President Harry Ausprich:

'Much to celebrate at Bloomsburg University'

Spring is a season of renewal. It's a season filled with hope and expectation. It seems an appropriate time to pause and reflect on the life of our university.

My conclusion?

There is much, so very much, to celebrate at Bloomsburg University.

We have endured some difficult times in recent months.

But, I urge you not to become focused on negative events and derisive comments. Never lose sight of this university's outstanding reputation in the area of academic instruction, research and service. Each day, thousands of students, faculty and staff continue to perform their assigned tasks with considerable pride in Bloomsburg University. And, why not?

Ausprich

We are in the midst of the "silent" portion of our campaign to raise $2.375 million for our long-awaited library. Our dream, at long last, is about to become a reality. Support from donors contacted during our initial fund-raising efforts has been overwhelmingly enthusiastic and positive. We are moving ahead and, with your help, we are going to meet our goal.

Bloomsburg's academic acclaim is a source of pride to us all. We receive 7,000 applications for each of the coveted 1,000 openings in our fall freshmen class. Applications from minority students have increased. Our faculty are doing more research than at any other time in Bloomsburg's history. We attract faculty with impeccable credentials. I can't overemphasize how proud I am of the quality of our faculty.

We have just published Changing Lives Through Service, a directory of more than 60 services the university provides to the region. Some 10,000 copies of the directory have been distributed in a 40-mile region to civic, human services, governmental, business, community, religious and educational organizations. Because of Bloomsburg and its commitment to service, thousands of lives will truly be changed in a positive manner. From a child unable to speak, to a rural businessman struggling with the mysteries of computers, Bloomsburg University is there to serve.

Our relationship with officials of the Town of Bloomsburg is rooted in mutual respect and concerns. The mayor and chief of police have been particularly cooperative and accessible to us. The University-Town Task Force on Racial Equity is continuing its most important efforts to forge bridges of understanding. Later this month, the group plans to have at least 600 people line up, hand-in-hand, linking Carver Hall and Market Square in a symbolic demonstration of unity.

Funding and budgets are always a concern. There never seems to be enough resources available to do all the things we'd like. However, Bloomsburg has just come through a challenging budget year in strong fiscal condition. Pennsylvania, in fact, is doing far better in this area than some of our sister states. We will continue to work hard and manage wisely so every dollar reflects a maximum return on investment.

I believe the university's first commitment is to preserve the spirit of freedom and openness. I am resolved to continue to make Bloomsburg a place where people are encouraged to discuss issues, a place where we can agree to disagree, a place where everyone can be heard.

You are part of Bloomsburg's heritage, part of its strength. Your love for this university transcends arduous times. You have helped and encouraged us in the past and I know you will be there for Bloomsburg in the future.

I have complete confidence in the ability and wisdom of our students, faculty and staff to stay focused on our primary mission — education, research and service. Together, with your continued support, we will build a stronger Bloomsburg for those who come after us.

Survey of alumni very positive

In November 1992, alumni were randomly selected to participate in a telephone survey to determine how attitudes about Bloomsburg University affect their inclination to support various programs. The results of the survey were very insightful, indicating that alumni are pleased with the direction of the university and the alumni association.

Ninety-three percent of alumni surveyed felt that communication from the university is sufficient.

Bloomsburg, published three times a year, is by far the best source of information, with a readership level of 99%. Articles featuring alumni (97%), class notes (90%) alumni association news (90%), and general campus news (80%) generate the greatest interest. We'll try to fill your request with informative articles on interesting events and people. If you have ideas for mini-features, please send us a note or call while the idea is fresh in your mind.

Alumni stated that they had a positive overall experience at Bloomsburg (98%), with 98% satisfied with the education they received, and 96% reporting their education being comparable or better than what friends received at other colleges. This is news we love to print because it lets everyone know that Bloomsburg is providing a quality education. Just as we are proud of our alumni, our alumni are proud of Bloomsburg with 96% encouraging today's students to attend BU.

Ninety-nine percent of those surveyed had made a gift to the university at least once in the last ten years. Almost half indicated making a yearly gift. One-third of the annual gifts made by alumni are over $100. The overwhelming reason for giving was "appreciation" with duty, loyalty and special interest listed as close seconds. More than 1/3 of the alumni surveyed consider giving to Bloomsburg a high or top priority, with another 40% considering BU a medium priority. Alumni are most interested in giving to three areas: a new library, their own college or department, or the area of greatest need (unrestricted).

Identification with Bloomsburg is most strongly linked to the university as a whole, with ties to graduation class a trailing second. Love abounds at Bloomsburg, with more than one-quarter of our graduates marrying another BU grad. Thirteen percent of alumni with children have had their children also attend BU. Two-thirds of our alumni have been back to campus in the last four years, most attending Homecoming or an athletic event.

Finally, Bloomsburg continues to grow both physically and in the hearts of our alumni. Your comments serve as an inspiration to us all, and your continued involvement in the university lets the students of today know that alumni are more than just faces in a photograph. Please participate in whatever way you can — and send us feedback as to how we're doing. Your information and ideas make Bloomsburg University a better place for all.

If you would like a copy of the results of the complete survey, please write Susan Helwig, Associate Director of Development, Carver Hall, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815 or call 717-389-4128.

Dear Alumni and Friends:

It has been a painful time for those of us who love Bloomsburg University. At such a time, we need to embrace each other and reflect on those enduring things about our university that are a source of strength and pride.

While it may seem that the world has been crashing down around us, many things have not changed. Talented and hardworking students are going to class and participating in a student life program that is unsurpassed in its scope and quality. Dedicated faculty, with a love of teaching, are providing an educational experience that maintains and enhances the academic reputation of the university. Administrators and support staff, who take pride in their work, are trying to provide the best possible environment for learning and living together.

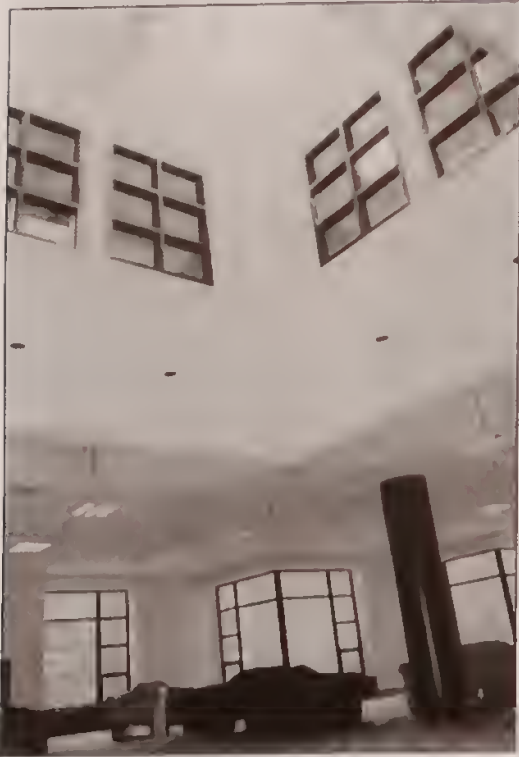

Alumni and friends of the university — who make up the largest segment of our university family — share common dreams for the future, including a new library, with their gifts of time and financial resources.

At other times when our university community has been relatively free of difficulties, it has been easy to feel immune from the troubles of the larger world in which we live. Now, when we are tested, we should all respond as we would if a friend or family member were undergoing a troubling experience. It is a time for understanding and supportive words for those who have acted in good faith with the best of intentions. At the same time, we must reject the racism — blatant or subtle — that tears us apart. We must celebrate the gifts of tolerance and respect, freely given to each other.

Through it all, we must hold fast optimistically to our ideals and our hopes. Living through these cloudy days will make us more appreciative when the sun shines once again.

Expanded Kehr Union re-dedicated

Light streams through the skylight into the union's fireplace lounge at the west end of the building.

After 18 months of expansion and renovation work, the Kehr Union was rededicated on Tuesday, January 19.

Dr. James McCormick, chancellor of the State System of Higher Education and Bloomsburg's president from 1973 to 1983, was the featured speaker.

The reopening of Kehr Union brought together the student snack bar, dozens of student and administrative offices and recreational facilities after they had been dispersed around the campus and into the town for three semesters.

The expansion, begun in the summer of 1991, nearly doubled the size of the union to accommodate a student body that has grown dramatically since the union was constructed.

"When the union opened in 1973, we had 3,000 students. Now we have 7,000," says Dr. John Trathen, director of student activities and the Kehr Union. "No state money was used in the project. The project is being funded entirely by students, who voted to assess themselves an additional $50 a semester to pay for the expansion."

The $7.5 million project was designed by Bower, Lewis and Thrower of Philadelphia. Robert Feaster Inc. of Northumberland served as general contractor.

The master of ceremonies for the rededication was John McDaniel, chairperson of the Kehr Union Governing Board and a junior criminal justice and social welfare major from Philadelphia.

Other speakers included Kevin O'Connor, chairperson of the Council of Trustees; President Harry Ausprich; Janice Michaud of Lawrenceville, N.J., president of the Community Government Association; Donald McCulloch, director of planning and construction; and Dr. Trathen.

The ribbon was cut by McCormick, O'Connor and Ausprich, along with three students: Michaud, McDaniel and Mary Katherine King of Philadelphia, program board president.

The unions named in honor of Marguerite W. Kehr (pronounced Care), who served as dean of women at Bloomsburg from 1928 to 1953. Kehr came to Bloomsburg State Teachers College from Lake Forest, Michigan, where she had been dean of women and assistant professor of education.

At Bloomsburg, she was dean of women, a confidante, supporter and friend to several generations of women at Bloomsburg. Upon her retirement in 1953, she was recipient of a special award given by the National Association of Deans of Women. During her career she was adviser to the U.S. National Student Federation and to the National Student Association.

Kehr was a graduate of the University of Tennessee, earned master's degrees from Wellesley College and Bryn Mawr College, and held a Ph.D. from Cornell University.

In 1973, from her home in Lake Charles, La., she returned to Bloomsburg to participate in the dedication of the building which was to bear her name. She died on March 1, 1975.

The new union features a ballroom which can accommodate 300 banqueters or 600 people in theater-style seating. Dressing rooms for performers and a serving kitchen are also provided. The ballroom can be divided into three sections and has a balcony and large windows to provide natural lighting. Conference rooms are available to accommodate groups from five to 600 people.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the expanded union is the two-story wall of glass on the north side of the building (facing Montour Hall), through which sunlight streams into the building. Inside, oak and cherry wood panels on the wall create a warm, natural look.

The homey atmosphere is carried further in a lounge with a working fireplace. Above the lounge, sunlight streams in through a skylight. The fireplace lounge is "non-reservable," which means that it is always open to students.

The Career Development Center has relocated from Ben Franklin Hall to Kehr Union, providing students with comfortable interview rooms to meet with prospective employers.

"The whole idea behind moving the center is that it's so close students will take advantage of it before their senior year," says Trathen.

A new computer lab provides an additional 12 computers for student use.

The university's Student Health Center, relocated to Kehr Union from McCormick Center for Human Services, has more than doubled in size and now provides an elevator large enough to accommodate a stretcher. A self-care unit will allow students to take their temperature, weigh themselves and obtain a few select over-the-counter medicines.

"Every move I make has to be approved by students," says Mike Sowash, associate director of student activities and Kehr Union. "I work for the students. It's my job to see that they get the most for their money. Seventy-five percent of the building is open space, student space or meeting space."

In the planning phase of the expansion project, students and union administrators visited unions at other schools throughout the state.

"We tried to find out what other people would change in their buildings, to learn from their experience," says Dr. David Hill, comptroller for community activities and the union. "The general ambience, the level of the decor, is very high. That doesn't mean we spent a lot of money. We were able to use to architect and interior designer to select finishes that give a rich appearance without high cost."

"We've always had the philosophy that if you give the students something nice, they'll take care of it, and they always have," says Trathen.

Two women enjoy the view toward Old Science Hall as they sit in the lobby.

President Horry Ausprich makes remarks during the re-dedication of the Kehr Union in the new bollroom.

John Trothen, director of student activities and the Kehr Union, and Mike Sowash, associate director, stand in the glass-enclosed stairway on the north side of the building.

Chancellor James H. McCormick cuts the ribbon to officially reopen the facility.

Professor teaches 'dollars' in Russia

(The following article was written by Jeff Long of the Press-Enterprise staff, Bloomsburg.)

When Bloomsburg University economics professor Saleem Khan sat down in the section of the Moscow Pizza Hut where you can pay in dollars, he forked over 20 of them for half a medium pizza.

If he had sat in the ruble-paying section, he'd have spent about 455 rubles, the equivalent of $1.50.

"But you have to stand in line," Khan said.

The Russian economy is in chaos.

Khan and a colleague, retired BU finance professor Bernard Dill, spent two weeks last October in what was once the Soviet Union, teaching teachers there about how money works in the United States. They were part of a "Trainer of Trainers" program sponsored by the World Bank.

Khan and Dill spent a week each at the State Finance Academy in Moscow and the Tashkent State University in the capital city of the Republic of Uzbekistan, where they spoke to professors in their respective fields.

"They had very little knowledge of it, so they had a hard time grasping the concept of a market economy," said Khan.

UNDER THE SOCIALIST SYSTEM of the Communists, Khan said, the economy had very little to do with what Americans typically associate with it. Mostly, it was based on military industries.

"Pricing and profits did not play any role," Khan said. "So there was no incentive system."

"Basically, in the central system of economic planning, the bureaucrats decided what to produce and how much to produce."

Khan said about half of the professors in the universities they visited favored moving to a market-based economy — where the law of supply and demand is king — but others strongly opposed such a move.

"Those who really want to change are younger faculty," he said.

But a walk down a Moscow street shows how desperately the economy in the former Soviet Union needs to shift gears.

"If you looked for a cup of coffee, you couldn't find it," said Khan. "Their basic strength has been the defense industries. So the civilian sector was starved."

THE ECONOMY in the former Soviet Union must change, however, if the emerging democracies are to give their people what they want, according to Khan.

And what they want is a life-style similar to that enjoyed by most Americans. A cup of coffee. A reasonably priced pizza. An end to long lines for everyday items such as bread, milk and toilet paper. Radios and televisions. Automobiles.

But inflation was rising at 30 percent a month when Khan visited in October. And the average income was the equivalent of about $20 per month.

Khan said just 20 percent of the economy has been privatized. The rest, he said, will take years — even decades — to follow.

After all, they must learn basic economic philosophies taken for granted in Western countries: loans, interest rates, capital investment strategies.

To begin, the former Soviets are turning to Western professors such as Khan and Dill to teach the teachers.

"I had a lot of warm feelings for the people of the United States," Khan said of his reception. "There is some feeling that the United States has been instrumental, either directly or indirectly, for the change they are experiencing."

"They're looking for help from the United States," he added. "Not in monetary support, but from moral support, technical support, educational support."

KHAN IS ANXIOUS to help. He's sending over hundreds of books on market-based economic systems for the libraries of the universities he visited.

He's also hoping to establish a link between BU and those universities, and possibly bring Russian scholars here in an exchange program.

Maybe some of the American educational system will rub off on his counterparts, too, Khan said.

"When we teach in the classroom, it is more related to real-life issues," he explained. "There, it's more like a monologue. He stops teaching and walks out of the classroom. There is no interaction, no discussion."

TEACHING IN RUSSIA — Saleem Khan, professor of economics at BU, had an opportunity to teach for a couple weeks last fall in the former Soviet Union. He spent a week at State Finance Academy in Moscow and a week at Tashkent State Economic University in the Republic of Uzbekistan, where he was awarded the honorary title of professor. Dr. Khan is shown teaching a class of teachers (interpreter is standing at left) and with a group of teachers who were in one of his classes.

Young grad: 'My life isn't over yet'

The following article about Terry Ann Oliver '88 was written by I. Marc Kleiman and appeared in the Northeast Times of Philadelphia on September 30, 1992.

It was around three in the afternoon, the sky was clear, and all seemed well for the seven young adults who were heading to the shore for a St. Patrick's Day weekend party.

But they never made it. And that March 10, 1990, will forever scar Northeast resident Terry Ann Oliver.

"We started to drift off the road for some reason, and all of a sudden we were out of control," Oliver, 26, recalled. "I started to scream, 'We are flipping,' and the next thing I remember was being in a helicopter and I couldn't feel my legs."

TO THIS DAY, NO ONE KNOWS why the accident occurred. But its violent nature caused Oliver to be paralyzed from the waist down.

Two passengers were hospitalized for about a week, she said. One fell into a coma for a day. The others were held for observation, and they quickly recovered.

The process has been more strenuous for Oliver. With all the fortitude she could muster, Oliver has been unwilling to believe that she can't live the life she enjoyed before March 10, 1990, and she has been doing her best to rebuild it — even taking a first-place ribbon in a Schuylkill River rowing competition earlier this month.

The past two years have certainly tested Oliver's will. After the accident, she was flown to the Cooper Medical Center in Camden, N.J., where doctors learned she had suffered a spinal injury. She was transferred to Thomas Jefferson University Hospital for further diagnosis.

OLIVER KNEW RIGHT AWAY that she had been paralyzed, but she didn't know the extent of her injury. Two days later, doctors told her that her spine had been severed, and surgery was needed.

Rods were inserted in her back. She remained in a body cast for seven months.

"I was very upset at first," she said, "but after I was brought to a rehabilitation facility, my depression subsided after seeing how hopeless some other people were. I remember saying to myself, 'I'm only twenty-three years old, my life isn't over yet.'"

Eventually, Oliver was put into a smaller cast for five months, and then spent two additional months in a hospital to learn how to use a wheelchair.

LOOKING BACK, as traumatic as the experience was, Oliver thinks she has come to terms with it rather well.

"There were nights that I was very upset, especially when I found myself sitting in my hospital bed alone. I started to think of all the things I would never do again," she explained. "For a year I had to rely on everybody to do everything for me. I am an independent person, and I hated being helped constantly. The first year was difficult."

Before the auto accident, she was active and energetic. "I was extremely athletic," she said. "I played a lot of sports, mostly field hockey and soccer, but I enjoyed many others."

Terry Oliver

After leaving the hospital, Oliver relied on the support of her family to lift her spirits. "My family was very supportive and kept me active all the time. They never really gave me a chance to think about it," she said.

Now, two years after the accident, Oliver has been able to rekindle her athletic spirit because of successful therapy and rehabilitation.

She doesn't have control of her stomach and lower back muscles, but she can regain stability in those muscles from exercises and her involvement in sports.

"It is a personal goal for me to regain control of those muscles," she said.

SOME OF HER FAVORITE SPORTS now include skiing and jet skiing. And this past June, with the help of new equipment, Oliver started rowing and became involved in the Philadelphia Rowing Program for the Disabled.

On September 12, Oliver took part in the 11th annual Bayada Regatta, a competition on the Schuylkill River for disabled participants. She and her rowing partner won the 1,000-meter open doubles race in two minutes and 6.23 seconds.

Jeff McGinnis, coordinator of the Philadelphia Rowing Program for the Disabled, said that everyone is impressed with Oliver's athleticism.

Oliver rows twice a week and races on weekends. One of her goals is to row in a singles race without the aid of balance equipment placed on the sides of her boat. She has raced in a singles boat, but has relied on the balance aid.

WITH THE HELP of some home modifications, Oliver remains an independent person. Doors have been widened, a shower chair has been added, and chairlifts operate along the stairs.

