University meets to discuss BCS request list

Edward Klopfenstein

Eagle Eye Reporter

The University's Black students and officials met last Sunday at the Sieg Conference Center to see what progress has been made on the BCS's list of minority concerns.

The concerns range from creating activities aimed at Black students to hiring ten new Black faculty within the next five years.

Robert Lynch, assistant to the Vice President, believes the University has made progress.

Already, said Lynch, the University fulfilled some of the concerns by hiring a full-time minority recruiter, moving the site of the BCS to the old Alumni Center in Bentley, and forming a committee to deal with discrimination problems between the town and the University.

Lynch added that the University is presently working on several faculty issues such as hiring more minority teachers and adding a full-time multi-cultural psychologist for Minority students to the staff.

Because of shortages in qualified candidates, said Lynch, it takes longer to fulfill some of these goals.

Overall, though, a "good spirit" was shown at the meeting, according to Dr. Mary Pursell, a biology professor and Minority Retention Committee member, who added that she was very pleased with the meeting's results.

Others, though, were not quite so pleased.

A faculty member who did not wish to be identified said the meeting "...didn't come to much. It was all political."

That faculty member was especially concerned about the lack of student attendance.

These feelings were also commented on by Shannon Pringle, a BCS member, who said the meeting was quickly organized, so many people did not get the notices until the Friday before when it was too late for them to attend.

According to Pringle and Pursell, approximately 20 students attended.

One of the more vocal members of the students who attended, Waverly Pinckney, declined comments at this time.

Fraternities learn about ideal Greek life

By Biff Miller

PRICE AUDITORIUM - Greeks and non-greeks stopped into Price Auditorium Wednesday evening to find out about "Fraternity Life...everything you wanted to know," sponsored by the Interfraternity Council.

The evening started with a video tape presented from Oregon State University about, "Demythologizing Animal House...the Real Meaning of Greek Life."

The guest speaker in the video, Will Keim, a campus minister and greek who speaks to numerous campuses across the country, stressed that Greeks need to start concentrating more on the aspects of brotherhood and sisterhood and less on partying.

According to Keim, nationally, "four out of ten gang rapes occur after Greek parties."

"We are killing ourselves," said Keim, "abusing alcohol, drugs and sex."

"Instead we must support our national documents representing truth, honesty, and purity," said Keim.

Keim will be speaking at Lock Haven University in this year.

After the video, fraternities from LHU were invited to speak to the group about what their individual organization represents.

This year, Kappa Delta Rho was selected as the most improved chapter within their national fraternity, according to Travis Biecher, who represented KDR.

Tony Schneider, speaking for Alpha Chi Rho, said he selected AXP because the organization provides "a home away from home."

Alpha Sigma Phi stressed their fraternity was for "people who want to have a good time and who want to make this a better place."

Kappa Alpha Psi representative Wayne Gibbs said their brotherhood strives for "achievement in every field of human endeavor."

"TKE is the largest fraternity nationally and internationally," said Ron Pratt, describing Tau Kappa Epsilon to the group.

Lambda Chi Alpha, the largest fraternity at LHU, stresses the "qualities of morality."

And lastly, Phi Mu Delta announced their organization would be going through various changes this year, namely by eliminating pledging and adopting a system of assimilation.

Tim Susick, dean of students and a advisor of the Greek community at LHU, said he is "very proud of the Greek system at LHU."

"This is a first time we've tried this program," said Susick speaking of the "Fraternity Life" program sponsored by the IFC.

"I hope it builds, as does the Greek community," he said.

Two LHU students fined

By Biff Miller

Eagle Eye News Editor

Two students were warned, but not cited for walking along the road between the Infirmary and Price Auditorium on Wednesday, said Lieutenant Dennis Grenniger of LHU Law Enforcement.

Two students were breaking the Pennsylvania Motor Vehicle Code which states "where a sidewalk is provided and its use practicable, it is unlawful for any pedestrian to walk along and upon an adjacent roadway."

Many students are disturbed because they feel the sidewalk to be utilized is too inaccessible.

This sidewalk is located behind the Infirmary stretching to Price.

The officer who warned the two students suggested they may have to pay a fine of $72 each for the violation, said Grenniger.

"I don't think he was going to arrest them," said Grenniger, "he just wanted to scare them."

However, a citation was not issued and a decision regarding that is still pending, said Grenniger.

If students violate this law, and an injury occurs, the University will be held responsible, said Grenniger.

