George Edgar Wilbur

Few men who have served on the faculty of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College have left an impress upon the institution equal to that left by George Edgar Wilbur, who served as a member of the faculty for forty-two years.

To the thousands who still think of Bloomsburg as "Old Normal," his spirit still lives. They still have a vivid image of him, sitting in his classroom, as class after class came and went. When they left Bloomsburg, they carried with them the memories of his kindly spirit, the twinkle in his eye, and the charming personality which endeared him to all who ever sat under his instruction. When they came back to Bloomsburg, to renew the memories of their normal school days, it was Professor Wilbur whom they sought, and he always remembered them.

Professor Wilbur was born September 2, 1850, in Waverly, Pennsylvania. He was the son of a Methodist Episcopal clergyman, the Rev. John L. Wilbur. He was blessed with an exceptional home training, and at the age of nineteen, he entered Wyoming Seminary, where he received his preparatory work. In 1873, he entered Dickinson College, Carlisle, and studied law for two years. In 1873 he received the A. B. degree, and three years later, he received the A. M. degree.

Following his graduation from Dickinson, he came to Bloomsburg, and served two years as supervisory principal of the Bloomsburg schools. The trustees of the Bloomsburg State Normal School then invited him to join the faculty of that institution. For seven years he was professor of Ancient Languages and History, after which he was transferred to the department of Mathematics. He served in that capacity for thirty-five years, making a total of forty-two years of service to Bloomsburg.

He was married October 28, 1874, to Frederica L. Hiller, of Wilkes-Barre. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur had three children, two of whom grew to manhood. The only son who now survives is Harry Curran Wilbur '97, of Chicago. The other son, Professor G. Elmer Wilbur '00, died August 28, 1928. At the time of his death, he was Superintendent of the schools of Duval County, Florida.

Professor Wilbur's activities in the town of Bloomsburg were many. A member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, he was for many years a teacher of a class in the Methodist Sunday School. For many years, he was editor of the Normal Quarterly, and this served to keep him in close touch with the graduate body. Not long after his retirement from teaching, the Quarterly passed out of existence, and was not revived until 1926, when the Alumni Association voted to resume publication, and to support it by funds from the treasury of the Association.

He was elected to the Thirty-Third degree, Scottish Rite Masons, in 1913, and was crowned at the sessions of the Supreme Council held in Chicago on the 14th of September, 1914.

He was a past officer of the Washington Lodge No. 265, F. & A. M., Bloomsburg Chapter No. 218, Royal Arch Masons; Crusade Commandery No. 12, Knights Templar, Mount Moriah Council, No. 10, Royal and Select Masters, and Oriental Conclave No. 2, Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine. He was a past sovereign of the Knights of the Red Cross of Constantine, and past grand sovereign of the state organization. He served as secretary and recorder of these bodies for thirty-one years.

It was in 1910 that Professor Wilbur went to the Moses Taylor Hospital, Scranton, for a serious operation that, it was feared, might cost him his life. Never in the history of telephone service in Northeastern Pennsylvania had there ever centered the interest that was manifested concerning his condition at that time. Day and night, the messages of inquiry poured into the hospital. A special force was required to handle them. The love and adoration in which he was held by those who had sat under his instruction, were strikingly emphasized.

He recovered in time to come back for the Commencement exercises in June. Those who saw the reception accorded him as he came back as though from the dead, will never forget the scene. Men and women, young and old, were in tears and unashamed, as he stepped before them for the most impressive Ivy Day program in the history of the school.

"It was a wonderful tribute that was paid him when he rose to speak," stated the Morning Press of the following day, "round after round of applause sweeping over the large audience gathered on the campus. He demonstrated, before he had gone far in his talk, that the hand of illness had not deprived him of his happy temperament, and when he said that he did not want to make a speech, the audience broke into applause, in which the element of sympathy was not lacking."

Another affecting scene was enacted at the Alumni Banquet, at which over four hundred fifty members were present.

Granville J. Clark, an alumnus and a trustee, had responded to the toast "Our Grand Old Boy—Professor Wilbur," and had paid a wonderful tribute to his worth as a man and as an instructor. He referred to the joy which all felt over his recovery, and touched beautifully upon the impressive talks which Professor Wilbur had always given to the graduating classes, talks that he knew had made them better men and women than they would otherwise have been.

As he sat down, Professor Wilbur, who occupied a seat not far distant, arose. Breaking the intense silence, he said in part: "I am glad to be here today. I had the best physicians in the world; I had the best surgeons; no nurses could have been more kind, nor could any have been more efficient. But with all these, I would not have been here with you today, had it not been for the prayers that went up to God from my boys and girls." He uttered another sentence that was not heard, and as he sat down, the entire assemblage broke into tears. It was a scene that cannot be described. Strong men lost control of themselves, and for a time it looked as if the banquet would come to an end. Then Prof. Wilbur gathered himself together sufficiently to arise and thank the alumni for the beautiful flowers that they had sent him in the hospital. The memory of them he carried with him to the depths, he said, and then, as he again took his chair there was a fresh outburst.

With his recovery from that illness he again took up his labor of love at the school where Dr. Waller and Professor Curran were contemporaries of his.

The year 1917 marked his fortieth year of affiliation with the school. The Class of 1917 observed this in a fitting manner by dedicating to him their class annual—Volume Two of the "Obiter." The dedication includes a short sketch of his life, and also contains this tribute:

"The distinguishing characteristics of Professor Wilbur have been thoroughness in scholarship, deep personal interest in his pupils, and his phenomenal success as a disciplinarian. He was always very successful of holding the esteem of all with whom he came in contact; his faculty of winning complete confidence of students was great, not only as an instructor but as a friend, which proved to be of the highest value.

"Large numbers of young men have received training under him, and have gone out to higher institutions of learning. He has used his influence to stimulate young men to the pursuit of higher education.

"Ties of friendship are not stronger between any member of the Faculty than they are between Professor Wilbur and the former as well as the present students of the school. No one connected with the schools has as wide acquaintanceship among the alumni members as Professor Wilbur."

At the Alumni meeting held in the same year, Professor Wilbur was honored by the Alumni. There were tears in his eyes that day, as he was called before the Alumni body and presented with a beautiful gold watch, as a slight token of appreciation of the wonderful life's work that he had given to the school. Everyone was deeply moved, for it seemed to signalize, not only the achievement of a lifetime, but the first act in drawing the curtain on a remarkable life.

Two years later, in 1919, he was forced by ill health to withdraw from active service. By November of the same year he seemed to have recovered, and again there was rejoicing. But his work was done. The death of Mrs. Wilbur affected him to such an extent that he never was the same. He continued to fail gradually, until 1923, when on January 6, he was stricken with paralysis. He lived until January 19, and then came the end.

The Alumni meeting held in June, 1923, was given over especially to a tribute to the memory of Professor Wilbur. The files of the Morning Press give us the following account of the meeting:

"The precept of a life, the wonderful work that those who have gone before have done in character building—these were the outstanding thoughts in the words that were spoken by representatives of thousands of graduates of the Bloomsburg State Normal School as they gathered in the auditorium Saturday morning for the annual meeting of the Alumni Association. Hundreds were there—hundreds who had come to pay tribute to the men who in past years had laid the foundation for the Bloomsburg State Normal School of today. The names of Dr. Waller, of Prof. Wilbur, of Prof. Noetling, and many others in the "Old Guard" were called up in terms of reverence and respect, for those who were back were those who owed much they are to the men who in the days that are past flung high the banner of "Old Normal" and kept it there.

"In the hands of Dr. Arthur J. Simmons, of Newfoundland, had been placed the task of love in expressing what hundreds thought of Professor Wilbur. He told of the intimate relationship in which, as a student, he had come to know Professor Wilbur. He told of the years that Prof. Wilbur had taught Civics and Psychology, and then of his thirty-five years as instructor in Mathematics. He told of his popularity in the town, of the prominence he won in Masonic circles, and of his popularity in every circle in which he mingled. He alluded also to Prof. Wilbur's keen wit, to his fire and imagination, all kept under perfect control, and of the delight he took in friendship.

"He spoke of Professor Wilbur as a teacher; of his popularity with his students, and of the fact that he never criticized a co-worker. He never gossiped; he was never meddlesome; he was a man who knew remarkably well how to attend to his own business. His discipline was remarkable, in spite of the fact that he was never nagging or cross. If he had anything to say, it lasted the class for the rest of the year. He was open-minded and fair, but the classroom with him was always a place of business. He knew his subjects well, and he knew how to impart the knowledge that he had. He had personal magnetism to a remarkable degree; the speaker added that when a school has men like Waller, Wilbur, and Noetling, these men are bound to leave their mark on the lives of young men and women.

"Dr. Waller also paid a tribute to the memory of Prof. Wilbur. He told of his coming to Normal the year following the Centennial, and of the fact that from that time up to the time of his retirement, he served the school for a longer continuous period than anyone he knew. Dr. Waller stated that when the students studied Latin under Professor Wilbur, they learned it, and it was only because of conditions in the other department—not his—that he was changed to the department of Mathematics. That ability to change from one department to another reflected the unusual attainments of the man. All knew his sense of justice, all knew that he never allowed himself to be vindictive. He was so fair that when it was said that Professor Wilbur had said so and so, that ended all discussion, even in faculty meetings. George F. Wilbur was a great instructor. He was loyal to the school at all times, and absolutely loyal to his fellow-workers.

To those who knew Professor Wilbur, this tribute seems hardly necessary, but hundreds have gone out from Bloomsburg since he disappeared from the scene, and to many of these, he is but a name. It is fitting, therefore, that the later graduates of Bloomsburg should know him as he was, in order that one more link might be forged into the chain of loyalty that binds them to their Alma Mater. All Alumni of Bloomsburg may be proud to feel that the Bloomsburg State Teachers College is as rich in traditions as any other college; that great figures once walked the corridors and campus. They may well say today, as we hope they will be able to say fifty years from now: "There were giants in those days."

Thousands at Home-Coming

The most successful Home Coming Day in the history of the College was held Saturday, November 14, with three thousand at the football game and eight hundred guests at the dinner in the evening.

A 7-7 tie with the powerful East Stroudsburg Teachers College was the main attraction of the day. The score made everyone happy, as East Stroudsburg was expected by many to be the winner. The Bloomsburg team played its greatest game of the year to keep the visiting team from winning a victory.

The principal streets of the town were in gala dress for the day, as were the campus and buildings at the College. The Maroon and Gold of Bloomsburg and the Maroon and Black of East Stroudsburg were used in the decorative scheme. These colors also predominated in the beautiful effect worked out in the gymnasium, where there was an informal "get-together" following the game, and an informal dance in the evening.

For the first time, the living quarters of the students were open to the inspection of parents and alumni. Dr. Haas and many others connected with the College heard much praise from the visitors, concerning the excellent condition of the dormitories. The improvement program in the dormitories was completed during the past summer, and the rooms are now in fine condition. The newly furnished rooms for the girl and men day students were also open for inspection, and drew many favorable comments.

All visitors received a royal welcome, with an organization of three hundred faculty members and students having definite assignments in the efficient organization charged with making the necessary arrangements. Much credit is due to Miss Jessie Patterson, of the faculty, who acted as general chairman of the Home-Coming Day Committee.

There were no classes during the day, in order that the students might give their entire attention to entertaining the guests. The program opened at ten o'clock in the morning, when parts of the building were thrown open for inspection.

At eleven o'clock, the Maroon and Gold Band gave a concert on the campus in front of Waller Hall. The concert was enjoyed by a large crowd that gathered on the campus, and in the windows of Waller Hall.

There were four bands present at the football game. East Stroudsburg brought their own band, the Maroon and Gold Band was there, and the Bloomsburg High School Band and the Band from the Northumberland High School arrived on the scene at the end of the first half.

Following the game, there was a large gathering of students and alumni in the gymnasium, where tea was served.

The dining room was not large enough to accommodate all that wished to attend the dinner. The overflow was served after the first group had left the dining room. During the dinner, the Maroon and Gold Orchestra furnished a musical program.

The crowd at the dance in the evening was one of the largest that has ever attended this Home-Coming Day feature. The floor was crowded with dancers, and the seats on the east side of the gymnasium were filled with alumni, who were renewing college day friendships. Music for the dance was furnished by the G-Y All Stars, of Bloomsburg.

Home-Coming Day is becoming more popular every year and is just one more evidence of the ever-strengthening tie that binds all Bloomsburg Alumni to their Alma Mater.

Harvey A. Andruss, Director of the Department of Commerce, has signed a contract with the Prentice-Hall, Inc., New York, to write a book on Business Law. This book will probably bear the title "Business Law Tests and Cases" and is to be used in the Commercial Departments of High Schools.

The 1931-32 Calendar

One of the most important committees in the administrative organization of the College is the Calendar Committee. This committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Thomas P. North, consists of the chairmen of all faculty committees, and the administrative officers. The duties of the committee are to draw up the calendar of all social and athletic events for the college year, to consider all applications for social events, and, if it approves them, to give them a place on the calendar. The work of the committee serves to eliminate events that are undesirable, and also to provide for an even distribution of events throughout the college year. The committee has a meeting once a month, to pass on matters of routine, to study the working out of the calendar, and to formulate policies that will improve the calendar the following year. At present the committee is engaged in making a study of the faculty load, with the idea of securing a more equal distribution of load among the various members of the faculty.

The calendar for the present year will give the reader an idea of what is being done to making college life more interesting to the students, without sacrificing the regular work of the curriculum.

The 1931 Artists' Course

The 1931-32 Artists' Course opened Friday, October 9, with the presentation of the Balfe's opera, "The Bohemian Girl," by a group of four artists. The company, working under the limitations due to the small size of the cast, the absence of a chorus, orchestra, and adequate scenery, gave a fine account of itself.

The second number of the course was a piano recital by Charles Naegele, one of America's outstanding pianists. Mr. Naegele appeared Friday Evening, November 13. This was his third appearance in Bloomsburg, and the applause indicated the popularity he has gained with Bloomsburg audiences.

Sue Hastings' Marionettes are booked for Friday evening, December 18, with a special children's matinee in the afternoon.

Felix Salmond, considered by leading critics as among the best of the cellists in the world, will give a recital Friday evening, January 26.

As the concluding number of the course, John Goss and the London Singers will appear Friday evening, February 26.

In addition to the above numbers, Dr. George Earl Raiguel, of Philadelphia, was scheduled for three lectures on subjects of national and international importance. Dr. Raiguel gives his lectures at the Assembly exercises held in the morning. He has been coming to Bloomsburg for four years, and his lectures are growing more popular every year.

An informal dinner in honor Superintendent of Public Instruction and Mrs. James N. Rule was given by President and Mrs. Francis B. Haas, Tuesday evening, October 27. The dinner was followed by a reception to the faculty and administrative officers of the College, the reception being held at the President's residence. Included in the list of invited guests were the members of the Board of Trustees, cooperating teachers in Berwick and Bloomsburg, and members of the Bloomsburg and Berwick Boards of Education. About two hundred guests were present.

The affair was a much enjoyed one, and afforded those present an opportunity to meet the head of the Pennsylvania school system.

At the College and the President's residence there were beautiful floral decorations. Alexander's orchestra furnished a delightful musical program, and delicious refreshments were served.

The annual reception, inaugurated during the administration of President Haas, has become an important event on the social calendar of the College.

Kappa Delta Pi Initiates

Eighteen candidates were initiated November 20 by the Gamma Beta Chapter of the Kappa Delta Pi honorary educational fraternity, at ceremonies held in the social rooms in Science Hall.

The fraternity was incorporated at the University of Illinois in 1911, and there are now about sixteen thousand members. The Bloomsburg chapter was installed in February, 1930, by Dr. A. L. Hall-Quest.

Among other requirements there must be scholarship rating in the upper quarter of the Junior and Senior classes.

The following students were initiated: Gilbert Gould, Edmond Smith, William James, Charles Hensley, Charlette Osborne, Ruth Appleman, Laura Kelley, Pauline Reng, Iva Jenkins, Zela Bardo, Melba Beck, Mildred Busch, Mary F. Schuyler, Frances Evans, Ida Arcus, Lois Lawson, Mary McCawley, and Carl Riggs.

The advisors of the local chapter are Miss Ethel A. Ranson and Dr. H. Harrison Russell.

Improvement Projects Planned

Ganet, Seeley, and Fleming have been appointed architects on three projects that are to be developed in the near future.

The first project is the erection of a projection booth in the auditorium, and the making of changes necessary for the successful showing of sound pictures. The sound equipment has already been delivered, and is ready for installation as soon as the projection booth is completed.

Another project provides for the placing of bleachers on the west side of the gymnasium. These will be similar to those now on the east side. The plans also provide for dressing rooms and showers under the new bleachers.

The third project is the erection of a fire tower, freight lift, and freight platform in the rear of Waller Hall and near the kitchen. These will replace the present wooden lift and platform.

10,000 Preparing to Teach

Approximately ten thousand students are enrolled at present in the thirteen State Teachers Colleges and the Cheyney Training School for teachers, according to a statement issued November 12 by Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction. The exact figures are 9849, as of October 15. These students are distributed as follows:

Bloomsburg	649
California	694
Cheyney Training School	166
Clarion	346
East Stroudsburg	753
Edinboro	532
Indiana	1427
Kutztown	512

Lock Haven	566
Mansfield	728
Millersville	573
Shippensburg	642
Slippery Rock	899
West Chester	1362

The total enrollment this year is slightly less than for the corresponding period last year.

Of the 9849 students registered in regular teacher training courses, 5,126 are enrolled in four-year curriculums leading to a degree, not including 2,304 students registered as first semester students who will not choose a definite curriculum until the second semester of this year. The 5,000 young men and women who are candidates for a degree, which number constitutes over half of the entire group, represents a marked development of six years, or the period elapsing since the State Normal Schools were changed into State Teachers Colleges. Prior to that time all students, with the exception of a few, pursued the two-year course.

An analysis of the figures representing the entire student body shows that 985 are registered in the two-year primary curriculum; 1,269 in the two-year intermediate curriculum; 165 in the two-year rural school curriculum; while the others, with the exception of the 2,304 first semester students, are registered in the four-year curriculums, as follows:

Elementary grades	253
Junior High School	2613
Art	235
Commercial Subjects	285
Health	930
Home Economics	237
Industrial Arts	120
Kindergarten	10
Music	437
Others	6

The 1931 Football Season

The football team of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, came to the end of its 1931 season with a record of two victories, three ties, and two defeats. The schedule was made up exclusively of games with the teams of other State Teachers Colleges, and the Bloomsburg team met with plenty of opposition. All of the games were hard fought, and, in most cases, our boys brought credit upon themselves. In several of the games, the opponents of Bloomsburg were expected to win by a large margin, and the fact that Bloomsburg was able to forestall defeat is an indication of the type of football that was played. The scores follow:

Bloomsburg	32	Kutztown	6
Bloomsburg	7	Millersville	7
Bloomsburg	12	Mansfield	0
Bloomsburg	0	California	0
Bloomsburg	7	Lock Haven	20
Bloomsburg	0	Shippensburg	30
Bloomsburg	7	East Stroudsburg	7

Northumberland County Alumni of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, met at a luncheon held Thursday, October 29, at the St. John's Methodist Church in Sunbury. The meeting was addressed by President Francis B. Haas, and by Dean William B. Sutliff. The luncheon was in charge of John B. Boyer, Assistant County Superintendent, Mrs. Marion Skeer, and John E. Shambach, Superintendent of the Sunbury schools.

Dr. Francis B. Haas is serving as State Chairman for the annual Christmas Seal campaign. He has appointed a committee of fifty-five members to work with him.

THE ALUMNI

As noted in the September issue of the QUARTERLY, the members of the class of 1881, at their reunion held in June, agreed to write brief histories of their activities since graduation. Several of these were printed in that issue, and their publication is continued below.

1881

Martin O. Lepley, 520 Greenwood Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., pastor of Prospect Avenue M. E. Church, Brooklyn, sends the following:

Dear Classmates of 1881:

Hurrah for dear old Normal! How I would like to be with you at our semicentennial! I hope that we will have a full gathering at our centennial celebration. By that time we will have graduated from this mundane sphere.

I cannot find the old catalogue, I am sorry to say. It seems to me that some years ago the Faculty wanted some copies and that I returned mine. I need no printed page, however, for a number of names. I can still hear Nuss ringing the dinner bell, bringing welcome news to us all. I have not forgotten Leff Morgan's chicken, etc., which he received from home. Although I was always sedate myself, I have not forgotten some of the pranks of others.

Yes, I did participate in one. Some of the boys remember the ducking as we raced through the halls one vacation day until we were discovered by Professor Wilbur. Leff sat at his table and so became quite intimate with the stern Latin Professor. Leff told me that the dignified "Prof" was quite gay himself in his younger days and that he understood our playful spirit, and so we were never taken to task for the prank. Of course it was my reputation for orderliness that saved the rest, though I did not tell them so at the time. Leff never did tell me definitely who hid the chairs under the platform. Well, we had the rhetorical Friday just the same, but we had to stand through it all. I always felt that Harrison, Morgan and Nuss knew more than they cared to tell. Professor Wilbur hid under the trees on Sunday evening and listened to the conversation of the students as they came home from church, hoping to hear some secrets about the whole affair. I think he did, too.

Here is a brief outline of my fifty years.
Assistant Principal at Lewistown for one year.
Drums, one year.
Principal of Kingston schools, four years.
Graduated at Hackettstown Centenary Collegiate Institute in '89. Got first prize in Greek and second prize in Commencement Oration.
Graduated at Wesleyan University in '93. Wesleyan celebrates its centennial this fall.
Joined New York East Conference in '93, and am still a member of the same. Was married in '94 and had three girls. One died in infancy. The other two married lawyers and live on Long Island. I have three grandsons and one granddaughter.
My first wife died and I was married again in 1909.

I have three daughters at home. Two are in Manual High and one is in Maxwell Training School for Teachers.

I have had charges in Waterbury, Bridgeport, New Haven, and three in Brooklyn. For two years I was in Greenwich, the second richest town in the country, and one of the most beautiful as well. I left somewhat reluctantly, but accepted a call to a larger church in Brooklyn.

Heister V. Hower

Graduated at 17 at B. S. N. S. with Class of 1881.

Taught school four years at Conyngham, Luzerne County, Pa.

Graduated in Medicine from College of Physicians and Surgeons, now combined with the University of Maryland under the title of University of Maryland and College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1887.

Located at Mifflinville in General Practice, succeeding Dr. J. J. Brown, now of Bloomsburg, Pa.

Married to Miss Dora E. Drum, daughter of Geo. W. Drum of Conyngham, Pa., 1888.

Continued in practice at Mifflinville until 1911.

Entered John Hopkins University, taking a course in Internal Medicine and studying there for one year.

Elected Superintendent of Scranton Private Hospital 1912, remaining there doing a Consultation and Referred practice until 1917.