Her daily routine hasn't changed much, either. She dresses herself and heads to work, relying on new technology — including hand-operated accelerators and brakes — to drive the car.

In fact, Terry Ann Oliver is so eager to lead a typical lifestyle that you won't find her around the house that much.

"I go to bars, clubs, the shore, the mountains, and Broadway shows. I am pretty active on the weekends," she said.

After graduating from Archbishop Ryan High School, she attended Penn State University and transferred to Bloomsburg University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in math.

Oliver now works as a pension analyst. As for her long-term goals and plans, she isn't promising anything, but she is certain of a few ideas.

"I want to get into teaching or something where I can be actively involved with other people for a good purpose," she explained. "Perhaps I will work with the disabled, or work for better legislation (for the disabled). I want to work with people."

Oliver said she doesn't need incentives to keep going, or reasons to not be depressed. She is high-spirited, quite self-reliant. But if she ever does feel down, or if she ever needs an extra push, she thinks back to her college days.

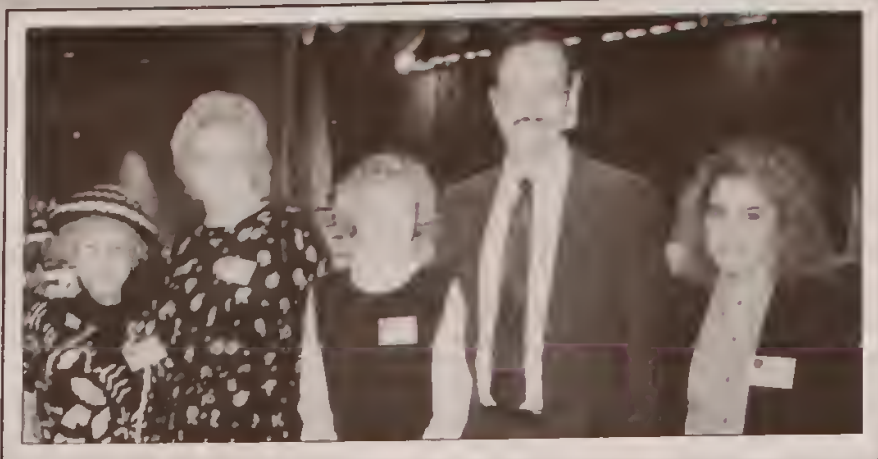

"I don't have any heroes per se, but when I was at Bloomsburg, there was a guy on the football team who was paralyzed in a game," she recalled.

"When I was first in the hospital, he came to mind and that helped me realize that I could have a life. I never really got to know him, but he is still an inspiration to me."

Future teachers spend week in Harrisburg

OPENING CLOTHING BANK — Mary Harris, assistant professor of curriculum and foundations, cuts the ribbon marking the official opening of the Harrisburg School District's clothing bank, believed to be the first of its kind in the state. Looking on is Richard Angino, a Harrisburg attorney with Angino and Rouner law firm which donated 500 warm winter jackets to the clothing bank.

Fifty-one junior and senior elementary/secondary education majors at Bloomsburg traded a January week of winter-break vacation for a week of hard work in the Harrisburg School District to further develop their teaching skills. The students participated in the second year of the Urban Field Experiences program, part of the Bloomsburg/Harrisburg Partnership Project.

The program, funded by Pennsylvania Campus Compact, Community Government Association and the Bloomsburg University Foundation, provides an extended field experience for the future teachers. Bloomsburg students spent their days working with a mentor teacher in both elementary and secondary schools in the Harrisburg School District.

Evening programs provided them with additional knowledge about the school and the Harrisburg community through presentations by various Harrisburg educational, civic and community leaders.

Mary Harris, assistant professor of curriculum and foundations, served as project director for the field experience. Norma Gotwalt, director of elementary education in the Harrisburg School District, played a key role and was responsible for developing and organizing the evening programs. "This program benefits everyone involved. Most importantly, it helps truly prepare future teachers to be effective and meet the rewarding challenges of an urban classroom. They learn things in our schools no textbook can adequately explain," said Gotwalt.

The week-long teaching experience enabled Bloomsburg students to become familiar with the customs, values and language of children from a diverse culture. Students enhanced their teaching skills through utilizing teaching concepts and strategies known to be effective in working with children of diverse cultural backgrounds.

"Thirty of last year's 40 participants said they would not hesitate to apply for teaching positions in an urban environment after their Harrisburg experience. This provides a more experienced cadre of beginning teachers for our urban schools," Harris said.

Student population in the United States is more racially and ethnically diverse than in any previous generation. This population has increased most rapidly in urban areas. "Given this changing population, a major priority in teacher education must be preparing teachers to work with students from diverse cultural backgrounds within an urban setting. It is imperative teacher trainees are provided experiences in that environment," said Harris. "Teachers need to be prepared to deal with a multiplicity of differences: race, gender, class, learning styles, language and culture in a situational setting, since teaching concepts are best understood and applied in actual circumstances."

Harris understands the demands and rewards of teaching in an urban setting. Prior to coming to Bloomsburg, she spent 27 years in Los Angeles, most of them working in the Los Angeles Unified School System. She was a high school English teacher, remedial reading teacher, coordinator and consultant, high school counselor, and an administrator. She had an assignment as a head counselor in a junior high school in Watts, where 95 percent of the students were African Americans, 98 percent of the students were qualified for federal funding, and there were seven security personnel (two of them armed) roaming campus at all times.

In addition to the field studies experience, Harris is an adviser to Students Together Alleviating Racial Tension and the Urban Education Association. — Susan M. Schantz

Students provide impetus for clothing bank

Students from Bloomsburg University helped celebrate the official opening of the Harrisburg School District's clothing bank last December by donating more than 50 large bags of clothing. "Because of Bloomsburg University, we're able to open our school district's clothing bank, believed to be the first of its kind in the state," said Dimitri Zozos, coordinator for social services in the Harrisburg School District. "Bloomsburg students got us started. They have helped us meet a very real need in our community."

Students Together Alleviating Racial Tension (START) conducted the "If You Can't Wear It, Share It," campaign at Bloomsburg, asking students, faculty and staff to donate unwanted winter clothing. The response was enthusiastic. Despite the pressure of final examinations, START and members of the Christian Student Fellowship spent hours sorting and packing the clothing to be delivered to Harrisburg in time for the official opening and dedication of the center on Dec. 15. The center is housed in the basement of the Lincoln Early Childhood Center in Harrisburg.

This was the second year Bloomsburg students conducted a clothing drive to benefit children in the Harrisburg schools. After Bloomsburg students held a similar drive in 1991, residents of Harrisburg responded by giving additional clothing. The Angino and Rouner law firm donated 500 warm winter jackets. Other organizations provided clothing racks, shelves and other needed items to facilitate distribution.

"After Bloomsburg students got things started, clothing just kept coming and, frankly, we didn't know what to do," Zozos said. "In 1991, we opened a temporary clothing bank to distribute the donations. We couldn't believe the quality of what had been given. It was tremendous clothing and the children and their parents were thrilled."

Continued donations resulted in the opening of a year-round distribution center. Clothes are given to children and parents who are homeless, in disadvantaged homes or otherwise in need. Distribution is the responsibility of teachers, counselors and principals in the Harrisburg School District. Many times children lacking warm clothing do not attend classes during the harsh winter months.

"We are very pleased this program will help our students stay warm and stay in school and we thank every one who participated in this very worthwhile effort," said Randolph G. Outten, superintendent of the Harrisburg School District.

"We're thrilled the clothing bank is open. This is just one of the many benefits realized by Bloomsburg University and the Harrisburg School District through the Bloomsburg/Harrisburg Partnership Program," says Mary Harris, assistant professor of curriculum and foundations and one of START's advisers.

Class representative dies

We just received word that Grace Gotshall Panncbaker '20 died on February 24 in Montpelier, Vt., at age 92. She served as a faithful class representative for many years, and enjoyed attending her class reunions on Alumni Day.

She taught school for 10 years in the early part of her life. She returned to Bloomsburg in 1964 when her husband, the Rev. Foster L. Panncbaker, retired. He died in February 1978.

Surviving are a son, Lee; a daughter, Ruth M. Snyder; eight grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Sara F. Lewis '10, formerly of Forty Fort, died February 13 at age 102. She taught at the Fort Street Elementary School in Forty Fort for 47 years before retiring in 1957.

Beulah Anderson Bronson '12 celebrated her 100th birthday on December 13. After graduation, she taught in the Plymouth schools for $40 per month and board in local homes. During World War II, she resumed teaching in the Lake School District, retiring in 1957.

Katharine M. Gallagher '21 of Germantown died November 7 at age 90. An artist, poet and puppeteer, she attended the School of Industrial Arts, now part of the University of the Arts in Philadelphia.

She was an illustrator and poet who drew and wrote frequently for children's books and magazines. She was a regular contributor to Jack and Jill magazine from 1940 to 1958.

She worked as a puppeteer for the Philadelphia Department of Recreation as an arts and crafts specialist from 1958 until her retirement in 1971, teaching recreation leaders and volunteers the art of making marionettes and other puppets.

In 1977, she received a citation from Mayor Frank Rizzo in recognition of her years of service to the city recreation department.

Surviving are a son, John; two daughters, Louise G. Leech and Martha Witman; and nine grandchildren.

Camilla Herman Garey '21 was featured in article in The Scranton Times written by Gene Brislin:

"Mrs. Cecil 'Camilla' Garey, who will become a nonagenarian this year, belies her age and is blessed with endless energy which, with the help of 15 women of Clark's Green United Methodist Church, has been recycling Christmas cards into beautiful little holiday houses which are filled with cookies or candies for distribution to lonely recipients during the yuletide season.

"The year-round project has existed for more than two decades. The gracious lady was already hard at work last week sorting the windfall of greeting cards in preparation for the weekly Tuesday session of the dedicated workers which she heads, that began as a sewing circle. . . .

"A native of Mehoopany, she was reared in an education-indoctrinated family. After graduation from Bloomsburg, she continued studies at the University of Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania State University and Columbia University. She began teaching at Mehoopany High School, where her father was principal when she was born, and later became principal there.

"(She) also taught at Factoryville-Clinton Twp. High School. In 1959 she was invited by the superintendent of public instruction to work in Harrisburg in that department. She later became president of the state PTA and vice president of the national PTA."

She is the mother of one son, Herman.

Victor Ferrari '39 of San Antonio was honored by President Bush as the nation's 943rd Daily Point of Light. The Bush White House daily selected a "point of light" honoring a person who successfully addresses social problems through direct acts of voluntary community service.

Ferrari, 76, was recognized for his work as director of the USAA Insurance Company's student-mentoring program.

"I want to share this award with the staff members who do the administration of this program and the 950 volunteers who are associated with one-on-one mentoring and junior achievement," he said in an interview.

"We have seven people who do the administration work, and there are 950 volunteers from USAA who do mentoring in 10 schools once a week for a minimum of one hour," he said.

The White House, in its announcement, said Ferrari has recruited an additional 2,600 other mentors, enabling the program to be duplicated in 31 schools throughout San Antonio.

The volunteers review homework assignments with students, read aloud and discuss world events with the youths, stimulating and encouraging the students to stay in school, officials said.

During World War II, Ferrari was a navigator on a B-24 bomber. On a mission over Holland in 1943, his plane was shot down. With the aid of underground fighters, he was able to evade German troops for over six months and eventually made his way back to friendly lines.

Ferrari joined USAA in 1971 and served many years as vice president of operations. In retirement, he has continued to serve as director of the mentor and junior achievement program.

Frederick L. Houck '39 of Catawissa died November 17 at age 75. After teaching two years in Catawissa, he served during World War II as a member of the 5th Army Blue Devils in Italy, where he earned the Bronze Star.

He was a longtime teacher at the Wallingford-Swarthmore School District near Philadelphia until his retirement in 1975. He earned a master's degree at the University of Pennsylvania. He did post-graduate work at Rutgers University and at Penn.

He held several patents for electromagnetic games.

Surviving are his wife, the former Ruth Pounding; three sons, Fred B., Kenneth, and Donald; 14 grandchildren, and a brother.

William R. Martley '39 of Manhasset, N.Y., died November 10 at age 76. He was a trust officer at Chemical Bank of New York until his retirement in 1981. He was a veteran of World War II and the Korean War.

Return to BU for Alumni Day on April 24

As Old Man Winter gives us his last thrust of wintery weather, Bloomsburg alumni can look forward to warmer weather and Alumni Day on Saturday, April 24. Plan to visit the campus and take in our spring finery! Every alum needs to see the newly-expanded Kehr Union with its many fine new facilities while taking in the beauty of the campus in spring.

If you enjoy arts, crafts and food, you can take a stroll downtown to visit a myriad of booths during the annual

Klemkosky

Renaissance Fair, a very popular annual event to welcome spring.

Reunions are scheduled for classes ending in three and eight up to 1948. If you are a member of our golden Class of 1943, you will have the opportunity to attend a special dinner event on Friday evening.

Plan to celebrate with our special award recipients at the Annual Awards Dinner on Saturday evening. Distinguished Service Awards will be presented to Benjamin Duke '52, John Wool '56 and Louise Campbell Kline '59. The Young Alumnus of the Year Award will be presented to Scott Righter '84.

Please check the list of events scheduled for Alumni Weekend, which appears on page 10, as you plan your visit to campus.

In addition to Alumni Weekend, many other alumni events — including after-work mixers, pizza parties, Berrigan Sub picnics, and luncheon lectures — are planned for this year throughout the state and in other parts of the country. Homecoming will be held on Saturday, October 23. A complete schedule of these activities is on page 31.

We urge your participation in all these events. If you would like to serve on one of these planning committees or as a volunteer at the Penstemaker Alumni House, please call the Alumni Office: 1-800-526-0254.

Individual Donors Key to $1.5 Million Received in 1992

Gifts from individuals — Bloomsburg alumni, parents, employees, and friends — continue to comprise the most important source of private funds for the university. "We are very grateful to all our contributors," said President Harry Auspich. "It is only with their help that the university is able to maintain its 'margin of excellence' commitment."

Individuals' contributions amounted to 28% of the total dollars received. A planned gift, valued in excess of $450,000, established by one alumnus, added another 33% to the individual giving category.

Annual income from the Fred Smith Golden Rule Trust Fund, an endowed scholarship account, has been helping students since the mid 1980s. In 1992, 68 students benefited from this individual's commitment to higher education.

Donations from businesses and corporations accounted for 10% of the total received. This includes matching gift company contributions.

Gifts in kind were valued at nine percent of the total contributed by both individuals and the corporate sector. These gifts included computer hardware and software, books, a bronze sculpture, and an offset printing press.

Remaining gifts came from other foundations, deferred gifts, the alumni association's affinity card, and miscellaneous contributions.

Of the total contributions received, 42%, or $628,752, was made available for various activities and projects supported by the Annual Fund. These included academic scholarships, the Scholars Program, faculty and staff development, academie equipment purchases, special projects, alumni association activities, and the publication of Bloomsburg.

Ten percent of the gifts, $144,234 were designated for athletic scholarships and projects. These gifts came primarily from Bloomsburg alumni, friends, employees and businesses.

The Trust for Generations campaign garnered 13% of the total, $197,162, for endowed funds which will help support library acquisitions, scholarships, and academic equipment purchases. Originally a three-phase, $3.5 million campaign, $3.7 million has been received in cash, pledges, and planned gifts.

Remaining contributions and planned gifts, $533,466, received in 1992, were designated for Phase IV of The Trust for Generations, Library Construction.

'On behalf of all our students, faculty, and staff, thank you for all that you do. Your gifts continue to help make this university an exceptional institution for learning. I am confident that our students are grateful for your generosity that provides them with scholarships and helps to support the many different programs which exist because of your thoughtfulness. We deeply appreciate the partnership you have developed with Bloomsburg University.'

'Thank you, Parents, for your generosity during the 1991-92 Parents' drive. More than $62,000 was raised to support the education of our children in 1991. We have a goal of raising $75,000 by the end of June. Please continue to fulfill your pledges. This level of support is unequalled in the State System of Higher Education. Your generosity truly testifies to the high esteem in which Bloomsburg University is held. On behalf of tomorrow's leaders, we express our thanks!'

'Thank you for your interest in and support of Bloomsburg University in 1992. With your help, more than $285,000 was received from alumni for the Annual Fund campaign. Your generosity and loyalty are very gratifying, and I know that you will continue to show your care for Bloomsburg by participating in the 1993 campaign.'

Plans for a New Library Building Unfolded

By Dan Vann & John Pitcher
Andrus Library Staff

More than an architectural gem, Bloomsburg's new library will be the premier public resource for information and collections in the region. By using the latest information technologies, it will serve today's students, as well as children, adult readers, and businesses and industries of the surrounding communities and counties. A local point for resources, exhibits, and programs, it will attract attention from the region as well as the university community.

Ample study and lounge areas, conference rooms, an audiovisuals listening and viewing area, provisions for word processing and photocopying, and convenient reading areas for specialized collections like microforms and maps will be included. The new library will consolidate all of its collections in a single building — the Curriculum

Materials Center, University Archives, the bound periodicals prior to 1984, and other resources that now must be retrieved from off-campus storage when needed.

The building design will accommodate present and future technologies that will identify the information and resources which future students will require. Access to computerized information will be available in many forms through university databases; a local area network (LAN) of heavily used CD-ROM indexes; abstracts and text; direct access to national databases; on-line public access catalog with term-searching and boolean capabilities; and modems linking students, faculty, and others to the library from home and campus using personal computers and telephone lines.

Enhanced computerized information sources and print resources will provide a reference collection for students, faculty, and community patrons. Business and professional directory information, an extensive legal collection, consumer resources, and investment information will continue to be available. Reference desk librarians also can help identify sources for books and periodicals that are not in the library's collections.

The general collection remains the largest and most comprehensive public collection of books and periodicals in northeastern Pennsylvania. Special seating for children as well as adults will be available in the Juvenile and Young Adult Collection. Popular collections include the University Archives and the Art Exhibition Catalog Collection as well as other special collections that are being developed such as the Frank Lauthach Literacy Collection and the Covered Bridges Collection.

The new library will offer something of interest for all ages and preferences, and it will be visited both for itself as a structure and for its resources.

BU Receives $50,000 toward New Library

By Susan M. Schantz
Acting Director of News and Media Relations

Bloomsburg, one of 14 universities in the State System of Higher Education, has been notified that it will receive a $50,000 gift in support of its fund-raising campaign to build a new library. The gift was made by F. Eugene Dixon, Jr., founding chairman of the State System's Board of Governors and limited partner of the Philadelphia Phillies Baseball Team.

Bloomsburg's $50,000 share is part of Dixon's $1 million donation to the fund for the Advancement of the State System of Higher Education, Inc. The largest gift the fund has received, the donation provides the System a major impetus in meeting the shared capital funding challenge program known as Operation Jumpstart which was introduced last October by Gov. Robert P. Casey to repair, renovate, and construct state university facilities.

The funding of Bloomsburg's library and projects at other state-owned universities included in the program is based on the cost-sharing concept that the state provides 75% of the construction cost and the university attempts to raise 25% from private sources. Historically, the state has funded all academic and administrative construction for the State System.

FITZ EUGENE DIXON

"As we begin our campaign to raise $2.375 million, or 25%, toward the $11.5 million cost to build a new library, we are sincerely appreciative of this most generous gift," said Anthony M. Ianiero, assistant vice president of development. "This gift will help Bloomsburg and other universities in the State System to meet the fund-raising goals required to provide desperately needed capital projects."