There is a big problem in this area, not only with non-utilization of the available sidewalk, but with students crossing the road, said Grenniger. The road from Bentley past the Infirmary leads to the Hospital and many people use it, he said.

"Students stop the cars to cross the street," said Grenniger. "They think they have the right of way."

Grenniger said from now on, Law Enforcement will warn students if they are on the road the first time, and then be forced to arrest them if the action happens again.

The actual fine for walking on the road is $62.50.

Woodbury's attends AARC workshop

COLORADO - Dr. Ronald G. Woodbury, Vice President for Academic Affairs at Lock Haven University, presented a workshop at the meeting of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Woodbury's workshop, entitled "Curricular Development and Professional Vitality: Alternatives for the Non-Research Faculty" focuses on the issue of scholarship. His topic was one component of the Academic Affairs Resource Council's (AARC) 1988-89 theme, "The Core of Academe: Teaching, Scholarly Activity, and Service."

In his presentation, Woodbury emphasized the need to maintain vitality among faculty not involved in traditional research. He explained how curricular development in a team teaching environment contributes to faculty vitality while meeting the traditional standard of peer review for scholarly activity.

The annual AARC summer meeting of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities was held at Copper Mountain, Colorado July 30 through August 3, 1989.

Opinion/Editorial

Letter to Editor: Meatloaf is not the concert for everyone

Dear S.C.C.:

I've been in college long enough to know that a $5,000 concert lose isn't a success that is unless we invented a new way of measuring success.

What kind of blindness was used in picking Meatloaf for a concert? Basically I'm a student that prefers music to dance to and that is popular. I wouldn't dare speak for the general student body, but it seems to me that this concert is similar to the Pat Benatar concert in the fact that they are two artists that haven't had hits in God knows how long. As far as I'm concerned, they should be paying we the students for letting them come here.

If you haven't noticed there may be a large of people on this campus that might not be so excited over Meatloaf. As for as, the matter goes there might be large group of students that are too young to remember Meatloaf's last hit song. Personally, I feel that the last successful concert was the Lisa Lisa concert. and, my definition of success is a concert that attracts a variety of people and makes a profit.

Maybe I was living in a hole somewhere, but what other groups were there to choose from and was the student body honestly made aware of the different options.

Maybe we should go out and find Jamie Crankfield and pay him to organize activities that everyone can participate in. If that not possible pay me $5,000 and I'll stand on stage and scream my head off for two hours.

Not pleased no pedestrian situation

Dear Editor:

Once again, the Lock Haven University police force, in a bold showing of power, has found another way of harassing and intimidating the students of our fine institution.

As I was leaving the dining hall on Sept. 20, I noticed one of the Gestapo agents citing two young men for walking along the road between the Infirmary and Price Auditorium.

I'm told that these gangland criminals were fined $75 for this heinous crime. Perhaps, a public execution would have been a more suitable punishment, though Commander Richard Hepner probably wouldn't spend the money to buy the necessary bullets.

Had a suitable sidewalk been built, this sad situation would not exist. I guess until that happens, we'll have to risk life and limb walking on the goat path that currently exists along the auditorium. Hopefully no one will break a leg until then.

Sincerely,
Andy Devilbiss

Are you interested in being a D.J. for any S.C.C. funded social event? Apply now if you are.

If the event is paid through a S.C.C. budget three bids must be submitted and the lowest bid, up to a maximum of $150, will be accepted. No member of a club or organization sponsoring the event can be contracted as a paid D.J. Any student who applies must have paid his student activities fee. Please submit all bids to the S.C.C. office located in the Parsons Union Building.

TKE takes a step towards eliminating pledging

Indianapolis, IN -- Tau Kappa Epsilon International Fraternity (TKE), the largest college social fraternity in North America, has voted to eliminate "pledging" in all TKE chapters.

The legislation was passed by the undergraduate delegates from the fraternity's more than 280 chapters during the 45th national convention held in late August in Indianapolis, Indiana.

TKE has over 177,000 initiated members and 16,000 active undergraduate members.

College fraternities have existed for over 200 years and started with Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary college. There are more than two million fraternity alumni from 59 national fraternities.

Pledging evolved in the late nineteenth century and was meant to be a "rite of passage" period for new recruits before they were initiated with full rights and privileges of membership.

"We think that the elimination of pledging is the most significant event in the recent history of the fraternity system," said TKE's Chairman of the Board Bruce B. Melchert.