Entered the Army in June 1917, being one of the first three Physicians to enlist from Scranton, Pa. Sent to Training Camp at Camp Greenleaf, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and after four weeks was ordered to Camp Sevier, near Greenville, S. C. for duty in Base Hospital, where I remained until the close of the war. While there I filled successively every position on Medical side of the Hospital (Assistant-Ward, Ward Surgeon, Section Chief, Consultant to Medical Staff, Chief of Pneumonia Section Chief of the Medical Section and Superintendent of Nursing School of 60 students which was connected with the Hospital) I was Commissioned as 1st Lieutenant and received two promotions, Captain and Major. In Sep. 1918 was appointed Chief of the Medical Section of Base Hospital No. 148 for overseas duty which carried with it the Rank of Lieut. Col. on the other side, but owing to the then prevailing epidemic of Influenza (there were 1700 cases of Pneumonia at one time in our Hospital) no troops were moved, and as the Armistice was signed before we were sent over this promotion did not materialize although we were under orders to sail when the Armistice was signed. I was discharged with the rank of Major in Jan. 1919, having served 18 months. Returned to Scranton, Pa., resigned position in Hospital and moved to Berwick, Pa. where I have been in general practice since that time. Address 229 W. Front St., Berwick, Pa.

I am a member of the Co. State and National Med. Societies and of the Lackawanna Medical Society. Twice President of County Society and several times delegate to State and National Societies.

On Wednesday evening, September 16, the teachers of the public schools of Catawissa served a supper in the school rooms, in honor of the Misses Claudia and Enola Guie, former teachers in the Catawissa schools. Miss Enola Guie started teaching in the high school in Catawissa High School in 1882, and her sister followed two years later.

The Misses Guie left this fall to make their home in Seattle, Washington. They are now living at 745 Bellevue Avenue, in that city. Three weeks after their arrival in Seattle, their brother, E. Heister Guie, passed away. Mr. Guie attended Bloomsburg Normal in 1884 and 1885. The Seattle "Town Crier" has the following concerning Mr. Guie's death:

"The recent death of Mr. Guie was a loss to not only a wide circle of friends but to the State at large. He had lived in Washington for many years, having come to the Coast from Pennsylvania when a young man. And during the entire period of his residence here he had given generously of his time to public service. He was a politician, in the better and admirable sense of a word that in these days is in somewhat of disrepute. That is, he took a sincere interest and active part in politics, which is one of the most important of human activities. But it was neither a spectacular nor a self-seeking part. His interest was rather in good government and sincere public service, and to this purpose he exerted a marked influence on the political affairs of the State over a period of many years. He was speaker of the House of Representatives in the early days of statehood, and repeatedly served in the legislature. His last experience in public office was as Judge of the Superior Court of this county, to which post he was appointed by Governor Hartley. In whatever capacity he was an honor to the position he held. He was a supporter of Governor Hartley, and was for long his attorney and one of his chief advisers. And it is noteworthy that he always enjoyed the respect and confidence of the people of the State, including the opponents of the governor, which was not the case with all of those intimately associated with the Hartley administration. Mr. Guie's life was a long and honorable career, and his death marks the passing of a faithful public servant, a student of good government, an able lawyer, and a useful citizen."

Mr. T. B. Harrison spent several years teaching, after which he was elected Superintendent of the Luzerne County Schools. For the past thirty years he has been farming. He has five children; four daughters and one son. Three of his daughters are Bloomsburg graduates. All but one of his children are now married. There are nine grand children.

"Go to Higgins. Stay there for three months. Work out a program for a permanent worker. Get the new house just built last summer ready for occupancy. There are a hundred dollars available for the furnishing."

There were many difficulties awaiting Miss Martha Robinson when she came to the County Life department of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, in November, 1921.

Today, in this picturesque and prosperous little Yancey county section there is a large community center, consisting of a church, Sunshine cottage, the new Markle building, and other structures; the work has grown and prospered and although Miss Robinson was instructed to "work out a program for a permanent worker," she still remains. She is such an integral part of the work there that she has been kept on the job constantly.

Many Difficulties •

There were many difficulties awaiting Miss Robinson when she came to Higgins. For several years she had been doing survey work in the East and Middle West. Prior to that time she had been on the field staff of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School association. She had traveled a great deal.

She learned that Higgins was a mountain settlement in Yancey county, that it was located on Cane river, 12 miles from Burnsville, which was its closest railroad connection, and that only one train came to Bensonville a day over a small branch road for lumber hauling. She was told that Dr. W. E. Finley and the Rev. J. E. Gruver would be there to take care of her.

Incidentally Dr. Finley is still a Presbyterian minister and is now located in Madison county. Mr. Gruver is superintendent of the Mountain Orphanage on Swannanoa, a Presbyterian institution.

On a dark night in January, 1922, Miss Robinson reached Burnsville. Dr. Finley met her at the Marion junction and after driving a mile through the deep mud, she reached the manse. Next day she assembled supplies, mostly from an older community house, near Mount Mitchell, which had been closed. She learned that the $100 appropriated for her work had been used for another purpose so her final instructions were:

"Go down and see what you can do without any money."

Early on the morning of January 18, she started for the Higgins. They had a wagon drawn by huge draft horses and driven by one of the young men in the Higgins community. That day the furniture and Miss Robinson arrived at the new cottage.

Activity Starts

Immediately things began happening in the community. The people, young and old, began coming to the cottage. Miss Robinson was presented to the Sunday School—the people requested that she become their new leader; recreation was provided for the young people. The children came together for Bible stories and games. And then Miss Robinson found herself actually dreading the end of the three months and time to leave. The board added a year to her term. And at the end of two years, the directors of her department in New York decided that Miss Robinson should have five years to get the work under way, at the end of that period five years more were added, and she still remains.

Books, magazines, sewing materials and almost all the other essentials of a properly equipped community center were absent when Miss Robinson came. She had an inexpensive box of dominoes and a charming personality to begin with; the other things came later as often as money could be supplied.

Cottage Burned

In October, 1930, the cottage with a splendid library of almost 1,000 volumes was burned. This loss seriously impaired the progress that had been made.

On Easter Sunday, 1927, all services were transferred to Sunshine cottage, the larger building. Even these quarters were inadequate. Crowds came and were unable to find room to attend Sunday School and church services inside, so they gladly took seats on the porch, the lawn, and in the woodshed.

Plans for a new church were launched. In August, 1927, work on the foundation on the mountainsides across a small level expanse from the cottage were begun. Very little money was available and the men kept on working until they had contributed labor and materials worth $2,000. Then a grant, in the form of a legacy, given as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Holland, of Chicago, was given. The church was completed and named the Holland Memorial Presbyterian church. It was used for the first service on September 1, 1929, although it was not completed until October 1. In December the church was dedicated.

The church has since been improved with the addition of a heating system and other equipment. Meanwhile, other developments were under way. Miss Robison was offered funds by her cousin for the erection of a building to house various community activities. This building, known as the Markle building was started late in October, 1930, and was completed in the spring of 1931. Like the church, the Markle building is constructed of native field rocks. Both buildings are thoroughly modern.

The contractors had worked but two days on the Markle building when fire destroyed Sunshine cottage together with all the supplies Miss Robison had accumulated. She and Clarence Higgins, a small boy who made his home with her, barely escaped with their lives. A new Sunshine cottage was completed in August this year. Now a school building is being erected.

Additional buildings are planned. In fact, the energetic resourceful, and aggressive woman who came to Higgins in the mud of January, 1922, to stay only three months, has built a real community center.

A complication of diseases, following an illness lasting several years, caused the death of Boyd F. Maize, at the Geisinger Hospital, Danville, on Saturday, August 29. He had been a patient there for several weeks before his death, and his condition had been critical for several days.

Mr. Maize was fifty-one years of age, and was a graduate of the Bloomsburg High School, Bloomsburg State Normal School, and the law school of Yale University. Following his graduation from Yale, he was admitted to the Columbia County Bar, but never followed the legal profession to any extent. He early became identified with the fire insurance business. He was for some years connected with the business in an executive capacity in one of the country's largest cities.

He was a school director in Bloomsburg for several years, and was elected without opposition. He resigned the office when business interests called him away from Bloomsburg. He was a trustee of the Bloomsburg Lodge of Elks for a number of years.

He is survived by his father, two sisters, and two daughters

The following are excerpts from The Philadelphia Inquirer; 1929:

"One of the strangest law suits in the annals of the city faces the Camden Board of Education unless an amicable agreement is reached between that body and a dismissed school teacher.

"The teacher, Mrs. Carrie Gray Hurley, now lives in Ham-monton, N. J., from where she reports daily to A. E. Auster-muhl, secretary of the board, by telephone, requesting where she shall instruct a class. (She did this for 17 months).

"Mrs. Hurley has been officially designated on the payroll as a 'dismissed' employee. With the beginning of the school term, Mrs. Hurley has reported daily, so that the school board officials could not charge her with failure to notify them that she was ready for her duties.

"Mrs. Hurley declares that she was discharged after fifteen years of service "because she married." This, she asserts, took place seven years after her marriage.

"Mrs. Hurley entered the employ of the city as a teacher in 1914. At that time she was known as Miss Carrie G. Gray. In 1920 she married, but continued serving in her duties.

"Mrs. Hurley declared that Dr. Bryan summoned her and 15 others and informed them that they could no longer serve as teachers, as the State law prohibited the retention of married women.

"No such law exists on the statutes Mrs. Hurley and Auster-muhl declared. He also informed the nine members of the Board of Education of this fact. However, he pointed out, several years ago the Camden board passed a resolution prohibiting the employment of married teachers, but did not cite what action should be taken in the event that a teacher married after being employed, and what specific action could be taken after she passed the tenure of office.

"To assist her in obtaining reinstatement and back pay, Mrs. Hurley retained Congressman Charles A. Wolverton as counsel. The Board of Education is now acquainting Lewis Lieberman, Assistant City Solicitor, with the circumstances surrounding the case, in the event that the matter is brought into court.

"When Mrs. Hurley entered the employ of the city she received $850 a year, and with the annual increases she received $2,100 when her services were dispensed with. Suit will be brought for all salaries due to her from Sept. 1927 until the time the case is brought into court, she said.

"Attaches of the Board of Education declare that officials and members of the board are "stumped" and realize that the dismissal of Mrs. Hurley because she married after receiving the tenure of office will result in her reinstatement.

Mrs. Hurley has added other facts and questions:

"This stunt has been used in Camden for years, it seemed an unwritten law until this affair brought it to a climax.

"The Pres. of the Board or Supt. intimidated the teachers or would trick them by such stunts and humiliation as:

Questions and answers of Mrs. Hurley.

1. Don't you know that you have not a legal leg to stand on when you break your contract?

Ans. Never signed a contract not to marry. (b) The Board made a law many years ago to prohibit hiring married teachers.

Ans. It was not in my contract, and laws prohibitive of marriage have always been proven unconstitutional.

2. You know you automatically broke your contract when you married. We never hired Mrs. Hurley, we hired Miss Gray. Mrs. Hurley is not on our payroll.

Ans. You hire people, not names. People teach, names do not. I am the same person, same name with addition Carrie M. Gray Hurley. I am under tenure and in addition to violating that law you are violating the school law passed in 1925 which says there must be no discrimination between the sexes in regard to position, salary, etc. You have not asked three men who married to resign or dismiss them.

3. Can you stand the publicity?

Ans. Yes. (b) You know it will go all over the state and you will not be able to get a position.

Ans. Position or not the principle is objectionable.

4. Can your husband stand such publicity?

Ans. I know no reason why he can't.

5. Can't your husband support you?

Ans. That is a subject for you to discuss with him if you are interested.

6. If you have to teach we could give you a substitute position for probably several months in the year but not a permanent appointment.

Ans. No, we want permanent ones.

7. The President of the Board of Education said to me "That if you should possibly win, the Board of Education reserves the right to make life so unpleasant for you that you will be glad to resign.

8. President of Board spoke in Board meeting in fall (in my disfavor) That I, Mrs. Hurley had won the nomination in the primaries and was a candidate for the Legislature from Atlantic County. One lady member informed him that I was just doing that for pass time since I was not teaching.

The result of all this fight after the suit was filed was: Reinstatement to former position with yearly increment making salary $2,300. Treatment same as other teachers and back pay. It has settled the fact that for all married women teachers, and since then those who are under tenure and have married may and are teaching in peace.

There are four or five members of the present faculty, who were also members of the splendid faculty built up under the administration of Dr. D. J. Waller. When Alumni Day comes around each year, bringing hundreds of Bloomsburg Alumni back to the campus to visit familiar scenes, and to renew old friendships, it is these old friends that are sought eagerly, as oases in the desert of unfamiliar faces. They are the connecting links that join the present to the past.

In the days that have passed since Dr. Waller retired from office, many changes have taken place. The returning alumnus seeks out familiar spots, and is unable to find them. He tries to find the stairway that once led from the bridge to the first floor of Carver Hall, and finds that it is gone. He enters the main entrance of Waller Hall, and, instead of narrow corridors, he finds a spacious lobby. He goes to Noetling Hall to see again the place where he did his student teaching and finds a room full of typewriters. He climbs to the top of Science Hall to see the places where Philo and Callie held forth, and finds no evidence of their existence.

All this had to be. As soon as a living organism ceases to change, it is no longer living. The old wears out, and must be replaced. The progress of education demands constant readaptations to the needs of the hour.

There are, however, many evidences of the Bloomsburg State Normal School that was. Not all of the familiar spots are gone, and great is the feeling of elation when one comes upon a spot that has familiar and pleasant associations.

But most of the familiar faces that once were seen behind the professor's desk are gone. One looks in vain for Professor Cope, with alert step, and Professor Wilbur with his twinkling eye. Dr. Waller, Professors Jenkins, Bakeless and Albert have retired, but are always on hand when the Alumni come back, and warm is the welcome that they receive.

The purpose of this article, however, is to say a word of tribute to a man who is still in the harness. He is still giving to your Alma Mater the same high type of devoted service that he has always been giving since he began work here in 1890.

This man is Professor Daniel S. Hartline, universally recognized as a scholar and an outstanding teacher in his field.

Daniel S. Hartline was born September 16, 1866, in Reading, Berks County, Penna., and attended public school there, as well as in Oley, Earl and Douglass townships. He then entered the Pottstown high school, and subsequently taught public school four years in Berks and Chester counties. Then he entered the West Chester Normal School, from which he was graduated in June, 1890. In September of the same year he came to Bloomsburg, where he organized the manual training department. In September, 1893, he began a course at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., graduating from that institution in 1897. Returning then to the Bloomsburg State Normal School, he has since been on its teaching staff, and has done notable work in the promotion of its best activities, the broadening of its scope of influence, and the awakening of popular interest in its objects. He organized the Department of Biology and has continued in charge of the same. During 1901-92 Professor Hartline gave considerable time to study abroad, at the Universities of Heidelberg and Bonn, taking up work necessary to obtain a doctorate. He is an able scholar, and his concentration and conscientious preparation have made him highly proficient in his chosen line. His efforts are much appreciated by his studies and fellow educators, who recognize the worth of his work.

During the reorganization of Pennsylvania's System of Education and the organization of the State Teacher's Colleges out of results and materials and showings from the State Normal Schools, Mr. Hartline was offered the opportunity to organize and take charge of the Biological Work in the State Normal School in Bellingham, Washington. Because of connections made here he felt he ought not to leave. Twice he accepted opportunity to teach there in Summer Sessions.

During the same period he was twice given opportunity to accept the office of Head of Department of Biology in a prominent, well-established Liberal Arts College in Oregon, but declined on the same grounds. He accepted the opportunity offered by our College to attend New York University, during leave of absence in Summer Session, to study the development and trends in his teaching field.

He served as President of the Pennsylvania Academy of Science during the term 1930-31.

He is a member of the Honorary Professional Fraternity, Kappa Phi Kappa, Beta Chapter, Lafayette College, and of the Bloomsburg Rotary Club. The 1930 Obiter was dedicated to Prof. Hartline.

On August 26th, 1897, Professor Hartline married Harriet Franklin Keffer, daughter of Prof. Washington Keffer, of Lancaster, Pa., and they have one son, Haldan Keffer, of whom they have ample reason to be proud. A brief account of the achievements of Keffer Hartline, now Dr. Hartline, follows:

Dr. Hartline will be remembered by the Bloomsburg students of the early twenties as an ardent Boy Scout in the days when that now thriving county institution was struggling for reorganization; as president of his class of 1921 in the B. S. N. S.; as a graduate of Lafayette College, class of 1923 with Phi Beta Kappa honors; as a student going through a four year course at John Hopkins Medical School for his medical degree, which was awarded, as were also election to the Sigma Chi Honorary fraternity and the prize for his paper in medical research.

Since that time he has been doing two years of research work in John Hopkins University under a National Research Council Fellowship and taking post-graduate courses in physics and mathematics. Along with Biological Research he gave laboratory and lecture courses during Summer Sessions as instructor in the Woods Hall Biological Laboratory. He was awarded a fellowship in Medical Research by the Johnson Foundation of the University of Pennsylvania which gave him the opportunity to carry his studies forward in the Universities of Leipzig and Munich, Germany.

Among the many happy contacts of the German University student during his Wanderjahr, he had invitation as a member of the Physikalisches Institut die Universitat zu Leipzig to attend the Einstein lecture at the University of Berlin, where he met Einstein under these favorable auspices.

He returned from Germany in April, 1931, and joined the faculty of the School of Medical Research of the University of Pennsylvania as Fellow in Medical Research.

In his Johns Hopkins post-graduate years he became associated, through his work in the Department of Physics, with a member of the Medical School Faculty, who previously had been an Astronomer in the Greenwich Observatory, and with him made some interesting original observations on Mars. This led to an invitation to join an Eclipse Expedition to the Philippine Islands, which he did not accept. This association, however, resulted in visits to the Greenwich and Heidelberg astronomical observatories and attendance at the meeting of the British Astronomical Association and his election to membership of that body.

He is now a Staff member of the Medical Department of Research in Biophysics, Johnson Foundation for Medical Research in the University of Pennsylvania.

He has recently published two papers announcing original finds in the Study of Vision, and is now engaged in assembling materials for another publication of the results of his experiments.

Dr. Francis B. Haas, chairman of the scholarship committee of the Culver Military Academy, has announced a $6,000 scholarship will be awarded this year to a Pennsylvania high school boy who has passed the ninth grade.

Competitive examinations will be held in March, with principals of the high schools to select one boy from each school.

In addition to Dr. Haas, the members of the committee are: Dr. Francis M. Garver, of the University of Pennsylvania; and Dr. Ben. G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools.

The examinations already have been arranged for Allentown, Altoona, Chambersburg, Clearfield, Erie, Harrisburg, Indiana, Lancaster, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Reading, Shamokin, Uniontown and Warren.

The six boys ranking highest in the examination will be taken to a university for a period of entertainment where their capacity for leadership and social adjustments can be observed. The scholarship will be based on these capabilities as well as on scholarship and health.

ALUMNI DAY—SATURDAY, MAY 21

John J. Brown

In the death of Dr. John Jordan Brown at his home on Market Street, shortly after five o'clock Saturday morning, January 2nd, there passed away one of Bloomsburg's best known citizens and physicians and one whose life had been closely linked with that of the town through several generations.

Dr. Brown was a member of the old established Brown family of Mifflin township, where he was born March 31, 1848, the son of Elisha B. Brown, a member of a family that had intimate and honorable connections with the history of that region for almost 140 years, and which had been in America since the day of James Brown, the doctor's great-great-grandfather.

Dr. Brown received his early education in the select schools of his home district, and then took a course at Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport. He graduated from that institution in 1867. After teaching school for two terms, he entered Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he graduated in March, 1870, with the degree of M. D. He began practice the same year in Mifflinville, where he continued for seventeen years. Since then he resided and practiced in Bloomsburg. During his regular course at college he took a special course in operative surgery, and in 1888 he took a special course on the eye at the New York Polyclinic. That fitted him for the work in which he specialized throughout the remaining years, and made him the best known eye specialist in this part of the state. During the last few years, however, he had practically retired from practice. He was for years the ophthalmologist at the Bloomsburg Hospital and at the Danville Hospital for the Insane.

In his earlier years he was a director of the Bloomsburg Water Company and a trustee of the Bloomsburg State Normal School. He was one of the first stockholders of the Farmers National Bank of Bloomsburg and upon the death of Charles M. Creveling succeeded to the presidency of the board of directors.

Prior to that time he had been vice president.

He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church from the days of his youth, and for many years was trustee of the First Methodist Episcopal Church in Bloomsburg.

Fraternally, he was a member of Washington Lodge 265, F. & A. M., of Bloomsburg; Bloomsburg Chapter, No. 218, R. A. M.; Crusade Commandery No. 12, Knights Templar; Caldwell Consistory, and Irem Temple, Wilkes-Barre.

In 1880 Dr. Brown married Mary S. Brands, daughter of David F. Brands, of Hackettstown, N. J. Her death occurred August 13, 1907. His only survivors are two sisters: Misses Mary and Martha Brown, who resided with him.

Funeral services were held at his late home on Market Street and his own pastor, Rev. Harry F. Babcock, officiated. Burial was made in Rosemont cemetery.

A sizeable industry in Bloomsburg that ordinarily is not considered as such, is the State Teachers College, where at the present time, in addition to student help, one hundred and fifty persons are employed. A varying number of students is employed, mostly in the dining room, and their number now is about seventy-five.

The payroll for employees of the school during the present fiscal year is $265,000 and the total allocation is $377,00, the difference covering other expenses of running the institution other than wages.

During the last fiscal year, approximately $180,000 was spent in Bloomsburg by the department of property and supplies, and this year there has been allocated $25,000 for three projects, the addition to the gymnasium, a projection booth in the auditorium and a fire tower and freight lift.

Practically all of the employees of the school are residents in the community, and there is a considerable expenditure other than salaries which is spent locally. This includes fuel and most of the food supplies with the exception of canned goods.

To the Classes still in arrears on their subscriptions to the "Trophy Room Fund":

If your president, or some aggressive members of your classes, take up the matter of your deficit with your respective classes, your records will soon be cleared, to the satisfaction of yourselves, and those of us who have been put in charge of the work of completing the Alumni project. Get to work; complete your self-assumed obligations. Help us to finish what has been so well begun.

Respectfully,

February 1, 1932.

O. H. Bakeless,
Custodian and Treasurer.

The following are the enrollment figures for the second semester of the present College year:

Boarding Women—263 (10 in Berwick), (253 in the Dorm.). Day—173, (140 Reg. Day), (33 Saturday). Total 436.

Boarding Men—104, (71 in Dorm.), (33 in Town). Day—159 (89 Reg. Day), (55 Saturday), (45 Non. Res. Day). Total 263.

Total of men and women students is 699.

It will be noted that the above figures include eighty-eight teachers in service who are taking work at the College in courses given by the Faculty every Saturday morning. There are also forty-five men whose home are not in Bloomsburg, and who are being accommodated in private homes in town. This is due to the fact that North Hall is no longer large enough to accommodate all the men.

Campus Notes

The Fifth Annual College Night program of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs was held at the College, Thursday evening, January 28th.