Bloomsburg's proposed new 125,000 square foot library will increase seating to 1,219 and hold more than 400,000 volumes. Recommendations regarding design and the proposed site have not been finalized.

BU Parents' Fund Top in State System

By Susan Mitchell Helwig '82
Associate Director of Development

Bloomsburg University students have a lot to be proud of — a solid school with a good academic reputation, caring professors, a new student union, and winning sports teams. And on the homefront, they have a lot to be proud of, too — their parents! The Parents' Fund, which is supported solely by the parents of current students, received more than $63,000 in the 1991-92 academic year. The highest in the State System of Higher Education, this figure is more than 10% above the next highest amount raised and more than 300% higher than the average Parents' Funds at the other 13 System Universities.

Annual gifts to The Parents' Fund enable the university to sustain its commitment to excellence in undergraduate education. The faculty and administration of Bloomsburg University are proud of the confidence that parents have shown and are grateful for their generosity.

Architect Selected for New Library

Burkavage Design Associates of Clarks Summit has been selected to design Bloomsburg's new $11.5 million library. Selection of the architectural firm is made by the state's Department of General Services.

Burkavage Design Associates has done previous work at the university. The firm designed the McCormick Center for Human Services, the last newly constructed academic building on campus, which opened in 1984.

The next step of the design process is an orientation meeting which will be attended by representatives of the design firm, the university, and the Department of General Services.

Foundation Board Appoints Five New Members

THE 32-MEMBER BLOOMSBURG UNIVERSITY FOUNDATION board is responsible for securing private funds to help maintain and enhance quality and excellence at the university by cultivating and soliciting individuals, corporations, and foundations. Members represent business, professional, and civic leaders from throughout the Commonwealth. These five new members were appointed to the Foundation Board in August 1992.

Elbern (Ed) H. Alkire, Jr.

Ed Alkire's appointment to the Foundation Board follows a term as a member of Bloomsburg's Council of Trustees and as founding member of the College of Business Advisory Board.

An employee of Air Products and Chemicals, Inc. since 1962, Alkire received that organization's Award for Excellence in Community Service to Education. Since 1991 he has been Director of the Quality Process for the gases group.

Alkire graduated from Lafayette with a degree in chemical engineering and obtained his masters degree in the same field from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. In 1975 he served on the Governor's Review of Government Management for Pennsylvania. Alkire also was a trustee at his alma mater, Lafayette College. Currently he is chairman of the Lafayette Fund.

A resident of Emmaus, Pa., Alkire and his wife, Gratia, have one son.

Kenneth S. Gross

Ken Gross renewed his relationship with Bloomsburg University in 1990 when he established the Kenneth S. Gross Scholarship Fund for returning adult students who are also single parents. A student himself who withdrew from Bloomsburg in the 1970s, Gross earned his bachelor's degree from BU in 1990.

In 1991, Gross made his second $100,000 gift to the university toward the renovation of the Carver Hall auditorium, which was renamed the Kenneth S. Gross Auditorium.

Now president and CEO of the Kenneth Gross Investment Group, which manages personal, financial, and business investments, Gross was the former owner and co-founder of Tri-State Securities Systems, a multistate alarm sales and installation business in Eastern United States.

Presently Gross is a member of the board of directors of the United Cerebral Palsy, Swarthmore, Pa. and serves as chairman of the Ardmore Business Association.

Gross, his wife, Kristine, and two children live in Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Alex M. Kozlowski

A graduate of Bloomsburg University for both the bachelor's and master's degrees, Alex M. Kozlowski taught business education for eight years before joining the IBM Corporation in 1972. During his 20 years with IBM, Kozlowski has served as marketing representative and marketing manager for the office products division and as program manager for the national accounts division. Presently he is the state education manager for IBM's EduQuest.

Kozlowski is involved in many volunteer activities in his home community of Wayne, Pa., and for 20 years has served as lector in his church. He and his wife, May, have three children. Their daughter, Karen, is an elementary major at Bloomsburg.

Patricia L. Schaal

Patricia L. Schaal is a senior account executive with AT&T where she supports the Business Communications Services division by marketing long distance services and information technology for national and international business customers. Before joining AT&T in 1983, Schaal was employed for 15 years with Bell of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and Harrisburg. She earned her bachelor's degree in political science from Ursinus College.

Schaal is active in the Allied Arts Fund, a fund-raising organization to enhance economic development in Central Pennsylvania through the support of cultural programs, and is a member of Pennsylvania's Voter Participation Steering Committee and Pennsylvanians for Choice. She also serves as an elder in her church.

Parents of two teenage daughters, Schaal and her husband, Chuck, reside in Mechanicsburg, Pa.

Richard F. Wesner

Presently a mining consultant with Earverson Anchinty & Greenwald of Pittsburgh, Pa., Richard F. Wesner, served 22 years as president and CEO of Kennedy Van Sann Corp., Danville, Pa., a subsidiary of McNally Pittsburg Inc. Prior to coming to Danville, Wesner was first a field service and process engineer and then a sales manager for McNally Pittsburg. Wesner also worked as a sales and combustion engineer and later served as vice president and general manager of mining operations of Boone County (WV) Coal Corp. for six years.

Wesner received his bachelor's and master's degree in mineral preparation engineering from The Pennsylvania State University following his honorable discharge as a First Lieutenant in the Army Air Corps. A World War II veteran, he was an air traffic control officer in the China-India Theatres of Operation.

A trustee of Bloomsburg University from 1983 to 1990, Wesner also served eight years as a director of Susquehanna University. Presently he is a director of the First National Bank of Danville and the Geisinger Foundation and Geisinger Medical Center.

Wesner lives in Danville with his wife, Florence. They are the parents of three daughters.

'On behalf of the Husky Club members, we extend our sincere thanks to the friends and fans who supported the Huskies in 1992. Nearly $100,000 was given for athletic scholarships and programs. The Huskies also benefited from gifts in kind valued at $46,000. Your continued enthusiasm and loyalty are very much appreciated.'

Grimes Awards for 1992

Seventy-nine Bloomsburg University alumni have earned distinction as recipients of the fifth annual Richard "Burly" Grimes Loyalty Awards. They earned this recognition in 1992 by attending a regional alumni event, by returning to campus for either Alumni Weekend or Homecoming, and by contributing to the Annual Fund.

Attending both Alumni Weekend and Homecoming can substitute for a regional alumni chapter event, since the latter are not held in all areas every year.

The award honors "Burly" Grimes, a retired teacher from Harrisburg, who has missed only one Alumni Weekend or Homecoming since he graduated in 1949. He has served a total of 13 years on the Alumni Board of Directors.

We salute the following alumni who are recipients of the 1992 awards (number in parentheses indicates number of consecutive years the award has been earned):

Global Awareness meeting set

The second annual meeting of the Global Awareness Society International will be held in New York City on July 2-4, 1993.

The executive officers of the organization include three Bloomsburg University professors: Chang Shuh Roh, president; James H. Huber, executive director; and James C. Pomfret, treasurer.

The purposes of this International Society are to promote awareness of the diversity of cultures within our global village; to enhance our understanding of the political, economic, social, demographic, technological, and ecological interdependence among members of the global village; and to increase sensitivity to issues related to rapid globalization.

These purposes will be attained by developing a mutual support network of scholars, professionals, interested people and organizations. The intent is to provide multiple forums for the exchange of research, knowledge, and expertise on people-oriented issues related to globalization.

The society has identified seven global neighborhoods: Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin American, North America, Oceania and C.I.S.

The first annual meeting was held last May in the Washington, D.C. area.

For more information, contact Professor Rolt at Bloomsburg University.

Lee T. Fredericks '64 has been named superintendent of the Wilson School District in West Lawn. He began his professional career at the Pottsville Area School District as a teacher of sixth grade reading and mathematics and as a junior and senior high school coach of football, basketball and track.

In 1967 he took charge of 10 elementary schools with 1,500 students and 80 professional staff.

With his master's degree and some additional graduate work completed, he joined the Wilson School District in 1972. For 10 years he led the program of Wilson's elementary schools.

In 1982 he was named assistant superintendent, and in 1985 he was awarded a doctorate at the University of Pennsylvania. He served as substitute superintendent for the past year.

Randy Young '64 was featured as "Teacher in the Spotlight" in the January 6 edition of The News-Item, Shamokin. In his third year on the faculty of Southern Columbia High School, he teaches ecology classes, life science and physical science.

"Ecology class is the one area I could give most of my students the level of awareness to build on a knowledge base, an action level, of life-long learning," he noted.

Ever since he was a child, he has been interested in nature and preserving the environment. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Alliance for Environmental Education, Columbia County Conservation District team leader for the school's Environment teams, and founder of the school's district-wide recycling program.

Scranton educator new trustee

John J. Haggerty of Scranton has been appointed to the Bloomsburg University Council of Trustees by Governor Casey.

Haggerty has more than 38 years of experience in education and public service. He retired in 1987 as director of special education for

Haggerty

Northeastern Educational Intermediate Unit 19. In 1987, he was named Special Educator of the Year by the state Department of Education.

He was a Scranton school director from 1988 to 1992.

Haggerty began teaching in the Scranton School District in 1950. For much of his career, he taught the disabled at Scranton Technical and North Scranton Junior High Schools.

He was named assistant director of special education for Lackawanna County in 1966 before assuming his position at Intermediate Unit 19.

Haggerty holds a bachelor's degree in education from St. Thomas College in Scranton (now the University of Scranton) and a master's degree in psychology and guidance from the University of Scranton. He is a state-licensed psychologist and has done additional graduate work at New York University.

He is a former vice president of the board of the White Haven Center, a state institution for handicapped students and adults in Luzerne County. He is also a former member of the board of the Lackawanna County Vocational-Technical School.

Presently, Haggerty is a consultant with the Lackawanna County Juvenile Detention Center and works with the Head Start program. He also serves as chairman of the special education committee of the Diocese of Scranton.

A veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps, he holds membership in the American Psychological Association, American Guidance Association, Appalachian Trail Conference and Disabled American Veterans.

He and his wife, Mary Louise, are the parents of a daughter, Mary Kay, an attorney in Brookline, Mass., and a son, James.

Spectrum wins more recognition

Spectrum, a regional magazine for Columbia and Montour counties, has been judged the outstanding college magazine in the nation by the American Scholastic Press Association.

The full-color publication is produced within the magazine editing and production class at Bloomsburg University, taught by Dr. Walter Brasch.

Spectrum was the first college-produced magazine to be awarded a perfect 1,000 points, based on content, coverage, design and creativity.

For each of the past four years, it was one of fewer than two dozen magazines in the country to be designated an All-American magazine by the Associated College Press. It is one of only five magazines to have received five marks of distinction four years in a row.

The current issue features stories about bungee jumping, the controversy over the Danville-Riverside bridge, the proposed 911 communications program for Columbia County, a printer whose works include many of the nation's best-selling novels, the controversy surrounding a Bloomsburg business, the mystery behind what has happened in 50-cent pieces, and Karaoke.

It also contains profiles of the country's first female district justice, police officers who have been shot in the line of duty, and a ghost that haunts a local inn.

Spectrum uses revenue generated by advertising and circulation. The magazine takes no university or public funds.

For a free copy of Spectrum, call the Alumni Office (800-526-0254).

Wyoming Valley alumni host potential students

26 countries represented on campus

One of Madhav Sharma's first projects when he came to Bloomsburg as coordinator of international education last summer was to work on bringing a student from South Africa to campus.

This semester the effort has paid off as Lucky Mabokela attends classes at Bloomsburg through the Bishop Desmond Tutu South African Scholarship Fund. Mabokela is receiving support from the Bloomsburg University Foundation for room and board.

"I'm delighted to see a growing international student population at this university," said Mpho Tutu, daughter of Bishop Tutu, at a recent reception on campus for international students.

"We believe that an international education is the only way for black South Africans to become leaders," said Tutu, who directs the scholarship fund that her father established with funds he received as a Nobel Peace Prize winner.

The number of international students at Bloomsburg has grown steadily over the years. This semester there are 72 international students from 26 countries on campus, up from 25 students a decade ago.

Sharma is responsible for helping international students make a smooth transition from their home countries.

Sharma knows first-hand what it is like to be an international student. A native of Nepal, he has spent more than 20 years studying and working in the United States.

At Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, he received a master's degree in community development and a doctorate in higher education.

He then served as an assistant professor and special assistant to the dean of the College of Technical Careers at the university. He received a bachelor's degree in English, history and political science and a master's degree in culture and archeology from Tribhuban University in Kathmandu, Nepal.

He has also been a representative of Nepal at the United Nations, and has coordinated international programs for the Fulbright Foundation in Nepal.

American education must become more international, says Sharma.

"In a time when multinational companies do more than 50 percent of their business overseas," says Sharma, "we have no choice but to internationalize our curriculum if we want to be effective."

"I'd like to send all 7,000 Bloomsburg students overseas before they graduate. At least once in their lives they should have an experience overseas," says Sharma. "When you travel abroad, you have a better perception of your own life."

Enrollment on target

Enrollment at the University remains on target, with an official headcount of 7,188 students during the current semester. Total undergraduate enrollment of 6,072 includes 624 non-degree students. Graduate enrollment is 492 students. "We continue to be very pleased with both the number and the quality of students applying for admission to the University," said Bernie Vinovski, director of admissions. "For the past five years, we have received about 7,000 applications for our 1,000 openings for freshmen."

Vinovski said applications received for the fall 1993 semester demonstrate the university's popularity continues to grow. He indicated there has been an increase in applications received from minority students.

"Only limited enrollment opportunities remain for students applying for admission for this fall. We have already reached capacity in academic areas such as teacher education, nursing and allied health."

Total full-time equivalency for the spring semester is 6,404, including 6,696 undergraduates. Undergraduate FTE is calculated when dividing the total number of undergraduate credit hours scheduled for the semester by 15 — the average number of credit hours for a full-time undergraduate student.

All figures are derived from the university's cumulative fifth day enrollment report, prepared by the department of planning, research and information management.

International

Bloomsburg has a dozen programs for American students who wish to travel overseas. Three programs, for study in Scotland, Italy and China, are new this year.

"My short-term goal is to have one or two more programs each semester," says Sharma.

Sharma is also particularly proud of the university's international student clubs.

"When I came here there were only three," says Sharma. "Now there are seven, the French, German, International, Spanish, European, Bangladeshi and Chinese."

Besides providing a way for international students to meet, Sharma encourages the clubs to become forums for Americans to learn about other cultures.

"One of the requirements of the international clubs is that for each international member, they must have two associate American members," says Sharma.

"I would also like to have an international living center where each international student lives with Americans as roommates." — Eric Foster

Ken Gross Auditorium renovations nearly done

Renovations in the Kenneth S. Gross Auditorium in Carver Hall should be completed by March, according to Robert Parrish, vice president for administration.

The redecorated auditorium will include all new seating and flooring which will provide more elbow room for the audiences.

The new seats are maroon with antique gold edge plates. The walls have been painted olive gray, and the ceiling is teal blue.

"The auditorium was crowded with 880 seats," said Parrish. "We have reduced the occupancy to 600 seats, which are larger and better spaced."

To accommodate overflow crowds, the steps in the side sections of the balcony have been carpeted for seating.

The auditorium will be cooler during performances on hot summer days, with the addition of air conditioning.

The renovations were paid for in part by a gift from alumnus Kenneth S. Gross of Bryn Mawr. Gross, a Bloomsburg undergraduate from 1970-1974, donated $100,000 for auditorium renovations. He earlier donated $100,000 to establish a scholarship program for non-traditional students.

Marguerite Bierman of Williamsport served as a consultant for the redecoration of the auditorium. She hand-painted the wood columns and balcony panels to simulate black marble streaked with green.

Behind the scenes, improvements include an intercom system from the control booth to the stage and an improved electrical system. — Eric Foster

Lehigh Valley alumni host potential students

Alumni in the Lehigh Valley hosted a party for high school seniors in that area who have been offered admission to BU.

Hall of Fame nominations sought

The Bloomsburg University Hall of Fame grew to 40 members with the October inductions of eight former athletes. Receiving the university's highest athletic honor is something these people will cherish forever.

There are many more deserving people who should be honored by induction into the hall. Nominations are now being sought for next fall's induction ceremonies and may come from any source, providing the nominee meets the following criteria.

A candidate for induction must have participated in at least two full seasons of varsity intercollegiate competition at Bloomsburg. A person may be inducted 10 years after receiving his or her bachelor's degree from Bloomsburg or another accredited institution. A person may not be inducted into the hall without a degree unless a majority vote of the committee determines that person did not graduate "due to extenuating circumstances."

Nominations may also include Bloomsburg alumni who have made outstanding contributions or offered extraordinary service to athletics at Bloomsburg while undergraduates or after graduation. Nominations may also include coaches or other athletic personnel who have made outstanding contributions or offered extraordinary service to Bloomsburg athletics.

Persons may be nominated who attended Bloomsburg but did not play or coach, or who had very limited athletic careers but went on to achieve success in athletics as a coach at another university, as a coach or player in professional sports, or as an administrator in college or professional athletics.

All nominations should be submitted in writing to Jim Hollister, Director of Sports Information/Athletic Development, Waller Administration Building, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

SSHE Center named for board chair

The State System of Higher Education's consortium center in Harrisburg will be named for F. Eugene Dixon Jr., chairman of the State System's Board of Governors and limited partner of the Philadelphia Phillies. The designation recognizes Dixon's critical role as the System's founding chairman, and highlights the System's tenth anniversary year.

Dixon assumed leadership of the Board in 1983, when the System was created to link the state's 14 public universities under a central budget and policy framework. Overall responsibility for planning and coordinating the development and operation of the State System is vested in the 20-member Board. The Governors establish broad fiscal, personnel, educational policies under which the System universities operate.

Dr. James L. Larson, vice chair of the Board, praised Dixon's founding role, saying, "It was Mr. Dixon who gave leadership to the very shaping of the System, bringing commitment, wisdom, experience, and stature to the task."

The University Center at Harrisburg was renamed the "Dixon University Center of the State System of Higher Education of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania" following the Board's quarterly meeting in January. Dixon played a significant part in the acquisition of the six-and-a-half-acre campus for use as a center for higher education study in Pennsylvania's capital region. The five-building complex eventually will include the administrative center for System governance operations.

Philip D. Rowe Jr., chair of the Board's Capital Facilities Committee, said, "Now, as the State System approaches its tenth anniversary, it is appropriate that Mr. Dixon be honored for his time, energy, and support in seeing the system through transition and into operation."

"Generosity, selfless commitment, and unwavering support accurately describe Mr. Dixon's service as chairman of the Board," State System Chancellor James H. McCormick said. "He understands the necessity of purpose in one's deeds; the value of integrity in one's life; and the utmost importance of both in giving, whether of time, talent or personal funds. Mr. Dixon knows that real generosity must be in balance with genuine concern."

Dixon continued to demonstrate his commitment to public higher education in Pennsylvania recently with a $1 million donation to the Fund for the Advancement of the State System of Higher Education, Inc. The largest gift ever received by the System, the donation gives the System a major boost in meeting the shared capital funding challenge program introduced by Governor Casey to repair, renovate and construct state university facilities.

Governor Casey has pledged that the state will provide $102 million for "Operation Jump Start," a $124 million construction program earmarked for much needed, long-overdue improvements to university campuses. The donation represents the System's first real push toward the $22 million which must be raised to meet the Commonwealth's challenge.