"Our founding fathers didn't have pledging, and so, in a sense we are returning to our roots. I'm proud that our chapter leaders viewed the change as necessary and vital to the future of our fraternity."

Eileen Stevens, whose son (a pledge of Klan Alpine local fraternity) died as a result of hazing, founded the Committee to Halt Useless College Killings (CHUCK) and said during the TKE international convention, "more than 50 students have died from hazing incidents during the last ten years. Whenever you have a two-tiered system where there are members and 'pledges', the opportunity for hazing persists. Tau Kappa Epsilon undergraduates have taken the lead in removing that opportunity."

Instead of a pledge period, new recruits will be initiated members and will participate, along with the other members, in a Membership Development Program (MDP) which includes three levels of educational achievement.

All members are expected to complete these levels in order to maintain active membership each year.

Former President Reagan, a member of TKE from Eureka College in Illinois, is a featured narrator in a new educational video tape series which is included as part of the MDP.

As a set of five professionally produced video modules, "The Spirit of TKE" is the first video education program of its kind in the entire fraternity system.

Each module covers different areas of fraternity education including: leadership and personal development, academic achievement, fraternity history and lore, chapter management, organization and structure, member standards and responsibilities, and alumni involvement opportunities.

The legislation, as passed by the delegates, calls for complete implementation of the MDP over a two year period. Full implementation should be achieved by September 1, 1991.

"This implementation time will provide us with an opportunity to fine tune the new program and educate our chapters in its use," said T.J. Schmitz, executive vice president of the fraternity.

"We will also seek the cooperation of all campus administrations and interfraternity councils to modify their current rules so that our new members may be initiated immediately."

Schmitz commented that, "hazing has long been a problem in the fraternity system. We have tried numerous programs to eradicate it from the fraternity, but so far, none have accomplished the task. We believe that the elimination of pledging is the most effective way to stop hazing practices from occurring."

Several TKE chapters will pilot the new member program this fall, but most will begin using the program after the Spring Regional Leadership Conferences in March and April of 1990.

During those conferences, a complete training and implementation program will be presented to the undergraduates in attendance.

The issue of eliminating pledging had been reviewed by the Fraternity Executives Association and the National Interfraternity Conference.

TKE Vice President at LHU, Tim O'Hea, said, "it's mandatory for colonies and optional for charters" to follow the new procedure eliminating pledging.

A colony consists of a group starting a chapter, whereas a chapter has already obtained a charter.

"We don't know whether or not we'll adopt it (the new system)," said O'Hea. "We'll vote on it at our meeting."

O'Hea says he is not in favor of the non-pledging system because it consists of a 14 day associate program and, "you can't make friends in 14 days."

Another TKE brother and former President of the Interfraternity Council at LHU, Ken Gazzilla, is in favor of the new system.

"I don't believe a longer pledge program makes a better brother," he said.

All national fraternities, including TKE, are currently reviewing their own membership programs. It is anticipated that other fraternities will be making similar changes to their membership in the near future.

Two students have reported thefts from their rooms, said Lieutenant Dennis Grenninger.

Each student claims to have lost a determined amount of cash. One student lost $90, and the other student lost $25. Grenninger refused to comment on which of the residence halls the thefts took place in.

Good advice to all students who reside in the residence halls, "Always lock your door when you are not going to be in your room even if you are only going to the shower."

Many students may not be aware, but the University cannot be held responsible for their personal property. This includes theft, damage, fire, or flooding.

A student reported one of his checks was forged by another student, said Grenninger. The forged check was written for $150. The investigation is still pending, said Grenninger.

On September 11 at 7:35 p.m. in Woolridge Hall, the fire alarm was unnecessarily activated, said Grenninger.

Biswas attends convention

NEW YORK CITY, NY - Lock Haven University professor Renuka Biswas, D.S.W., recently conducted a workshop at the First Global Convention of People of Indian Origin in New York City.

The convention, which took place August 27 to September 2, consisted of five conferences, cultural programs, business and technology expositions and an arts and crafts exhibition.

Biswas, workshop on "Images of People of Indian Origin of India" was given during the conference on "People of Indian Origin and World Development." The workshop was attended by approximately 400 Indians world wide.

The objective of the convention, according to Biswas, was to articulate an identity for people of Indian origin and to identify issues for debate and action in the future. The convention worked on the assumption that people of Indian origin have contributed, do contribute, and will continue to contribute to society worldwide.

Dr. Biswas is the chairperson for the department of sociology, anthropology, social work, and geography at LHU, which she joined in 1977.