There was repeated the success scored in previous programs at the College, and the dinner and brief program in the dining hall was followed by a delightful entertainment in the auditorium and dancing in the gymnasium.

Seated at the speakers' table were: Dr. and Mrs. F. B. Haas, Dr. and Mrs. James N. Rule, Dr. David J. Waller, Jr., Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Babcock, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Wright, William W. Evans and Miss Mary Evans.

William W. Evans, president of the Rotary Club, presided during the dinner, and there was spirited singing directed by E. H. Ent, of the Kiwanis Club, and W. S. Swingler, of the Rotary Club. The Maroon and Gold Orchestra furnished a program of music during the dinner.

The program afforded many in the audience their first experience with the use of the amplifying system that has been installed in the dining room, and the fact that the speakers could be heard clearly in all parts of the large dining room added much to the enjoyment of the program.

The Kiwanis double quartette delighted with several selections.

Following the menu, toastmaster Mr. Evans introduced Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction, calling attention to the fact that two of the superintendent's predecessors also were seated at the speaker's table.

Dr. Rule brought greetings from the state at large and expressed his pleasure at coming to Bloomsburg.

"You have here," he said, "a rare spirit of co-operation and mutual helpfulness that is found in few cities." He believed that spirit was due to the co-operation of the service clubs.

"The community is fortunate in its educational leadership," he said, declaring that County Superintendent Evans is "one of the best county superintendents the state has ever had." Dr. Rule said that when advice was sought on rural school problems, Mr. Evans was consulted.

He paid tribute to Dr. Haas as "one of the outstanding leaders of the field," and that Bloomsburg and the College were fortunate that he could render such fine service to the community and to the whole state.

Bloomsburg is "very fortunate in the fine type of real leadership" exemplified in Dr. Garwood, superintendent of the town schools, Dr. Rule said.

The state, the superintendent said, is very proud of Dr. Waller. Dr. Rule paid tribute to the former principal of the Teachers College, for his leadership and fine service and presented to him a bouquet of roses as a tribute from the gathering.

Mr. Evans presented roses to Mrs. Haas, Prof. O. H. Bakeless presented a similar bouquet to Mrs. Rule, and E. H. Nelson made the presentation to Mrs. Babcock.

Dennis Wright, president of Kiwanis, presided during the later part of the program, and introduced Rev. Babcock, who spoke briefly on "The Place of Service Clubs in a Community."

With the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," the program in the dining room closed, and the guests went to the auditorium where the following program was presented:

Dr. D. J. Waller, Jr., and Dr. Francis Haas were among the speakers at the Pennsylvania dinner in Washington on February 22nd, in connection with the annual meeting of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association.

Dr. Haas, as president of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, presided at the dinner, and Congressman Clyde Kelly was the principal speaker.

Dr. Francis B. Haas was elected president of the Pennsylvania State Education Association at the annual convention held in Pittsburgh in December.

Dr. Haas was elected over John C. Diehl, superintendent of Erie schools, and succeeds M. S. Bentz, of Ebensburg, who becomes first vice president.

Dr. Haas is also chairman of the committee on legislation in the state's ten year educational program.

Two employes of the Teachers' College have recently gone on the pension list of state employes.

They are the first employes, other than the teaching staff, to be affected by the state employes' retirement fund.

Russel P. McHenry, of 454 East Third Street, groundsman on the campus for more than thirty years, and R. E. Yocum, a building janitor, of East First Street, are the two who ended their years of faithful service.

Both have been employed by the college for more than thirty years, Mr. Young is past seventy years of age, and Mr. McHenry, who actively belies his years, will celebrate his ninety-third anniversary on April 29.

State employes who were here going over the records as a formality to approving the retirement of the two men, were amazed when they learned Mr. McHenry's age, as they had questioned whether he was more than in his early seventies.

Both of the men have remained in exceptionally good health and there was no impairment of their faculties as they continued their work up to the day of their retirement.

One of the finest and most artistic recitals presented to a Bloomsburg audience in some time was given by Felix Salmond, violincellist, in the College artists' course, on Friday evening, January 29th.

Both the soloist and Ra'ph Beckowitz, his accompanist, proved real artists and an enthusiastic audience enjoyed their diversified program.

The annual Christmas dinner for the students, faculty and members of the board of trustees of the Teachers College was held Tuesday evening, December 22nd, in the college dining room.

Dr. E. A. Glenn and daughter, of Berwick; A. Z. Schoch, Mrs. M. S. McKelvey, Paul E. Wirt, Mrs. Pauline Roche, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Townsend, of town; and Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Diehl, of Danville, were the trustees and their ladies who attended.

A delightful menu was served, and the Maroon and Gold Orchestra furnished an enjoyed program of music. Prof. E. A. Reams led in the singing of Christmas songs, and Miss Lenore Potter, a member of the freshman class, delighted with a reading.

Santa Claus appeared with gifts for a few of the "celebrities" on the hill.

In the auditorium, following the dinner, Miss Marjorie Keith Stackhouse delighted with the reading, in her usual capable manner, of Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

Forty-four teachers and administrators in schools and colleges of the district have reported at the Teachers College for the first classes in a post-graduate course in philosophy of education which is being given by Dr. A. H. Hall-Quest, of the educational department of New York University, as part of the extension work of that institution.

Bloomsburg is the extension center of the university for this section, and there is a strong probability that there will be more than fifty enrolled for the course which will make the class the largest of any in the University's extension work. Dr. Nell Maupin, of the College, and Dr. C. H. Garwood, of the town schools, were active in organizing the class.

Dr. Hall-Quest outlined the course and discussions will follow during the fifteen weeks the course will continue.

It is the first time that a post graduate course has ever been offered here and is regarded by educators as a forward step in this section. Through extension work, they explain, it will be possible for those seeking master's and doctor's degrees to take half of the work in Bloomsburg.

About two hundred day students, their parents and members of the faculty, attended the house warming held at the rooms for the day student girls in Noetling hall, Friday evening, December 11th, and the guests were very much delighted with this fine improvement.

The rooms were inspected between seven and eight o'clock in the evening and a much enjoyed program followed in the auditorium in Carver Hall.

The present quarters for the girls are on the first floor, and they are comfortably furnished, being a vast improvement over the old quarters. The main room is very large and is comfortably furnished for a lounge or study room. To the one side is a small room where day students may eat their lunch and on the other side is the office for Miss Ethel Ransom, the dean of day student girls.

A number of educators from this vicinity were on the program for the Northeastern District of the Pennsylvania State Education Association convention at Hazleton, on March 4 and 5.

On Friday afternoon, March 4, Miss Mary T. Haden, director of kindergarten and primary education at the Teachers College, spoke on suggestions for training faculties from the viewpoint of student teacher at work, and Miss Edna Hazen, director of intermediate education, led a discussion on some teacher training problems.

Friday evening, Dr. Haas, president of the Teachers College; Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of Bucknell; and Dr. J. N. Rule, state superintendent, were among the speakers.

In the science section, Prof. D. S. Hartline spoke on "Knots in Science Teaching for Public Education."

In the Latin section, Prof. Hartline spoke on "What the Teacher of Science Owes to Latin."

Dr. T. P. North, of the Teachers College, spoke on social problems of the supervisor of agriculture.

Prof. H. A. Andruss, director of the department of commerce at the Teachers College, spoke on "Recent Trends of Commercial Education in Secondary Schools."

New heights were achieved by the Men's Glee Club of the College when they presented an outstanding program in their fourth annual concert in the college auditorium on Friday evening, December 4th, under the direction of Miss Harriet M. Moore.

Chorus numbers, together with those by the double quartet and the Campus Crooners, were given in a manner that delighted the audience, and the club was compelled to give several encores.

The advancement of the club has been rapid since its organization four years ago and it has become one of the outstanding groups on the hill. The program presented was one which reflected much credit on the club and the institution.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd paid his second visit to Bloomsburg on February 4th, to address nearly two thousand persons at two meetings in the afternoon and evening.

School children who have grown out of their cradles since he detailed here his experiences on the North Pole flight, were numbered among the afternoon audience that filled the large auditorium at the Teachers College, and adults crowded the auditorium for the evening meeting.

Brought here jointly by the Kiwanis and the College, Admiral Byrd was presented in the afternoon by Dr. Francis Haas, president of the Teachers College, and presented Eagle Scout badges to Robert Goodman and Edwin Creasy, two Bloomsburg Boy Scouts. Scout Executive Blake and G. Edward Elwell, chairman of the Kiwanis committee, also were on the platform.

School children from throughout the county attended the afternoon lecture, hundreds of them being in the audience of nearly 1,000. Many were accompanied by their teachers, and their arrival in groups indicated that in some instances entire schools were making the trip to Bloomsburg.

Striking comparisons of conditions between the North and South Polar areas were given, and one of the most interesting features, to many, was the graphic manner in which the photographs showed the inability to correctly judge distances in Antarctica.

In the evening Admiral Byrd was presented by G. Edward Elwell, Jr., chairman of the Kiwanis committee, and Dennis Wright expressed the thanks of the club and the college for the fine attendance.

More than 400 of the afternoon audience came from out of town and included mostly school children, while several hundred of the evening audience also were from out of town.

In the presence of students of the Teachers College and a number of the parents and friends of children of the Benjamin Franklin Training School, the children, at the assembly exercises in the auditorium on February 19, presented a very fine program entitled "A Song, Dance, and Play Contest."

Children of the intermediate grades presented the entertainment, which was based on folk songs and dances which the children studied in geography classes and was arranged by those directing the activities in those grades: Miss Edna J. Hazen, director of intermediate education; Miss Harriet Moore, director of music; Miss Lucy McCammon, director of physical education and Miss Alice Johnston in charge of speech.

The program opened with two children looking at a picture book and wishing that they might see real people sing, dance and play as those activities are related in the book. Then followed the main program made up of delightful scenes presented by the children in costume.

The sixth grade, of which Mrs. Etta Keller is the teacher, gave its part of the program with Miss Louise Strunk directing.

They sang "Bonnie Charlie" and gave the dance "Highland Schottische."

The English song "Where Are You Going My Pretty Maid" was dramatized by Betty Purcell and Nelson Oman. This was followed by the English dance "If All the World Were Paper." Final number given by the sixth grade was the song "Jack Tar" and a dance "The Irish Jig."

The next part of the program was given by the fifth grade of which Miss Anna Garrison is the teacher. Miss Venita Pizer directed the children. Their part of the program was as follows: song "Fairies" by the entire grade; German dance, "Come Let Us Be Joyful"; Hungarian song "Gypsy Forge"; Italian song, "Tic-e-tice-lac"; Italian dance "Tarantella."

The last part of the program was presented by the fourth grade of which Miss Helen Carpenter is the teacher. This part of the program opened with an American song "Cl'ar the Kitchen." This was followed by the "Virginia Reel." Then came the dramatization of the song "A Frog He Would a Wooing Go". The program closed with the singing of "Minuet" after which a group of eight children danced the minuet.

Dr. Francis B. Haas and Dr. James N. Rule were guests at the annual banquet of the Philadelphia Teachers' Association on Thursday evening, February 18th, at the Penn Athletic Club. There were 2100 teachers present. The speakers, in addition to Dr. Haas and Dr. Rule were the city superintendent, Dr. Broome, and Dr. Joy Morgan, of Washington, editor of the N. E. A. Journal.

Prof. H. A. Andruss represented the Teachers College in the house of delegates at the State Education Association meeting which was held in Pittsburgh. He was elected president of the commercial section in the secondary education department.

Athletics

The basketball season ended on Saturday, March 5. The season opened with a victory over the Alumni on December 12. Then followed a game at Indiana on December 18, when the Bloomsburg team was beaten. Indiana, however, was later defeated on the Bloomsburg court. Oddly enough, Shippensburg and Lock Haven defeated Bloomsburg at Bloomsburg, but each team suffered defeat in the return games on their home floors. East Stroudsburg took both games played, but Mansfield divided victories. The complete schedule follows:

Home

December 12, Alumni	Won
January 22, East Stroudsburg	Lost
January 23, Shippensburg	Lost
January 29, Lock Haven	Lost
January 30, Indiana	Won
February 6, Millersville	Lost
February 13, Mansfield	Won

Away

December 18, Indiana	Lost
January 9, Shippensburg	Won
February 12, Lock Haven	Won
February 26, Mansfield	Lost
February 27, East Stroudsburg	Lost
March 5, Millersville	Lost

The team this year is to be congratulated for its showing. There remained from last year's State Championship team two of the regulars, to form a nucleus for this year's squad. These two boys, however, decided to turn professional, and this left Coach Booth with the difficult problem of developing an entirely new team to play a schedule that was no set-up. Those who have seen the team play say that the College has never had a team with better fighting spirit. Handicapped as the boys were by inexperience, they overcame it all with gameness, and have made a record worthy of congratulation.

Besides the regular Varsity schedule, the Junior Varsity played a six-game schedule. An intramural league of eight teams was also formed. One night each week was given over to this group of about sixty-five boys, four games being played each evening. At the close of the "round robin" tournament, four teams had tied for first place. Just now a play-off is being carried on among the upper four teams in the league, to determine first, second, and third place, and a similar scheme is being used to determine places in the lower division. Much interest has been manifested in this intramural program, as well as in a triple "round robin" tournament in volley ball, with four teams competing every Wednesday evening.

During the winter months, four evenings each week have been given over to basket ball for girls. There has been definite organization for playing through two separate schedules. The upper class group of ten teams played two afternoons each week, and the Freshman group of twelve teams played the other two afternoons devoted to this program. Girls playing on these teams earn points leading to definite numeral, letter, and chevron awards.

The eleventh annual invitation high school basketball tournament will be played March 5, March 11, and March 12. Fourteen schools have asked to enter, but only eight can be accommodated. It is planned to organize a Class A and Class B rating next year, and thus provide a larger and better balanced tournament.

E. H. Nelson.

Miss Jeanne Christy, a member of the national camp advisory staff of the Girl Scouts of America, was in Bloomsburg in January and gave two separate courses of five meetings each, one in the afternoon from four to six o'clock to College students interested in the work and another in the evening from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock in room L at Waller Hall to women of the town who are interested in the Girl Scouts.

The Philadelphia Alumni

The second annual banquet of the Philadelphia Alumni Association of Bloomsburg State Teachers College, will be held at Adams', 13th and Spring Garden Streets, Philadelphia, April 23rd, at 6:30 P. M. in the form of an informal dinner dance. Invitations will be sent out in the near future. Reservations for tickets should be made through the secretary, Jennie Yoder Foley, 8134 Hennig Street, Fox Chase, Philadelphia, Pa.

Included among those who are expected to attend will be members of the faculty, and other men and women of prominence in educational, professional, and industrial circles. We sincerely hope that Dr. Waller, Dr. Haas, and the professors who were with us last year, can come again this year.

At our banquet last May 9th, we had the largest representation of any initial gathering of any alumni group of the college. This year we hope to have an even larger attendance.

As at our banquet last year, each alumnus is requested to bring any pictures or mementoes of his or her school days to refresh their memories of the days "On Normal Hill."

Any Bloomsburg alumnus with their families or friends is welcome, but reservations should be made very soon.

Come and be boys and girls again with us just for "Auld Lang Syne."

Mrs. Florence Hess Cool, President.

Per J. Y. F.

The first monthly luncheon meeting of the Philadelphia Bloomsburg Alumni Association was held from 1:30 to 3:30 December 12, in the Paul Revere room of Gimbel's Restaurant with thirty-one present, twenty-eight of whom were alumni, the other three being either friends or relatives, and as these luncheons are given for the purpose of working up and keeping up Bloomsburg spirit, we want the Alumni to feel free to bring their relatives or friends with them. Considering the busy season, we were grateful to have so many present.

After the luncheon, our President Mrs. Norman G. Cool, requested each one present to become a committee of one to work up lists of their own classmates, and to try to interest as many as possible to come to the luncheons, which will be held the second Saturday of each month up to and including the March meeting at the same place. Almost every one present volunteered to become a committee of one, thus insuring decided success for the annual meeting to be held April 30th.

Several of our members suggested others, among classes not represented at the meeting who, they felt certain, would be glad to work on their class lists, and to these we are very grateful.

Two splendid examples of cooperation were shown first, by Miss Catherine P. Boyle, of Philadelphia, who sent a notice of the meeting to the News Letter, a publication of interest to Philadelphia teachers, and also had published a story of our annual banquet in May, in the same magazine. The second instance, was that of Miss Hill and Miss Reip, Hatboro teachers, who brought in two graduates, teachers from Nanticoke, who were spending the week end with them. These are the things which are so helpful and which will tend to make our infant organization grow from year to year to a strong association of which our Alma Mater may feel proud.

Several alumni who did not have time to stay for the luncheon, just dropped in to say "Hello" to their classmates and acquaintances and we want anyone to feel free to do the same if they cannot stay for the whole meeting. And most important of all, we again stressed the need of every member of the association not only to subscribe to the Alumni Quarterly themselves, but to urge their classmates and other alumni friends to do the same. Those of us who do subscribe find it very helpful in locating old classmates and in keeping in touch with the doings on "College Hill" as well as other interesting facts presented in this newsy publication.

We were delighted to greet the baby member of our organization, class of 1931, Miss Esther Yeager, niece of Professor Hartline, as well as her mother, Mrs. Mandilla Hartline Yeager, at this meeting.

The annual spring meeting will probably be held the same place as last year, Adam's, 13th and Spring Garden Streets, Philadelphia.

Our second Bloomsburg luncheon was held at Gimbels, January 9th, 1932, with our President, Mrs. Cool in the chair. After congratulating us on the fine attendance, considering the terrible state of the weather, our chairman appointed the following members as Hostesses for the next luncheon—Mrs. Nora Woodring Kenney, Mrs. Harriet Shuman Burr, Mrs. Edwina Weyland Brouse. Seven other members were appointed to get in touch with five or ten other Alumni who have not as yet attended these meetings, and to tell them of these informal luncheons which they can plan to attend, or to look us up if they happen to be visiting or shopping in Philadelphia at the time. These appointees are as follows—Mrs. Harriet Shuman Burr, Mrs. J. F. McDonnell, Mrs. Julia Sharpless Fegley, Mrs. Louella Burdick Sinquett, Miss Catherine A. Malloy, Miss Catherine Boyle and Dr. Klingaman.

Our President then asked if any one in our group has access to a mimeographing machine and could do some work for our Association. Prof. Klingaman volunteered to do all he could in that respect.

The need of having the Alumni Quarterly in the hands of every Alumnus was again stressed. It was also stated that Professors Jenkins and Fenstermaker would be very grateful to receive any news items of interest to the Alumni.

In speaking of the second annual banquet, it was decided to hold the affair April 23rd, at the same place as last year, Adam's, 13th and Spring Garden Streets. All things relative to expenditures are to be kept in moderation.

Mrs. Cool then asked for any other suggestions. None were made. A newspaper article telling of Dr. Haas' election as President of the Pennsylvania Education Association was then read by our chairman.

The minutes of the preceeding meeting were read and approved without any corrections, after which there was a brief intermission.

Dr. Klingaman, of Ursinus College, then gave us a short but interesting talk. He stated that the great difference between these Alumni gatherings and others which he attended, was that we eliminated any tendencies to influence the methods of teaching by Bloomsburg professors and that we did not interfere with the running of College affairs. Our organization, he emphasized, stands for every good purpose and is an encouragement to the teaching profession. Dr. Klingaman also affirmed that there were too many people in our Colleges who are not students, but who attend merely for the social life and prestige it affords them.

In closing, he remarked that we, as a body, are interested not only in the past of the College, but in its growth and well being also, as well as the present day affairs of our Alma Mater. We all enjoyed his sincere and earnest address and we appreciate his hearty cooperation in these luncheon meetings.

Mrs. Cool then closed the meeting by asking each one of us to bring in another Alumnus and to call up or write to others to remind them of our delightful gatherings. After a short time of renewing old ties, we adjourned to meet again February 13, at the same time and place.

Respectfully submitted,
Jennie Yoder Foley, Secretary.

Our third luncheon meeting, February 13th, was opened with our President, Mrs. Cool, in the chair. There were thirty-seven present, four guests, and thirty-three members.

At the roll call which followed, we noted members from the classes to 1888 to 1924 report "present." In computing the number of individual Alumni attending these three meetings we found it reached fifty-one; so that with fifty-one interested members cooperating we ought to have a splendid time at our annual banquet, April 23rd.

Mr. J. Howard Patterson, U. S. Commissioner, was then called upon. He presented the idea of getting up a Commencement Day Party for the annual foregathering of Alumni at the College on May 21st. He stated that we want to show the Faculty that "the Philadelphia Alumni are very much alive." He also suggested that those having cars should be willing to take those who hadn't any, and he offered to take several in his own car. The Commencement Day Party idea was very favorably received.

Mrs. J. F. McDonnell then advised us to have a common meeting place. Such place is to be decided upon at the next meeting, March 12th.

Mrs. Cool appointed the following committee to plan the Bloomsburg trip: Mr. J. Howard Patterson, Chairman; Mrs. J. F. McDonnell, Mrs. Harriet Shuman Burr, Mrs. Sabilla Shobert Campbell, Mr. Chester McAfee, Mrs. Jennie Yoder Foley.

Those who wish to take this trip are to give their names to any one on the Committee.

The Secretary's report of the last luncheon meeting was read and approved. Mrs. Cool then stated that those who desired to do so could pay their dues to the Secretary after the meeting and that the tickets for the banquet could also be purchased from the same person if any one so desired either today or whenever they were ready to do so.

Mention was then made of the trip to Washington at cherry blossom time, to be sponsored by the Garden Slubs of the Delaware County Federation of Women's Clubs of which Federation our fellow alumnus, Mrs. Annie Miller Melick is the Pres-

Our President, Mrs. Cool, then introduced to us Mrs. Nina Tague Frantz, class of '95, State President of the W. C. T. U. of New Jersey and also a member of the National Board, whom we were delighted and honored to greet as a fellow alumnus. We regret to record that Mrs. Annie Melick, President of the Delaware County Federation of Women's Clubs, and well and favorably known among clubwomen throughout Pennsylvania, and who was to have been our speaker on this occasion, could not be present because of the serious illness of her husband. But we were very fortunate to have Mrs. Frantz, a woman of the same high character as Mrs. Melick, to consent so graciously to give us an impromptu address in Mrs. Melick's stead. Though she came to the meeting, not expecting to be called upon to speak to us, Mrs. Frantz very ably and pleasantly filled Mrs. Melick's place.

Mrs. Frantz told how the preparation she had had at Bloomsburg influenced her whole after life through the example and teachings of Miss Elissa Purley, who founded "The Loyal Temperance Union" at the School. "That organization," she said, "had spun a thread which wove its way all through my life and influenced me to choose my life's work with the W. C. T. U." She told us of some of the disheartening things which one meets in such a work as well as of the many splendid results achieved. She also spoke of her work, not only among the adult population of the state, but among the young folks as well, teaching them stewardship and citizenship, so that they can help change some of the deplorable conditions in their towns. She stated here that she wanted them to remember that "Life is not a goblet to be drained but a measure to be filled."