As founding chairman of the State System of Higher Education, Dixon's contributions are broad indeed. During his tenure, Dixon has overseen the growth of the State System to the point where it currently enrolls 98,600 students in its 14 member institutions. He provided leadership in the formation of the System's affirmative action and equal opportunity plan, the development of the long-range planning document Priorities for Pennsylvania's State System of Higher Education During the 1990s, and the creation of the Fund for the Advancement of the State System.

Dixon, who lives in Lafayette Hill, is active in the leadership of higher education throughout the region. He is chairman of the Board of Trustees of Widener University and has served on the boards of the University of Pennsylvania and Temple University. Dixon has been awarded numerous honorary degrees from colleges and universities. He also has worked with scores of community organizations and foundations, serving as president of the Fairmount Park Commission and the Widener Memorial Foundation in Aid of Handicapped Children. Additionally, Mr. Dixon is the chairman of the Pennsylvania Horse Racing Commission.

Danny Hale takes over on gridiron

Danny Hale, former West Chester University head football coach, has been chosen as the Huskies' new coach. The selection of Hale to head the program followed a two-month search for a successor to Pete Adrian, who served in that role for the past seven seasons.

"He is a proven winner in this conference," said Mary

Gardner, director of athletics. "Danny exemplifies the characteristics we feel are necessary to build a solid, successful tradition at Bloomsburg. He stood out in a group which included so many outstanding football coaches and was very impressive during the interview process."

BU President Harry Ausprich echoed Gardner's remarks. "Danny Hale has all the experience and ingredients to make an outstanding coach at Bloomsburg. I am delighted he accepted our offer, and I wish him well."

In five seasons at West Chester, Hale's teams compiled an outstanding 40-13 overall mark while never experiencing more than three losses in any season. His best campaigns resulted in 9-2 records in 1987 and 1988. The Rams reached the NCAA Division II playoffs in the latter season losing to perennial power Jacksonville (Alabama) State. His teams posted 7-3 marks in his first two seasons and registered an 8-3 mark in 1986.

Hale was named Kodak College Division I "Coach of the Year" on three occasions and twice earned "Coach of the Year" in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference. In 1987, he also received the Philadelphia Daily News 1st and Goal "Coach of the Year." That season, the Golden Rams had nine players named to the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) Division II all-star team and 15 players chosen to the PSAC Eastern Division all-star team, including eight first-team selections. West Chester appeared prominently throughout the team and individual national statistical rankings during his tenure and possessed the nation's top scoring offense and rushing defense in 1987.

The Golden Rams maintained a spot in the national team rankings throughout much of his tenure and achieved the highest ranking ever attained by a PSAC member to that point reaching the number two position in the NCAA Division II ratings in 1987. His 1988 team duplicated the lofty national ranking reaching the second spot in the season's final poll.

Since departing West Chester following the successful 1988 season, Hale has been the owner/operator of the Cocoa Motel in Hershey. In addition to his business venture, he served as an assistant football coach at Hershey High School.

"I am so excited for the opportunity to get back into college coaching," said Hale. "I have been away from this level for four years, and I am enthused about the possibilities at Bloomsburg University. It is a place I respect so much for a number of reasons. The academic and overall athletic background speaks for itself, and the football program certainly got my attention early when it tagged my team in the first two years I was at West Chester."

Hale was referring to the Huskies' 34-31 win on a 50-yard touchdown pass with no time remaining in 1984 and an 8-6 BU triumph in 1985. The Huskies won the PSAC Eastern Division in both seasons and captured the overall PSAC crown in 1985 and advanced to the national semifinals.

Prior to his head coach position at West Chester, Hale was the offensive line coach at Colgate University from 1981 to 1983. The Red Raiders posted a 23-11 mark and qualified for the NCAA I-AA playoffs in 1982 and 1983. He went to Colgate from Bucknell University where he was the offensive line coach from 1975 to 1980 and served as the defensive coordinator and linebacker coach at the University of Vermont in 1974. He also served as lecturer and instructor on the health and physical education staffs at the latter two universities.

Hale is a 1968 graduate of West Chester State College where he received his bachelor of science degree in health and physical education. He earned his master's degree there in 1973. As an undergraduate, he was an all-conference selection and earned awards as the team's outstanding player and most valuable player. He helped the Golden Rams to consecutive appearances in the Tangerine Bowl and a perfect 10-0 season in 1967 when the squad won the PSAC title.

He played for one season with the Pottstown Firebirds, the semi-professional farm club of the Philadelphia Eagles before entering the United States Marine Corps where he performed as middle linebacker for the Quantico Marines. Following a three-year stint with the USMC, he has honorably discharged as a first lieutenant in 1972.

Centennial Gym renovations await funding

Proposed renovations to Centennial Gym, estimated at over $10 million, are in the capital budget recently signed by Governor Casey.

A capital budget only authorizes projects for funding, however. The actual release of money for projects is determined by the Governor's budget office.

The university plans to convert portions of Centennial Gymnasium to provide space for additional classrooms and offices.

BU goes 'Into the Streets' to help

More than 300 students, faculty and staff members braved unseasonably cold temperatures in November to volunteer their time to help local agencies conduct an afternoon of community service in conjunction with the national "Into the Streets" movement.

The program began with a rally on the steps of Carver Hall. The rock group "The Badlees," Right Off Records recording artists from Harrisburg, donated their time to perform from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. After brief remarks by students, faculty, administrators and community leaders, volunteers went to their assigned agency for a work session.

MARY HARRIS, assistant professor of curriculum and foundations, was among the speakers. Harris reminded the volunteers that ordinary people have changed the course of history.

"It was ordinary people who sat at the lunch counters in the south and broke the bonds of centuries of segregation," Harris said. "I stand here today full of hope — because of you. Because you are willing to work for change, for equality, for social justice, for the environment."

JOHN McDANIEL, treasurer of the Community Government Association and a junior sociology major from Philadelphia, said volunteerism gives students a "worthwhile sense of accomplishment, growth and development." McDaniel was one of the volunteers assigned to the Bloomsburg Women's Center, which provides ser-VICES to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

"It is important to shed more light on domestic violence and issues of assault," he said. "Men need to take a lead in making sure the message gets out."

The Rev. Robert Peiffer, coordinator of the university's volunteer services program, reflected on the importance of volunteerism in student development. "Programs like 'Into the Streets' give our students experiences of the heart that they can't get in the classroom. What we're trying to do is encourage a commitment to helping others that will last a lifetime."

Social workers can't begin to solve all the problems of daily life, according to Sue Jackson, associate professor of sociology and social welfare. "We all need to do our part to make a difference. Bloomsburg students, voting in record numbers, made a difference in Columbia County election results."

John Walker, vice president for university advancement, echoed the sentiments of all those who spoke as he emphasized the importance of working together to solve problems. "Together there is nothing we can't accomplish. When problems seem insurmountable, if we pull together we can handle them."

Walker and Peiffer recalled the university's tradition of encouraging and promoting volunteerism. Bloomsburg has been recognized by the Campus Outreach Opportunity League (COOL), the nation-wide organization which coordinates the "Into the Streets" program, as a national leader in the community service movement. COOL selected Bloomsburg as one of 50 campus sites, one in each state, to assist institutions in need of help in starting a volunteer services program on their campus.

Thirty-four universities in Pennsylvania took part in "Into the Streets," according to Karen Girton, Bloomsburg's student coordinator. "Social justice begins with a single action, a single act of volunteerism can make a difference," she said. "Many people want to get involved in volunteer work, but they don't know how to get started.

"I volunteer not just to help people, but to help people help themselves. I've learned a great deal from volunteering."

Participating agencies this year, in addition to the Bloomsburg Women's Center, included the Catawissa Senior Center, Berwick Hospital, Fishing Creek Alliance and Town Park Village. — Susan M. Schantz

State System cited as model in book

The American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) cites the State System of Higher Education as a model of an effective public university system in its recently released book, Shared Visions of Public Higher Education Governance: Structures and Leadership Styles that Work.

The AASCU researchers chose to study the State System because it is "a system that is representative of a number of such systems in the United States and one that we believe functions effectively."

"Faculty members, administrators and elected state officials with whom we spoke were of one mind that the (creation of the System) has led to enhanced academic quality and overall institutional effectiveness," the report said. "However, it is not only the legislatively created reorganization that achieved these results, but also the leadership skill and energy of a number of key individuals. From them we gained valuable insights into how an effective system develops and operates."

AASCU President James B. Appleberry said, "The ultimate gauge of any higher education governance structure is the extent to which it provides access to a high quality education for the state's citizens. This book identifies characteristics of effective governance that can be applicable to the practices of other states. . . ."

"However, governance structure alone does not determine success or failure. Of equal or greater importance is the performance of board members and education leaders," Appleberry said. "The problems facing higher education and the increased expectations of our colleges and universities underscore the importance of effective boards and institutional leadership."

AASCU's report lauds the efforts of Board of Governors Chairman F. Eugene Dixon Jr. in seeing the System through transition and into operation.

"The chair . . . is respected by both political parties; he has also served as a trustee and chair of large, complex universities. . . . With these qualifications, he has not only been able to be an advocate for the board and to understand his role and that of the board itself, but also has been able to withstand prolific . . . political pressures . . . thereby benefitting the system and its universities, permitting and encouraging sustained attention to increasing their quality and effectiveness."

Effective leadership at the chancellor and university presidential level also is required in a successful system, according to the AASCU report.

"The system head and institution heads hold highly visible and sensitive positions, and their success (as well as their organization's) depends substantially on their knowledge, experience, and sensitivity, and their capacity and desire to understand the perspectives of diverse constituents."

The book adds, "Pennsylvania's large system works effectively because the chancellor and the presidents are aware of the complexities of size and because the chancellor devotes much time and energy to keeping in close contact with the presidents."

The presence of state governmental leaders on the governing board of the university system increases dialogue and improves relations with one of the system's most important external constituencies, according to the AASCU data.

"In Pennsylvania, the representatives of the internal and external constituencies with whom we spoke believe this practice benefits the system, universities (and their people), and the General Assembly."

"We found among legislators a sense of satisfaction, at the minimum, and pride, in many cases, in the quality that the public institutions appeared to be achieving," the AASCU researchers noted.

The legislative members of the System's Board of Governors are Rep. Jeffrey W. Coy (D-Shippensburg), Sen. F. Joseph Loeper (R-Drexel Hill), Rep. Jere W. Schuler (R-Lampeter), and Sen. Patrick J. Stapleton (D-Indiana).

The AASCU report also cited the System's Faculty Professional Development Council and the Pennsylvania Academy for the Profession of Teaching as effective system-wide initiatives.

State System Chancellor James H. McCormick said, "The System's selection as a national model of effectiveness is a credit to the talent, energy, and hard work of the Board of Governors and all System constituencies, including the councils of trustees, the presidents, the faculty, the students and our System alumni."

AASCU is a Washington-based higher education association representing more than 375 state colleges and Classes win reunion awards

In order to provide an incentive for participation, and to acknowledge classes that do a good job of getting members back to Bloomsburg for their reunions, the Alumni Association offers three awards:

The Gold Award for reunion classes which have a participation rate of 25 percent of those invited;

The Silver Award for reunion classes which have a participation rate of 15 percent; and

The Bronze Award for reunion classes with a participation rate of 10 percent.

Award winners for 1992 were the following:

- Class of 1932 — Silver;
- Class of 1937 — Bronze;
- Class of 1942 — Gold;
- Class of 1947 — Bronze; and
- Class of 1952 — Silver.

These classes will be recognized on a permanent plaque at the Fenstermaker Alumni House.

Franklin Institute visit free

A special free visit to Philadelphia's Franklin Institute has been arranged for BU alumni, families and friends on Saturday, April 17.

Usually a $30 value — including admission, a ticket to the Omniverse Theater, and parking — the day is being sponsored by the Franklin Institute, the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association, and James J. Gallagher '64, a teacher at the Franklin Institute. Jim was Philadelphia's Teacher of the Year in 1990 and a finalist for Pennsylvania's Teacher of the Year award. He was also awarded the Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award that same year.

We will meet at noon in Room 406 (the combination to the entrance for that room is 1325). You may park in the underground garage and have your ticket validated.

Lunch will be on your own, or you may order a bag lunch (peanut butter and jam, turkey, or tuna salad sandwich, chips, milk, Coke or Diet Coke) for $5.

At 2 p.m. we will visit the famous Tuttleman Omniverse Theater to watch "Rainforest" on the four-story high screen.

Don't miss this great opportunity to bring your family and friends to enjoy a free day at Philadelphia's premier science museum.

"This is our way of saying thank you for supporting your university," Gallagher noted.

Make your reservation by calling 1-800-526-0254 prior to Wednesday, April 14.

Ausprich accepts state humanities post

Dr. Harry Ausprich, president of Bloomsburg University since 1985, has accepted the position of executive director of the Pennsylvania Humanities Council. He succeeds Dr. Craig R. Eisendrath who has served as executive director for the past 13 years. Dr. Ausprich will remain at Bloomsburg until he begins his new duties this fall.

The Pennsylvania Humanities Council is a private, non-profit organization which serves as the Commonwealth's affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities. The Council, with an annual operating budget of $1.4 million, awards grants to non-profit organizations for public programs in the humanities.

In addition, it offers a variety of resources, including speakers, reading-and-discussion groups, teacher-training seminars, publications, exhibits, films and videotapes which are used by thousands of Pennsylvania residents each year. Headquartered in Philadelphia, the Council is currently celebrating its 20th anniversary.

Ausprich has been a member of the Council since his appointment in 1987 by Gov. Robert P. Casey. He has been affiliated with state councils for the humanities for more than 20 years.

"When I was dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts at Iowa Humanities Council, one of the first such councils in the nation."

This will mark the first time in Ausprich's professional life that he has not been in a university setting. "Although I will miss seeing students every day, I'm certainly not leaving education. The work of the Council is really education in its most stimulating and purest sense. I'll be taking the university environment out to people who aren't normally exposed to such opportunities. From a personal point of view, it will be tremendously rewarding and fulfilling to truly make this kind of difference in people's lives."

Ausprich's tenure at Bloomsburg has been marked by a strengthening of university support for the arts, the renovations of major campus facilities, fund-raising gifts and pledges totaling more than $18 million, significant gains in the enrollment and employment of persons of color, and a renewed commitment to university public service to area business, civic, governmental and non-profit organizations. The university's extensive investment in volunteer service and the significant economic contributions of the university to the region have been hallmarks of his presidency.

"My years at Bloomsburg have been professionally challenging and I am proud of our achievements," Ausprich said. "I will be leaving a strong, stable institution with a fine physical plant, a highly qualified faculty and staff and an excellent student body."

A farewell message

Dear Bloomsburg University Alumni and Friends:

I write to inform you that I will be leaving the university later this summer, having accepted the position of Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Humanities Council. There are a number of initiatives I will be addressing during the remainder of my tenure at Bloomsburg, but my energies will be particularly concentrated on working with the development office in designing strategies to garner funds for the new library. I am pleased to note that the response to our initial requests for support has been quite positive, and I look forward to our continued success with this project.

Bloomsburg University continues to be a strong and highly regarded academic institution. The reputation the institution enjoys and the accolades it receives are well deserved. Our students receive an excellent education through the curricular and co-curricular programs and as graduates make enormous contributions to society. I am proud of this university and will always be highly respectful of its contributions to higher education.

I wish to thank you for the strong support you have given to the university during my presidency. Your on-going involvement with and investment in the university has greatly enhanced the university's ability to accomplish its goals. I know that you join me in wishing the university great success in the years ahead, and to each of you I extend my personal best wishes.

Sincerely,
Harry Ausprich
President

Grad nominated as interim leader

Curtis R. English, a 1956 Bloomsburg graduate and currently vice president for finance and administration at East Stroudsburg University, has been unanimously endorsed by the Council of Trustees to serve as interim president.

Final approval must come from the Board of Governors which meets July 15.

English would be the first Bloomsburg baccalaureate graduate to serve as president.

"I am delighted to be able to come and work on behalf of all the elements of Bloomsburg academics, student development, faculty and staff," said the long-time alumni board member. "I am particularly impressed with the high quality of Bloomsburg's academic program. It is the result of 154 years of dedicated effort by people who cared about Bloomsburg and fostered its spirit."

English expressed concern regarding the "underfunding" of all 14 state-owned universities.

"We've all suffered a cumulative effect of this shortfall, and it is a challenge to maintain and enrich academic programs under these circumstances," he said.

"The only way we will succeed at Bloomsburg is to cooperate with each other. Academics can't be successful if the rest of Bloomsburg's departments are not effective."

A formal naval commanding officer, English said he looks forward to providing "leadership by example" at Bloomsburg. "We really need to work on developing an organizational culture that nurtures respect between all campus constituencies. We need honest communication and equitable allocation of resources to demonstrate genuine concern for everyone on campus," he said.

English will be granted a leave of absence from East Stroudsburg where he plans to return at the conclusion of his interim presidency. His tenure at Bloomsburg is expected to be about a year.

At East Stroudsburg, English serves as the chief fiscal and administrative officer. He reports directly to the president. His responsibilities include formulating and implementing long-range plans, administrative and educational policies, identifying and analyzing needs, and allocating resources.

Here are some of the things he lists as accomplishments at East Stroudsburg:

- He actively and effectively supported minority and multicultural recruiting and retention, affirmative action and social equity programs.

- He was principally responsible for improving labor relations from what was reputed to be the worst of any state agency to what has been described by the chancellor as one of the very best.

- He organized the town/gown committee and continues to co-chair it with the East Stroudsburg mayor. Working with the president, he changed community/university relations from very poor to exceptionally good

- He provided leadership for the development of a computer-based integrated budget, accounting and financial reporting system.

English graduated from Bloomsburg with a bachelor of science degree in business education.

He received a master of arts degree in public administration from the University of Oklahoma in 1971, completing a thesis in "A Study of Personnel Practices."

In 1985 he completed a doctor of education degree in educational administration from Vanderbilt University. His dissertation was "Motivation and Leadership: Renewed and New Solutions to Old Problems and New Challenges."

Among other things, English has been:

- a teacher at Williamsport High School and Williamsport Community College;

- executive assistant and senior aide to the chief of Naval Education and Training, Pensacola, Fla., August 1972 to November 1974;

- commanding officer, Naval and Marine Corps Reserve Training Center, Armed Forces Reserve Center, Washington, D.C., June 1980 to June 1982;

- special assistant to the associate administrator for space flight, NASA, Washington, D.C., June 1982 to September 1983;

- commanding officer, Naval Reserve Personnel Center, New Orleans, September 1983 to March 1985;

- executive director, Presidential Commission on Merchant Marine Defense, Washington, D.C., April 1985 to June 1986;

- manager of corporate planning, VSH Corp., Alexandria, Va., July 1986 to April 1987.

English was recipient of the Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award in 1976. He was very active in the Washington, D.C. alumni chapter when he lived in Virginia and currently serves on the Alumni Board of Directors.

English and his wife, Janet, are the parents of three grown sons: Curtis, Gary and Scott.

Scrimgeour '53 to Head Campaign for New Library

Former Bloomsburg University faculty member and '53 graduate John Scrimgeour was recently named national chairperson for the university's library construction campaign, phase four of The Trust for Generations.

Launched in 1989, The Trust for Generations has garnered more than $3.5 million in gifts, pledges, and deferred gifts to create endowed funds for library enhancement, scholarships, and academic equipment.