LHU to get visit from Middle States

By Jeffrey Huckel
Eagle Eye Reporter

LOCK HAVEN - Lock Haven University will be the subject of a critical evaluation in November.

The evaluation, conducted by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools, determines if the University's accreditation will be renewed, explained Dr. Lucienne de Wette, professor of health and physical edu-

deWette is the head of the Steering Committee which reviews all aspects of the University.

The Steering Committee compiled a 200 page report which will be presented to Middle States, said de Wette.

The Middle States evaluation will possibly reaffirm positive aspects and give suggestions on improving the University, said de Wette.

de Wette said an out of state Site Committee hired by Middle States will come to LHU to verify the 200 page report in November.

In order to verify the report the Site Committee will also interview students, faculty, staff, and administration, said de Wette.

de Wette believes the Middle States Evaluation is good for the University.

"Any time you evaluate yourself, some good will come out of it," said de Wette.

de Wette feels the evaluation will go well and the University will regain its accreditation.

The University has undergone some minor changes in the past two years, said de Wette.

"Change has to be an ongoing process in order for the University to be vibrant," said de Wette.

de Wette feels that without change, there is no progress.

The evaluation is scheduled for November 12 to 15.

Confessions of a dangerous mind...

What can happen if you fail to live up to the old Boy Scout motto ?

By Steven Infanti

Eagle Eye Features Columnist

Normally, I like to go to classes locked, cocked and ready to rock. However, there are those occasional days when I'm not prepared for scholarly events, mainly because I spent the night before using the tequila-and-beer study method.

Unfortunately for me, the professors use the more traditional book study method. I've used textbooks once, and I found the whole experience overrated.

Sitting in class unprepared is like trying to walk through a minefield. One bad step and "boom." You get the picture.

In a true minefield, one solution to the problem is to stand idle, but in this minefield standing still doesn't help because the mines come to you via a professor.

There were about 30 of us stranded in the middle of one in a class last week. The seventy-five minute countdown to freedom was ticking away. The professor was pacing back and forth in front of the room, and my stomach was moving up and down my throat. She was checking the faces, obviously looking for somebody with the "I-didn't-study-at-all-and-I-still-haven't-bought-the-textbook" look on their face. People with that look are usually an easy kill.

I felt pretty secure because at the beginning of a semester you're safe if the professor doesn't know your name. So I put on my "call-on-me-face."

Then she pulled out the atomic bomb of the classroom -- the seating chart. This wasn't just a matter of avoiding eye-contact anymore. It was now a scholarly version of Russian Roulette.

The class went like this:

2:18 p.m. -- She fires off a quick question. It's a hard one, and nobody is trying to field it. She's looking down my row. Time to squint at the blackboard and act like I can't see the problem.

She calls a name, and lucky for me it belongs to the guy in front of me. He's hit, he's down and he looks like a moron. Better you than me buddy.

2:21 p.m. -- I look down at my book. If you squint too long at the blackboard the professor will either think you're in a trance or in desperate need of glasses.

2:24 p.m. -- The professor starts writing a problem on the blackboard.

2:25 p.m. -- She's finished writing the problem. Twenty-nine pairs of eyes stare at the problem. The last pair belong to the guy in the corner whose asleep and drowning in his own drool.

2:26 p.m. -- She looks at the seating chart.

2:27 p.m. -- My stomach decides to view the world from my mouth. It doesn't like the view and begins to journey back.

2:28 p.m. -- She calls a random name off the chart.

2:35 p.m. -- After seven minutes of listening to the student going "Ummm.....," the professor gives the answer. Poor fella, he's just been covered with the shroud of stupidity.

2:47 p.m. -- A new problem is placed on the blackboard, and I know the answer. I try to mentally communicate to the professor that it is Ok to call on me. I won't raise my hand because if she doesn't call on me for this one, she'll remember me for the next one. She called on somebody else. I wish she had called on me.

2:49 p.m. -- The guy in the corner surfaces from his drool, and glances around to see if anybody noticed he's been asleep, or the saliva pool that has formed on his desk. I'm glad he's awake, if he'd stayed asleep longer, we'd need a lifeguard.

2:55 p.m. -- She begins to lecture again, and the class prays it will last for 30 minutes.

3:12 p.m. -- She gives us a new formula. The last time I was excited about a new formula I was seven months old.

3:13 p.m. -- I notice the clothes I'm wearing don't belong to me.