In closing her interesting and instructive address she prophesied "In twenty-five years the Prohibition Question will be just as settled as is the Question of Slavery today. Let us meet in twenty-five years and talk it over again."

Mrs. Frantz is also an alumna, a member of our Philadelphia Association. After thanking Mrs. Frantz for her fine address, Mrs. Cool closed the meeting. We then adjourned until our next meeting, March 12th, at the same time and place. After the meeting was adjourned the Secretary received alumni dues.

Respectfully submitted,
Jennie Yoder Foley, Secretary.

Wyoming Seminary was the only school on the 1905 basketball schedule of the Bloomsburg State Normal School, that was not of college rating. This fact was disclosed recently when Prof. C. H. Albert, manager of the team, found one of the old schedules.

The team played twelve games that year, nine at home, with return games played only with Calvary, of Philadelphia, Wyoming and Susquehanna University.

Colleges who came to Bloomsburg that season were: Dickinson, Drexel Institute of Philadelphia, Swarthmore, Gettysburg, Lebanon Valley and State College.

Dr. A. K. Aldinger, coach of many successful Bloomsburg teams which competed with the best college clubs of the section, was coach of the team.

None of the schools on the schedule is now an athletic opponent of Bloomsburg. Most of the colleges have long since moved out of Bloomsburg's class.

Wyoming was the last to go, the Kingston institution, long arch rival of Bloomsburg, being off all athletic schedules for the first this year although football relations were severed after the 1929 contest. Bloomsburg now confines its athletic activities largely to Teachers Colleges, with no outstanding rival.

At the concluding session of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society in Pittsburgh, on January 22nd, Dr. Haas was elected one of the directors.

Lizzie R. Lessig (Mrs. B. F. Laudig) who lives at 845 Prescott Avenue, Scranton, Pa., writes the following account of her activities since graduation:

After leaving the Normal, the following September I began teaching in my home town, Shenandoah, teaching eleven years, five years in third grade primary, and six years in the grammar school. My school closed the sixth of June and I was married on the thirtieth of June to Benjamin F. Laudig, of Shenandoah. We have always been very happy, both of us interested in the better things of life.

We were blessed with two splendid sons. The oldest, James Jacob Laudig, is a graduate of Carnegie Institute of Technology in Chemical Engineering and has been, for the past four years, Chief Chemist and Engineer of Tests for the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company. He has two promising sons, and I am very proud of them.

The other son, John Benjamin Laudig, is a graduate of Lehigh University in Mechanical Engineering and is Research Engineer of the large power plant located at Exeter. It is owned by the American Gas and Electric Company.

My youngest sister died over two years ago, leaving a son, William Morrison, now about nineteen years old. I had taken a very keen interest in him before his mother's death, steering him through high school, and he is now attending the College of Pharmacy at Philadelphia. He is getting along nicely, and I have every reason to feel he will graduate in two years.

We have a very comfortable and happy home at 845 Prescott Ave., Scranton, Pa. The latch string is always out and I will always be very glad to see our friends and classmates of dear old Normal.

Charles G. Hendricks, Selinsgrove's oldest retail merchant, died at 4 P. M. January 20th, at his home on South Market Street. He suffered a stroke while he slept and sank gradually without a marked rally. The deceased would have been sixty-two years old in February.

Funeral services were held at his late home with interment in Union cemetery. Dr. Walter C. Beck, pastor of the First Lutheran Church officiated.

Mr. Hendricks was one of the best known men of his community. He was a leader in church and civic circles, a man of kind heart, one of strict application to business and ever ready to give of his time, talent and means to help other people and his community. Many of the hundreds of times he gave a helping hand to persons in need the incidents were cloaked in the secrecy of business and thus the details of those numerous circumstances may never be known.

The deceased man was born in Selinsgrove, February 6, 1871, the son of George R. and Matilda (Boyer) Hendricks. After completing his course of studies in the Selinsgrove high school, he was graduated from the Bloomsburg State Normal School, now the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, in 1892. He was a teacher in that institution for the next four years, and returned to Selinsgrove in 1896 when he became associated with his father in the hardware business, the store having been established in 1896 by the father. Meanwhile, the deceased man continued studies at Susquehanna University and was graduated with the class of 1899.

Mr. Hendricks married Miss Susan Alice Pawling, on June 11, 1908. Mrs. Hendricks survives, as do his sisters, Mrs. Chanuncey A. (Carrie) Keeley, and Mrs. Charles C. (Nettie) Walter.

Mr. Hendricks was a devout member of the First Lutheran Church, having served on the church council over a score years and having taught a Sunday School class therein for even a longer time.

George Baker is Superintendent of Schools in Morristown, N. J.

Dr. George Harris Webber, of Milledgeville, Georgia, head of the department of education and psychology at the Georgia State College for Women, has been signally honored in being named first vice president of the National Social Science Honor Society and also a member of the board of directors of the Social Science Publishing Company. He is also associate editor of the national publication "Social Science."

The distinction accorded Dr. Webber is regarded as one of unusual character. Dr. Webber not only gives unremitting thought and effort to his educational work with the institution, but he is known to be exceptionally active and interested in many important matters of civic and social character and gives adjacent communities the benefit of his knowledge and experience in many instances, addressing various organizations and otherwise assisting in many ways to improve conditions.

Helen Masteller Teple is now Mrs. William H. Hile, and lives at 341 West Delaware Ave., Toledo, Ohio.

Her oldest son is a Junior in Ohio Northern University, one son is a Senior in Scott High School, Toledo, and the youngest son is in Junior High School.

The following are excerpts from the Lackawanna County Teachers' Annual and Directory:

"The Resolutions Committee has the following report to offer to the School Directors of Lackawanna County in Annual Convention assembled at Scranton, October 30.

"Resolved, that we extend to Mr. Thomas Francis, County Superintendent of Schools, and his Assistant, Mr. R. M. North-up, our sincere appreciation of the efforts they have made in behalf of the school children and directors in Lackawanna Co.

"That we especially commend the County Superintendent for his leadership in developing a new course of study for the Lackawanna County Schools. We approve of this progressive step and we urge all teachers of the County to co-operate with the County Superintendent and his assistant, together with the Chairman of the various committees appointed to work on this course of study.

"We, the teachers of Lackawanna County, in Institute assembled, desire to express these resolutions:

"We heartily commend the Institute Program that has been provided for us by County Superintendent of Schools Thomas Francis.

"We congratulate the County Superintendent of Schools on the 1930 issue of the Lackawanna County Teachers' and Directors' Annual and Directory. The information contained therein has been carefully compiled and is of lasting value.

"Again this year the County Superintendent's Office has made arrangements to carry on, in Lackawanna County, a Reading Course for the pupils of the elementary grades. It is unnecessary in this day and age to argue the advantage of reading. In books we have the companionship of the past and a broader vision of the future.

"All pupils attending the Elementary Public School of Lackawanna County, under the supervision of the County Superintendent, may be included. Each pupil shall read ten books carefully. These books to be taken from a selected list.

"Pupils will be required to answer questions on the books read. This will be in the form of a questionnaire. The teacher shall certify to the County Superintendent that the pupils complied with the above requirements and regulations.

"When these rules have been complied with in a satisfactory manner, a certificate will be issued to the pupil stating that the holder has the honor of having completed the Reading Course of Lackawanna County."

"Mr. Thomas Francis, the present County Superintendent of Schools, has been a pioneer worker for P. T. A. both in the city and in the country. He is always willing to co-operate and assist in the work. Mr. Francis feels the need of educated leaders as all educators do. Parent-Teacher courses are being given as summer courses at Columbia and other universities."

"Addresses were made by Thomas Francis, County Superintendent of Schools at The Moosic Local Institute and at Clark's Summit."

"In 1926 the County Superintendent's office made a survey of all rural schools under the jurisdiction of the county office. The third objective announced in this survey was the feasibility and advisability of consolidation of these schools in the interest of economy and for better educational facilities for the children who attend them.

"As a result of various consolidations in the county, we now have but twenty-seven one-room school buildings. Some of these will probably never enter into consolidation because of their isolated location in the county."

"Vocational education in Agriculture and Home Economics in Lackawanna County has completed two years of work and will launch on the third year this Fall. This work has been established in seven centers in the county.

"The program of Vocational Education in Agriculture and Home Economics is proving its real worth in Benton Township for the application of the work learned in High School in real education. The community may well feel proud of its school and the progress made in its new provisions for the education of its children.

"There is a decided increase in the interest shown in the work in Vocational Education in this school. The Home Economics Department started this year with an enrollment of 23 girls. The work is compulsory to the students in the first two years and elective in the last two years of high school."

"There are in Lackawanna County, under the direction of the County Superintendent, 1 kindergarten, 51 elementary schools, 13 high schools. There are 10 consolidated schools and 27 one-teacher schools. There are 58 school houses in use in the county. Two hundred and eighty-four teachers are employed.

"In the county under the County Superintendent's direction there are 7,474 elementary pupils and 1,445 high school pupils with an average attendance of 7,694."

Darwin Maurer taught school for five years after graduation. He is now employed as a Railway Mail Clerk in the government service. He makes the trip between New York and Washington. He is married and lives at 5855 Hazel Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Philadelphia Association of the B. S. T. C. Alumni will hold its second Annual Banquet on April 23, 1932, at Adams, 13th and Spring Garden Sts., Philadelphia. Let us have as many of our "Naughty Eight" classmates present as possible.

Mrs. Willie M. Stein.

We quote the following from the "Daily News" of Tupelo, Mississippi, dated January 16, 1932:

"Charles R. Wiant, superintendent of the government fish hatchery in this city, has been transferred to Marion, Alabama, where he will be in charge of the new federal fish hatchery six miles from that city.

Six hundred acres of land have been purchased for the new project which, it is reported, will be the largest in the United States. Five brick buildings will be constructed for homes of employees and administration purposes and the ponds will cover about 500 acres.

Mr. Wiant leaves Tupelo about February 1. He will retain supervision of the local hatchery, which will bring him back to Tupelo at least once a month. He has served as superintendent here since 1916 and has won the confidence and esteem of hundreds in this section who regret the departure of himself and his family."

Announcement was made on February 24th, by Charles K. McDonald, of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for congressman in the far-flung 15th district.

Mr. McDonald, one of Bloomsburg's well known business men, said he expected to devote his time from now until the election in April to a canvass of the district.

His candidacy has the backing of the Democratic organization of the eight counties, and was made in accordance with a request made at a caucus in Tunkhannock that a Columbia county candidate be brought into the field.

A Bloomsburg man who is rapidly making a name for himself as an author and lecturer is John E. Bakeless, son of Prof. and Mrs. O. H. Bakeless.

A one-time reporter on The Morning Press, he has written extensively for the Outlook, and has served as editor of The Forum and The Living Age. One of his most noted articles was a series which followed a trip into the Balkans to interview the uncrowned king of Macedonia—a ruler without a definite kingdom, but with a strong following.

Mr. Bakeless also is the author of several books and has contributed articles to a number of magazines.

One of Mr. Bakeless' most widely publicized accomplishments was his journey into Macedonia to interview Ivan Mihailoff, leader of the "Imro" a revolutionary organization there and the uncrowned king without a kingdom.

Mr. Bakeless' journey was not without dangers, and the subsequent articles he wrote were widely followed through The Outlook.

A Valentine season wedding ceremony was performed at St. John's Lutheran parsonage at Berwick, on Saturday afternoon, February 13th, at four o'clock, when Miss Bessie M. Beaver, of Numidia, became the bride of Henry L. Werkheiser, also of Numidia.

Both bride and groom are graduates of the Locust Township High School, the groom graduating in the class of 1919. The bride is at present a teacher in the Locust Township schools. The groom is at present engaged in the butcher business at Numidia.

In a pretty wedding solemnized at the rectory of St. Columba's Church by Rev. Fr. H. B. Gies, at nine o'clock, December 28th, Miss Harriet Margaret Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Williams, of Bloomsburg, became the bride of Edwin Stanley Dixon, son of Mrs. Lillian R. Dixon, of Downing-town, a member of the State Police, and well known in Bloomsburg, where he was stationed for some time.

The couple was attended by Miss Mary Penman, of Wilkes-Barre, a first cousin of the bride, and William V. Murphy, a friend of the groom and also a member of Troop B. of the State Police.

Mrs. Dixon is a graduate of the Bloomsburg High school and Bloomsburg State Teachers College and for several years has been the successful teacher of art and music in the town schools. Mr. Dixon is a graduate of Downingtown high school and for some years has been a member of Troop B. of the State Police with headquarters at Wyoming, Pa. He was for some time a member of the detail stationed in Bloomsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davenport, of Waterton, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Frances, to H. Max Pennington, of Bloomsburg.

Miss Davenport is well known in Bloomsburg, being a graduate of the Teachers College, and for several years she has been teaching at Wyoming.

Mr. Pennington is one of Bloomsburg's best known young business men and is active in fraternal circles.

Laura Dieterick is teaching in Chester, Pa.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Mercea Kreigh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kreigh, of Bloomsburg, and Glen Benner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Benner of McAllisterville.

Miss Kreigh has been teaching at McAllisterville, and Mr. Benner is employed by the state highway department.

Margaret Hartman is a teacher in the schools at Lewis-town, Pa.

Edith Sitler is a teacher in the schools at Alden, Pa.

Miss Eleanor Sands, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sands, of Benton, a teacher in the Bloomfield, N. J. schools, recently was appointed critic teacher by W. V. Singer, director of education and student teaching of the New Jersey State Normal School at Newark, N. J. Miss Sands is a graduate of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, and was the Ivy Day speaker of her class.

Mildred Herr is teaching in the schools at Reading, Pa.

Marjorie Vanderslice is teaching in Lewisburg, Pa.

Miss Margaret Umbewust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Umbewust, of Benton, a graduate of the Benton High School and the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, and for the past two years a teacher in the Waller and Divide schools, became the bride of W. S. Soroka, of Haverhill, Mass., in a quiet ceremony that was performed September 19, 1931, at Plaistow, N. H.

Mr. Soroka, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Soroka, of Hanover, Mass., is a graduate of Boston College Prep. School, class of 1923. He received his A. B. at Boston College in 1927 and his LLD at Harvard Law School in 1930. He is a member of the Massachusetts Bar with law offices at 6 Legion Parkway, associated with L. F. Callahan. He also has charge of the claim division of The Travelers Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., with branch office at Haverhill, Mass.

At present the young couple are making their home at 56 Commonwealth Ave., Haverhill, Mass.

On February 3rd, Mark Ennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ennis, Wexford, Ireland, and Miss Lucy Keeler, daughter of

Mr. and Mrs. Malan A. Keeler, of Bloomsburg, were united in marriage at Greenwich, Conn. The bride is a graduate of Benton Vocational High School and the Bloomsburg State Teachers College. The groom is employed as an operator of the White Plains Subway station at the West Chester Lighting Company. They are at home at 25 Hillside Avenue, White Plains, N. Y.

At the Orangeville Methodist parsonage, Saturday afternoon, January 16, Miss Helen Bangs, of Rohrsburg, became the bride of Simon L. Richie, son of Mrs. Eva Richie, of Shamokin. The ring ceremony of the Methodist church was used by Rev. G. L. Bennett, pastor of the church.

Miss Bangs has been the teacher of the Center school in Greenwood township.

Mr. Richie is a graduate of the Chicago Technical College in the class of 1927, and is a bridge engineer employed by the state highway department. At the present time he is working on a bridge job in Susquehanna county.

For the present the couple will make their home with the bride's parents.

Mildred Manbeck is teaching in the schools at Watson-town, Pa.

Josephine Holuba is teaching in the schools at Tennack, N. J.

Isabel Miller is a student at New York University.

Earl Miller is teaching near Stroudsburg, Pa.

1931

Arthur C. McKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McKenzie, of Bloomsburg, and Miss Annie T. Morgan, daughter of Mrs. Annie Morgan, of Green Street, Nanticoke, classmates at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College where they graduated last

May, were quietly united in marriage at six o'clock Saturday evening, January 2nd, by Rev. Samuel A. Harker, at the Presbyterian manse. They were unattended and the ring ceremony was used.

Following the ceremony they left for Norristown, where the groom is employed as mathematics teacher in a Junior High School on Powell Street.

The groom is a graduate of the Bloomsburg High School and was the Ivy Day orator of his college class last June. He was a member of the varsity football team at the college. Both enjoy a wide circle of friends.

Miss M. Irene Rhinard, of Fishingcreek, and Lewis L. Creveling, of Hughesville, were united in marriage by Rev. C. H. Kichline at the Orangeville Reformed parsonage on February 26th.

Mr. Creveling is teacher of science at Hughesville High School and the bride is a teacher of the Bendertown school.

Both the bride and groom are graduates of the Benton High School.

Mr. Creveling both at the Benton High School and at the college was prominent in athletics and was one of the best baseball pitchers that ever played at either institution.

Helen B. Gibbons (Mrs. Robert C. Edson) lives at 97 Burchard Ave. East Orange N. J.

COMMENCEMENT

"In these days when old values are being destroyed almost over night, the constructive processes of education are needed and should be made effective as never before in the history of civilization," Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of the Department of Public Instruction, told one hundred ninety-one graduates at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College's sixty-third annual Commencement in May.

"The Depression and the School of Tomorrow" was the subject of a timely address by Dr. Rule who was speaking for the first time at a Pennsylvania State Teachers College commencement.

The College auditorium was well filled for the exercises, which opened at ten o'clock with the processional, and were featured by the presentation of fifty-two degrees of bachelor of science in education, forty-five to students in the field of secondary education and seven to students in the elementary field, and the presentation of diplomas to others for completion of the two year normal school course.

Dr. Francis B. Haas, who presented the degrees and read the list of those who had qualified for certificates as the lists were presented to him by Dean of Instruction William B. Sutliff, gave his parting message to the graduates near the conclusion of the exercises.

The president of the institution remarked that if the class would put its thoughts into the language of the street it would be "Where do we go from here?"

There are two journeys that can be made at the same time. Regarding one of those journeys he said that Bloomsburg in addition to saying good-bye added "Come, see us again." In speaking of the second journey, Dr. Haas said that the constitution of the State sets forth that the Legislature shall provide and maintain a thorough and efficient system of public schools whereby all children of the Commonwealth above six years of age may be educated. One of the men instrumental in writing that into the constitution resided in the home now used as a residence of the College president, he added. Dr. Haas referred to the late Senator Buckalew.

The ratio of unemployed to employed has increased in every business, trade and vocation. It seems a fallacy to direct some one to go into work which he does not care to do, for at present there is a shortage of work of all kinds. If the youth of today do not follow that which they desire to do, the decade will produce a generation without training in anything.

Dr. Haas' advice was that if any one wanted to be a teacher now is the time to train, for never have the advantages been better. He regarded the current year as a difficult one, but declared that if they had faith they need have no fear.

"This class in leaving Bloomsburg takes with it the good traditions of the institution and the fine training it provides. We wish you well and invite you to come back with your troubles," the president said in conclusion.

Preceded by the participants in the program, trustees and members of the faculty, who had places on the platform, the class, attired in black caps and gowns, marched into the auditorium as Alexander's orchestra played the processional, and occupied a reserved section in the front of the auditorium. Candidates for degrees wore blue tassels on their caps, the others black ones. Trustees attending the exercises were: A. Z. Schoch, Paul F. Wirt, Joseph L. Townsend and Harry S. Barton.

Dr. David J. Waller, Jr., President Emeritus of the College, gave the invocation. Dr. Haas in introducing Dr. Rule remarked that public education is entering in Pennsylvania and the Nation a difficult time. It is going through the process of harmonizing income with expenditure, as is other business, and he said he was happy that Dr. Rule was in the position he is in Pennsylvania. A splendid address followed.

Two very beautiful violin solos by Karl Getz, a student of the institution, accompanied by Mrs. John Ketner Miller, head of the College School of Music, were thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Getz played the meditation from "Thais," by Massenet, and the "Minute Waltz," by Chopin.

Dr. Haas conferred the degrees and presented the certificates and the program closed with the singing of the Alma Mater by the assembly and the recessional of the class, trustees and faculty.

SENIOR BANQUET

On the eve of the Commencement programs shared with relatives and friends, members of the graduating class of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College assembled Thursday evening, May 26 in the College dining hall for their banquet, one of the events of the Commencement season which in later years will become one of the most cherished memories of College life.

Guests of the evening were members of the College faculty with whom they have been in close contact during their undergraduate days and the program was a truly delightful one.

Saul Gutter, of Plymouth, president of the graduating class, happily presided and the tables were attractively decorated with lavender and pink sweet peas. A very delicious dinner was served. Dean of instruction, W. B. Sutliff, gave the invocation.

During the program which followed Miss Sara Zimmerman, of Berwick, secretary of the class, gave a toast to her classmates. The toast was cleverly presented as "minutes."

John Hall, of Pittston, editor of the Obiter, the College year book, responded to the call of the toastmaster as did Prof. E. H. Nelson, the faculty advisor and Dr. Francis B. Haas, president of the College. Miss Marjory Stackhouse delighted with a reading.

Class awards were presented by Mr. Gutter to Miss Zimmerman, the secretary; John Adamson, Mahanoy City, the treasurer, and James Johns, of Scranton, vice-president.

Group singing during the banquet was led by Miss Betty Jones, of Plymouth. The program closed with the singing of the Alma Mater.

Invited guests of the class included Dr. and Mrs. Francis B. Haas, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Earl N. Rhodes, Dean and Mrs. W. B. Sutliff, Miss Marjory Keith Stackhouse, Miss Alice Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Reams, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Koch.

IVY DAY

Held indoors for the first time in years when such a plan was not necessitated by the weather, the College Ivy Day exercises attracted an audience of hundreds in the College auditorium at six o'clock.

Usually held in the grove, plans were made for the exercises this year in the auditorium, where the usual program was carried out.

Three of the May Day dances were presented in costume, to the delight of the audience, and at the conclusion of the exercises the class marched to Science Hall, where the ivy was planted and the spade turned over to Tom Beagle, president of the Junior class.

The program opened with the color song, words and music of which were composed by Dr. Francis B. Haas and Prof. Howard Fenstermaker. The address of Saul Gutter, the class president, was read by James Johns.

There followed the class song, written by Gerald Hartman and Ezra Harris, and the Ivy Day oration then was presented by Henry Warman.

Three of the dances of the May Day program then were presented. "Ruffy Tufty," in charge of Jemima Eltringham; "Kull Dansen," in charge of Congetta Contini, and "Virginia Reel," in charge of Irene Draina.

With the singing of the Alma Mater the program in the auditorium closed and the capped and gowned class began to march to Science Hall.