The library construction campaign, A Treasury of Ideas, seeks to raise $2.5 million or 25% of the projected $11.5 million project to build a new library at Bloomsburg University. Although Bloomsburg has the fourth largest full-time equivalent enrollment among Pennsylvania's 14 State System of Higher Education universities, it ranks last in percentage of seating space in its library and in library square footage per student.

As national chairperson, Scrimgeour will lead Bloomsburg University's alumni and leadership giving program. During the next two years, he and other volunteer alumni and friends will help identify and contact prospective contributors for the library campaign. Scrimgeour will also assist with the training of volunteers, monitoring the progress of the campaign, and recognizing major contributors.

"The library is the most significant building on a university or college campus," says Scrimgeour, a Bloomsburg resident. "Bloomsburg's present facility is just not adequate to meet our needs. The construction of a new library has to be one of the highest priorities for the university."

Scrimgeour retired from Bloomsburg in 1991 as Bloomsburg's senior faculty member after 33 years of service as a faculty member, financial aid officer, and psychological counselor. He earned a bachelor of science degree in secondary education at Bloomsburg and master of education degrees in physical science and counselor education at Penn State-University Park. He is the current president of the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association.

Married to Jeananne Evans '54, the Scrimgeours reside in Bloomsburg.

MEMORIALS

The William A. Lank Memorial Scholarship Fund was recently established by the Bloomsburg University Foundation, Inc. Lank was a member of the foundation's board of directors since its reactivation in 1985.

From 1963 to 1971, Lank was a trustee of the Bloomsburg State College Council of Trustees and served as the Council's chair from 1964 to 1971.

The annual scholarship will be awarded to a student in the Department of Finance and Business Law.

Contributions to the William A. Lank Scholarship Fund may be sent to the Bloomsburg University Foundation, Inc.

Hi-Tech Arrives at BU Library

By Eric Foster
Editorial News Assistant

When you walk into Bloomsburg's new library in 1996, it won't be a library like you've known since childhood.

Sure, the library will still have stacks of books and magazines, says interim provost and vice president for academic affairs, Carol J. Matteson, who is also co-chair of the library construction steering committee. "But the new library will also be a branch of an invisible, world-wide network of libraries."

Through computers, library patrons will be able to search, not only the resources of Bloomsburg's library, but resources in libraries from across the globe. In some cases, the texts can be transmitted to Bloomsburg from remote locations and printed out for the patron's use.

Much of the groundwork for the technological library has already been laid at Bloomsburg.

This spring Bloomsburg's library was connected with the Internet, a global network of computers, allowing library users to explore the collections of libraries from California to Australia, including the Library of Congress with its collection of 26 million materials.

"People can use the Internet to access Penn State and Bucknell data bases and receive the materials they need through interlibrary loan," says John B. Pitcher, assistant director for automation and technical operations, who worked on Bloomsburg's connection with the Internet.

The connection with the Internet is part of a program in which all of the computers will be linked in a university network. This network will allow students and faculty members to do research from computer labs and offices anywhere on campus.

"This will mean that for our people at other campuses and in other countries, as long as they can get access to the Internet, they can be right back in Bloomsburg," says J. Daniel Vann III, dean of library services.

Not only will computer technology allow Bloomsburg library users to find what other libraries have in their holdings, but eventually they will be able to transfer the documents electronically as well, says Vann. "It is our plan to use the Internet for document delivery. If a faculty member or student wants an article from a journal, we will be able to get the document much faster than a fax, about five seconds per page."

Because the pace of scholarly research moves so quickly in some disciplines, the library will also subscribe to at least one electronic journal — providing students and faculty members with the latest information on a more timely basis than with printed journals.

Last August a CD-ROM reference network became operational in the library. The CD-ROM network links eight personal computers on the main floor of Andruss with six data bases stored in a computer. The data bases currently on the network are: 1) Business Index; 2) ERIC (Educational Resources Information Center); 3) ABI/INFORM, the computerized equivalent of Business Periodicals Index and Business Collections; 4) PsychLIT, a listing of resources related to psychology; 5) Access Pennsylvania, a shared catalog of books and other materials owned by libraries throughout the state; and 6) Periodical Abstracts, with citations and abstracts covering a wealth of subjects, from the arts, commentary, consumer news, health and medicine, politics, literary reviews, to social issues.

The new library, tentatively envisioned as having five stories with 100,000 square feet of floor space available, will be located on the softball field facing the present Andruss Library. Bloomsburg University must raise $2.5 million, or 25 percent, toward the construction of the library. The balance of the $11.5 million project will come from Commonwealth funds included in the Higher Education Capital Construction Program.

Plans for the new library include 50 computer stations for library employees, 30 computers available to students, faculty, and other users to research the library's holdings, and 20 stations designated for searching the CD-ROM databases.

Additionally, 500 technologically-supported study carrels are planned. While about 50 of the carrels will have computers on them, others will allow people with their own laptop computers to connect their computer with the library's network.

An architectural sketch of the library is scheduled to be completed in late July. Bids for the building's construction are scheduled to be awarded in October 1994, and the building is expected to be completed in May of 1996.

Kawneer Pledges $16,000 to Library

By Susan M. Schantz

Interim Director of News and Media Relations

Executives from Kawneer Corporation in Bloomsburg recently presented the first installment of the company's $16,000 pledge toward A Treasury of Ideas, the university's $2.5 million campaign to raise funds for a new library.

"Kawneer's generous gift is representative of the kind of positive support the university has received from our regional friends in business and industry as we work together to build a much needed new library," says Anthony Ianiero, assistant vice president for university advancement.

"Kawneer has been an active supporter of various university programs such as the Celebrity Artist Series, Husky Club, and the General Scholarship Fund. This recent gift continues the company's history of generous support."

The $2.5 million raised from private sources to build the library will be matched by $9 million of state funds included in the Higher Education Capital Construction Program (HECCP), which is part of Operation Jumpstart. The HECCP is designed to release state funds for capital construction projects for the state-owned and state-related universities through a unique cost-sharing program.

Mihalik is married to John Mihalik.

IS YOUR FAMILY FISCALLY FIT?

You have watched your family grow, and along the way your investments have grown as well. But your family isn't fiscally fit unless you have protected your assets for your loved ones by drawing up a will. If you don't, the state in which you live will decide how your assets will be distributed.

When you make or update your will, you also can provide for the future of Bloomsburg University with a charitable bequest, which will reduce the taxes on your estate. Your gift can be designated to the Library Construction Fund, scholarships, or your favorite project.

President's Ball Raises $3,000

Nearly $3,000 was raised to support the Music Department's scholarship fund and the university's general scholarship fund at the seventh annual President's Ball.

Music for the 138 guests was provided by Don Messimer '70, The Bloomsburg University-Community Orchestra, and the Bloomsburg University Studio Band. The ball was held April 17 at Magee's Main Street Inn.

$8,000 Raised for Athletic Scholarships

The annual Husky Club Auction/Dinner Dance, held April 23, garnered $8,000 to benefit the general athletic scholarship fund.

Following a buffet dinner at Magee's Main Street Inn, the 130 guests bid on more than 100 items, including trips, restaurant certificates, sports memorabilia, and gift items. Dance music was provided by Daddy O' and the Sax Maniax. Last winter, Maniax played at one of President Clinton's inaugural galas.

Grace Gillner Zane '10 of Effort died May 15 at age 102. She was a retired schoolteacher who had taught at Hamlin, Lake Ariel and South Caanan elementary schools. Her first teaching job was in a one-room schoolhouse in LaAnna, where she worked as both teacher and janitor.

In 1911 she went with her husband, an electrical engineer, to Panama, where he was involved in building the Panama Canal. On August 15, 1914, she was among the passengers who was one the Ancon, the first ship to officially pass through the canal.

At age 50, she received her master's degree in special education at Marywood College. She then taught special education in the Western Wayne School District.

She is survived by a daughter, Mary Jane Smith; six grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Rose Gronka Kielar '18 returned to Bloomsburg on Alumni Day, April 24, for the 75th anniversary of her graduation from what was then the Normal School. Less than three weeks later, President Ausprich received the following letter from Mrs. Kielar's four daughters:

"We want you to know how much we, and Mother, enjoyed the Annual Luncheon on Alumni Weekend. Though she realized it was unlikely any other member of her class would return for the occasion and that she wouldn't know anyone else in attendance, she was determined to mark that milestone in her life, the 75th reunion of her graduation from Bloomsburg. She was always proud of her affiliation with the school. One line in the Alma Mater says it all: 'Years to come shall find us ever True to Bloomsburg still.'"

"We'd like to thank you and the members of the Alumni Association who gave her the recognition she so fully deserved and that 'made her day.' The treatment we received — from the President of the University to the delightful and energetic Husky Ambassadors — was an example of the spirit she must have felt about the school.

"Along with our thanks, we must send the sad news of Mother's death on Tuesday, April 27th. She was privileged to have been able to enjoy life to the very end. She spent a pleasant day with her eldest daughter and son-in-law who were visiting from Ohio. (The following article was written by Dotty Maare, religion editor for the Press-Enterprise, Blaamsburg, and appeared in the May 8, 1993 edition of that newspaper.)

Phyllis C. Michael has been writing hymns for 48 years — hundreds of hymns to be exact. Well, actually, there is no exact count.

"Oh, I never keep a distinct account," Mrs. Michael said, "but 400 is probably pretty close to the amount."

However, when you ask her where she gets the inspiration for the hundreds of hymns, her response, in an instant, is precise: "It comes from above . . . it seems to come when I'm quiet and listening . . . you know, you have to listen," she said.

On Sunday, May 16, she had a chance to hear numerous choirs from the area perform many of her anthems at a special service sponsored by the Berwick Ministerium.

"I feel greatly honored (that the service was held), but please say this about the service . . . 'It celebrated the ministry of Phyllis Michael, not the works of . . . I want God to have the glory, not myself.'"

The seed of her desire to glorify God was planted about 72 years ago when she was around 12 years old. The place was Berwick's First United Methodist Church. The occasion was to hear Adam Giebel, a blind composer.

"I was sitting in the very front seat (that day) . . . and I guess a little bit of the art of writing must have rubbed off on me," she said about Giebel's talent for writing music.

Then in 1926, when Michael was 18 years old, another experience, again in First United Methodist Church, watered the seed planted six years earlier.

"I was singing in the First Methodist Choir, 'A Charge to Keep Have I,' when through my soul came an urge of a charge to keep . . . a God to glorify . . ." she remembered.

"From then on I knew I had a definite call to serve the Lord . . . a definite call to a ministry . . ." she said. "Of course, I didn't know until years later what that ministry would be."

Nineteen years later, in 1945, Mrs. Michael's ministry sprouted when she herself grew weak. Afflicted with peripheral neuropathy, a disease of the nervous system rendering her barely able to walk, she and son Robert, then 11, were quarantined with her younger son, Keith, who was suffering from scarlet fever.

Because of the quarantine, she was unable to be with her husband, Arthur, or her critically ill mother, and thus became depressed and felt deserted by God.

It was at this lowest point that she looked out her window and, watching a "patch of heavenly blue" appear, replacing "a huge gray cloud," she wrote the words to her first hymn, "Take Thou My Hand."

"The words came all at once . . . all four verses," she said. "God gave the words . . . I just held the pen."

Hundreds of hymns later, "Take Thou My Hand" is still her favorite. "It expressed my very feeling at the time . . . and it came so easily . . . right from the top . . . I didn't have to change a thing," she recalled of the hymn that, in 1951, won first place over 2,000 other entries in a contest sponsored by Standard Publishing Co.

Since that time, the nurtured sprout has flourished into a fruitful ministry and is still growing, even as Mrs. Michael, now widowed, continues to live with varying degrees of the imbalancing effects of peripheral neuropathy, treated since 1937 with injections of Vitamin B-12.

"I'm working on material every day . . . right now on a new book (of poetry) that's a little bit different," she said. "It's especially for persons who are terminally ill or those who are caring for them . . . I don't think there is anything out like it."

"(The book) is Beyond the Blue . . . and it's about heaven and the joys of being there . . . sort of easing the way in," she said.

Mrs. Michael, whose poetry has been contracted and published by such world-famous publications and names as Guideposts, Decision magazine, Ideal and Joni Eareckson Tada, has published 14 books of poetry, some in foreign languages, along with hymns and cantatas published and sung all around the world.

She has had 30 poems published by Kregel Publishing Co. in the Sourcebook of Poetry, along with the writings of Annie Johnson Flint, T. S. Eliot, Grace Niohl Crowell, Margaret Clarkson, Edwin Markham and Oswald J. Smith.

Hi, Lord, It's Me, a devotional book she wrote for troubled youth, is currently on the editorial desk at Chariot Books, a division of David C. Cook Publishers, awaiting a decision.

Having amassed numerous national and international honors and awards throughout her career, she was honored again in May by her hometown of Berwick when she was inducted into the Berwick High School Academic Hall of Fame.

She said she doesn't want to forget the 165 music students she taught piano, organ and voice in her home over the years.

"They are all a part of the family," she said. Giving of herself to people she views as family also came into play when, in 1991, no longer able to care for an 11-room house, Mrs. Michael sold Oak Haven, the place she and her family called home on a 60-acre farm between Jonestown and Huntington Mills. At that time, she donated her Wurlitzer organ with its six-foot chimps to Sweet Valley Church of Christ.

"And don't forget to mention I taught for five years at Fairview Avenue Elementary School, from 1928 to 1933," she said. She also substituted in the Northwest School District and taught in Northwest High School, where her husband was a math teacher for 42 years.

She earned a bachelor of music degree after completing a seven-year home study course from Chicago University Extension School of Music.

Her son Robert, a retired school superintendent, lives in Montana, and "Dr. Keith" is an electronic program manager in Michigan.

Faculty award scholarships

Bloomsburg University's chapter of the Association of Pennsylvania State College and University Faculty recently awarded six $300 scholarships to non-traditional students. The scholarships are awarded in memory of deceased faculty members.

The scholarships were presented to students age 25 or older who show academic promise and financial need.

Larry E. Bohner, a senior psychology major from Danville, was awarded a scholarship named in memory of the late Ellen Barker, professor of psychology.

Bernadette M. Lindenmuth, a junior medical technology major from Mt. Carmel, was awarded the scholarship in memory of the late Eloise Hippensteel, professor of nursing.

Michael A. McCormick, a junior business and computer and information systems major from Bloomsburg, was awarded a scholarship in memory of the late John Edward Kerlin, professor of mathematics and computer science.

Kim M. Nguyen, a sophomore psychology from Sunbury, was awarded a scholarship in memory of the late Levi Grny, professor of physics.

Lisa A. Pizziceni, a senior English major from Mayfield, was awarded a scholarship in memory of the late Lou Thompson, professor of English.

Francis "Doc" Sell '35, the originator of the first Venzke Relay Carnival back in 1939, will serve as Honorary Referee for the 50th anniversary of the Venzke Relays.

In his third year as track coach at Boyertown High School, Sell initiated the first Boyertown Invitational Relay Carnival, the Venzke Relays. He served as meet director from 1939 to 1957.

While attending Bloomsburg, he earned three varsity letters in cross country and four varsity letters in track while captaining both squads. He won Bloomsburg's first state championship with a winning time of 2:03.7 in the 880 yard run. In the fall of 1934, he ran in the nine-mile Berwick Marathon, placing 22nd among stars from Canada, Germany and New Zealand.

His first teaching job was at Kutztown High School, where he also coached cross country, junior high basketball and junior and senior high track. He went to Boyertown to teach in 1937 as well as coach the boys' and girls' junior and senior high track teams. In his second year at Boyertown, Sell started a cross country program and helped coach soccer.

Sell retired from his very successful coaching career in 1957, having received a coaching salary for only the final three years of his 20-year career. He retired from teaching at Boyertown Area High School in 1972. He continued to sell real estate and owned the Francis D. Sell Real Estate business.

He has served as a member of the Boyertown School Board since 1985. He is a charter member of the Boyertown Optimist Club, a past president and an organizer of the Biddy Basketball program, the Piggy Bowl, and the Oratorical Contest. He was also a supervisor of Douglass-Berks Township and served as president for six years, during which time the township building was erected.

He served eight years on the B.U. Alumni Board of Directors and was elected to the BU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1986.

A Walk Across England

September 24-October 4, 1993

This ten-day walk across the breadth of Northern England will take us through some of the island's most beautiful mountains and moorland. Our walk will begin in the Lake District region of Northwest England and finish across the North Yorkshire Moors — from St. Bee's on the Irish Sea to Robin Hood's Bay on the shores of the North Sea.

The walk passes through a hilly landscape of highland sheep farms through villages of stonewalled houses, inns, and ancient churches. It is the land of Wordsworth and James Heriot, author of "All Things Bright and Beautiful." The Romans passed through this region two thousand years ago followed by the Danes and Saxons. Traces of their passing can be found along the old pathways, churches and other buildings.

We will hike between 12 and 20 miles a day and spend each night in bed and breakfast establishments in the small villages on route. We will carry a day pack with such items as spare clothing, waterproof gear, camera and lunch. Extra clothing will be left in advance of each of our overnight stops. At the end of our walk, we will enjoy a day and evening in the ancient city of York.

We will travel from Manchester to St. Bee's on the day of our arrival in England, where we will prepare for departure the following morning. The entire itinerary is as follows:

Day 1 (September 24) — Fly from U.S.A. to England and travel to St. Bee's.

Day 2 — Begin walk at St. Bee's to Ennerdale Bridge (14.5 miles)

Day 3 — Ennerdale Bridge to Rosthwaite (14.5 miles)

Day 4 — Rosthwaite to Patterdale (17.5 miles)

Day 5 — Patterdale to Shap (16 miles)

Day 6 — By road from Shap to Ingleby Cross

Day 7 — Ingleby Cross to Clay Bank Top (12.5 miles)

Day 8 — Clay Bank Top to Glaisdale (18.75 miles)

Day 9 — Glaisdale to Robin Hood's Bay (19 miles)

Day 11 (October 4) — Return to U.S.A.

The cost of $1,600 includes air fare, train, and bus travel from the airport to the start of the walk; return to the airport from York; all accommodations in bed and breakfast establishments; one night at a hotel in York; transport of personal clothing from the start of the walk, to the bed and breakfast establishment at the half-way point, and the finish of the walk at Robin Hood's Bay. The cost does not include lunch and dinner, which we have left to the discretion of each participant. Lunch is generally provided by the bed and breakfast establishments.

The leader of the walk will be Roy Smith, who left his home in England at age 19 to become a safari and mountain guide in East Africa, leading groups into the Mountains of the Moon, Kilimanjaro and Mt. Kenya. He grew up in the area just south of where the walk takes place, and spent most of his youth tramping the hills and moors of northern England.

He has led several trips to other countries since joining the B.U. staff as director of experiential learning (QUEST) and the Corporate Institute.

To secure a place on this walk across England, please your name with a $200 deposit to Roy Smith, QUEST Program, Simon Hall, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815. The deposit is fully refundable, provided you inform Mr. Smith of your cancellation five weeks prior to the departure date. Payment in full is due 35 days before departure date.

six years she has served in all offices of the state board.

Mrs. Bitner has chosen as her theme for the year, "Soaring to New Heights in the Spirit of P.E.O." with a hot-air balloon as the logo. In her acceptance speech, she outlined the accomplishments of the past year and challenged the chapters to soar even higher by finding more project recipients and increasing contributions to the projects.