3:15 p.m. -- A sample problem is placed on the board. She's looking at the seating chart for a new name. Round and round she goes, where she'll stop nobody knows.

3:16 p.m. -- She calls on me. I ask God for instant intelligence. Since lightning doesn't strike my pencil and no heavenly chorus starts singing, I figure I'm on my own.

3:18 p.m. -- My request for a brain transplant is denied. I ask her to repeat the question.

3:19 p.m. I decide the odds of knowledge being transferred by osmosis from the class nerd sitting behind me is unlikely. The fact that I know that much about osmosis makes me wish the class discussion was devoted to it.

3:20 p.m. -- I ask her what class I'm in.

3:21 p.m. -- I ask her what she thinks a good answer would be.

3:22 p.m. I try to pull some sort of intelligent answer from my brain. Since no intelligence exists in my gray matter, I take a guess.

3:23 p.m. -- "The answer is 27 trucks."

3:24 p.m. -- I stare in shocked disbelief when I find I'm wrong.

3:25 p.m. -- Freedom.

Eight ways to ease stress caused by studying

By Nancy L. Panko, R.N.

Guest Columnist

Making your studying more efficient and your workload seem more manageable can be attainable. The following do's and don't's are a guide to help you ease the stress of studying.

1. Choose a quiet place to study- studying demands all of your attention free from noise and other distractions.

2. Learn to manage your time- a daily schedule that includes time for classes, reading and writing assignments, preparing for exams, meals, exercise, job and social activities can be easier to manage if it is planned rather than done haphazardly.

As a general rule, plan to spend two hours studying for each hour you spend in the classroom. Trying to do everything at once increases your tension so concentrate on one thing at a time.

3. Take breaks- take a short break after each hour of studying. Loosen tense muscles by getting up and stretching. Walk around, get a snack, but avoid sugary snacks which provide a short burst of energy only, then have a depressant affect later.

4. Recognize your limitations- everyone has strengths and weaknesses; so although you'd like to have all A's and B's, don't be devastated if you don't.

5. Don't give in to peer pressure- if you have planned to study, try not to be tempted by a midweek get together. You'll be thankful for the self discipline when the grades come and when you look for a job.

6. Don't skip classes- someday you may just feel like sleeping in or starting the weekend early, but if it means missing material which will show up later on an exam, it may not be worth it.

7. Don't rely on cramming- often this desperate, disorganized method of studying causes more confusion and increases test anxiety.

8. Don't hesitate to seek help- talk with your instructor if you're having problems with a course. Check on getting into a tutoring if you have fallen behind or don't understand the material.

Avoid the pitfalls of overwork, panic, drugs and/or alcohol. All work and no play can make you tense, irritable and less efficient in studying. Walking, biking, swimming, jogging and other forms of exercise are a great way to relax muscles and renew energy. Relying on drugs and alcohol to help you relax can mask the symptoms of stress and can create more stress by creating more problems. Eat a well balanced diet and get plenty of rest, you'll be more alert, less irritable and better able to manage stressful situations.

University Players to start on production of "The Skin of Our Teeth"

The cast list posted on the call board back stage at the Sloan Fine Arts center announced the assignment of 35 roles to an eager and nervous group of auditionees.

After three nights of auditions lasting a total of 18 hours, Director John Gordon posted his final decision. Twenty-seven students were selected, which means that some of the students will be playing more than one role. Quick change artistry will have to be employed in some cases.

All the activity on stage and backstage is focused on efforts of the University Players to bring to life Thornton Wilder's masterwork "The Skin of Our Teeth." Wilder's comic treatment of the history of humankind as the escape from: the Ice Age, The Great Flood of Noah's Ark fame, and the ravages of many wars, presents a real challenge to the newly announced cast.

The production will open in the Sloan

Theater November 16, 17, and 18.

Much work lies ahead but the crowd that collected to search for their names on the newly posted cast list indicates a willingness to work hard on a worthwhile and energy packed project.

Freshman Perspective...

Glennon Infirmary: My new home sweet home

By Karen Fruchter
Eagle Eye Features Columnist

It's only been three weeks that I've been here at Lock Haven. I know my way around just like a veteran of this school. I've been to many places, among them, my new home sweet home, the infirmary.

For most people the infirmary is like this taboo place. For example, my friends Rob and Janet had colds over the last week.

What did I tell them? "Go see the nurse."

Their reply, "What for? It's only a stupid cold."