The class song follows:—

We met—as echoes merge from distant hilltops,
Repeat one pulse, break mute in one long rhyme.
Our nascent souls regaled on youthful tear drops,
Grew warm beneath the breast of a new found clime.
We know that youth was mother our dream:

Nor tinselled pomp nor suckled sophistry
Could mar one moment of our rapt esteem.
We stood—brief hour! at joy's nativity.
We part—as shadows waver in a ravelled night,
Enfold the moon, and then are seen no more;
As wreckage from a sail in storm-tossed plight.
Drifts tracklessly to gain the farthest shore.
But men will never know to what glad ends
Our kinships lifted us, ephemeral friends.

Mr. Warman's Ivy Day oration was as follows:—

Mr. President, Members of the Faculty, Parents and Friends:

We come together in the dusk of this day to perform a symbolic act. The actual planting of this ivy is but an empty gesture. The stately traditions, the fond and loving memories, the tender associations, and the deep regrets embodied in this planting are the determinants that make this ceremony a solemn and meaningful one.

I am more than grateful to the Class of 1932 for affording me this opportunity to express humbly the inner thoughts that surge through our hearts.

Today when we plant this ivy, and hope to watch it endure through the years, growing ever more tall, ever more mature, and ever more self-reliant, do we realize that our friends, teachers and parents have anxiously watched us through the years also?

Their greatest hopes, their best wishes, their hardest work and their fervent prayers have been that we, too, may grow in wisdom and in culture, grow mature in thought and deed, and grow self-reliant in this ever-changing world.

For whatever heart-rendering sacrifices have been made, whatever keen joys have been realized, whatever sweet victories have been won, to you, our loyal friends and teachers—to you, our devoted parents, do we ascribe your just due.

The planting of the ivy belongs to you as well as to us. You have made it possible.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICES

The baccalaureate services of the College were held in Carver Hall Sunday afternoon, May 22nd. The sermon was delivered by the Reverend Robert L. Porter, pastor of the Church of Christ of Bloomsburg.

The members of the class at this sixty-third commencement of the institution marched into the auditorium singing the traditional college processional hymn "Ancient of Days." They were followed by participants in the services, trustees, and faculty members. The class occupied a reserved section in the front of the auditorium. The others were seated on the platform. The trustees attending were A. Z. Schoch, Joseph L. Townsend and Harry S. Barton.

Rev. Porter gave the invocation and the audience sang the hymn "Awake My Soul," by Handel. President Haas read the scripture lesson, which consisted of passages from Proverbs and St. Matthew. The sermon followed, with Mr. Porter speaking on "Values," and taking for his text, Proverbs 4:7: "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; yet with all thy getting, get understanding."

At the conclusion of the sermon an octette from the Men's Glee Club added an impressive touch with a fine rendition of "Service" by Charles Wakefield Cadman. The service closed with the benediction by Rev. Porter and the recessional of the class.

About two hundred students and alumni enjoyed the "Depression Dance" held in the College gymnasium by the Men's Glee Club Saturday evening, April 23rd. In accordance with the spirit of the occasion, the members of the Club used remnants of other decorative schemes, and placed them around the gymnasium in a haphazard manner.

CLASS NIGHT

The presentation of a check for $250 as a memorial from the class of 1923, during Class Night exercises in the College Auditorium, was spoken of as a fitting climax to a perfect day by Dr. Francis B. Haas, who accepted the gift on behalf of the College.

The presentation of the memorial gift was made by John Adamson, the class treasurer, and came near the end of an hour and a half program of the lighter things of College life, with about forty Seniors participating. Two faculty members, Prof. John C. Koch, Dean of men and Prof. E. H. Nelson, head of the Department of Health Education, were called from the audience to the stage to add a touch of realism to a North Hall Scene.

Members of the class, attired in caps and gowns, attended the exercises in a body, occupying a reserved section near the front of the auditorium. At the opening of the program, James Johns, Vice-President of the class, outlined the program which was to follow.

The opening scene, laid in the girls' dormitory, was followed by two classroom scenes, with John Hall in the role of Prof. S. L. Wilson, and James Johns taking the part of Prof. John Fisher.

Henry Warman provided a feature of the evening by singing two baritone solos. Gerald Hartman was at the piano.

Other scenes of interest were a rehearsal of the Senior play, a Girls' Glee Club rehearsal, and a scene showing social activities in North Hall. The center of attraction in the North Hall scene was a ping-pong table, a game which has held the interest of the North Hall men during the past winter. Selections by a male quartette were a part of this scene, which was much enjoyed by the audience.

The Glee Club gave a program in the Plymouth High School Wednesday morning, May 4th.

ALUMNI DAY

Superlatives are dangerous, but it seems necessary to say that the Alumni Day of 1932 was the greatest in the history of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College. With no rain cloud to keep anybody home over one thousand Alumni returned to Bloomsburg and entered whole-heartedly into a program that had been arranged through the cooperation of the College authorities, students and Alumni officers. Those who made the pilgrimage back to the scenes of many happy years, were on hand early and more than six hundred exclusive of the graduating class, were on hand at the general session of the Alumni at eleven o'clock. Those whose classes were in reunion arrived much earlier, some of the classes having fine representations at nine o'clock.

A splendid meeting in the auditorium at which graduates heard of progress being made on all projects, and at which they pledged their support, was followed by a luncheon in the dining room, and a record number of nine hundred forty were served. L. H. Dennis, Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction, was the speaker.

Following the dinner the College team won from an Alumni nine, on which seven former Maroon and Gold captains played, by a ninth inning rally, 6 to 5, which a graduate tennis team defeated a College tennis team, 6 to 2.

ALUMNI MEETING

More than 600 graduates, exclusive of the members of this year's class, were present Saturday morning in the College auditorium for the general meeting of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College Alumni Association, one of the finest the organization has ever held.

Announcement was made during the meeting by Prof. O. H. Bakeless, in charge of the Alumni Memorial and Trophy Room, that the original indebtedness for furnishings of $3,000 had been reduced to less than $1,000. Both Mr. Bakeless and R. Bruce Albert, alumni president and the presiding officer, expressed the hope that subscriptions of reunion classes during the day would wipe out the debt and allow the purchase of additional furnishings needed to complete the project, now entering its fourth year.

Members of the graduating class, following the fine custom inaugurated by the class of 1931, marched into the meeting attired in caps and gowns and John C. Adamson, of Mahanoy City, class treasurer, presented a check of $192 for the class dues in the association. This is the third consecutive year that a graduating class has joined the association 100 per cent.

Dr. Francis B. Haas, president of the institution, extended a royal welcome to the alumni on behalf of the trustees, faculty and undergraduate body. Officers of the organization were re-elected.

The main floor of the auditorium was practically filled and some were in the balcony when the meeting opened at 11:00 o'clock. Seated on the platform were Dr. D. J. Waller, Jr., president emeritus; Prof. F. H. Jenkins, George E. Elwell, former trustee and alumni president, and Dr. Haas. The 1932 class was admitted to membership. Upon entering the auditorium they massed in the front, Mr. Adamson presented the check for dues, and the class and alumni, under the direction of Miss Harriet M. Moore, sang the Alma Mater. The graduating class left immediately for the dining hall so that there would be more room for alumni for the luncheon.

The report of F. H. Jenkins, association treasurer, showed receipts of $1,596.23 and a balance of $886.76. Howard F. Fenstermaker, editor of the Alumni Quarterly since its revival in 1926, urged all to cooperate in sending in news of graduates and thanked those who have contributed.

D. D. Wright, treasurer of the Worthy Student Fund, an Alumni project, reported a total of $3206.38 with $2,591.50 now out in loans.

Mr. Jenkins, as treasurer, presented to Mr. Bakeless, as treasurer of the College Alumni Room Fund, a check for $400. Mr. Bakeless in his response told of the work and of the hope that the present indebtedness of $900 would be wiped out during the day. He told of additional furnishings needed.

Mr. Albert thanked all of the men for their loyal and efficient service and remarked that never has the association lost any money through loans to worthy students of the institution.

Officers of the association were re-elected on recommendation of the nominating committee, W. B. Sutliff, the chairman, making the report. The officers are: President, R. B. Albert, 1906; Vice-Presidents, Dr. D. J. Waller, Jr., 1867; Prof. O. H. Bakeless, 1879; Secretary, Edward F. Schuyler, 1924; Treasurer, F. H. Jenkins, 1876; Executive Committee—Fred W. Diehl, 1909, chairman, of Danville; Mrs. C. W. Funston, 1885; Maurice E. Houck, 1910, of Berwick; Daniel J. Mahoney, 1909, Wilkes-Barre; Miss Harriet Carpenter, 1896, and Dennis D. Wright, 1911.

Dr. D. J. Waller was given a standing ovation when introduced. He spoke of the fact that both George E. Elwell and himself, the only living members of the Class of 1867, were present and were the oldest class in reunion.

Introduced by Mr. Albert as a man who made himself dear to the alumni through his interest and cooperation and under whose administration it has been a pleasure for graduates to return to Bloomsburg, Dr. Haas spoke briefly.

He extended a hearty welcome. It is true, he pointed out, that there have been many improvements to the physical plant of the College in the past few years and others will be made. However, a fine physical plant and a beautiful campus, while desired, do not make an institution. An institution is made by its trustees, faculty, students and graduates. By and large, the College president said, the final test of an educational institution focuses on its graduates.

Dr. Henry Bierman, of Bloomsburg, reported for the class of 1882 which had 5 of its 36 members back for the fiftieth year reunion. Half of its number have passed away. One member, Mrs. C. M. Sanders, who came from Delta, Colo., to attend the reunion, was introduced. Several members have made contributions to the Memorial Room Fund and additional contributions will be made, Dr. Bierman said.

Miss Laura White, of the class of 1887, was the only member of her class at the meeting, and responded. Another member, W. C. Johnston, of Bloomsburg, had been at the College earlier in the morning.

There were 15 members back for the class of 1892, John A. Kearns, of Fall River, Mass., reported. The class had 92 members and 21 have passed away. Of the men in the class three became lawyers, three physicians and one a dentist.

O. Z. Low, of Orangeville, reported 25 back for the class of 1897. Thirty dollars had been received for the Alumni Room up to that time and more was expected.

Miss Marie Dean, of Wilkes-Barre, reported 25 of a class of 119 back for the thirtieth year reunion. A contribution to the fund was promised.

William V. Moyer, Bloomsburg's President of Council, reported for the class of 1907. There were 25 members back and he promised substantial support by the class for the fund. He drew a laugh when the remark that he had known only a couple of minutes before that he was to report for the class and that back in 1907 he found out only about five minutes before the exercises that he was to graduate.

Mr. Savage of the class of 1912 reported 38 of 192 members back for the twentieth year reunion and $100 pledged to the fund.

J. Stewart Wiant, of Bloomfield, N. J., reported 50 of the 180 members of the class of 1917 back and the decision of the class to turn over a balance of $110 to the fund.

Edward Yost, of Ringtown, said 1922 had raised $25 for the fund and expected more. Mr. Yost said five years ago he had been the only man among more than 50 back for the reunion. Saturday he said he was the only man of the class back along with 69 girls.

Mrs. Davenport reported 75 of the 300 members of the class of 1927 were present. She reported her class as being the largest ever to graduate and that among its members was the first person to ever receive a degree from the institution.

Miss Norma Knoll reported for the "baby" class in reunion, 1930, which had 75 members back.

Mr. Albert urged classes who had not acted on contributions to the fund to make them before the day was over. He spoke on the fact that the alumni had lost a fine feature in not having many county associations any more. He spoke of the splendid Philadelphia organization and Mrs. Florence Cool, of that city, reported of the work there. The association has held two banquets with splendid interest and attendance. During the winter a luncheon club meets once a month.

J. Howard Patterson, a United States commissioner, in charge of the motorcade from Philadelphia, said it was planned to make an annual pilgrimage to Bloomsburg and said he hoped to have twice as many back next year.

E. H. Nelson, alumni marshal, had charge of the procession of classes into the dining hall for the luncheon which followed, the arrangement being the best in years.

ALUMNI DINNER

"The glories of the past are surpassed only by the present and the glories of the future and if you uphold Dr. Haas and the College staff you need have no fears of the future," almost 1000 Bloomsburg Alumni, the greatest number ever assembled for the annual luncheon, were told by Lindley H. Dennis, a graduate and now Deputy Superintendent in the State Department of Public Instruction.

There were 940 served at the luncheon, one of the features of an outstanding Alumni Day. The large dining room was unable to accommodate the crowd, and additional tables had to be hastily erected in the lobby. This was done in a very short time.

R. Bruce Albert, association president, presided at the luncheon with the College orchestra, under the direction of Howard F. Fenstemaker, furnishing a program of music as the alumni assembled and during the serving of the luncheon. The floral decorations were the most beautiful ever effected for the occasion, beautiful bouquets of tulips adorning each table. Miss Harriet M. Moore capably led in group singing.

John McGuffy, one of the College's athletic heroes of a number of years ago, was introduced.

In opening his address Mr. Dennis said that one of the finest things that brings graduates back is the opportunity such an occasion affords to meet former teachers whose work has touched the lives of many more deeply than they will ever know. He paid tribute to faculty members of the past and the present and spoke of the exceptionally fine spirit now existing between the College and its graduates, a condition brought about through the leadership of President Haas, of the College, and President Albert, of the Association.

He said it was a lot of satisfaction to see the progress that is being made and to know that the institution is as much needed now as in the past and that it is serving as well now as it has ever served.

He spoke of the founding of the school as an academy, of it later being a normal school and then a teachers college. Mr. Dennis referred to the fact that for 31 years of the past 38 the College has been guided by two former State Superintendents, Dr. Waller and Dr. Haas. He said that means that the institution is in close contact with the State.

There are other developments ahead, and one would be a fool to prophesy what they are. He spoke of the present conditions but said he had no fears for Bloomsburg and declared that the development going on in the local institution will keep it in the forefront of the institutions of the State.

He said that some adjustments must be made, but that the public is finding that it is not safe to jeopardize the educational program in an effort to effect economy. He spoke of the fact that Bloomsburg is one of but two such institutions in the five counties it serves and that it draws most of its students from two counties in which there is no other such institution of higher learning.

At the conclusion of his address former faculty members and their wives were presented and warmly received. They were Dr. Waller, Prof. and Mrs. F. H. Jenkins, Mrs. J. G. Cope, Prof. and Mrs. O. H. Bakeless and Prof. and Mrs. Charles H. Albert.

Six schools were entered in the second annual High School Play Tournament, held under the auspices of the Alpha Psi Omega Fraternity, Saturday afternoon and evening, February 27th. The schools represented were Lake Township, North Scranton Junior High, Hughestown, Dimock, Scott Township and Sunbury. The tournament was won by the cast of North Scranton Junior High School under the direction of Raymond T. Hodges, of the class of 1930.

T. W. Booth, rounding out his sixth year as athletic coach at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, has made a review of the athletic teams of the institution.

In that time the football team has gained twenty-four victories, lost twenty-three games and played four ties. Basketball has compiled the finest percentage with sixty-seven victories and twenty-seven defeats. Baseball has just broken even with eighteen triumphs against the same number of set-backs.

During that time the Maroon and Gold has captured two basketball championships in the State Teachers College ranks, in 1928 and 1931, and in baseball the State title came in 1927.

Seven games, four of them to be played in Bloomsburg, are listed thus far for the football season of 1932 at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College. There is a possibility that an eighth game will be placed on the schedule.

Oswego, N. Y., Teachers College, is a newcomer on the Bloomsburg schedule and will play here November 19th, the closing game of the season.

The other six teams, California, Millersville, Mansfield, Lock Haven, Shippensburg and East Stroudsburg, have been on the Maroon and Gold gridiron schedule for several seasons and most of those institutions have for many years had places on the schedule.

Kutztown, with whom the opening game has been played for the past several years, is not on the schedule this year. Kutztown was desirous of a later date which Bloomsburg was unable to provide this year, thus causing a temporary severing of gridiron relations.

As the schedule stands at present, California is tentatively listed to be played in Western Pennsylvania on October 1st. This game may be moved up to the 15th of that month. If this is done, the schedule may open a week later than is now planned or another opening season attraction may be secured. If the game remains where it is now, and no opponent is scheduled for the 15th, the squad that day may be taken to a college game in this section.

The Home Coming game has not been designated but will either be Saturday, November 5th, when Shippensburg is here or two weeks later in the closing game with Oswego. With Shippensburg a rival of many years, that game will probably be the Home Coming Day sports attraction. Leo Yozviak, Hanover township, is the captain-elect of the team.

During the spring months there has been considerable activities in the three spring sports—baseball, tennis and track. The results of the baseball season are as follows:

April 16—Bloomsburg, 12; Shippensburg, 5.

April 20—Bloomsburg, 1; Shippensburg, 9.

April 23—Hanover, 5; Bloomsburg, 6.

April 28—Bloomsburg, 12; Mansfield, 3.

May 4—Bloomsburg, 14; Mansfield, 5.

May 7—Bloomsburg, 3; East Stroudsburg, 5.

May 13—Bloomsburg, 2; East Stroudsburg, 14.

May 21—Bloomsburg, 6; Alumni, 5.

The College tennis team had the following schedule:

April 16—Shippensburg at Bloomsburg.

- April 20—Shippensburg at Shippensburg.
April 22—Bucknell University at Bloomsburg.
April 23—St. Thomas College at Scranton.
April 29—St. Thomas College at Bloomsburg.
April 30—Mansfield at Mansfield.
May 4—Mansfield at Bloomsburg.
May 7—East Stroudsburg at Bloomsburg.
May 14—East Stroudsburg at East Stroudsburg.
May 18—Bucknell University at Lewisburg.

The College track team participated in two meets. The first, a dual meet with Lock Haven, although lost by Bloomsburg showed that the College team was stronger than it has been for many years. Lock Haven won the meet by gaining a total of $76\frac{1}{2}$ points as against $58\frac{1}{2}$ points won by Bloomsburg. The events in which Bloomsburg took place were: 100 yard dash, won by Thomas; the 220 yard dash, won by Thomas; the half-mile and mile, won by Rinker; the discus shot put and javelin, won by Rudowski.

The second meet was the annual track and field meet of the eastern division of State Teachers Colleges held at West Chester Saturday, May 14th. Bloomsburg sent twelve men to this meet but only one man succeeded in gaining any points for Bloomsburg. Rudowski, Bloomsburg's only point winner, won the shot put and the javelin throw. Rudowski threw the sixteen pound shot thirty-nine feet, eleven and three-fourth inches, thereby breaking the record for State Teachers Colleges. West Chester was the winner of the meet while Bloomsburg placed seventh.

Russell McHenry, for many years an employee of the College, died Wednesday, March 9th, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William H. Housel, of Bloomsburg. Mr. McHenry retired from active service six weeks before his death. He would have been ninety-three years of age had he lived until his birthday in April. Death was due to paralysis.

ATHLETIC BANQUET

One of the outstanding social events of the year was the second annual Athletic Banquet, held in the College dining room Saturday evening, May 7. The banquet was begun as an annual college event last year, and was instituted for the purpose of giving public recognition to both men and women students who have been active in athletics during the year.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. Henry Crane, Pastor of the Elm Park Methodist Episcopal Church of Scranton. His subject was "Growth."

R. Bruce Albert, President of the Alumni Association, presided as toastmaster. During the evening, a program of music was given by the Maroon and Gold Orchestra. Previous to the presentation of athletic awards, Dr. Haas introduced the guests, and Dr. D. J. Waller, Jr., President Emeritus of the College, was given a standing ovation when presented as the man "who represents the genius of Bloomsburg and its finest traditions."

Dr. Haas presented to eleven members of the Senior Class, who were also members of varsity teams, gold keys and certificates in recognition of their athletic achievements during their four years in college. The following men were so honored: Robert A. Brown, tennis 1930, 1931, 1932, Captain 1932; John R. Carr, basketball 1932; John A. Hall, football 1929, 1930, 1931; Clarence L. Hunsicker basketball manager 1932; Anthony Kanjorski, football 1930, 1931, wrestling 1930; Harold M. Morgan, football 1930, baseball 1931, 1932; Frank J. Perch, football 1931; George S. Rinker, track 1929, 1931, 1932; Nicholas Rudowski, football 1929, 1930, 1931, basketball 1930, 1931, 1932, captain 1932, baseball 1930, 1931, 1932, captain 1932, track 1930, 1931, 1932; Joseph A. Slominski, baseball 1931, 1932; Daniel Thomas, track 1929, 1930, 1932, captain 1930, football 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931; Henry

MAY DAY

A spectacle of beauty was presented to an audience of over 1000 at the annual May Day Program presented on Mt. Olympus Field, Monday, May 16th.

The theme of the program was in keeping with the bicentennial of Washington's birth. The idea around which the program was built was a garden party given by Patsy, daughter of the first President and his wife. Dances given by groups representing each of the thirteen colonies, and presented in costume, were a feature that took many days of effort, but will be remembered long by the large crowd of enthusiastic spectators.

From the opening by the grand march of the several hundred participants and the entrance of the May Queen, Miss Margaret J. Francis, of Edwardsville, and her attendants, until an hour and one-half later when the program reached its climax by the winding of fifteen gaily colored may-poles, there was presented a beautiful picture which has seldom been equaled. A new feature of the program was the presence of the College Band which played the music for most of the dances. The band was under the direction of R. R. Llewellyn.

WITH THE

Philadelphia Alumni

The second annual banquet of the Philadelphia Alumni Association of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, held on April 23rd, brought forth another representative Bloomsburg gathering—joyous, enthusiastic and loyal to the nth degree. The response of the alumni from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and New York to the call of the Philadelphia organization was very gratifying, and tells us there is a strong bond of friendship uniting all who have been touched with the hand of Bloomsburg. As we looked into the faces and saw them light up as friend met friend we knew they were glad to be there, and proud to be identified with our fine group. It was a glorious picture as they marched into that fine banquet room, led by Dr. and Mrs. Haas, Dean and Mrs. Sutliff, Dr. Bakeless, Dr. and Mrs. Hartline to the strains of delightful music rendered by a woman's orchestra under the direction of Miss Katherine O'Boyle, daughter of Hannah Reese O'Boyle, '88. After singing "America," Prof. Bakeless delivered the invocation and the banquet was under way, during which the College and old Normal songs were sung.

A brief business meeting was held. Mrs. Foley, the secretary, read a report of the reunion and banquet of last May 9—the old officers were re-elected for another term, viz. Mrs. Florence Hess Cool, '88, President; Mrs. Willie Morgan Stein, '08, Vice President; Mrs. Jennie Yoder Foley, '08, Secretary; Mrs. Julia Sharpless Fagely, '95, Treasurer. Mrs. Cool spoke briefly stressing the thought "Make new friends, but keep the old. The new are silver, the old are gold."

Mrs. Cool then introduced the Toastmaster, F. Herman Fritz, a prominent educator, and Superintendent of the Pottstown schools. He is a Bloomsburg boy of whom we are all mighty proud. He captured his audience in the beginning with that fine sonorous voice of his, and the evening rolled merrily on.

Roll call of classes from 1867 to 1931 showed 1900 as having the largest representation. Last year 1908 carried off this honor. Let each class vie with another to bring out the greatest number next April.

