specific major in order to graduate.

Sharon Mertz, a secondary education French major, will be this year's valedictorian. Dr. Gerald Robinson, former vice-president for Academic Affairs, will speak on a topic related to the theme of Excellence in Education.

Dr. Blair Carbaugh and Dr. Bertha Mayes will be Co-Marshalls for the commencement exercises. "The Marshall works with the students for the planning and executing of graduation exercises," said Dr. Carbaugh. He said that he is responsible for making sure students are notified about graduation, supervising the rehearsal, line up, and procession. Dr. Mayes is responsible for notifying the faculty concerning commencement and organizing its procession.

Dr. Carbaugh has been a graduation Marshall for 12 years. Dr. Mayes was appointed to the position by former College President Dr. Francis N. Hamblin last year, but she was out of the country during last year's commencement exercises, so Dr. Jean Deobold took her place. Dr. Carbaugh said that the Marshall is the official representative of the college, and is responsible for filling in at events that the college president or members of the administration cannot attend.

change substantially. He said that Macke, the corporation taking over the snack bar, will not raise prices drastically and that in some cases they'll even reduce prices. There will still be specials, according to him, and an even wider variety of food items next semester. "Students shouldn't feel that Macke is going to bring in vending machines. The only big change will be in appearance. The snack bar will look very different next semester," said McNamara.

Beyond all this, the fact remains that, for whatever causes, a unique element of what we call Lock Haven State College is leaving.

"I take life as it is and I try to enjoy myself," said Fred with his original look at life. "I'd never come back here for anything because I just don't go back to places. I really enjoyed working with the College kids, as I always have for more than 20 years."

Fred was commended with a plaque from the Black Cultural Society here on campus in a gesture that, as he says, made him "speechless for the first time in my life" when he found out about it. And as the students showed their appreciation for him, he also would like to show his appreciation for them.

"I want to tell everyone I served since I've been in the snack bar that it was my pleasure to serve them. I served some of the best people in the world here, even though I did serve some shakes," he said with his usual smile.

To him the student body's message is engraved in his plaque:

"For outstanding service and dedication to the student body at Lock Haven State College. May God bless you."

LHSC Panhellenic Council presents awards

By Kirsten Jorgensen

The Panhellenic Council recently gave out awards for the highest percentage donor in this year's bloodmobile donations, the fall 1982 pledge class with the highest overall cumulative average and outstanding Greek woman award.

The bloodmobile award was given to the Sigma Kappa sorority. This year 257 pints of blood were donated, exceeding the goal of 250. During the fall semester of 1982 only 216 pints were donated.

Both the Pledge Class Scholarship Award and the Chapter Scholarship Award were awarded to the same recipients as last semester. The Sigma Kappa sorority had the Fall 1982 pledge class with the highest cumulative average, and Sigma Sigma Sigma was the sorority with the highest cumulative average.

The outstanding Greek Woman Award 1982-83 went to Penny Gardner of Sigma Kappa, the president of the Panhellenic Council. The award was given for promoting the Greek system. Gardner said that she "wasn't expecting to win the award" All of the sudden they read her name. She felt honored to win the award. Gardner, a senior Psychology major, will graduate in May 1984. Four of the past five Greek Awards have gone to the Sigma Kappa sorority.

Spring Musicale to be held Sunday

The coveted arrival of the spring season also brings the Spring Musicale presented annually by the Lock Haven Community Chorus. The musicale will be given on Sunday afternoon, May 15, 1983, at 3 p.m., in the auditorium of the John Sloan Fine Arts Center on campus. There will be no admission charge.

Some of the selections to be performed by the Chorus are Russian Picnic, by Harvey Enders; Sound the Trumpet, by Henry Prucell with Ona Ruth Weimer directing; How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place, (from Requiem) by Brahms; Over the Rainbow, arranged by Roger Emerson; Gonna Rise Up Singin', by Gilbert Martin; Worthy Is The Lamb That Was Slain, and the finale, Amen Chorus from the Messiah

by Handel.

Soloists from the Chorus will be Nancy Miller, James Hamilton, Joseph Sackey, Richard Ramm, and Kay Bossert. Special group presentations will be performed by the Women of Note (Karin Van Deun, soprano; Kay Bossert, alto; and Donna B. Dorey, alto) and the Community Chorus Quintet (Susan Sagmoen, soprano; Marie Barnhurst, soprano; Christine Nestlerode, alto; Richard Leonard, tenor; and William Snyder, bass). Accompanists will be Ona Ruth Weimer, Dorothy Leeson, Cyndi Erskine, and Jay Wohlfert.

The Orchestra will play for the LHSC Commencement Ceremony on May 21, and then present a "Pops Concert" in the community in June.