"Ok," I think, "you'll suffer with God-knows-what illness, but you'd better suffer in silence."

Now, if it was me, I'd fly like a bat out of hell to the nurse. I'm the original Felix Unger. I give new meaning to the word hypochondriac.

I don't really understand the aversion most people have about seeing the nurse. Mrs. Panko (the registered nurse for those of you who are uninformed) is one of the nicest and most caring nurses I've seen in my life.

This is coming from a person who has seen the inside of many emergency rooms, stayed in various hospitals throughout the years, and, on a daily basis, curses the medical profession.

Miss Crissman, the Nursing Supervisor, is more than friendly. From the minute I walked in I felt secure. And again, this is coming from a certified hypochondriac, whose best friend asks on a regular basis if I've seen the nurse recently.

I was told before I went to the infirmary last week that there was a new doctor working on campus. As it turns out I went on a Monday, when the doctor isn't in, but a physician's assistant, Sandra Beck was in.

At first I was a little nervous, and all sorts of danger signs were going off in my mind.

When Miss Crissman called my name I thought about making a break for the door. But I reconsidered. After all, I thought, I was going to die anyway, so what could she possibly do that was worse than death?

I must confess, I was a bit curious to see what a female doctor's approach would be. And also, a woman sometimes just feels more comfortable talking to another woman about things.

Anyway, the upshot of the whole deal was that they sent me over to CAPS, which is Geisinger Medical Group. Again the red flags went off, but I went. I felt so privileged to be riding there with a police officer without having to be arrested first.

So to all of you who are still skeptical, go over to the infirmary, meet the people there, and judge for yourself. The hours are Monday through Friday, 8am-4pm.

I know when the wind starts to blow a little bit harder, and snow starts to accumulate, I'll be a regular fixture there. Maybe I'll see you sometime. I'm sure it'll be my new home sweet home.

How're you going to do it?

Lady Eagle tennis team falls to "the Rock"

By Rob Yoegel
Eagle Eye Sports Editor

LOCK HAVEN - The Lock Haven University Lady Eagle tennis team came up short in their attempt to defeat state rival Slippery Rock on Tuesday, losing 6-2.

The Lady Eagles (1-3) had their chances against a Slippery Rock team that consisted of players from many different countries throughout the world.

LHU sophomore Jen Jacobs continued her winning ways as she won her third match of the year, disposing of Lisa Ostergaard 6-4, 6-2.

In the number two singles match, LHU won the first set but could not get one more, and eventually lost 1-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Also in singles, Karen Johnson of Lock Haven could not put away her opponent Lynette Procovich after winning the first set, falling 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Lady Eagle Kenna Werkiser also had trouble closing out her match after winning a set and was defeated by SRU's Stacey Morley 6-3, 4-6, 6-0.

Head coach Tag Helt felt that his team should have one those matches and also the whole team competition.

"We should have one those matches," Helt said.

"It was a (team) match I thought we should of won."

In the other singles matches of the after noon LHU's Rebecca Chase was defeated by Ildico Toth 6-3, 6-1 and Peggy Buckmaster of Lock Haven fell to Lisa Reese 6-4, 6-3.

In doubles play, the team of Jacobs and Buckmaster defeated Ostergard and Fiona Koeners 6-3, 6-2. Werkiser and Johnson dropped a close doubles match 7-5, 7-5.

Due to rain and the irrelevance of the outcome, the final doubles match was canceled with LHU in front in the third and final set.

Helt did note that the doubles pairings are playing well.

"Our doubles looks real strong," he said.

The Lady Eagle tennis team hosts the University of Washington D.C. on Saturday and then Bloomsburg on Monday.

Cox to be inducted into Hall of Fame

By Rob Yoegel
Eagle Eye Sports Editor

Dr. Ken Cox, a professor of health and physical education and head coach of Lock Haven University's boxing club will be inducted into the East Stroudsburg University (ESU) Athletic Hall of Fame tomorrow night.

Cox, participated in football, wrestling, and track and field during his ESU collegiate career.

Dr. Cox started at guard in football for three years and earned all state honors on the 1954 Warrior team that tied for the Pennsylvania Conference Title.

He also was the PSAC heavyweight runnerup in wrestling in 1954, and served as captain of the wrestling team in his junior year.

After leaving ESU, Cox joined the United States Army where he won the All-Army wrestling championship in 1956 and was a finalist in both the freestyle and Greco-Roman at the United States Olympic Wrestling Trials the same year.