We were glad to have with us again Mrs. Wilson (affectionately termed Mintie Wilson) formerly of Bloomsburg but now of Philadelphia, and a sprightly little lady she is. She is the oldest Alumnus in Philadelphia, and taught in the school when it was known as the Bloomsburg Literary Institute. Miss Anna E. Roxby, '79, of Swarthmore (a classmate of Prof. Bakeless) and Miss Bridget Burns, '80, of Shenandoah, were guests of honor. They have a record of 52 and 53 years respectively of teaching. The youngest alumni present were Florence Hochberg and Robert Sutliff, '31—the latter being the son of Dean and Mrs. Sutliff.

Dr. Francis B. Haas, President of the College, gave a very interesting talk. He brought greetings from Dr. Waller who regretted his inability to be with us this year. Dr. Waller in sending his regrets to the Association writes of Dr. Haas:

“The development of the College year by year under the administration of Dr. Haas can only be appreciated by those Alumni that return. President Haas is a great executive. His hand is on the throttle every hour. Trustees, Faculty, Students and Employees are all devoted to him.”

How happy we are in the knowledge that a man of such high character and ability is now guiding the destiny of our Alma Mater.

George C. Baker, '02, Superintendent of Schools, Moorestown, N. J., and President of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association, gave us a snappy address.

A note of sadness was then injected into the meeting by the announcement of the passing away that morning of Dr. Anthony McNelis, beloved husband of Margaret Moran, '90. The gathering stood a few moments offering a prayer for the dead, and asking God to comfort the sorrowing widow. A motion was passed directing the Secretary, Mrs. Foley, to send a letter of sympathy to Mrs. McNelis.

Mr. Fritz paid fine tribute to the memory of Professors Cope and Wilbur. He then called upon Professors Bakeless and Hartline, who both gave us inspiring addresses, each in his own inimitable way.

Dean Sutliff, the speaker of the evening, followed with a brief talk in his usual delightful manner.

Bloomsburg has been extremely fortunate in obtaining truly great teachers—teachers who have dedicated mind, body and spirit to their work, and as a consequence they will never cease to be living personalities to us all. These dear teachers by their presence and with their messages added much to the enjoyment of the evening. We appreciate very much the coming of Dr. Haas and his family.

Vocal solos by Mrs. J. Howard Patterson and Mr. Noack, '16, with Miss O'Boyle at the piano, were very much appreciated.

We regretted the absence of Claude E. Houseknecht, '00, who so ably led our group singing last year.

After the dinner, visiting and dancing were indulged in until midnight, when we parted singing as we left "God be With You 'Till We Meet Again."

Sorry we could not read all the messages of regret and good wishes received. Basket picnics will be held at Willow Grove Park on the second Saturday of July, August and September, to which everyone is invited. Bring your families.

The March luncheon of the Philadelphia Alumni Association was held in the Paul Revere Room, Gimbel's Restaurant, Saturday, March 12, with the President, Mrs. Florence Hess Cool, '88, in the chair. Thirty-three members were present, representing classes from 1886 to 1925.

After the report of the secretary, there was a brief intermission for renewing old acquaintances, which is the most beautiful feature of these meetings, thus strengthening our ties to dear old Bloomsburg.

Dr. George C. Baker, '02, Superintendent of the Moorestown, N. J., schools, gave a brief resume of his life and progress since leaving Bloomsburg. With him was his wife, Mrs. Lillian Gardner Baker, of the class of 1900.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Frantz, of Moorestown, were present. Mrs. Frantz, '95, is president of the New Jersey W. C. T. U. Mr. Frantz, also of 1895, was, during his days at Normal, a member of the football team.

Mrs. Cool then read a clipping concerning Ethel Echternach, daughter of J. P. Echternach, '99, who was chosen as chairman of the committee on arrangements of the Senior Prom at Bryn Mawr. Miss Echternach was also a member of the committee on arrangements for the May Day celebration at Bryn Mawr.

Mr. Claude Houseknecht, director of music at West Chester State Teachers College, gave a brief address.

William Watkins, '00; Raymond Gallagher, '24; Ralph Hart, '18; Reuben Farver, '87, and H. T. Frantz, '95, expressed their pleasure at attending the luncheon.

JENNIE YODER FOLEY, Sec'y.

One of the features of Alumni Day was the attendance of a large representation of the Philadelphia Alumni. About forty-five people drove to Bloomsburg in cars. Arrangements for the trip were in charge of Mr. J. Howard Patterson. A partial list of those who made up the party follows:

J. Howard Patterson and family, Mrs. Anna Sandoe Hoke, Miss Jennie Gilchrist, Chester McAfee and family, Mrs. Lena Oman Buchman, Mr. and Mrs. Norman G. Cool, Mrs. Emma Townsend Eyer, Mrs. Adele Shaffer Broughall, Mr. and Mrs. George Kinney and family, Mrs. Louella Burdick Singuett, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foley and family, Mrs. Willie Morgan Stein and son, Mr. Bernard Kelley, Miss Catherine Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. Reuel Burr, Virginia Gallen Knight, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Pettitt, Mrs. Emman Berry Motter, Miss Anna E. Elliott, Mrs. Sabilla Schobert Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Will Fagley and Mrs. Effie Heaton Hook.

A. Z. Schoch, for many years a member of the Board of Trustees of the State Teachers College, was re-elected President of the board at the annual luncheon of the trustees on Tuesday, May 24th, following the commencement exercises.

Paul E. Wirt was elected Vice-President, and Joseph L. Townsend, Secretary and Treasurer.

Organization was the only business coming before the meeting. Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was a guest at the meeting.

Attending the luncheon were: Mr. Schoch, Mr. Wirt, Mr. Townsend, Dr. Rule, Dr. Haas, Fred W. Diehl, Harry S. Barton, Miss Effie Llewellyn and Dr. E. A. Glenn.

Miss Sara Lentz, of Bloomsburg, a member of the class of 1934, has been selected to represent the College at the Laurel Blossom Festival, held in the Poconos during the month of June. Bloomsburg's representative last year was Miss Cora Wagner, '31, of Shamokin.

A large audience was delighted by the musical program of the Girls' Glee Club, directed by Jessie Patterson, assisted by Edison D. Harris, tenor, and the Maroon and Gold Orchestra, directed by H. F. Fenstermaker. Mr. Harris, a graduate of Bloomsburg, sang two groups of songs. He has a voice of fine quality and delighted the audience. One of the features of the program was the Cantata "Spring Rapture," by Gaul.

o

The Men's Glee Club appeared in its Spring Concert Friday evening, May 13th. The first part of the program consisted of a series of well rendered vocal numbers, and also included a solo by Miss Harriet M. Moore, director of the Club. The second part of the program was a presentation of "Cleopatra," a burlesque of College life by John W. Brigham. The entire program gave evidence of the high standard which the Club has reached in recent years.

The Gamma Theta Epsilon chapter of the Geography Professional Fraternity, one of the newest fraternities on the College campus that is national in scope, received three alumni and four students into membership on Friday, May 8. Admiral Byrd was made an honorary member of this fraternity during his visit to Bloomsburg in February.

Graduates received into membership were: Misses Harriet Carpenter, Miriam Lawson and Maynard Pennington. Student members received were: Wallace Derr, June Mensch, Mary Schuyler and Alex Shepella.

o

The double quartette of the Glee Club furnished a fine program of music at the meeting of the Bloomsburg Kiwanis Club held Thursday, May 12th.

H. C. "Daddy" Grotz has gone over his last beat.

The veteran night watchman, who, for almost a score of years, was on duty at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College and who retired six years ago, slept peacefully away Tuesday, May 17 at the home of his son, H. H. Grotz, on East Eighth Street.

Infirmities of age brought death to a man whose friends were legion. "Daddy" would have observed his ninetieth birthday in July and had been confined to his bed but a week. Death came just as the clock was tolling the hour of ten. He remained conscious almost to the end.

A lifelong resident of Bloomsburg Mr. Grotz followed the trade of tanner and later of millwright before going to the College, then the Bloomsburg State Normal School, to become the night watchman.

For 16 years he made his nightly rounds and he became one of the most popular men on the campus.

All students were his friends and nothing was too much trouble for him to do for them. Each year at Commencement time "Daddy" was kept busy for hours signing his photograph which always appeared near the front of the Obiter. No year book was complete unless it contained "Daddy's" signature.

Cherished among his belongings were scores upon scores of photographs of those "Daddy" referred to fondly as "his boys and girls."

Always on Alumni Day "Daddy" was among the first sought by returning alumni and even after he left the campus upon retirement those student friends, who numbered thousands, never forgot "Daddy."

Seldom, if ever, did Mr. Grotz miss an athletic contest at the institution. He rejoiced with the students in their victories and sympathized in their defeats.

No figure at the College in many years was more generally loved than "Daddy" and many regret his passing and extend sympathy to members of his family.

Surviving are four children: H. M. Grotz, of Eighth Street, with whom he resided; Mrs. Mary E. Shutt, of Fernville; Alfred F. Grotz, of Forty Fort, and Robert B. Grotz, of Jenkintown. Also surviving are five grand children and three great grand children.

A hundred members of the faculty and Board of Trustees of the Teachers College, together with members of their families, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Francis B. Haas of the Teachers College, Saturday, May 4. Dr. Waller also was one of the guests.

A lawn party had been planned, but showers necessitated moving indoor. Following dinner, card and other games were enjoyed.

Northampton High School won the second annual commercial contest at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College on Saturday, May 7th.

The attendance was three times as great as in the first contest and twenty high schools, twice the number of last year, participated.

Gold, silver and bronze charms were given to the three highest students in each of the five contests.

The contest was held at the College Saturday morning, May 7th, in charge of H. A. Andruss, Director of the Department of Commerce of the College.

Dr. D. J. Waller, Jr., President Emeritus of the College, was guest of honor of Iota Chapter of the Phi Sigma Pi Fraternity at its second annual Founder's Day Banquet held at Light Street Saturday evening, April 23rd.

Members of the faculty gave a much enjoyed dinner in honor of President and Mrs. Francis B. Haas, Monday evening, April 25th, at the Magee Hotel. The dinner was followed by bridge.

THE ALUMNI

All Alumni are earnestly requested to inform Professor Jenkins of all changes of address. Many copies of the Alumni Quarterly have been returned because the subscribers are no longer living at the address in our files.

1875

Mrs. Lillian Edgett Witman died Tuesday, April 13, at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, the Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Reiley, of Altoona. Mrs. Witman was born at Carbondale, Pa., May 4, 1858. She was united in marriage to the Rev. Edwin H. Witman, who died in 1918, at Danville, where he was pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Reiley, of Altoona, and Mrs. Howard Ryder, of Shippensburg, Pa., and also by three grandchildren.

1880

Ernest W. Young, Attorney-at-Law, whose address is 2302 Alden Street, St. Paul, Minnesota, writes: "It gives me pleasure to note that the Philadelphia Alumni are much like a live wire. It is gratifying to note that among them is found the State President of the New Jersey W. C. T. U. I say this, perhaps chiefly because my major activity at the present time is given to the matter of Prohibition, the central issue, as it now appears, in the presidential campaign immediately ahead."

1881

Dr. H. V. Hower lives in Berwick, Pa.

J. Newton Glover died at his home in Vicksburg, Union County, Pa., on Monday, February 22, 1932. Mr. Glover served as teacher for nine years, became a farmer, and later served as appraiser of estates in Union County.

1882

The class of 1882, holding its fiftieth year reunion, had a fine time with five members back. Half of its original number of thirty-six has been called by death. To that class went the honor of having a member come the greatest distance. Mrs. Minnie Hallstead Sanders, of Delta, Colorado, is still connected with the schools, being an attendance officer there.

The class during the day honored Miss Sarah M. Hagenbuch, of Berwick, an associate member, who recently rounded out fifty years of successful teaching. She was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by the class for her excellent service in the profession.

During the day the class visited at the home of one of its members, Mrs. Sue Hower, of West Fifth Street, who was unable to attend on account of her health. Mrs. Hower gave the class a very beautiful landscape painting of her own creation and this will be placed in the Alumni Memorial Room.

Members of the class back for the reunion were: Miss Sarah M. Hagenbuch, Berwick; Dr. Henry Bierman, Bloomsburg; Mrs. William E. Wagner, Gordon; Franklin E. Hill, Williamsport; Helen L. Gossler, Newville; Mrs. C. M. Sanders, of Delta, Col.

Jennie Helman, a former teacher in the schools of Catasaqua, has retired from teaching, and is now librarian in the Catasaqua Memorial Library. Her address is 428 Walnut Street, Catasaqua.

Mrs. C. M. Halstead Sanders lives in Delta, Colorado.

Mary Reagan (Mrs. E. C. Hood) lives at 2608 Jackson Boulevard, Sioux City, Iowa.

We quote the following from the Philadelphia "Sunday Dispatch" dated April 24th, 1932.

Prominent among Philadelphia's successful teachers of vocal culture and dramatic art, the Dispatch is pleased to present to its readers, in these columns, Mr. Maxwell R. Noack, whose studio is located at 2045 Chestnut street, and whose energy has been devoted to his profession. Mr. Noack combines with a thorough knowledge of voice production, exceptional ability as an exponent of the modern school of dramatic art. He is an instructor of rare achievement, capable of carrying his students through all the stages of progression to the highest attainment in vocal rendition. Today, such is the tremendous advance in the culture of music in this country that, while it may be desirable, European training is not a necessity to the attainment of artistic perfection.

Conservatories patterned after the European studios with faculties composed of the finest American and foreign professors are to be found in most of the leading cities, while private tutors of the highest type are available. Mr. Noack is an outstanding example of this class. He is particularly fortunate in being able to offer his students the additional training in stage deportment and dramatic expression demanded of the modern singer. Mr. Noack, who spent ten years in his profession, is a graduate of Bloomsburg Teachers College, taking a post-graduate course at the University of Pennsylvania and Temple University. Of magnetic personality, he occupies a prominent place in the city's musical community and enjoys the respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends, students and associates. During the World War, Mr. Noack served in the Motor Transportation Corps, and is an enthusiastic devotee of our national game—baseball.

The five year class had seventy-five of its membership of over three hundred back for the day and they had a fine time renewing acquaintances and viewing the numerous improvements made since their graduation.

Among those returning were: Florence E. Reap, Shickshinny; Gertrude Grimes, Berwick; Helen Gertrude Mulligan, Mary Jane Morgan, Plains; Adella A. Chapley, Shenandoah; Mary Elliott Jones, Jane Gleason, Scranton; Margarette Luce, Messhoppen; Martha Tasker, Shamokin; Mildred R. Lowry, Forest City; Minnie L. Wolfe, Helen M. Jones, Jennie Williams, Edwardsville; Dorothy Goss, Florence Blank, Wilkes-Barre; Mildred Adams, Danville; Hope Schalles Rosser, Berwick; Verna Medley Davenport, Plymouth; Pauline Vastine Sugden, Sunbury; Mary E. Rowland, Connerton; Jennis Dixon, Lost Creek; Reba Stamm, Millersburg; Ada Mowery Housenick, Beechwood Park; Alta George, Rosina Ellery, Nanticoke; Mildred T. Taylor, Scranton; Marian C. Marshall, Kingston; Margaret Sheridan, Nanticoke; Mrs. Arthur Husband, Pittston; Geraldine E. Hess, C. Edith Quinn, Elsie G. Bower, Dorcas M. Epler, Northumberland; Helen Ceppa, Marion Turman, Nanticoke; Helen I. Andrews.

The marriage of Miss Nola F. Kline, of Berwick, and Ralph C. Brown, of Catasauqua, was announced at a card party and luncheon at the home of the bride's parents Saturday evening, April 30th. The marriage was performed on July 3rd, 1931, by the Reverend Lester Updegrove, pastor of the Evangelical Church at Tamaqua, at the home of the groom's brother, Jacob J. Brown, Muir, Pa.

Mrs. Brown has, since her graduation, been a teacher in the Rock Glen Schools. Mr. Brown is a graduate of Muhlenberg College. For the past four years he has been at the head of the English Department in the Catasauqua High School. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will be at home in Catasauqua after September first.

Announcement was recently made of the marriage of Miss Maud Dent, of Espy, and Lee Banghart, of Berwick. The ceremony was performed June 18, 1931, at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage in Muncy Valley by the Rev. Reyburn Fritz.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Banghart are Bloomsburg graduates. Mrs. Banghart has been a successful teacher in the schools of Columbia County, while Mr. Banghart teaches in the Berwick schools. They are now living in their newly furnished home on East Eleventh Street, Berwick.

THE DEPRESSION AND THE SCHOOL OF TOMORROW

DR. JAMES N. RULE

Superintendent of Public Instruction

Commencement address delivered at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, Tuesday, May 24, 1932:

* * * * *

"Being neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, I hesitate to indicate the changes, growing out of the current economic and social depression, that seem to be pending in the field of public education. Nevertheless, if we are to be prepared to meet the needs of the schools of tomorrow, we must consider carefully the implications for education of the many current social and economic dislocations.

"How will the unemployment situation affect the schools of tomorrow?

"Technological unemployment is delaying the entrance of youth into business and industry. At a time when adult labor is so largely unemployed, the entrance of youth into competition with adult labor for jobs should be and is of necessity being deferred. The result is a gradual lengthening of the period of schooling for the average child. The present compulsory school attendance laws of Pennsylvania and of other states generally require children to remain in school until sixteen years of age. The number remaining until eighteen years of age is increasing; and it seems quite probable that the period of formal schooling for all will be extended—not necessarily by law but by economic and social necessity—until eighteen years of age—this within possibly a decade. Many educators predict that the school age will be advanced to twenty years.

“Furthermore economists estimate that if the aggregate number of work hours, necessary to produce all the articles of consumption needed by our present population, were divided evenly among the total number of available workers, probably no one would work more than thirty-six hours per week. The hours of labor in the major industries have been greatly shortened in recent years—pathetically and tragically so in recent months. The machine has not only freed men’s backs from burdens but, by so doing, has also released much free time for recreational pursuits.

“How will our much wanted American quality of individualism be affected by the forces underlying and growing out of the current depression?

“Certainly one outcome of the depression is the clear realization that the last frontier of our country has gone and pioneer days have passed forever; that like the older civilizations of the world we in the United States are at last locked into a social and economic order that demands a substitute for our rugged American individualism to which we owe so much of our past progress.

“Tiring of the restrictions and banalities of community life, one can no longer escape to the frontier and there literally hew and shoot his way to a free life of his own choosing and ordering. The mechanization of industry with its subordination of the individual to the regimentation of the factory is resulting in an increasing social control, under voluntary and governmental agencies, of the means of production and the channels of distribution and consumption. The independence of the individual is giving way to the interdependence of all. Individualism must yield to an enlightened selfishness that finds in a stabilized prosperity for all the greatest individual happiness and growth.

"We Americans do not easily submit our necks to the yoke of the social control of our lives in whole or in part either by voluntary organizations or governmental agencies. Yet it seems we must all learn to pull together in harness, and the yoke of a willing and intelligent cooperation will alone enable us to assume the demand of the new social order with any degree of ease and success.

"Summing up what seem to me to be some of the general effects of the depression of most significance to education, I venture the following:

1. A lengthened period of schooling for all.
2. A marked increase in leisure time.
3. The substitution of the principle of cooperative citizenship for the individualism characteristic of pioneer days.

"The educational significance of these outcomes of the depression are interesting and important.

"What is the educational significance of the increasing period of schooling?

"The facts relative to the greatly increased enrollments in our public schools, particularly in our high schools, are well known to you. The educational significance of these increases lies—not in the larger number of pupils alone—but in the greatly increased variety of types of young people entering our high schools. Whereas originally our academies and high schools were almost exclusively college preparatory in purpose, the number within our public high schools demanding inclusive preparation for civic and economic competence is now by far the larger group in every high school that attempts without discrimination to meet faithfully the needs of all.

"A single curriculum, emphasizing college preparatory subjects important as they are, no longer suffices. A core curriculum for all that stresses functional preparation for civic and social competence and physical fitness is being supplemented with adapted curriculums in vocational and other practical courses, affording adequate opportunities for these who must enter gainful occupations immediately upon leaving high school. The so-called expanded high school program represents an effort to meet faithfully and without discrimination the needs of all the various groups of pupils compelled by the force of circumstances to remain in high school for a lengthened period.

"How important in the schools of tomorrow is preparation for wide use of leisure time? Some one has said: Show me how a man spends his Saturday nights and I'll tell you the kind of man he is. True it is that a man's work should provide his most fruitful channels for constructive service to his community and his fellow citizens—channels of service which, if faithfully used, develop those traits we admire as typical of the ideal American. Nevertheless it is still true that it is through wise use of leisure time that character is strengthened and through its misuse weakened and degraded. No government of the people can long operate helpfully for the people if it is not conducted and supported by people of sound character.

"One of the most important tasks confronting the schools of tomorrow is that of providing our junior citizens with habits and means of using their leisure time sanely, safely, and constructively to the end that in these free hours of peril and profit development of personality may continue onward and upward to ever richer and higher levels of attainment.

"Skills and appreciation in art, music, literature, sports, and creative avocational activities in all forms of the fine and practical arts should be encouraged in order to provide wholesome outlets for surplus physical energy and the means for creative self-expression.

"At this point it may be worthwhile to digress to call the attention of business men to the highly profitable character of these avocational and recreational activities of the schools in their stimulation of new and refined wants. Doctor Morgan, of Antioch College, has well said that 'Education is the goose that lays the golden eggs of Prosperity.' Courses in art, music, literature, physical education and in the various fine and practical arts products discriminating and profitable consumers of the better articles of commerce. Such courses have long since passed out of the fad and frill stage and are among our most practical and necessary studies and activities. Business could well afford to pay their entire cost and charge it up to advertising in order to make these avocational and recreational activities in our public schools universally available to all adolescent girls and boys.

"What is the responsibility of the schools of tomorrow for the development of competent, cooperative citizenship in the members of the oncoming generation? Public education in the United States in lifting the population generally to a literacy level has done much toward insuring the safety and safeness of our democracy. We cannot stop, however, at a mere literacy level, but must go on to a cultural level if social progress and contentment are to be secured by orderly, progressive means.

"With the rapid development of means of mass communication through the telegraph, the telephone, the radio, and newspapers and magazines, mass education has arrived. The public is exposed today, especially through the radio, not only to the true and beautiful, but also to demagogery and misleading and baneful advertising and propaganda to a degree never before thought possible. Heretofore, desirable and necessary changes in society have come about largely through major catastrophies, revolutions, wars and panics, caused largely by ineffective thinking and leadership, and by what some one has described as the infinite capacity of the human mind to resist the introduction of new knowledge. But the newspapers and the radio have now unlocked the human mind. The masses are thinking and choosing for themselves.