Mrs. Bitner is a charter member of Chapter BX in Glens Falls, N.Y., which was organized in 1980. She served as president from 1984 to 1986. She helped with the organization of Chapter CC in Glens Falls in 1987.

P.E.O. is international in scope with chapters in all states of the U.S.A. and most provinces of Canada. P.E.O. groups meet on college campuses, in resort and retirement areas and in some foreign countries.

The organization supports five international projects. The P.E.O. Educational Loan Fund makes loans to women for purposes of higher education. Cottey Junior College in Nevada, Missouri, owned and operated by the Sisterhood, is a fully-accredited liberal arts college for women. The International Peace Scholarship Fund makes grants to international women for graduate study in the United States and Canada to promote the philosophy of peace through understanding. The Program for Continuing Education provides grants to mature women to continue interrupted educational goals. The Scholar Awards provides grants to women of the U. S. and Canada who are pursuing a graduate degree or engaging in advanced study or research.

Mrs. Bitner has been a member of the Warren County Planning Board for the past 12 years, having been the first woman appointed to the board. She has served four years as chairman.

She is an elder and a trustee of the First Presbyterian Church of Glens Falls, is a member and past president of the Glens Falls Area of the League of Women Voters, is a board member of the Glens Falls Association of the Blind and is a member of the Glens Falls Club of College Women.

She has been an elementary teacher in Scotch Plains, N.J., and Voorheesville and Queensbury, N.Y.

She is the mother of two daughters, Lynne Ellen Ackner of Queensbury and Elizabeth Anne Bitner of Lake Jackson, Texas, and has one granddaughter. She resides in Queensbury with her husband, Dr. William L. Bitner III, president of the Class of 1956.

of placement and proudly reflects on an average placement rate of 95 percent of those completing degree requirements.

Garinger has helped thousands of students with their employment searches at an amazingly successful rate.

"The wonderful thing about a life spent helping young people is that a tiny bit of you goes with each of them and hopefully is passed on forever," said Garinger. "It's a great way to gain immortality."

Garinger enjoyed his role at Misericordia so much, he doesn't look at this move as a retirement.

"To retire, you must first have had a job," he explained. "My professional life at Misericordia has been so rewarding that I never thought of it as a job. I'm not retiring, I'm just moving on to the next phase of my life."

Garinger's career in education began as a secondary science teacher in the Paoli Area School System in Chester County in 1955. After a stint in the U.S. Army, Garinger returned to public school work as a guidance counselor at Tredyffrin-Eastown Junior High School in Berwyn.

Garinger helped open the new Valley Forge Junior High School as assistant principal in 1965 and was promoted to principal in 1966.

He returned to the Back Mountain in 1969 to begin his career at Misericordia. During his tenure there, he became a well-known advocate of student rights and a strong supporter of student activities, especially athletics.

"One of the greatest events of my life has been the development of the Anderson Sports-Health Center which provides Misericordia's student body and staff with a spectacular athletic facility."

Garinger was also popular throughout the area as "Uncle Arnie," thanks to his 17 years as a principal owner of the Onawandah Family Campground in Tunkhannock.

He and his wife, Marge, an internationally known official of women's sports, have four children: Tracy, Wendy, Amy and Bob.

supervisor of special education for the Central Susquehanna Intermediate Unit. He also earned a master's degree at B.U.

Surviving are his wife, the former Carol Hockenbroch; three children, Cathy, Michelle and Jeffrey; a grandson, his parents, two brothers and a sister.

Vera Derk '60, reading supervisor for the Wilson School District, attended an International Reading Association conference in San Antonio at which the district's family literacy program was one of 89 reading programs to be recognized. Only seven districts in Pennsylvania were recognized. There are 14,000 Chapter I reading programs in the nation.

Derk said the federally funded education program for disadvantaged children can actually serve all children who need special attention.

"We look at the children who fall below certain educational criteria, and take children into the program that are the most educationally needed," she said.

The district's Chapter I reading program focuses heavily on a whole language approach, using authentic children's literature—rather than dated vocabulary books and phonics workbooks—to teach skills and strategies.

Derk was recently re-elected to the B.U. Alumni Board of Directors.

Dale Krothe '60 has retired after teaching mathematics at Berwick Area High School for 33 years. He also served as department chair.

Vernon Sinn '60 has been re-elected tax collector of Montgomery Township. He earned a master's degree at Lehigh University.

have vision for organizations and then fulfill that vision; these are all on the agenda that The Dempsey Group intends to follow."

Through Dr. Dempsey's broad network nationally and internationally, The Dempsey Group has acquired The Vatican Museums, located in Rome, as a client. The Dempsey Group is to secure funding for the ongoing restoration and preservation of the Italian museum. The objective of the fundraising campaign is to encourage people to make an investment in the history of the Vatican Museum.

The Dempsey Group also is to establish for the first time in the United States, a clearinghouse, located in its office in New York City, to disseminate information about The Vatican Museums to people in North America.

The Dempsey Group, Inc., operates as a holding company. Over a period of time, the company will acquire other organizations under its leadership, the first of which is McCullough Communications of Pittsburgh. The 20-year history of the latter company complements the work of The Dempsey Group. It is noted for its design success rate throughout the last 20 years in the Pittsburgh area. Dempsey plans to maintain the quality material produced by McCullough Communications as well as expand its number of clients and services. Another purpose of the purchase of McCullough is to assist with the design and editing of brochures, fund-raising solicitations and capital campaign documents for The Dempsey Group clients.

Dempsey served for seven years as executive director and chief executive officer for The Eye and Ear Institute of Pittsburgh. The nonprofit, independent Eye and Ear Institute raises, administers and disburses funds for its projects, including research, innovative patient care programs, and long-term teaching support.

Before that assignment, Dempsey was development officer for Saint Vincent College in Latrobe, and founder of the Saint Vincent College Prevention Projects.

He has also been a faculty member of the Indiana University of Pennsylvania and a teacher and administrator in the Wyoming (Pennsylvania) Area School District.

He serves as president of The Greensburg Foundation, president of The Westmoreland Symphony Orchestra, and president of the Westmoreland Museum Society. He acts as international vice president for the restoration, preservation and social action committee for St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City and as a trustee of Westmoreland Community College. He volunteers for the American Heart Association, the March of Dimes and the Persad Center.

Dempsey earned his doctorate at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. He and his wife, the former Ruey Cloak '67, reside in Greensburg.

A friendship forge

Shiho Kanzaki

Though the pots had been cooling for six days, they were still warm to the touch when they were taken from the kiln at Karl Beamer's homestead in Mainville. More than 150 people gathered last Wednesday afternoon to see the pots and honor the man who created them, Japanese potter Shiho Kanzaki. It was Kanzaki's first firing in the United States.

The firing of the 180 works had begun more than two weeks before with a short Buddhist prayer. On Wednesday, another short prayer was recited before Kanzaki and his apprentices pried away the bricks and clay sealing the kiln's door.

The pots — large urns, tea cups, bowls and vases — which had entered as bare white clay, left the kiln hardened by fire, colored and darkened by wood ash. Wearing white gloves, Kanzaki, Beamer, assistants and friends placed the works on platforms on the hillside overlooking the kiln. Parts of the pots were encrusted with black, rough ash. Other parts of the pots shone in the sunlight with warm browns and oranges and subtle greens and blues. Inside the large urns, two hundred small teacups were fired and given as gifts.

The interest and admiration of the crowd was the culmination of nearly two weeks of very quiet, sometimes solitary work and years of developing friendship between Kanzaki and Beamer, associate professor of art and ceramist at Bloomsburg.

Kanzaki has been in the Bloomsburg area with his two assistants since April, building a traditional Japanese anagama kiln at Beamer's home. Partially submerged in the side of a hill and packed with soil on the sides and top, the kiln appears deceptively large from the outside. The distance from the mouth, where fire was fed with wood, to the short brick chimney in the back is about 40 feet. The 180 works were carefully stacked in a chamber only about half of that length in the front of the kiln.

For 10 days the works were fired, the kiln continually watched. Beamer and Kanzaki worked in shifts with his apprentice Kiyoshi Ishikawa and Takaya Asaba, the son of his agent. A graduate student of Beamer's, Allan Stackhouse of Harrisburg, helped with both the construction of the kiln and the firing.

In the first several days of the firing, they fed the fire about every 15 minutes. In the last days, they added wood every seven minutes.

In the final days of the firing, flames sprouted from the chimney and two peep holes on either side of the kiln. A small statue of a fire god sits atop the kiln. At night, with the glow emanating from the fire mouth, the kiln took on the appearance of a living creature. Each time wood was added to the fire, an audible "poof" came from the chimney, as if the kiln sighed, and an extra measure of flame shot forth. Kanzaki monitored the chimney to check the quality of the fire. The black smoke pouring from the chimney had a sweet smell.

The temperature inside the kiln reached more than 1,300 degrees centigrade. The works were glazed by the natural action of the wood fire, but the color was invisible in the glow of the white heat.

Kanzaki and Beamer first met through a link established between the Town of Bloomsburg and a computer network in Japan. At the invitation of the Japanese computer network operators — Kanzaki among them — Bloomsburg Town Administrator Gerald Depo and Bloomsburg art professors Kenneth Wilson and Karl Beamer visited Japan in the spring of 1991.

During their stay at Kanzaki's home in Shigaraki, they observed him firing a kiln.

"I felt instantly at home," recalls Beamer, a Bloomsburg faculty member since 1972, who has himself constructed more than a half dozen kilns on campus. "I've always felt that I would find a kindred artistic spirit and that it would be on the international level."

The relationship between Kanzaki and Beamer continued when Kanzaki demonstrated his art of making pottery at Bloomsburg in the fall of 1991. The two potters then collaborated to build the kiln at Beamer's home. Kanzaki's works will be shown in Bloomsburg University's Haas Gallery of Art in October. An artist's reception will be held Oct. 9 from 2 to 5 p.m.

Initially trained as a lawyer, Kanzaki is a Buddhist priest who has been studying Buddhism and the art of making pottery for the past 25 years. He and two of his former apprentices are listed among Japan's most significant potters, both past and present, by Japanese art organizations. At a recent exhibition in Munich, Germany, his works were sold out within a week. Two biographies are being written about his life — one by a writer in San Francisco another by a German writer.

When asked why he chose the path of a potter over that of a lawyer, he says simply, "Freedom." He draws inspiration for his work from the pottery of 15th century

Shigaraki, Japan, which is traditionally left unglazed except by the firing.

"I wandered around the hills of Shigaraki looking for covered pottery hearths or earlier days, and in some places I managed to dig out broken pieces of buried pottery. They were just the same as the brilliant ones I had discovered before," writes Kanzaki in one of his books. "I thought for a long time about those fine pottery pieces laying unnoticed under the ground."

On the clear May afternoon of the kiln opening, the drama of smoke and fire is over, but potters from across the state and New Jersey marvel at the works, noting the elegance of the design, and the variety of the colors achieved.

Kanzaki's eyes a medium-sized bowl. He picks it up — dark brown and black areas contrast with a pale blue. He seems pleased. Is the firing a success?

"Maybe," he answers. The work will have to speak for itself. It's apparent that he's already thinking about the next firing, for he adds later, "Next time."

Information Agency. In July she will travel to San Felipe, a city of about 30,000 people in central Chile north of Santiago and east of the resort area of Vina Del Mar.

Pupp will be on her own in Chile, with no host family to feed and house her, but with fellow faculty members and perhaps the United Methodist Church as part of her network of fellowship.

As part of the U. S.-Chile agreement, she will receive round-trip transportation and a $1,000 allowance for the purchase of classroom materials that will be donated to her host school in Chile. She will teach English as a second language at an all-girls' school.

Arriving in Chile during the middle of the school year, she will remain through the December-March summer break, then teach the first half of another school year before returning home.

When she came to West Brunswick four years ago, Pupp had not taught since 1975 and had been employed with private businesses as a translator and in sales.

Steven J. Rosen '75 started his own consulting company in January 1993, serving the food and service industry. He and his wife, Ronni, are expecting their first child in April.

Directory lists university's services

Bloomsburg University has recently published a 20-page directory titled Changing Lives Through Service. The directory lists over 60 services the university provides to the region.

"The services in the directory help fulfill the university's responsibility to enhance the quality of life for those who live and work in the region," according to John Walker, vice president for advancement.

"For 154 years, the university has been committed to preparing people for the future through education, research and services that extend beyond the classroom walls."

As part of the State System of Higher Education, the university offers a focal point for a diverse and stimulating collection of human resources, physical facilities, education programs and services.

"These assets open doors not only to educational and economic opportunity, but also to expanded intellectual, cultural, governmental, social service, recreational and business horizons," says Michael Vavrek, dean of the School of Extended Programs.

Services listed in the directory benefit individuals from preschoolers with speech difficulties to seniors with too much time on their hands. Young and old find enrichment in the variety of cultural programs, many offered at no cost, sponsored by the university.

Other programs help non-profit groups recruit volunteers and student interns and provide assistance with fund raising, training and other special projects. The directory explains how groups may schedule speakers, utilize selected television and radio services and access meeting facilities at low or no cost on a space-available basis.

Community, governmental and social service agencies can use the directory to discover opportunities to take advantage of training programs, leadership development and expert testimony, as well as assistance in public planning issues and drafting legislation.

University services provide business and industry with a local resource with a global perspective and offer big business advantages to small entrepreneurs. The Financial Assistance Center manages a revolving loan fund to make small loans to very small businesses. Teamwork learned in the Corporate Institute turns problems into opportunities and fosters "can-do" attitudes which spark the initiative and innovation crucial to success in today's economy.

Services listed in the directory enrich lives. "It's just terrific how the university and the community are tied together. The adult exercise program not only made me feel better about myself, I also made new friends. I was especially glad to have the change to get to know some of the students. It gave me a good feeling about the university," says Mary Ann McLaughlin of Bloomsburg.

Services listed in the directory change lives. "For 50 years, I went to church and was never able to hear the service. That all changed, however, the first Sunday after I got my hearing aid from the university's audiology clinic. They helped me even more than I can say," says Bill Yodock of Bloomsburg.

Services listed in the directory expand lives. "Bloomsburg University helped our company set up the hardware and software for computer aided design. In just a year, the results have been dramatic. We wouldn't be where we are today with the university's help," says Philip Sugg, McBride Machine Corp.

Changing Lives Through Service will be distributed to area social service, government, civic, health and welfare, religious and business organizations. To obtain a copy, call 717-389-4420 between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Neurosurgeon inspires graduates, guests

Henry Hood, M.D., president emeritus of the Geisinger Foundation, delivered the commencement address for the university's 124th annual spring commencement on May 15, after receiving an honorary doctorate during the convocation.

Degrees were conferred on 959 undergraduate and 115 graduate students.

Hood served as Geisinger's chief executive officer from 1974 until his retirement in 1991. A neurosurgeon, he came to Geisinger Medical Center in 1957 from his residency at the New York Hospital Cornell Medical Center and was named director of Geisinger's Department of Neurosurgery in 1958. From 1970 to 1974, he served as associate director of Geisinger Medical Center, becoming executive director in 1974. In 1981, he became president of the Geisinger Foundation.

Hood

Text of Dr. Hood's remarks:

I intend my remarks primarily for the members of the graduating class, and I will base my remarks entirely on my own experiences. Occasions like this invite brevity, and brevity invites candor; and I will attempt both.

The work that I did during my career that was most important was operating on the human mind. I know that the brain uncovered for operation is the most beautiful organ in the body, and the organ responsible for the soaring achievements of our civilization. It is paradoxical that it is also responsible for the most outrageous human behavior. There is too much outrageous behavior in this world, in this nation, and as in nearly every other, in this community and on this campus. During the time that you have been at the university, you have lived with the threat, the fear, and the fact of violence. Accusations have been made which, if unfounded, are as evil as the acts that they allege.

I would like to pause at this point to express my gratitude to my parents, because it is relevant to the rest of my remarks. When I was very young, my father suffered a severe illness which he survived, but from which he never completely recovered. Consequently, my sisters and brother and I were raised under the most frugal circumstances. I can say this about poverty; it is sometimes embarrassing, but the sunsets are just as beautiful, and I have the fondest memories of my childhood. At the time my father suffered his disabling illness, he was on the faculty of a college; a black college; a black college in Alabama, Talladega College. And because of his and my mother's grace and example, my sisters and brother and I were relieved at the very beginning of our lives, of the terrible burden of bigotry, for the rest of our lives. And it is a burden, and it soils every human endeavor that it touches.

Recently there was a spring frolic, off campus but in which some of you may have participated. It may have gotten a little boisterous, and it was so graphically reported that those who would not think more deeply, or who wanted to believe it, would conclude that it was mostly what happens at the university. It raised some money for a good cause, and nobody got hurt.

I share with others another perspective of student life at the university.

You came to Bloomsburg University at no small cost, and at no small sacrifice to join with your fellow students, to relate to the faculty, to bask in the tradition of this institution of higher learning which stretches back over 150 years to its founding in 1839.

You came to acquire the skills to begin your careers; in order to provide a standard of living for yourselves and your families during your working years, and in order to assure security and contentment in your eventual retirement.

You explored, experimented and indulged in the different ways to spend your leisure time; either as a participant or as a spectator.

You participated in the social activities that drone on, on a university campus, adding substance and value to your collegiate experience, without attracting the attention or stirring the juices of investigative journalists.

You practised your community conscience, held hands from the campus to the community, worked with Habitat for Humanity, helped build Kidsburg, sent clothes to schools kids in Harrisburg as an activity of Students Together Alleviating Racial Tension.

And you did all of this within the civil ambience of the university; and if we can not depend on our colleges and universities to preserve and protect the civility in our society, where can we turn?

I know this, that you have acquired all-state softball selection.

all of the equipment that you will need to compete successfully in this world. It may be that graduates of larger and more prestigious universities find more doors open to them in the job market, but on the first day at work, we all begin at the same place; square one. It is true that there are a few really gifted people in this world. But most of us are dealt an average hand from an average deck, and we have to play with what we were dealt.

There are two qualities which provide an advantage in a competitive world; a willingness to work, and a good disposition. Whenever I found myself at work in a competitive situation, all things otherwise being equal, I assumed that I would win, because I would outwork my competitor. It worked for me.

Although I had indulged, if not enjoyed, a short luse early in my career, when I became the president of Geisinger, I realized that that kind of responsibility drives the temper out of you because you cannot afford it. You can't please everybody and you don't have to please everybody; but you have to be fair to everybody. I don't think I can recall anything in my career or in my life, that was done in anger, that was really good. I know this; that if you do anything when you are really angry, you had better be really right; because you have played your last card, and if you are wrong, you have spent your respect and credibility in one shot.

I mention this because there is so much anger in our society. In every form, public or private but especially public; there is a tendency to escalate every issue to confrontation. I just hope that while we are tearing at each other's throats, we are not slitting our own throats.

I was told recently that a graduate today may expect five career changes during your working years. I hope that doesn't concern you. There are so many things to do in this life, and I have often said that I think everyone would be fortunate to have a career change every ten years.

Thirty-six years ago, after four years of medical school and six years of neurological training, I came to Geisinger to begin my clinical career, at the age of thirty-six. Seventeen years later I transitioned into administration and spent the next 17 years with that, retiring two years ago. But 50 years ago next month I graduated from Cornell University with a Bachelor of Science degree in Hotel Administration. If anyone had told me that day that I was destined to become a brain surgeon, it would have blown my mind. And if anyone had said the day that I started medical school that I would ever again use my education in hotel administration, I would have scoffed. But it contributed to my decision to go into administration at Geisinger, and was useful during the rest of my career.

making decisions in the practice of neurosurgery, most of which are made alone and many under urgent circumstances, facilitated the ability to make decisions in administration, most of which are made more deliberately and in concert.