He has been coaching for more than 30 years and served on the United States Olympic Wrestling Committee from 1964-1968.

Cox explained that during the ceremonies each inductee will be introduced by someone that shared their athletic moments with them.

Cox will be introduced by his former teammate, Robert Tyson who now is a junior high teacher and coach.

Finally, an excited "Doc" said that he does wish one important person in his life could attend the ceremonies.

"My mother would of enjoyed being there," Cox said.

Cox will be joined by five of his children, his mother-in-law, and wife at the 12th annual Athletic Hall of Fame Day at the Sheraton Pocono Inn in Stroudsburg.

Cross Country teams successful at Baptist Bible

By Merritt La Porta
Eagle Eye Sports Reporter

BAPTIST BIBLE COLLEGE - This past weekend was a good one for both the men's and women's cross country teams at Baptist Bible College.

Debbie Valansky took first place overall on the women's side and the LHU women captured first place in the team standings as well.

Valansky was the first runner to cross the finish line with a time of 19:46. Jill Baumgartner and Julie Grasser helped the LHU cause by finishing third and fourth respectively.

Stacie Hebert took sixth place with a time of 21:02, and teammate Dawn Bremer finished in seventh place in 21:10.

LHU crushed the competition in the team standings, taking first place with 17 points.

The University of Scranton finished second with 71 followed by Philadelphia Bible College with 125 and Lebanon Valley College with 150.

Other top finishers for LHU included Diana Szymanski in 10th place; 21:43, Pam Sheppard in 11th; 22:02, Julie Nelson took 14th; 22:35, Maureen Gammon finished 17th; 22:56, Nancy Petts took 19th; 23:10, and Lorie Jamison finished 35th in 25:01.

On the men's side Kevin Wheeler led all LHU finishers grabbing ninth place overall. Behind him in 11th place was John Widl, and Travis Faulkner took 15th for the Bald Eagles.

In the team standings LHU finished third overall with 80 points behind winner Lebanon Valley (55) and second place Scranton (64).

King's College of New York finished fourth with 89, Cabrini College took fifth with 98, Philadelphia Bible finished sixth with 131 and host Baptist Bible was seventh with 190.

Other top finishers included Tim Haring in 21st, Jamie Shea in 24th, Steve Madrak captured 26th, and Marc Phillips finished 34th.

East Stroudsburg and Bloomsburg are next for the LHU Harriers at home tomorrow at 10 a.m.

PREDICTION CORNER

This weeks game: LOCK HAVEN
BALD EAGLES
vs.
California (Pa)
Vulcans

Rob Yoegel
Sports Editor-- CU 31 LHU 14

"Cal proved last week they can score points when it's wet. If it's raining, it could be a long day. If it's dry, and the LHU running game is on, you may be able to switch the score around. Maybe."

Football Preview

Bald Eagles to face Vulcans tomorrow

By Herb Samuels
Eagle Eye Sports Reporter

The Lock Haven University football team (0-3) will have their hands full when they face the Vulcans of California University of Pennsylvania tomorrow afternoon.

The Vulcans attack can only be described as completely unpredictable. "They proved that they can come from behind and win ball games," said head coach Tom Jones.

Last year the Bald Eagles ran up a 28-10 lead against the Vulcans.

But the Vulcans rattled off three touchdowns in the fourth quarter to win a heart-breaker 29-28.

The Vulcans are still up to that same trick this year. Last week they found themselves losing to Mansfield 34-7.

Again they came roaring back with a fury to win the game 43-41 to give them their first win against two defeats this season.

Coach Jones attributes most of that success to the Vulcans star quarterback Sam Mannery.

"With him in the game they're never out of it," he said.

The Vulcans feature a multiple set offense which is wide open and very confusing.

"We'll have to check off and make the right calls on defense," said Jones. "The main thing we have to do is slow them down."

Slowing them down will be hard because the Vulcans are so relentless on offense.

But if the Bald Eagle defense is successful early, they will be able to give themselves some rest for the fourth quarter heroics.

The Bald Eagles played good defense last week against Bloomsburg, despite a 24-7 score. They forced five turnovers, stopped them on the goal line and frustrated Bloom for three quarters.

But in the fourth quarter, momentum, the rain, and a couple of controversial calls got the best of them. Bloom scored two late touchdowns to make the score look worse than it was.

If the defense gives the same effort for four quarters the Vulcans may find themselves in a lot of trouble. But they will need help.

That help will have to come from the offense.