"In the midst of the bitter disillusionments, disappointments and disasters of the economic depression that is upon us, we hear the cry that Democracy has failed and that other forms of government should be created. The answer is that Democracy has never had a fair trial. Through influences and pressures exerted largely by the newspapers and by radio, Democracy is beginning to have a fair trial. Whether this new-found socialized Democracy will lead us to peace and to a stabilized prosperity for all will depend largely upon the cooperative efforts of home and school and church in developing a type of competent, cooperative citizen, who is willing to subordinate a self-centered individualism to an enlightened selfishness that recognizes in the welfare of all his largest opportunity to enjoy a stabilized prosperity.

"In addition to these general educational outcomes from the depression are certain other effects specifically related to conditions in Pennsylvania. The financial strain under which our school districts with few exceptions are laboring has served to bring out into bold relief certain antiquities and inequities in the administration of our system of public education. The pressures growing out of the current economic situation will probably bring about changes greatly and long desired in certain phases of our educational policy and organization. I refer particularly to our State plan for distribution of State subsidies to school districts, our local unit of school organization, and our State program for the preparation of teachers. There is time to discuss but briefly these special problems.

"Glaring inequities in the distribution of State aid and of educational opportunities afforded Pennsylvania's children have long been obvious. Our wealthier districts can and do provide generally the best in modern equipment and current school practice to meet the educational needs of their children. In our rural districts, however, the farmers' girls and boys are not getting an educational square deal.

"Present legislation governing distribution of State aid in Pennsylvania provides for five classes of school districts only, with but two of these classes determined by ability to pay taxes. Our poorest fourth class district has $4,000 true valuation behind each teacher employed. Our wealthiest fourth class district has $2,357,000 behind each teacher employed. The one has 589 times greater ability to support its public schools than has the other. In our highest differential group, one district has as low as $4,000, and others as high as $49,000 behind each teacher. These have 12 times greater financial ability than the one, yet both receive the same State aid.

"This inequity in the distribution of State subsidies, with its attendant inequalities in the distribution of educational opportunity and of the burden of local support of public schools, is aggravated by the chaotic and unjust method of assessing property for purposes of taxation which prevails throughout the State. The assessment of property in Pennsylvania for the purpose of taxation is for the most part made crudely, and, generally throughout the State, with little co-ordination between governmental units or even within governmental units.

"The weaknesses and inequalities of our present property tax are further complicating the problem of the financing of public schools. The property tax, particularly in the case of farmers and home owners, has become in many areas well nigh confiscatory and in too many instances, entirely so.

"State revenues, as well as local revenues, are declining. There is every reason and incentive for the utmost economy in the organization and administration of our public schools. In order that during this period of reduced revenues the work of the public schools may be maintained without loss of efficiency and without deprivation to the children of the Commonwealth, we must be on our guard on the one hand against those who would slash school appropriations without due regard to the effect of such reductions upon the work of the public schools, and on the other hand against the demands of those who would expand the work of the public schools without regard to cost and the interest of the tax-payers. There must be a dove-tailing of our educational programs and policies with the economic necessities and resources of the tax-payer.

"The whole problem of the financial support of the public schools in Pennsylvania will require, during the next few years in particular, the most careful study and thought in order that public education may continue to play its necessary part in the social, business and civic life of the Commonwealth.

"A strong State committee of school men, economists, statisticians, and representatives of interested and influential lay groups, is now engaged in an intensive study of this whole problem of school finance and has agreed upon the broad outline at least of a new principle for financing public education in Pennsylvania.

"Higher standards of teacher preparation, modern school buildings, and improved equipment have helped to increase the quality of public instruction in many school districts. Adequate school opportunities cannot be made generally available, however, until our local unit of school organization is made sufficiently large to provide efficient professional leadership and make available a complete twelve-year program of public education to all children without discrimination.

"We have within our Commonwealth 2,582 separate and distinct school districts, many impoverished and without public high school facilities. It should be added that Pennsylvania cannot long afford to pay to smaller and poorer school districts a high differential of State aid for the particular support at least of unnecessary overhead cost of unwarranted duplication of offices and activities, which have grown, in too many cases, out of local prejudices and local preferences.

"Eighteen school districts have such a small school population that they do not maintain even a single school, sending the few pupils they have, on a tuition basis, to neighboring districts. One hundred fourteen school districts have but one teacher. Four hundred four school districts have three or fewer teachers. In these districts the educational opportunities offered to the girls and boys who live there are meager in the extreme. A square deal to rural girls and boys under such conditions is an impossibility.

"The economic necessities of the current situation will do much to further, if not force, such a desirable reorganization of our smaller school districts into larger units with consequent large financial savings and greater possibilities of an enlarged and enriched educational program for rural girls and boys; or in other words, to bring needed tax relief to the farmer and an educational square deal to formers' girls and boys.

"The horse-and-buggy era still maintains in far too many of our rural school districts. Every other public enterprise has gone forward in this automobile age, and I look for this depression to bring every citizen to the realization that our schools cannot make progress on a one-horse-shay organization.

"Good schools go hand in hand with good roads, and Pennsylvania's leadership in good roads lends every opportunity for inauguration of the proposed larger unit plan for administration of our public schools. With relatively easy and rapid transportation a present-day reality, there need be no further delay in abandonment of small, struggling districts and merging them into larger and more capable units. It is a very important step towards giving country boys and girls an equal chance with their city cousins.

"The current indicated surplus of certified teachers, particularly in the academic subjects of the secondary school field, greatly aggravated by the current depression, presents one of our most difficult and pressing problems. There will be many more certificated school teachers available next September, than vacancies and new positions. Remedies lie along three possible lines: A sharp restriction of approvals by the State Council of Education of additional institutions for the preparation of secondary school teachers; an increase to five years of post high school work of the requirement for State certification for the secondary field; and higher requirements for admission to and graduation from teacher preparation institutions. In this movement for increasing requirements for admission to college our State Teachers Colleges are taking a leading and most commendable part.

"The depression has served to aggravate and emphasize a situation that has been rapidly developing within the past five years and many thus provide just the necessary incentive and pressure to bring about a much needed and long needed re-definition of standards in this field.

"The great depressions of the past have set up pressures that have inevitably resulted in noteworthy advances in education in Pennsylvania.

"In 1837 there came the first economic depression of a country-wide nature, a period of wild ventures and bad management in business enterprises. Speculation in buying and selling of western lands on the basis of paper money issued by State banks was largely the cause. Just a few years before, in 1834, the original Free School Law had been enacted and reported attempts to bring about its downfall from 1837 to 1840 were unsuccessful.

"In 1857 another panic spread over the country as a result of too rapid development of the West. It was short but severe, but Pennsylvania education made rapid strides forward until the Civil War period. In that year a separate department of education was set up in the State government, and the General Assembly also provided for the training of teachers by passing the Normal School Act of 1857. A few years later, in 1862, national public higher education received its start in the Land Grant Act of Congress which provided for the establishment of one or more state colleges or state universities in each state. The immediate result in Pennsylvania was the beginning of the real development of the Pennsylvania State College.

"Again in 1873 there was a period of depression with causes similar to the present economic conditions, and once more Pennsylvania took definite forward steps in education. The State Constitution of 1873 went into effect in 1874, providing for education for "all the children," and for the first time women were permitted to exercise a control in the management of school affairs of the Commonwealth.

"Out of the panic of 1893 there came a program of closer attention to child welfare, the enactment of child labor laws, the compulsory attendance law, the adoption of the free textbook law which provided for the first time free books for school children, the organization and promotion of a definite system of public high schools, and the creation of the College and University Council, now the State Council of Education.

"The year 1907 records a milder panic, and it was followed in 1909 by the passage of the first School Code which was vetoed on legal technicalities. But two years later, in 1911, the legal objections were remedied, and this great forward step directly followed the depression of 1907.

"The enactment of the Edmonds law in 1921 came in the period of unrest that followed the World War. Through it Pennsylvania entered on one of the greatest forward steps it has ever taken in public education. This act, together with the formal transformation of the normal schools into State Teachers Colleges and the supplementary legislation, have resulted in a definite raising to a higher level of all educational interests operating in the Commonwealth.

"The crisis that confronts Democracy today cannot in the main be solved by more laws or economic formulas. The problem of Peace on Earth is still one of Good Will among Men. Certainly one of the most effective instruments for creating good will between individuals, between communities, and between nations is understanding, and understanding depends upon education. In these days when old values are being destroyed almost over night, the constructive processes of education are needed and should be made effective as never before in the history of civilization, in stabilizing the lives of on-coming generations on a common, high level of material and cultural well being.

"It may well happen then that out of the current depression as from previous depressions our system of education, both secondary and higher, will issue strengthened and purified to render increasingly effective service to the youth of our Commonwealth and Republic.

"To you, the members of the Class of 1932, comes a challenge greater than that to any other class that has been graduated from this institution. Society needs better schools and more competent teachers than ever before. Yours is the high call to justify to society, by the high character of your professional services, the preeminent place which we believe education should occupy in the plans and policies of our State."

The annual dinner of the summer session of the College was held Thursday evening, July 28, in the College dining room. The guests of honor were the eleven students who completed their work for the Bachelor's degree, and fifteen who completed the two-year course.

Arrangements for the dinner had been in the hands of a faculty committee, of which Prof. Samuel L. Wilson was chairman. Prof. Wilson presided at the dinner.

The program consisted of group singing, led by Miss Harriet M. Moore, three numbers by the Men's Glee Club, and two solos by Miss Helen E. Sutliff.

The degrees and certificates were presented by President Haas and Dean Sutliff.

Those who completed their work for degrees were: J. Fred Berger, Robert A. Brown, Roy J. Evans, Earl T. Farley, Helen R. Kellam, Joseph D. McFadden, Claude E. Miller, Bernard E. Mohan, Glenn A. Oman, E'dora Robbins and Daniel E. Thomas.

Those receiving certificates were: Primary Field—Lillian Connor, Frances P. Fester, Helena J. Fowles, Florence H. Gruver, Marie S. Hoy, Vivienne T. Lewis, and Catharine Anna Smith. Intermediate—Catharine M. Brobst, Ida M. Bubb, Jemima Eltringham, Alys Henry, Emma M. Lehman, Harriet A. Levan, Mary A. Vollrath. Rural—M. Helen K. Hartman.

NEW COACH APPOINTED

George C. Buchheit, a star athlete at the University of Illinois, in his undergraduate days, and later a successful coach at the University of Kentucky and Duke University over a period of twelve years, comes to Bloomsburg this fall as coach of athletics.

Thornley W. Booth, head coach for the past six years, will devote his attention during the coming college year to duties within the department of physical education.

Mr. Buchheit served as head coach of basketball and track, and assistant football coach at Duke University from 1924 to 1931. He went to the university as one of the assistants to Howard Jones, one of the best coaches in the country, and now at the University of Southern California. In 1928 Mr. Buchheit was appointed assistant athletic director. During the past year he was a graduate student at Columbia University, where he received the Master's degree in June. During the summer session this year, he gave a course in track and field athletics at Teachers College, Columbia University, to graduate students and coaches attending that session.

Before going to Duke, Mr. Buchheit was at the University of Kentucky from 1919 to 1924, where he was varsity basketball and track coach and assistant football coach. His basketball team won the southern tournament in Atlanta in 1921, and the track team won the Kentucky meet three times.

The new Bloomsburg coach took his undergraduate work at Hillsdale College, the University of Illinois and the University of Kentucky, and was graduated from the last named institution in 1921. While at Illinois, he played end in football on the team which won the Big Ten championship in 1918, and was selected on the second all-conference team picked by the late Walter Eckersall. He has been placed on one of the University of Illinois "all-time" football teams selected by the coaching staff. He was considered one of the best all-round track athletes in the Western Conference, and in a dual meet with Chicago, scored twenty points. He was awarded the Big Ten medal that is given yearly to a senior for proficiency in scholarship and athletics. Coach Buchheit is a member of the Society of Directors of Physical Education in College, and of the Delta Tau Delta, Theta Tau, and Omicron Delta Kappa fraternities.

Robert C. Zupke, famous Illinois coach, writes "Mr. Buchheit was one of the best ends in Illinois history, and was a versatile track athlete. He was also on the basketball squad. He was awarded the Big Ten medal for proficiency in scholarship and athletics."

Wallace Wade, present football coach at Duke, and a developer of national championship teams of the University of Alabama, says of the new Bloomsburg coach: "He has had several years' experience in coaching very successfully in leading colleges in the South. He is considered by many as one of the best basketball and track coaches in the Southern Conference. I have the utmost respect for him, and confidence in his ability to coach football, basketball, and track."

In addition to his duties as coach, Mr. Buchheit will serve as Assistant Dean of Men.

Miss Edith Dilks, of Woodbury, N. J., has been appointed teacher of penmanship and English for the coming semester, during a leave of absence granted to Miss Helen M. Richards.

Miss Dilks is a graduate of the State Normal School at Glassboro, New Jersey, and received her B. S. degree at Rutgers University. She received the degree of Master of Education from the same institution this summer.

She has taught in Camden and Newark, N. J., and in the State Summer School at Glassboro. She has had experience in supervising, and during the second semester of last year was a member of the faculty at the State Teachers College at Shippensburg.

THE TEACHERS COLLEGES AND THE PRESENT SURPLUS OF TEACHERS

The Liberal Arts Colleges, and not the State Teachers Colleges, are responsible for the great surplus of teachers in Pennsylvania which exists in the high school field, Dr. James N. Rule, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, stated in a recent letter, which was in answer to some criticism of teachers colleges turning out teachers on a "glutted market."

The head of Pennsylvania's school system, who made the Commencement address at Bloomsburg last May, declares, after stating in detail the number of qualified teachers being turned out by both Liberal Arts Colleges and Teachers Colleges, and the fields for which they are prepared, that the answer to the problem of controlling the surplus of high school teachers lies in severely restricting the number of both Arts and Teachers Colleges preparing high school teachers, and exacting more selective requirements for entrance to and graduation from curricula for high school teaching, limiting successful candidates to those who possess the requisite mental ability, personality, and physical fitness, and are definitely looking forward to teaching as a profession.

Dr. Rule states that the yearly demand in the high school field for new teachers is 1,500 and in the elementary field 3,500. In 1931 Arts Colleges in the State issued high school certificates to 3,505 graduates, while the Teachers Colleges issued similar certificates to but 945, and of that number 321 were trained in the so-called special fields, such as music, art, physical education, home economics, and industrial arts, for which the Teachers Colleges are the principal source of supply.

He points out further that the Teachers Colleges are practically the only source of supply for the 3,500 new elementary teachers needed annually in Pennsylvania, as the Arts Colleges are not preparing, and do not desire to prepare elementary school teachers.

The head of the State School System believes that the Board of Presidents of the Teachers Colleges, by exacting more selective requirements for entrance and graduation, has taken an effective concerted action to keep the supply of elementary and high school teachers well within sight of normal demand. He spoke of the recent requirements of four-year post-high school professional preparation for elementary teachers, effective in 1936.

Regarding the present situation, Dr. Rule says "In times of depression like the present, or when one is getting started in some other profession, or waiting to be married, a teaching position may come in handy. These are the ones who are now crowding the high school teaching situation, and comprise probably about thirty per cent. of the Arts College graduates who secure high school certification."

Part of the letter was written in answer to some predictions that because of the surplus of teachers, the number of Teachers Colleges would be reduced. Concerning the cost of the fourteen Teachers Colleges of the State, Dr. Rule says that for the current biennium it does not exceed $3,700,000 for the training of over 11,000 teachers. The budget, before the adjustment made in the recent session of the legislature, showed an appropriation of $10,512,000, but of this approximately six millions are paid in by students for the cost of board, room, and laundry, as the administrative code requires that all collections be deposited in the general fund and reappropriated specifically by the General Assembly. In addition, approximately $700,000 will be turned back by the Teachers Colleges, to be used for unemployment relief, or to help balance the general budget.

In completing his survey of the teaching situation at present, and especially as it affects Teachers Colleges, Dr. Rule declares the problem of equalizing teacher supply and demand is no different from what it is in practically all occupations and professions. "If too restrictive measures are taken in any one, the problem is only complicated and made more difficult for all the rest. Undoubtedly reasonable restrictive measures must be taken in the field of teacher preparation, but these must be adopted in the light of the needs of the public schools, the success of specific institutions, both Arts Colleges and Teachers Colleges, most effective in meeting the State's standards, and the fiscal resources of the Commonwealth."

SELECTIVE ADMISSION NOW IN FORCE

In order to raise the standards of the teaching profession, and in order to offset, to some extent, the existing surplus of teachers in Pennsylvania, the Board of Presidents have adopted a procedure by which the more undesirable candidates for admission to the State Teachers Colleges may be eliminated. This measure has been put into operation by a ruling issued by the State Department of Public Instruction.

The philosophy underling such a procedure is that the State Teachers Colleges are an agency operated by the State for supplying teachers for its own public schools, and that an attempt should be made to adjust the supply to the demand.

This procedure has been applied for several years in many States of the Union, particularly in New England. Basing their estimates on the present need for teachers, these states set up definite quotas, aimed to turn out the number of teachers needed, and no more.

To keep the number of entrants within the assigned quotas, some principle of selection must be applied. Various procedures have been set up, based on the measuring of qualities that are generally agreed upon as desirable for successful teaching. The candidate must come up to certain standards in scholarship, intelligence, health, and social qualities.

A step forward was made in Pennsylvania several years ago, when it was required that all candidates for admissions be graduates of an approved four-year high school. It is not so many years ago that students entered the Normal Schools directly from the eighth grade.

The present regulations require that the candidate, if he is in the upper half of his class, may be admitted without any further examination as to scholarship. If the candidate is in the lower half of his class, he must take a written examination. If he passes this successfully, he has met the academic requirements. The test given this year is a standard college aptitude test.

The applicant is further required to fill out a personnel record, giving information as to economic status, his family, activities in which he engaged while in high school, subjects that he liked and disliked, hobbies, special interests, and the type of reading engaged in by him.

The prospective student must undergo a physical examination by his home physician. Many having serious defects are eliminated at this point, or the defects are corrected. Another physical examination is given by the college physician, when the applicant comes to the campus.

As a further check, the student appears before a committee of the faculty for a short interview. At this time an attempt is made to find out any serious social shortcomings which might prevent the candidate from becoming a successful teacher.

A candidate is thus accepted or rejected on the basis of the sum total of all the information obtained in all of the above described procedures.

Three evening entertainments were given during the Summer Session at Bloomsburg. One was a concert by the Boston Sextette, consisting of four members of the Boston Male Choir, which has visited Bloomsburg several times, and two soloists, Miss DesRosiers, and Miss Aubens. Another number was a recital by a Woodwind ensemble, consisting of members of the Wilkes-Barre Symphony Orchestra. The third number was the presentation of three one-act plays by members of the Dramatic Club.

Among the Bloomsburg graduates who attended the Summer Session at Pennsylvania State College were the following: Margaret McHale, Ruth Rarig, Audrey Moore, James Coursen, Archie Austin, Alex Krainack, Elfred Jones, Llewellyn Edmunds, Eleanor Zimolzack, Chester Zimolzack and Luther Bitler.

THE 1932 SUMMER SESSION

The Summer Session at Bloomsburg has been undergoing an interesting development during the past two years. Since 1922, with the exception of the year 1926, there has been a steady decline until 1930, when the enrollment dropped to 317. In 1931, the enrollment again turned upward, when 401 registered for the Summer Session. This year there was again an increase, with the enrollment reaching 480. The graph shown below indicates the fluctuation from 1920 to 1932:

The high figures for 1922 and 1923 are no doubt due to the State regulation, requiring all teachers in the Commonwealth to have the equivalent of two years post-high school preparation, in order to retain their positions. This regulation went into effect in 1927. With these requirements met, the Summer Sessions of the State Teachers Colleges assumed a new function.

The Summer School population now consists of four groups of students:

1. Students who wish to make up work in which they had failed during the regular year.
2. Students who wish to shorten the time spent in preparation for teaching.
3. Teachers in service who wish to add two more years to their preparation, and obtain a degree.
4. Teachers and students who wish to be certified in an additional field of subject matter.

During the period preceding the depression, many teachers attended Summer School in the large universities and colleges. With the coming of the depression, a large number of these found that attendance at the Summer Sessions of the State Teachers Colleges was less expensive, and the upturn in enrollment followed.

Another factor which helps to explain the present situation is the fact that, owing to better roads, Bloomsburg has become more easily accessible to all those living within a radius of fifty miles of the College. This is revealed in an examination of the figures showing the relative proportion of boarding students and day students.

	Boarding	Day	Percentage Day Students
1926	302	231	43.3
1927	229	235	50.6
1928	219	163	42.7
1929	165	162	49.5
1930	157	160	50.5
1931	184	217	54.1
1932	192	288	60.0

The total enrollment of the Summer Sessions in all of the Teachers Colleges of Pennsylvania was 5785. Exactly five hundred of the more than five thousand Summer School students are graduates of accredited colleges and universities who went to the Teachers Colleges to obtain professional preparation which will entitle them to have additional subjects added to their teaching certificates. Dr. James N. Rule, Superintendent of Public Instruction, stated that this was most significant in the light of improved teaching standards existing in Pennsylvania public schools.

Distribution of summer students at Teachers Colleges this summer, in addition to the 500 college and university graduates seeking additional training, include 814 working to qualify for standard teaching certificates, 949 seeking to complete Normal School certificates, 3448 in the degree courses, and 74 in miscellaneous subjects.

HOME-COMING DAY

Alumni Home-Coming Day, which has come to be one of the outstanding events of the college year, will be held Saturday, November 5.

Home-Coming Day, which is largely a student project, is one of those happy occasions when the graduates of Bloomsburg have an opportunity to come back to the campus to renew their ties with their Alma Mater, and to meet old friends.

One main point of difference between Home-Coming Day and Alumni Day, held at the close of the year, is that the returning Alumni have an opportunity to come in contact with the present student body. At Alumni Day, all of the student body, except the Senior class, have gone home. As a consequence, there is no chance to become acquainted with student life at Bloomsburg as it is at the present time.

The program of the day will be laid out along the lines followed last year. There will probably be a concert on the campus by the Maroon and Gold Band, a football game in the afternoon, followed by a reception in the gymnasium, and a dance in the evening.

The athletic program consist of a football game with Shippensburg, one of Bloomsburg's strongest rivals, and a cross-country race with a team from Shippensburg. The Home-Coming Day is always the most colorful of the season.

IMPROVEMENTS COMPLETED

The three major improvement projects that have been going on for some time at the College, are now rapidly nearing completion.

The projects are the placing of a permanent bleacher on the west side of the gymnasium, with shower baths and locker rooms for men and women underneath; the erection of a new fire tower and freight lift on the east side of Waller Hall, and the placing of a projection booth in the auditorium in Carver Hall of the showing of sound pictures.

The erection of the fire tower at Waller Hall is the final step in an improvement project of several years, designed to remove fire hazards. It is now believed that the dormitory is now as reasonably safe from fire hazards as it is possible to make it. There is now a fire tower at the end of every corridor, and no student has to turn a corner to reach an exit. The erection of a freight lift is another improvement, and eliminates the necessity for using the passenger elevator for freight.

All of the equipment for the showing of sound pictures is now in place. This equipment, which is entirely modern, will be used as an experiment in the development of educational films.