The point I wish to make, is that whatever you learn, and whatever experience you gain, is cumulative; and you will undoubtedly use all of it in whatever you do for the rest of your lives. I hope that your career change decisions will be like mine; the need to decide to change from something you enjoy doing to something you believe you will enjoy even more. There are difficult decisions, but they are good decisions.

Incidentally, I expect that every member of this graduating class has an academic record as relevant to admission to medical school of mine as when I graduated from the hotel school. I mention it to urge you to keep it in mind. Remember that if you become bored or burned out, brain surgery is a good backup career.

There is a fantasy that is passed down from generation to generation, that the old days were the good old days. The old days were not the good old days, and I would defend that if I needed to or had the time. In spite of everything, these are the good old days; at least, they are your days.

So you came to Bloomsburg University, and you grew a little older, you gathered the wisdom to guide your own destinies, and you found a place that you can return to, to refresh your friendships, your memories, and your minds, for the rest of your lives.

That, in my perspective, is why you came and what you came to do; and you did it, and you had a little fun. And if the fun ever goes out of the joy of learning or life itself, none of it is worth it. But you got it done. You wouldn't even be here this afternoon, except that you got it done.

I cannot wish more for any of you, than that you have opportunities and experiences like I have had, and I know you will. I hope that you will love this land and this republic; a nation that maybe suffers partly because we hear so much as little children that grownups don't cry.

Thank you for the privilege of sharing with you this glorious day for you and your families. Congratulations, and good luck!

Suspect charged with rapes

Based on investigative evidence and DNA testing results, a joint Pennsylvania State Police/Bloomsburg Police Department Task Force filed rape charges against Jimmy Lee Lindsey of Bloomsburg on Wednesday, July 7.

Lindsey, 26, is charged with raping three Bloomsburg University women students. The dates of the 1992 attacks were October 31, November 27 and December 11.

Lindsey is already being held in Columbia County Prison on burglary, attempted theft, criminal trespass, and loitering and prowling at night charges.

"Bloomsburg University is grateful for the expertise and commitment of the Pennsylvania State Police and Bloomsburg Town Police who have devoted so much time and effort to solving these cases," said Harry Auspich, president. "Their diligence has helped make our campus and our community a safer place for everyone."

University officials continue to urge the entire campus community to practice good personal safety habits.

"The events of the past few months have made us all aware that college and university campuses are not apart from society, but a part of society. What happens on campuses is a reflection of what happens in society at large, and Bloomsburg is no different.

"Personal safety is not just a recent concern at Bloomsburg University, but an ongoing process. The university will continue its efforts to improve security on campus," Auspich said.

FAMILY

M. Elizabeth Williams, a member of the Bloomsburg University faculty from 1953 to 1969, died March 14 at age 83. She died in Mount Laurel, N.J., her native city.

She was a graduate of Slippery Rock State College and Penn State University.

Association honors special people

Four individuals were honored by the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association during the annual awards dinner on Alumni Day, April 24.

Named as recipients of the association's Distinguished Service Award were John D. Wool, Class of 1956, who developed the first work-study program in the United States for mentally retarded adolescents, and Louise Campbell Kline, Class of 1959, who taught for 28 years until multiple sclerosis forced her to retire in 1987.

The award was established in 1948 to honor alumni who distinguish themselves in their professions, in service to Bloomsburg University or to humankind.

Honored as "Young Alumnus of the Year" was Scott P. Righter, Class of 1984, for his outstanding service to the Alumni Association, including seven years on the board of directors.

Created in 1985, the award is presented to alumni who have graduated within the past 25 years. Potential for even greater service or accomplishments is also considered.

Named as an "Honorary Alumna" was Linda Long, secretary in the Alumni Office, who will complete 25 years of service to the university in December.

Earlier in the day, several classes enjoyed reunions as part of Alumni Day festivities. The oldest participant was Rose Gronka Kielar, Class of 1918, from Glen Lyon. The other reunion classes were 1923, 1928, 1933, 1943, and 1948.

The Class of 1943 held their 50th year dinner on April 23 at the Berwick Golf Club.

Wool, a resident of Oriental, N.C., retired in 1990 after 34 years in the field of special education for the mentally retarded. Early in his teaching career, he developed the first work-study program in the country for mentally retarded adolescents while employed by the Massapequa (N.Y.) School District. This program served as a pilot project for the New York State Education Department and the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Wool served as the teacher/coordinator for the project, with his research being published in the major professional journals, and he made presentations on program development to state professional conventions as well as to colleges and universities in the metro area.

From the development of curriculum and materials for the work-study program, Wool became a pioneer in authoring work/text-books specifically geared to the needs of the mentally retarded. He authored 18 books that were used nationwide and later translated to Spanish for use in bilingual programs after the influx of Hispanics to the United States.

Along with his teaching experiences, he became involved with Special Olympics during their formative years and served as the Suffolk County athletics coordinator for 15 years. He also served as a chief official at the International Special Olympics.

He earned his master's degree in special education with a minor in psychology from City College of New York (1960) and an M.A. degree from the State University of New York at Stony Brook (1976). He completed additional graduate work at Adelphi University, Columbia University, C. W. Post College, Hofstra University and Southampton College.

Following his participation in track and field at Bloomsburg, he continued in the sport as both a coach and official. As an official, he was a charter member of the Nassau County, Suffolk County and New York State Track Officials. Wool served as president of state and local associations. As president of the state officials for the past eight years, he has been responsible for coordinating meet officials for NYS indoor, outdoor and cross country championships.

In 1988-1989 he was named the outstanding official for New York State, and in 1990 he received the Distinguished Service Award for Section I (Northeastern U.S.) from the National Federation of State High School Associations.

He and his wife, Pat, have three sons: John, Tim and Michael. The latter graduated from B.U. in 1984.

Mrs. Kline learned that she had multiple sclerosis about 20 years ago, but continued teaching as the disease got progressively worse. Even after she could no longer cook or do housework, she continued to practice the profession she loved. At the time of her retirement, she was confined to a wheelchair and had lost much of the use of her hands.

Asked why she continued teaching beyond a point where she could have quit and lived on disability benefits, she said, "I love teaching, and I love being around the kids."

Her husband, Robert, noted that when other people would have given up, she went to school many, many days in pain.

She became a role model, especially to the special education students. They learned, she said, from her determination. "It made them understand their problems weren't the only ones in the world, because their teacher had a problem."

Paralyzed from the neck down, Mrs. Kline is now a guest at the Berwick Retirement Village and Nursing Home. The Klins have lived in Bloomsburg since their wedding in January 1960.

Righter's interest in the Alumni Association dates back to his student days, when he was employed in the Alumni Office. The year after graduation, he was elected to the 24-member Alumni Board of Directors and served until 1992. He continues to serve on an alumni coordinating committee in the Philadelphia area.

A resident of that city, he is director of annual giving at Hahnemann University and director of development for the William Likoff Cardiovascular Institute of Hahnemann University. Prior to joining the Hahnemann staff in 1991, he was on the staff at the Chestnut Hill Academy in Philadelphia. He served as director of alumni programs and public relations from 1986 to 1989 and as director of development from 1989 to 1991.

His first position in advancement was as assistant director of alumni programs and public relations at the Salisbury School in Connecticut, from 1985 to 1986.

He serves as a member of the Philadelphia Republican City Committee, second vice president of the Roxborough High School Alumni Association, block captain for the Deamley Park Civic Association, and a member of the Philadelphia Young Republicans.

In a surprise presentation, Linda Long was honored as an "Honorary Alumna" in recognition of her faithful service to the Alumni Association and the university.

A graduate of Benton High School, she joined the staff in 1968 and has worked with alumni records since that time. Since 1985, she has been the only full-time secretary in the Alumni Office.

A resident of Carroll Park, Bloomsburg, she is active in the Ridge Street United Methodist Church in Almedia. She and her husband, Clark, are the parents of one son, Derek, a freshman at B.U.

AWARD RECIPIENTS — Principals at the Annual Awards Dinner on Alumni Day were Scott P. Righter '84, "Young Alumnus of the Year"; President Ausprich, Linda Long, "Honorary Alumna"; Robert Kline, who received a "Distinguished Service Award" on behalf of his wife, Louise Campbell Kline '59, and John Wool '56, recipient of the "Distinguished Service Award."

ALUMNI OFFICERS — Elected as officers of the Alumni Association for 1993-1994 were John S. Scrimgeour '53, president; Nancy Feher Edwards '70, secretary; John Trathen '68, treasurer; and Nancy Swartz Lychos '52, vice president

NEW BOARD MEMBERS — New Alumni Board members, elected on Alumni Day, were Joanne Derricott '89, Allentown; Dr. William Selden '43, Berwick; and Susan Lilly '79, Bethlehem. They will serve two-year terms.

Elected to two-year terms on the Alumni Board of Directors were Helen H. Cimbala '35, Bloomsburg; William Selden '43, Berwick; Mary Lou John '45, Bloomsburg; Richard Grimes '49, Harrisburg; Nancy Swartz Lychos '52, Forty Fort; Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, Orwigsburg; Nelson Swarts '63, Lewisberry; Sandra Rupp '71, Bloomsburg; Susan Lilly '79, Bethlehem; Sheri Lippowitsch '79, West Chester; Marvin Metzger '86, Mountain Top; and Joanne Derricott '89, Allentown.

Q: Why are these alumni all smiling?

They enjoyed the first "Bloom at the Beach" in 1992?

They are proud to be Bloomsburg alumni?

They are looking forward to "Bloom at the Beach 1993"?

A: All the above.

Date: Saturday, August 21

Time: 5 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Cover Charge: $5 per person & Cash Bar

50 special B.U. "Beach" T-shirts will be awarded as door prizes

NEW THIS YEAR!

During the afternoon, a Berrigan Sub Picnic for alumni and families will be held in the Avalon area. (You will be given the location when you call to make your reservations.)

Reservations are required for the Berrigan picnic because Mike and his staff bring all the ingredients from Bloomsburg and make the subs right in front of you. Bring your own non-alcoholic beverages.

Reservations are appreciated for the party at the Princeton Bar and Grill so that we are given a large enough room and that adequate food is prepared.

Make plans with friends now to spend the day or the weekend at the shore. Call 1-800-526-0254 to make reservations.

Forward thinking will preserve, enhance legacy

It has been an absolute pleasure to greet so many of you, alumni and friends of Bloomsburg University, at this fall's campus events. I find the excitement we share for Bloomsburg, whether as our alma mater or as our adopted and beloved school, is very powerful. A number of you have told me of the great sense of joy and pleasure you feel for our university. Imagine the delight I experience in being a part of this community on a daily basis.

In all respects it has been a privilege and an honor to be the first baccalaureate graduate to return to Bloomsburg as president. I began my duties, to borrow the words of Dr. Joseph Duffy, "... not with a grand vision of a distant future, but with a plea that we look at what we are doing now, what we might do — each of us as individuals and all of us together — to shape and claim the future."

My first hundred days in office are now complete. There is much yet to be accomplished this year if I and all those with whom I work are to meet the responsibility and challenge of positioning the university well for the future. I believe the essence of our job is to continue to do what has been the hallmark of Bloomsburg, and that is to develop today's potential into tomorrow's achievements.

Curt English '56

One important activity that can help us do just that involves our current five-year periodic review by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools. As part of this accreditation process, we are reviewing the significant changes that have occurred over the past five years, in addition to focusing on the future of the university. Included in the report will be a five-year trend analysis and projection of enrollments, graduations and fiscal trends plus a five-year academic facilities plan. This Middle States review not only is important to our continued accreditation, but it also is an excellent assessment by which we can identify areas of potential for future development.

One of the recommendations from the 1989 Middle States review was to replace or expand the library's physical facility. As you are aware, our hopes and dreams for a new library building came to fruition through the Commonwealth's project, "Operation Jump Start."

Originally, funding for the construction was sufficient to complete three floors of the proposed structure with an additional unfinished fourth floor. To a person, we all feel this university needs something better than a library three-fourths complete.

After careful review, the Bloomsburg University Foundation, with the consensus of a broad spectrum of university constituents, increased the goal for the library campaign, "A Treasury of Ideas," from $2,375 to $3,375 million. The money raised through the campaign, plus $9,125 million from the Commonwealth, should provide for the completion of all four floors.

This bold act of commitment to our future has proven to be well founded. To date, over $2 million in gifts and pledges have been received. Alumni, friends, faculty, staff and students through their generous giving have positively affirmed the vision for our library as one of tomorrow's needed achievements.

On another front, we have begun the process of developing a marketing plan that will aid us in better positioning the university for the future. This type of planning is absolutely necessary if we are to be in tune with changing demographics. We must look forward and market the institution to the population of the next 10 to 20 years. And we not only need to market academics, but we must also market services and programs.

These are but a few examples of the type of forward thinking that is being done by the people of Bloomsburg University. Because we are committed to developing our potential, generations of Bloomsburg students, faculty and staff will reap the benefits of our future achievements. It is these accomplishments that will assure the continuance of our ever-developing legacy of teaching, research and service.

Educator earns alumni award

Ben Duke '53 was presented with the Distinguished Service Award at the Homecoming Dinner Dance on October 23.

A native of Berwick, Duke has taught at the International Christian University in Tokyo, Japan, since 1959. A professor of international and comparative education, Duke has written several books: Japan's Militant Teachers: A History of the Left-Wing Teachers' Movement, published in 1973; The Japanese School. Lessons for Industrial America, published in 1977; Ten Great Educators of Modern Japan, published in 1989, and Education and Leadership for the 21st Century: America, Japan, and England, published in 1991.

The Distinguished Service Awards were established by the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association in 1948 to recognize alumni who have excelled in at least one of the following areas: significant professional accomplishments; outstanding service to the university and/or the Alumni Association; or contributions to humanity. Since 1948, 103 alumni and two former presidents have been honored with the awards.

Duke began his career as a teacher in the public school system of Hershey from 1955 to 1957. He also served two years in the military. He earned a doctorate at Penn State University in 1959 and another at the University of London in 1969.

Duke is married to the former June Smith of Berwick. Their three children have attended school and universities in Japan and the United States, allowing all three to become bilingual and bicultural. Their daughter, Susan Noriko, is a lawyer in Harrisburg, while daughter Kimiko Anne and son Christopher Kenji are teaching at the American School in Japan.

Guest Editorial

(The following editorial appeared in the Press-Enterprise newspaper, Bloomsburg, on Friday, October 29, 1993.)

After a year of tragedy and misadventure that would have crippled a weaker or less resilient institution, Bloomsburg University seems to be recovering some of its lost momentum.

And we're not even counting the football team's surprising upset of West Chester Saturday at Homecoming.

Ground is being pushed around for the start of construction on a new student recreation center near the tennis courts off Lightstreet Road.

The campaign for a badly needed library has raised $1.7 million, half of the goal of $3.4 million. BU alumni and town residents who remember Long Porch on the Second Street side of old Waller Hall will be happy to hear that officials hope to incorporate a new Long Porch into the library's design.

But it's not just buildings. There's fresh air and a new spirit of openness on campus this fall.

A good example was the meeting held Monday to discuss a proposal that would permit campus police officers to carry guns.

It's a tough issue to decide, with good arguments pro and con. It's very important that BU is trying to find out what members of the campus community think before proceeding.

At the meeting Monday with some 100 students, BU officers were challenged by good questions to explain why they feel they need to be armed. The result was a good, open discussion with lots of illuminating give-and-take.

Robert Parrish, the BU vice president who oversees the police force, said other groups on campus will also be asked to discuss the gun proposal.

Of course, not everyone will agree. In the end, someone will have to make a decision to arm or not to arm. But when that day comes, more people will feel a part of the decision for having been asked their opinion.

This is a refreshing departure from business as usual at BU. It has as its source the new occupant of the corner office in Carver Hall.

Although he will be here for only one year as interim president, Curtis English seems determined to put as much distance as possible between the university and its recent troubled past.

As a Bloomsburg grad who kept close to his roots throughout a long and far-flung career in the Navy, he has a deep affection for the school. And his management style is hands-on. In short, English is just what BU needed.

Some campus veterans have even expressed regret that the terms of his interim service prohibit him from being a candidate for the permanent post.

But one consolation, said a key BU alumnus, is that he provides members of the presidential search committee with a living, breathing example of the kind of leadership they should be seeking to guide the school into the next century.

First international alumni chapter formed

Responding to an invitation from enthusiastic graduates of the university's MBA program, representatives of the Alumni Association and the University travelled to Taiwan in mid-November to establish the first international alumni chapter.

During the past few years, more than 65 residents of Taiwan — all talented businesspersons in their country — have come to Bloomsburg to complete degree requirements. While at the university and after their return to Taiwan, the MBA graduates expressed an interest in creating an alumni chapter to maintain their relationship with the University.

The BU delegation included Dr. Carol Matteson, interim provost and vice president for academic affairs, who represented Interim President Curt English; Dr. John Olivo, acting dean of the College of Business; and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Very instrumental in arranging and hosting the trip was Ronny Liu, president of The Landmark RMC Group Taiwan, a contractor of civil and construction engineering and manufacturer of ready-mixed concrete and aggregates. Liu and his company generously underwrote a large portion of the visit.

His hospitality included flying two of his close friends, Peter and Renee Li, from Hong Kong to serve as companions and translators for the BU visitors. Peter and Renee both graduated from universities in the United States and worked in California for several years before returning to Asia.

A highlight of the visit was a banquet in Taipei, attended by more than a dozen representatives of the MBA graduates.

Charter members of the new Taiwan chapter are Linda H. Young, general manager of Lucky Clover Co.; Shirley Yeh, publisher of Effect Information Service Corp.; Pu-Chuang Weng, president of Vidar-SMS Co., Ltd.; Marcus Huang, general manager of Chin Tieng Machine Co.,

Attending the alumni dinner in Taipei were Linda H. Young, Shirley Yeh, Pu-Chuang Weng, Marcus Huang, Lin Ben Yuan, Fu-Sheng Shieh, Wu Ming Hsiung (Martin), Champ Liu, Edwin Chang (Chang Jen-Chun), Howard Chung (Hung-Kuey Chung), Stone Shih, Olive Ting, Peter and Renee Li. Representing BU were Dr. Carol Matteson, interim provost and vice president for academic affairs, Dr. John Olivo, acting dean of the College of Business; and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

ternships for BU students. They also made plans for another reunion in Taipei in early November 1994.

A busy day in Taipei included visits to the National Palace Museum, where they arrived just in time to say a quick hello to former President and Mrs. George Bush, who were also touring the museum. After lunch at the Grand Hotel, overlooking the city, the BU visitors spent time at the very impressive Chiang Kai-shek Memorial.

The day after the banquet, the Bloomsburg trio was flown to Hualien, along the Pacific Coast, to visit one of Ronny Liu's state-of-the-art ready-mix concrete plants. Later in the day, they were treated to a visit through the spectacular Taroko Gorge via a very narrow road cut into the mountain (with a very sheer drop).

"We have wonderful memories of our short visit to Taiwan," said Hippenstiel, "especially the warmth and friendship of the alumni who made a special effort to meet with us."

During a dinner in Taipei, Dr. Matteson and Dr. Olivo presented diplomas to those graduate students who completed their MBA degrees at BU this past summer.