"We need them to move the ball and score to help rest the defense," said Jones.

The Vulcans are a basic defense that likes to stunt a lot, but not as much as Bloomsburg.

The offense did not move at all last week in the mud. Modifications will definitely be needed this week with the weather predicted to be the same.

"We'll be different," Jones said, "We've made some changes to accommodate the weather."

The coach would not go into any details but it's assured the Bald Eagles won't be running a lot of speed plays around the end like they tried against Bloom.

What will they have to do?

If it does rain, look for the Bald Eagles to pass short to tight ends Jeff Polites and Paul McMullin and running back Guy Wade. Quarterback Jimmy Broadway will have to pass more to survive.

The MVP's on defense will have to be inside linebackers Todd Stuter and Kenny Walker and free safety Dwayne Tooles.

They are the ones who will have to look into Mannery's eyes and figure out what he is thinking.

Prediction: This is the toughest type of game to predict. So many questions have to be answered. Which California team will show up? Which Lock Haven team will show up? Will it rain (probably the most important factor)? Will there be fan support?

It's almost impossible to predict a score with all the intangibles but, 35-17 Vulcans is the score that seems to burn across the gray skies.

Because the Vulcans had a scare last week and the Bald Eagles are not a foul weather team the score seems valid.

But if a small miracle happens and the sun should show (hasn't been around since last week!) and the Bald Eagles can halt the offensive tide, LHU may have it's first game of the season.

Who knows, maybe the Bald Eagles can beat both the Vulcans and the weather!

The game will be played at Hubert Jack Stadium with a 1:30 kickoff time. The Bald Eagles will need the crowd to cheer them on.

What's up with football?

By Rob Yoegel
Eagle Eye Sports Editor

It's funny, I just sat here for almost thirty minutes writing something about my prediction in the 'prediction corner' and I end up erasing it.

I'm sure the disappointment is great in that there is no guest columnist this week.

Well, before I go on I would like to thank my guest last week, Athletic Director Sharon Taylor for starting us off.

Next week, I do have a special guest, and I hope in the weeks to come I'll do the same.

Once again, A final plea to the athletes and coaches of Lock Haven University, let's make these sports pages the most informative and entertaining then ever.

Ok, enough of that.

For four years now, I have watched LHU football.

"Oh my God, he's crazy (for talking football)," you say.

Nah, what the heck, after all, they are an interesting subject.

Add to it being interesting, I figure I'll get at least 70 more readers than I usually do.

All right, you're telling yourself now that this guy (me) is going to write all these nice, inspiring things about LHU football so he doesn't get his head smashed in.

Well, you're right!

No seriously, I'm just going to try to be honest and hope that maybe in the future others will share their thoughts with us.

Everyone is blanking and moaning over the way the football team has been playing this year.

If it's not there schedule, it's the coaching, if not the coaching, it's the players, if not the players then it's... fill in the blank.

The fact is that no matter what the complaint, it's because they are losing and not winning.

That's all a part of sports, wherever you go, if you win it's great, your supposed to win, and if you lose, you get thrashed with complaints because you're not supposed to lose.

If anything, I want to commend LHU's football team for one thing.

They haven't been to successful so far, but they are not quitting, not trying to defend themselves to a ridiculous degree, and they are playing football better than me or anyone else at this university who doesn't play football.

A tough schedule? Well let's say, "tougher."

A good team? Well let's say "better."

The tougher schedule could be for any reason.

The money promoted into the program from the larger institutions is one.

Making the team more experienced is another.

And I'm sure you can name more.

A better team is much easier to understand.

It's just a matter of being here a few years and comparing what you see and what you read in the statistics to previous years.

My final thoughts are this. Is it wrong for me and Herb Samuels to pick California to beat LHU?

No, anyone that knows anything would label LHU as the underdog.

But hey, I'm still pulling for them because they represent my university and my future alma mater.

I hope they do prove me wrong, and although you're not suppose to look past the game you haven't played, I'm just wondering if anyone else knows that the University of Maine football team beat Villanova last weekend.

After we hopefully upset California, two weeks later we play Maine.

Sports Club News

In last weeks rugby home opener, the Lock Haven rugby club defeated Bloomsburg, 11-6.

Scoring for LHU were Dan Potts, Kyle Cashin, and John Cunninham who added a penalty kick for "the Haven" Ruggers.

Even though it was a wet and dreary day, the fan support was outstanding and we look forward to an even bigger crowd next week".