With the completion of the permanent bleachers on the west side of the gymnasium, similar to those placed on the east side a few years ago, the gymnasium now has a seating capacity of eight hundred, without the use of temporary bleachers.

One of the most needed of improvements in the gymnasium has been the placing of a new lighting system.

In the spring there was some trimming of the trees in the grove, and the underbrush has been cleared out. The walks in the grove have been relined, and flower beds have been placed in various spots.

A new concrete walk and concrete steps have been built on the west side of Carver Hall, to meet the walk that leads to Science Hall.

As has been the case every year for the past six years, returning Alumni will find many new and interesting things to see, when they return to the campus.

O

ATHLETICS

The following is the schedule of athletic events for the first semester:

Saturday, October 8—Football, Millersville S. T. C., at Bloomsburg.

Saturday, October 15—Football, open.

Saturday, October 22—Football, Mansfield S. T. C., at Bloomsburg.

Saturday, October 29—Football, Lock Haven S. T. C., at Lock Haven.

Saturday, October 29—Cross Country, Lock Haven S. T. C., at Lock Haven.

Saturday, November 5—Football, Shippensburg S. T. C., at Bloomsburg.

Saturday, November 5—Cross Country, Shippensburg S. T. C., at Bloomsburg.

Saturday, November 12—Football, East Stroudsburg S. T. C., at East Stroudsburg.

Saturday, November 19—Football, Oswego, N. Y. S. T. C., at Bloomsburg.

Friday, December 16—Basketball, Indiana S. T. C., at Indiana.

Saturday, December 17—Basketball, Slippery Rock S. T. C., at Slippery Rock.

Saturday, January 7—Basketball, Shippensburg S. T. C., at Shippensburg.

Friday, January 13—Basketball, Millersville S. T. C., at Millersville.

Saturday, January 14—Basketball, open.

Saturday, January 21—Basketball, East Stroudsburg, at East Stroudsburg.

TEACHERS COLLEGE FULL FOR OPENING OF TERM

Bloomsburg State Teachers College is filled for the College year opening September 14th and there are over 109 who desire to enter the first year class who are on the waiting list.

The total enrollment for the coming year will be 584, a reduction of 10 per cent. from the 649 of last year which has been made necessary because of the reduction by the special session of the State Legislature of one million in the appropriation for the 14 Teachers Colleges of the State for the remainder of the biennium.

The reduction of the million dollars, which must be absorbed by the institutions in a period of approximately nine months of the biennium, will require strictest economy.

In addition to the reduction in enrollment it will be necessary to make an adjustment of the salary schedule so far as increments are concerned. In connection with minor adjustments, the football game with California Teachers at California, Pa., has been cancelled and the schedule reduced to six games while baseball has been dropped from the athletic calendar and track and field sports have been substituted as the major sport of the spring. Curtailment of the lecture and entertainment program is also probable.

Last year's enrollment was 649 and a 10 per cent. reduction makes the maximum enrollment of the coming college year 584. There are 445 students returning. If they all return the first year class would be limited to 139 but it is probable that a number of the upperclass members will not continue their work and it is believed that the class entering will be between 150 and 155. The waiting list was started when 139 had completed the requirements to enter the College and as upperclassmen drop out those on the waiting list automatically move up. The first year class in 1931 totaled 263.

In addition to the 139 accepted there are 24 at the head of the waiting list, all of whom graduated from the upper half of the class. There are 38 men and 101 girls thus far accepted,

Also on the waiting list are 25 who graduated from the first half of the class but have not met all the requirements and 60 who graduated from the lower half of the classes and are in various stages of meeting the requirements.

While this waiting list now totals 109, there are sure to be additional applications for admittance when the term starts. This has always been the case in past years, especially among day students, but this year they will have no opportunity to gain entrance to the college.

Thus far only two have been rejected because they could not meet the physical requirements. Ten other applications are pending because the applicants have physical defects which are remedial, such as ear, eye and throat trouble. The fact that those considering entering the College know of the physical requirements prevents many of known physical defects from applying and this eliminates the necessity of rejecting them.

Freshmen applicants will report at the College on Monday and Tuesday, September 12th and 13th, with the written examination for those still having some entrance requirements to fulfill to be given at 2:00 o'clock on the afternoon of September 12th. Parents of applicants for admittance have been notified by Dr. Haas of the situation and of the fact that those now having requirements completed can do no better than get on the waiting list if they do complete the requirements. This situation will probably greatly reduce the number appearing for the examination.

The necessary reductions have been apportioned among the 14 State Teachers Colleges under the plan now being developed.

Concerning the reduction in the appropriation by the Legislature, Dr. Haas said:

The action of the recent special session of the Legislature in reducing by over a million dollars the appropriation for the current biennium for the State Teachers Colleges, makes necessary a most careful scrutiny and revision of our budget at Bloomsburg for the balance of the biennium.

The necessary retrenchment will mean in addition to strict economy in all lines of expenditure, an adjustment of the salary schedule so far as increments are concerned and also a limitation upon enrollment. While the necessary budget revision has not yet been finally approved it looks as though increments given for the first year of the biennium cannot be carried for the second year, and it looks as though our total enrollment would be reduced by about ten per cent. In addition, minor adjustments will probably require the cutting of our football and basketball schedules and the dropping of the baseball schedule, together with some curtailment of our lectures and entertainment program. We hope, however, to be able to compensate for any temporary curtailment with other lines of student activity.

State Teachers College, Bloomsburg, Pa.
September 1, 1932.

Among those who received degrees at the June Commencement at Pennsylvania State College were three former Bloomsburg students: Florence M. Edwards, of Bloomsburg; Harriet M. Harry, of Berwick, and Mary R. Schultz, of Millville.

Prof. D. S. Hartline and his son, Dr. Keffer Hartline, were members of a scientific expedition that went to the Rangeley Lake section in Maine to make observations of the total eclipse of the sun, that occurred on August 31.

THE PHILADELPHIA ALUMNI

The regular monthly luncheon meetings of the Philadelphia Alumni B. S. T. C., will be resumed October 8, 1932 and will be held the second Saturday of each succeeding month including March, on the following dates:—November 12, December 10, January 14, 1933, February 11, March 11. The meeting place will be the Paul Revere Room, Gimbel's, at 12:30 P. M., instead of 1:30 as formerly.

All Alumni and friends are invited to attend these meetings which were so well attended and so thoroughly enjoyed last year. Come and re-live your Normal and College days again with your classmates and school friends from our "Dear Old Bloomsburg."

* * * * *

The basket picnics held at Willow Grove Park by the Philadelphia Alumni on the second Saturdays of July and August were very well attended, there being 45 at the July picnic and 40 at the August affair.

Blue skies, soft cool breezes and friendly games and conversations were indulged in; Mrs. Cool's home-made cakes and Prof. Klingaman's watermelon helping along the old-fashioned basket picnic idea to perfection.

Quoits and horse-shoe pitching as well as a friendly game of ball were indulged in by the men.

Mrs. Stein's banner with Bloomsburg painted on by hand greeted all who attended the picnics, so that there was no fear of any one getting "lost."

These picnics are to be held again next summer—the time and place to be mentioned in another issue of the Quarterly.

The last picnic, September 10, is being eagerly anticipated by all.

One of the interesting features of the Alumni Meeting has been that moment in the roll-call of classes when the Class of 1867 is called upon. Two members of that class, Dr. D. J. Waller, Jr., and George E. Elwell, are always on hand and rise in their places in response to the roll-call.

Mr. Elwell has recently presented the Alumni Association with bound volumes of all of the catalogues issued by the Bloomsburg State Teachers College since the establishment of the institution. In view of this fact, we consider it fitting at this time to print the following history of Mr. Elwell's life, as it recently appeared in the Morning Press:

Closely interwoven into the history of Bloomsburg since the seventies has been the name of George E. Elwell, prominent throughout all those years in the professional and business life of the town, and a leader in numerous activities that have largely made possible the Bloomsburg of today.

The son of the late Hon. William and Mary Elwell, the former for many years one of the State's most distinguished jurists, practically his entire life-time has been spent in Bloomsburg and much of it given over to furthering Bloomsburg enterprises.

Mr. Elwell was educated at the Susquehanna Collegiate Institute at Towanda; at Prof. G. R. Barker's school in Germantown, Philadelphia; the Bloomsburg Literary Institute and Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., graduating in the Class of 1870 and later receiving the degree of Master of Arts from that institution.

Upon completing his college course he was elected assistant principal of the Fifth Street school in Bloomsburg, then just opened. In January, 1872, he was made a member of the Normal School faculty, to teach English literature, German and French. He remained there until July, 1873, when he resigned to pursue his legal duties, which he had previously begun under his father's tuition. He was admitted to the bar of Columbia County September 4, 1874, and at once formed a law partnership with Captain C. B. Brockway. This partnership continued for five years. In 1877, the firm of Elwell & Brockway was among the seven counsel employed in the defense of Hester, Tully and McHugh, the Molly Maguires charged with the murder of Alexander Rea. After the conviction of these men and when appeals to the Supreme Court and Board of Pardons had failed, Tully made a written confession to Mr. Elwell, to be published at his request after the execution. It settled beyond question any doubt as to the guilt of these men.

On October 1, 1875, Mr. Elwell, with Mr. Brockway, purchased the Columbian printing office, and from that day until publication was discontinued in 1910, Mr. Elwell was always identified with the paper. In 1879, J. K. Bittenbender purchased the interest of Mr. Brockway, but from 1893 on Mr. Elwell was editor and sole owner.

It was in the latter years that Mr. Elwell discontinued active practice of law because of the press of his publishing and editorial duties. Prior thereto, however, he had figured prominently as a Columbia County lawyer and was a leader at the bar.

It was as an editor that for years the influence of his trenchant pen was felt in Bloomsburg and the county. Using his influence always on the side of Bloomsburg's best interests he contributed largely to the town's progress.

Not only was his influence exercised through the columns of his newspaper, but he gave personally of his time and talents. He served on Town Council in 1876, 1877 and 1878. He was president of the Winona Fire Company in 1882; fire chief of the Bloomsburg Fire Department in 1883, and was a member of the joint committee of the several fire companies that prepared the rules of the Bloomsburg Fire Department. His interest in the cause of education has likewise carried on through the years. He was a trustee of the Bloomsburg State Normal School for 18 years, and for 10 years was president of the Alumni Association of that institution. Today one of the oldest graduates of that institution, he continues his active interest in the Alumni Association. From 1909 to 1923 he also served Bloomsburg efficiently as school director, bringing to the board his sound judgment based on many years' experience. Prominent in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, he was a vestryman there for 33 years, and frequently a delegate to the diocesan convention.

Through the years that have gone he has taken a leading part in the business activities of the town. He was one of the original directors of the Bloomsburg Water Company, a director of the Gas Company and of the Oak Grove Association. For years he has been a director of the Industrial Building and Loan Association; a member of the Corporation of the Bloomsburg Hospital, and a member and former president of the Columbia County Historical Society. He was secretary of the Columbia County Bar Association for thirty years, librarian of the Law Library for many years, and secretary of the Bloomsburg Centennial Committee in 1902. In 1915, he was president of the Bloomsburg Business Men's Association.

Noted throughout Central Pennsylvania as a public speaker, his services as toastmaster have been frequently sought, and the presence of his name heading the post prandial has always insured success.

In politics he served as secretary of the Democratic County Committee; as delegate to county and state conventions. For three years he was a member of the State Committee, and in numerous Presidential campaigns his services were widely in demand as a campaign speaker.

A gifted musician, Mr. Elwell's love of music has indelibly impressed itself upon the community, for he was the moving spirit in much that Bloomsburg has had in past years in the way of musical advantages.

Altogether, his has been a life filled with service for Bloomsburg, and today, in connection with the extensive printing business of the Columbian Printing House, one of the best in inland Pennsylvania and in the operation of which his son, G. Edward Elwell, has been associated with him for a number of years, he retains the enthusiasm for Bloomsburg and for Bloomsburg's development that so conspicuously marked his younger years.

Fraternally, he is a member of the various bodies of Caldwell Consistory. Socially, he is a member of the Craftsman Club, and the Bloomsburg Kiwanis Club.

He is the type of man of whom any community has altogether too few!

May Stephenson may be reached at Cocoa, Florida. In a recent letter she states: "I spent the past winter in Rockledge, which is a little town following the windings of the Indian River, but get my mail at Cocoa. This section is noted for the famed Indian River oranges." Miss Stephenson states also that she has spent two years in Santo Domingo.

Celeste Kitchen Prutzman, of Trucksville, R. D. 1, Luzerne County, Pa., sends the following:

"I am secretary of my class, and am trying to keep in touch with the sixteen still living, but have lost track of Tille Sterner Young. If anyone who reads the QUARTERLY knows of her whereabouts, will he please communicate with me? It will be a great favor."

Uniondale Farm, Town Line, was the scene of an interesting festivity Tuesday, July 19, when Prof. and Mrs. T. B. Harrison celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Their five children and their families joined with them to celebrate the occasion.

Prof. Harrison was born at Uniondale Farm seventy-three years ago. He has taught in Hazleton, Kingston, Wilkes-Barre, and Huntington Mills, and served for some time as County Superintendent in Luzerne County.

One of the interesting features of the fiftieth reunion of the Class of '82 was a Round Robin. Out of a class of thirty-six, nineteen are now living, and five were present at the reunion. Those who were unable to be present were requested to send a letter to Dr. H. Bierman, of Bloomsburg, and, with one exception, all responded. The letters thus received were sent from one member of the class to another, each one adding his own contribution. Inasmuch as many members of the classes of 1881 and 1883 will remember those who were on the campus with them, we take pleasure in publishing extracts from these letters.

Ida Harkness Ramsden lives at Friday Harbor, and writes as follows from Seaside, Oregon:

You ask for a brief history of my past fifty years, but no one who has lived in the West that long could give you a brief history of that time.

We have seen cities grow from little hamlets to cities of half a million people. We have seen prosperous towns fade away into nothingness. Great ocean liners move up and down Puget Sound, instead of the little boats that were all that were available when I first came here. And now we have everything that any place else in the world has.

My home is at Friday Harbor, one hundred miles north of Seattle, and only eight miles from the Canadian border. I live on San Juan Island, the one that nearly caused war between England and the United States in 1859. When we go anywhere we have to take a ferry to the mainland. The Archipelago is composed of 171 islands and is one of the loveliest spots in the world. If you are the least bit skeptical about all or any of my statements you may come and see for yourselves, and be welcome.

Burnette Stiles Brooke, who lives at 180 Meigs Street, Rochester, N. Y., says: "I notice that about half of the members have passed on. Perhaps at our seventy-fifth, in 1957, we may have a very glorious reunion with every member of class and faculty present."

Rev. E. J. Moore lives at 257 Erie Road, Columbus, Ohio. The following is an extract from his letter:

"I have been in active work throughout these years until two years ago, when I retired. It has been my privilege to address audiences in every State of the Union save one, and also in Europe. Until recently I have been in excellent health, but my heart has at last rebelled, and now I have to take it easy. We have three girls, three grand-children, and a grand-son-in-law, all living within a few blocks of us, so that we expect our declining years to be happy ones. However, we don't expect to decline yet awhile."

May Reagan (Mrs. E. C. Hood) lives at 2608 Jackson Boulevard, Sioux City, Iowa. The following is quoted from her letter:

"After teaching in Hazleton for ten years, I stopped to get married, but the marriage was delayed a number of years on account of the ill health of my parents. After both had passed away, I was married, and came to Battle Creek, Iowa, where my husband's brother lived. He was married to Emeline Fetherolf, my cousin. Later we moved here. In 1920 my husband died, after a few days' illness of pneumonia. A couple of years later I had a delightful trip to Europe, which did me much good in every way. I have kept busy in the various activities connected with church clubs, Red Cross and social life."

The following is taken from the letter of Franklin E. Hill, who lives at 2205 West Fourth Street, Williamsport, Pa.:

"I taught school for two years, after leaving the Normal, in my home locality, in Luzerne County. In 1884 I took a trip to Europe with a cousin of mine, who was teaching also. The next three years I spent in teaching, and then started a railroad career, which I followed up to a little more than three years ago, when my health prevented me from continuing it any longer. I have not seen as much of our country as some have, as I have been in only thirteen States, spending most of my time in Philadelphia, Chicago, Tunkhannock and Williamsport. I have lived in Williamsport over eighteen years. I have two daughters, both single and teaching; one here, and the other in a high school in New Jersey. The one teaching here was graduated from Bloomsburg in 1916, and the other was graduated from Bucknell in 1922."

Extracts from other letters will be printed in the December QUARTERLY.

Stella Sickler Jorden died at her home in Tunkhannock Saturday, May 14. She suffered a slight stroke more than two years ago, and had been a semi-invalid since that time. She was the last of her immediate family.

Martha W. Vaughan, who has retired from teaching, now lives at 1110 West Elm Street, Scranton, Pa.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger of June 3 published in one of its feature columns, a very interesting interview with Mrs. Annie Miller Melick, president of the Delaware County Federation of Women's Clubs. In this interview Mrs. Melick sets forth her ideas of women's club work as a powerful factor in the education of modern women. The particular point emphasized was the value to be gained in the preparation and presentation of committee reports. The interviewer, in her closing paragraph, states: "Of instruments in 'adult education'—as 'post-graduate work through living,' which is one of the most valuable departments—the club committee's reading of its reports is one of the best."

1889

Miss Frances Kennard, of Meshoppen, died at her home on Monday, May 10, 1932. The Meshoppen Enterprise of May 11 had the following to say concerning her death: "The announcement of the death of Miss Frances Kennard was a real shock to her many friends. She has been in failing health for several months, and returned home from California, where she went to spend the winter. Miss Kennard was born at Laceyville, but practically all of her life was spent in Meshoppen. She always took a keen interest in seeing the community prosper. Especially can she be thanked for the part she took in keeping up the fine Library, of which Meshoppen is proud."

1893

Grace E. Shaffer Perham, of Varden, Pa., died at her home Thursday morning, July 21, 1932. She had been ill since March, having suffered an attack of influenza at that time. Heart trouble developed, and was the immediate cause of her death. Mrs. Perham was assistant superintendent of schools in Wayne County, a position which she had held about thirteen years. After her education at Bloomsburg, Northwestern University, and New York University, and successful work as a teacher, in 1907, she was united in marriage to Warren E. Per-ham, a prominent citizen of Wayne County, and at one time county commissioner. Following the death of her husband fifteen years ago, Mrs. Perham again entered school work, and was soon chosen to the position which she held in the county. A Honesdale paper paid her the following tribute:

"In the death of Grace E. Perham, Wayne County loses her most widely known woman. She was born within its borders, and has passed all her years within its boundaries. Early in life she determined to secure an education, and revealed a worthy ambition for a life of usefulness. When that life ended, she had attained her desires. Of course, many disappointments came, as they do to the average life, but she was always faithful to her duty, capable in the exercise of her obligations, with a fine sense of discrimination, and loyal to the best principles of social welfare and public duty. The schools of Wayne County have lost a faithful servant. As an official, she did not spare herself. As an educator, she was up to the times, and knew her job. As a private citizen, she was concerned with the welfare of the community and the uplift of society. For years she has gone about Wayne County, after having been a successful teacher, in the capacity of assistant superintendent. Probably she was known personally to more people in Wayne County than any other one living woman. Those who mourn her death are legion. Those who appreciate her faithful and capable service are those who are familiar with what she did. She deserves much praise for her accomplishments, and even greater praise for her loyalty to public duty as she saw it. Our county has lost a first class citizen."

Miss Alice Fenner, who lives at 2029 Highland Street, Allentown, Pa., returned from a trip to Florida. She reports that she had fourteen delightful weeks at Tampa.

Laura A. Romberger, (Mrs. John L. Brower) lives in Herndon, Pa.

John Fruit Watson, former prothonotary and clerk of courts of Columbia County, passed away Sunday morning, August 14, at the home of his sister, Ella Watson, in Bloomsburg, where he had resided for the past two and a half years, during which time he was confined to his bed. Death was due to uremic poisoning. Mr. Watson had been in ill health for about twelve years.

He taught for several years after his graduation from Bloomsburg, and then entered Dickinson Law School, from which he was graduated in 1903. In 1910 he married Miss Carrie Klase, of Danville, who survives.

He was for many years active in the Democratic party in Columbia County, and served as deputy prothonotary for two terms. In 1915, he was elected to the office of prothonotary, and was re-elected in 1919. During his second term he became ill, and was never able to regain his health.

Mr. Watson was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Bloomsburg, and of the Bloomsburg lodges of the I. O. O. F., B. P. O. E., and the P. O. S. of A.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sisters, Miss Ella Watson, of Bloomsburg, and Miss Sallie Watson, of Keyport, N. Y.

Willie Morgan Stein, as a member of the Advisory Council of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, has been broadcasting each Saturday during the summer over Station WDAS in Philadelphia.

The Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform started three years ago in Chicago with twenty-four members. Today their membership numbers well over a million. The organization is advocating the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and proposes a campaign of education to attain the goal of temperance in the United States.

In one of her speeches, Mrs. Stein sums up their program: "Let us as a nation admit that prohibition was a mistake, as other nations have done, and try again to attain real temperance; not through legislation, which has bred boot-legging, graft and corruption, but rather through the only means by which we can attain true temperance—that is, through education."

All who have had the pleasure of listening to Mrs. Stein have been impressed, not only with the excellent delivery, but with the quality and clearness of thought expressed. Much of the material has been based on a careful study of the Wickersham report.

Mrs. Stein lives at 3816 Locust Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Martha Herring (Mrs. Frederick Bragg) lives near Toms River, N. J. Her address is R. F. D. 2, Box 129, Toms River.

Bertha Polley (Mrs. J. L. Oakes) lives at R. D. 2, Union, N. Y.

A stroke of paralysis, following a week's illness with heart disease, caused the death of Kimber A. Hartman on Tuesday, August 16, at his home in Bloomsburg. Mr. Hartman had been suffering with a heart condition for the past year, but his condition caused no alarm until about a week before his death, when he was compelled to take to his bed.

He was the son of the late Charles L. Hartman and Lucy

Appleman Hartman, and was born in Buckhorn, March 1, 1885. Following his graduation from the Bloomsburg State Normal School, he taught in the public schools of West Berwick, Hemlock Township, and Jerseytown, and was principal of the Elders Ridge Vocational School for seven years. Following this, he served for seven years as Superintendent of the I. O. O. F. Orphanage, near Sunbury. Several years ago he came to Bloomsburg, and took up the position of receiving clerk at the Bloomsburg State Teachers College.

His wife, formerly Miss Ellie Deighmiller, '08, died three years ago. He is survived by a son, Henry, a Junior at Bucknell University, and three sisters.

He was a trustee of the First Presbyterian Church of Bloomsburg, and was one of the teachers of the Men's Bible Class of that church. He was a member of the Odd Fellows.

Funeral services were held at his late home on Thursday, August 18, with burial in the New Columbia Cemetery.