BU group spends six weeks studying in China

During the past summer, 15 students, alumni, faculty and friends of Bloomsburg University spent six weeks studying Chinese culture and language while exploring Shenyang, the largest city in northeastern China.

The trip was arranged by Dr. Jim Pomfret of the university's Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, who had spent six weeks lecturing at Shenyang Teachers' College in 1991. Based on his experience, he decided it would be a good idea to devise an opportunity for students to spend time living in China.

The program was designed so that students would spend an extended period in one city where they would get to know individuals and learn to live in an environment very different from home. The group lived on the Shenyang campus where simple rooms were shared by two students. With the exception of breakfast, meals were typically Chinese, consisting of rice, a stir fry of pork or chicken, and a fresh vegetable. The Teachers College cooks went out of their way to provide an American breakfast of hard-boiled eggs, bread, sliced tomatoes and cucumbers, and hot milk.

No one in the group spoke much Chinese, and no one could read Chinese characters, so each trip to the store, post office or bank was an adventure. Unlike Europe, very few clerks or merchants are able to speak English, and few signs are written using our accustomed alphabet.

Jim Pomfret found that his one-semester of Chinese taken at Bloomsburg allowed him to greet people politely, to negotiate prices in the free market, and to tell taxi drivers his destination.

Five members of the group elected to take a crash course in Chinese for foreigners. Senior history major Ruy Bunger of Elysburg was the star pupil and was able to converse with his Chinese friend by the end of the course. Whether they studied the language or not, everyone soon learned their way around the city by bus, bike, minibus and taxi.

the summer school hoping she could continue her study of taiji, begun two years earlier. Sometimes called "shadow boxing," taiji is a mental and physical discipline which combines elements of both meditation and martial arts. Parks across China are filled early each morning with people practicing taiji.

Kathy was excited to meet a taiji master who asked her to join his morning class for special instruction. The Chinese members of class were surprised and pleased to find an American so adept at this ancient form of exercise. Along with Sheila Smith '92 (M), Kathy also explored the nearby College of Traditional Chinese Medicine where she was able to receive acupuncture and herbal medicines.

taught by three members of the English-speaking faculty of the Teachers' College. These lectures included a brief history of the Chinese dynasties which helped put the historical sites we were to visit into perspective.

The city of Shenyang has its own Imperial City built in the first half of the seventeenth century by the Qing Dynasty which has many similarities to the Forbidden City in Beijing. Students found the lectures on the Cultural Revolution were quite moving since the teachers shared tragic personal experiences of college and university people being routinely removed from their campuses and sent to work on farms and factories during this period.

He lectured on the ubiquitous use of computers on the Bloomsburg campus and also conducted several interviews with Chinese computer professionals in order to assess the state of academic computing in China. He and Shenyang faculty member Zhao Pengwei '92 (M) are currently preparing a research paper on this subject.

Abbott also became known as the one most likely to try and enjoy strange and exotic foods such as camel's feet, sea slugs and scorpions.

In addition to lectures and learning to survive, the group was able to visit several factories that are being operated as joint ventures between Chinese and foreign investors. Highlights were visits to both a John Deere tractor operation and a General Motors assembly plant. Interviews with American managers and engineers at these sites provided Bloomsburg undergraduates with insights into the world of global enterprises.

Pomfret said he is encouraged by the growth he witnessed in the undergraduates and the enthusiasm displayed by the older students. He plans to lead another group in 1994 (June 17 to July 22) and invites all interested alumni to come along. The two primary prerequisites are a sense of humor and an extremely flexible attitude.

Chuck Daly Way now part of campus scene

They unveiled Chuck Daly Way Wednesday (August 18) on the Bloomsburg University campus.

It's a small thoroughfare running alongside Centennial Gymnasium, where Daly, now coach of the NBA's New Jersey Nets, played his college basketball.

Ironically, it was Chuck Daly's Way that he followed all along to this latest honor.

"I always sensed a drive that I wanted to keep moving and keep going ahead," said Daly, a 1952 graduate of Bloomsburg State Teachers College. "I made a lot of sacrifices, as my family did, to make those kind of moves.

"I served my apprenticeship. I was an assistant in the pros, I was an assistant on the collegiate level. I felt all those years were valuable to moving in the direction I wanted to go."

That direction took him to the National Basketball Association and eventually the Olympics. He made his mark in both, guiding the Detroit Pistons to back-to-back Nancy Swartz Lychos '52, vice president of the Alumni Association, presents gifts to Terri and Chuck Daly on behalf of the Association. Mrs. Daly, the former Theresa Cierhisky, is a member of the Class of 1950.

From there, Daly's career took off. He became head coach at Boston College for two seasons before moving to the University of Pennsylvania for six seasons. Under his leadership, Penn won three Big Five titles and tied for another.

His performance caught the eye of the pros, and he worked as an assistant to Billy Cunningham with the Philadelphia 76ers for more than four years before taking his first NBA head coaching job in Cleveland in 1981.

He managed only a 9-32 mark with the Cavaliers that season and left. It would be his only losing season in the pros.

He took over in Detroit in 1983 and has posted 10 straight winning seasons, including this past season, his first with the New Jersey Nets. His career NBA record is an impressive 519-342.

"Ultimately, I was fortunate to get some jobs with players," said Daly, who is also a charter member of the B.U. Athletic Hall of Fame. "You've got to be fortunate enough to get a group of players who can win a championship for you. You're part of it, but it has to be an integral part of playing, coaching and management in order to get to those levels."

Daly actually started his college career at St. Bonaventure University in upstate New York.

"He had a scholarship at St. Bonaventure — and in 1948 the Bonnies were something big, just coming to national prominence," said C. Stuart Edwards '41, retired B.U. administrator and Daly's high school coach at Kane, Pa.

"Then he broke his ankle around Christmas time his freshman year. He had some friends going to school at Bloomsburg, so he transferred there and finished his last three years playing here."

Daly was the leading scorer at Bloomsburg during his junior and senior year. He describes his basketball career at Bloomsburg as only "average."

"I was pretty average as a player. I loved the game. I really worked hard at it," he said. "I didn't do anything that great, but I was a pretty regular guy, a normal guy."

Chuck Daly, Class of 1952, reflected on his days at Bloomsburg during the ceremony naming a campus street in his honor.

NBA championships and leading the U.S. Dream Team to a gold medal at the Barcelona Olympics last year.

"They're the kinds of things you never dream are going to happen to you," Daly said during a press conference before the official unveiling. "But as they happen you try to adjust and not change too much and understand where you came from. There have been some great stops along the way, and I've had some unbelievable experiences."

Daly's career almost never got that far, however. At one point, it looked like Daly's Way ended in Punxsutawney, Pa.

"You go to Punxsutawney High School and you're there eight years, you really think you're probably going to finish your career there," said Daly of his first coaching job. "I was going to retire there. Then through a sequence of events, you end up as an assistant at Duke."

Foundation Raises Library Goal to $3.375 Million

By Eric Foster
Editorial News Assistant

The Bloomsburg University Foundation has accepted the challenge of increasing its library campaign goal to $3.375 million to build a larger university library than originally planned, announced Interim President Curtis R. English.

The goal of "A Treasury of Ideas" campaign was endorsed by the university's Council of Trustees at its October meeting.

'There was a choice. Keep the campaign where it was and complete only three floors — or raise the goal and finish the library.'

— Curtis R. English '56

The original goal of $2.375 million represents 25 percent of the cost of the library that the university must raise. The balance of the $11.5 million project will come from funds included in the Higher Education Capital Construction Program.

The original plans for the library included three floors with an unfinished fourth floor.

"There was a choice," explains English of the decision to raise the goal. "Keep the campaign where it was and complete only three floors — or raise the goal and finish the library. After consultation with many people on campus and the library steering committee, we reached a consensus that this university needs something better than a library three-fourths complete. I think it would be inappropriate to only complete three floors."

The additional funding will provide for a total of 105,000 finished square feet, says Carol Matteson, interim provost and vice president for academic affairs and co-chair of the library steering committee. "It's critical to complete the unfinished square footage now — and not wait. It will allow us to grow to the size of collection we need as well as provide the necessary seating space for the students enrolled at the university."

"The Bloomsburg University Foundation is totally committed to making this project a success," says Anthony M. Ianiero, interim vice president for advancement and executive director of the university's foundation. "In its eighth year of existence, the foundation has raised millions of dollars for scholarships and support for academic excellence. Yet, when the library project was announced last fall by Gov. Robert Casey, the entire foundation board pledged nearly $150,000 of their personal resources as leadership gifts to begin this effort.

English praised the foundation board members for their enthusiastic and dedicated support.

By making a commitment to complete all four floors of the library now, the university will take advantage of current construction costs and avoid the inflation of future costs as time progresses.

"I congratulate the foundation on its decision," says Matteson. "We're appreciative of the foundation's efforts to help us build the size of library we need to have for our campus and the future." The new library, which will be located on the present site of the softball field, next to Waller Administration Building, is expected to be completed in May, 1996.

So far, the library campaign has raised more than $2 million in gifts and pledges.

Naming opportunities are available for areas of the library with gifts of $15,000 or more from individuals or groups. For more information, contact the Development Center at 717-389-4128.

faculty, staff, and businesses.

"Being able to recognize excellence in this manner is very heartwarming," said Anthony M. Ianiero, interim vice president for advancement. "It means that more and more, our alumni and friends are realizing the value of education in our world today and are assuming the responsibility to help worthy students."

"We are immensely proud of our students and their achievements," said English. "The competition for these scholarships is intense, but our students have met and exceeded the requirements, particularly those which are academic."

In addition to the awards given at the reception, 74 students received awards from the Fred G. Smith "Golden Rule Trust Fund" Scholarship. Another 76 students received a Board of Governors Fee Waiver. Scholarships recognizing both academic and athletic talents were awarded to 149 other students. The combined total for these awards was $675,000.

Approximately $55,000 more was awarded to 13 recipients of highly specialized scholarships in professional education.

BU Students Awarded Nearly $1 Million in Scholarships

Bloomsburg students have received nearly $1 million in scholarships in 1993, according to Interim President Curtis R. English.

Over the last eight years, scholarship monies have doubled for Bloomsburg students. This year, more than 150 different scholarships totaling $930,736, were awarded to 550 students.

Approximately $200,000 was distributed to 250 students during the annual September scholarship reception. These awards were made possible through gifts to the Bloomsburg University Foundation from alumni, parents, friends,

Tile Reservations

Going Once, Going Twice

Alumni response to the ceramic tile "Wall of Honor" recognition program has been excellent. To date, pledges and gifts to the Library Construction Fund have been received for all of the 280 tiles originally planned.

To accommodate the demand, the mural will be enlarged, therefore making approximately 100 additional tiles available. The remaining tiles will be reserved on a first-come basis. Pledges may still be paid over a four-year period.

Tiles come in three sizes:

- 4 1/2" square . . . $1,000 to $3,999
- 4 1/2" x 9" . . . $4,000 to $9,999
- 9" square . . . $10,000 to $14,999

Catherine W. Evans bequeathed Bloomsburg University $10,000. In accordance with her wishes, $5,000 was given in memory of her mother's best friend, Mrs. Margaret Minner, a member of the class of 1923. These funds have been used to create the Margaret Minner Memorial Scholarship for students from five southeastern Pennsylvania counties. Recipients will be selected by the Philadelphia Chapter of the BU Alumni Association.

The remaining $5,000 was given in memory of her late mother, Adda M. Westfield and has been applied to the Library Construction Fund. Both Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Westfield were long-time, good friends of the Philadelphia Alumni Chapter.

BU Alumnus Pledges $50,000 to ICIMS and the Library

Ju Tang (Ronny) Liu '93, chief executive officer for The Landmark RMC Group, recently presented Bloomsburg University with a second annual gift of $10,000. Part of a five-year, $50,000 pledge, $30,000 is in support of the ICIMS (Institute for Comparative International Management Studies) and $20,000 for the Library Construction Fund.

ICIMS in the College of Business helps to fulfill the university's mission and goals by initiating and sponsoring activities designed to increase understanding of cross-cultural and comparative business issues.

Liu served as the contact person between Bloomsburg and other members of the class of 1993. As a class member, he also contributed toward the $10,000 gift from the Class of '93 for The Library Construction Fund.

Library Campaign Tops $2 Million Mark

By Eric Foster
Editorial News Assistant

The Bloomsburg University Foundation has raised more than $2 million in gifts and pledges for Bloomsburg's library campaign, "A Treasury of Ideas." As of the end of October, approximately $2 million has been donated or pledged to the effort which will enable Bloomsburg to construct a larger library.

The Development Office staff has spent the past nine months appealing to potential donors to support the library construction. They are contacting alumni, community members, university employees, and businesses and foundations for their support.

The campaign to contact 22,500 alumni by telephone began mid August and concluded in early November. An additional 5,000 letters requesting support were sent to alumni without a telephone listing and to alumni from the class of 1930 and earlier. To date, more than $1.4 million has been pledged by 4,200 alumni. Alumnus Jack Mertz, who became a Washington accountant and investor after graduating, has committed a $496,000 trust to help build the new library. "We certainly want to thank Jack Mertz, from the class of '42. He started us off with a half million dollar gift that gave us a shot in the arm," says Susan M. Helwig, acting director of development.

"The need for a new library is acute. Since the current Harvey A. Andruss Library was constructed 27 years ago, enrollment has doubled," says Helwig. "The library ranks last in seating space and library square footage per student among Pennsylvania's 14 State System universities.

Gov. Robert Casey approved the construction of a new library in October, 1992 as part of "Operation Jumpstart," a state initiative to fund construction projects throughout the Commonwealth. However, in order to receive $9 million in state funding, Bloomsburg University must raise $2.5 million, the original goal, to fund the $11.5 million construction project.

"It's the single most important project we have," says Interim President Curtis R. English. "I'm very excited about the progress of the library campaign. But with the excitement, we must not relax. The library is such a primary facility on a university campus. Certainly faculty and staff would want to support this effort."

Trustee Ramona Alley of Berwick stresses that the new library is a resource on campus that is used by everyone — faculty, staff, students, and community members alike. "By helping to build the library, we are personally investing in the university and in the community," says Alley, who chairs the trustees' advancement committee.

Employees of Bloomsburg have pledged $41,000 to library construction through the "Faculty and Staff for Excellence" campaign. The goal for employee participation over four years is $100,000.

Naming opportunities for areas in the library are available to individuals or groups for gifts of $15,000 or more.

Names That Live

You can be part of a tradition that lives forever. One of the greatest honors is the association of one's name with distinguished facilities — facilities that continue to serve men and women, generation after generation. On the Bloomsburg campus, people who have made a difference have been recognized since the earliest years of the university. Carver (Hall), Andruss (Library), Bakeless (Center for the Humanities), and Fenstermaker (Alumni House) are examples.

The building of a new library offers exciting opportunities for perpetuating your name or the name of someone you choose to honor. Permanent recognition will be provided in a meaningful way that represents the wishes of the donor.

You are invited to study the following list and select an area that represents your interest and which might appropriately bear your name. In this way, you may join "Names that Live" at Bloomsburg University.

Joint Effort Funds Racial Equity Workshops

Five campus organizations have teamed up with 11 community organizations and businesses to sponsor workshops on diversity. Approximately $18,000 has been contributed to support the workshops according to Bloomsburg University's Irvin Wright, assistant director of developmental instruction and co-chair of University-Community Task Force on Racial Equity. Bloomsburg Town Council member and task force co-chair Thomas J. Evans Jr. and Wright have accepted the challenge to develop action strategies to create a community that is inclusive and welcoming of people of all colors.

"To help us move toward meeting this challenge, the task force employed consultants to conduct a series of workshops," said Wright. "The workshops help people gain greater insight and understanding of the complexity of racism and break down its walls that have excluded people of color."

More than 150 citizens of the Bloomsburg area and Town officials as well as university faculty, staff, and students attended one of the five, two-day workshops held between July and October.

Financial support from the local community has come from the Bloomsburg Chamber of Commerce, the Bloomsburg Town Council, the Bloomsburg Rotary, Columbia County Farmers National Bank, Ralph Dillon's Flowers, First Columbia Bank and Trust Co., Drs. Kuprevich, Revak, and Revak, Liberty Chevrolet-Cadillac, Inc., Millville Meeting of Religious Society of Friends, Mitrani Foundation, and the Press-Enterprise. Campus organizations included the university itself, AFSCME, APSCUF, Campus-wide Committee on Human Relations, Community Government Association, and The Bloomsburg University Foundation.

The task force is hoping to offer additional workshops that will involve more members of the community and campus as well as train people to conduct diversity workshops.

How to Give to the Library Without Cash

Yes! There are a number of ways to contribute to The Library Construction Fund, or to another project of the donor's choice, without making a gift in cash and with the benefit of tax savings.

This is possible through planned or deferred giving. Choices include lifetime gifts and gifts by will or in trust.

When gifts of these types are received, the Bloomsburg University Foundation generally converts the security or property to cash. The donor may choose to designate where the gift should be used.

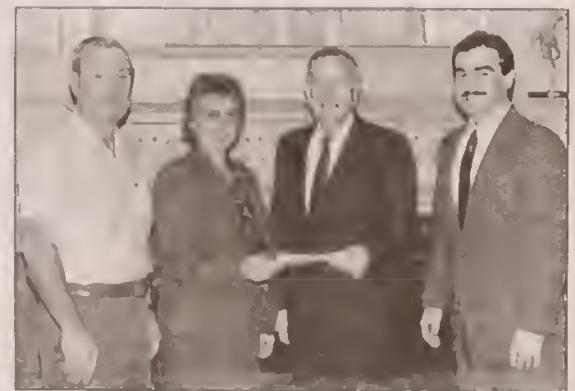

Lifetime gifts include appreciated property and life insurance. Appreciated property (property that grows in value) includes stocks, bonds, certificates of deposit, mutual funds, real estate, existing life insurance, and personal property such as art, antiques, books, and collections. Gifts of appreciated property generally qualify for a charitable deduction equal to the value of the gift — the original cost plus all increase in value.

Insurance policies can be used to create endowments for designated purposes with a relatively small annual cost. The donor makes an annual, tax-deductible premium payment over a seven to ten-year period, which will provide the university with a significant gift years later.

Gifts may also be made through charitable trusts or wills whereby Bloomsburg University is designated as a beneficiary. Trusts created with cash, securities, life insurance policies, or appreciated property may also provide the donor with an annuity or, in the case of real estate, lifetime right to use the property.

For further information about planned giving, contact Dr. Susan R. Hicks, Assistant Director of Development, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815 • 717-389-4525.

If a gift of this nature is to be made during a given taxable year, please allow sufficient time to have it prepared by Dec. 15.

PP&L Supports the IIT

According to Dr. Harold J. Bailey, director of the Institute for Interactive Technology, Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. has contributed $10,000 to help purchase computer equipment. "We are very grateful that PP&L has chosen to support the IIT with another gift," said Bailey. "Their gifts help us remain on the cutting edge of technology in this field — a big advantage to our graduates."

The gift will be used to purchase a PC-based multimedia system and accompanying software. The new system will allow users to work with digital video and sound, a technology necessary for creating multimedia instructions.

Six athletes inducted into Hall of Fame

Six individuals were inducted into the Bloomsburg University Athletic Hall of Fame during a ceremony in September.

This year's recipients of the highest athletic honor were Sterling Banta '39, Hershey; George Lambrinos '53, Toronto, Canada; James Mailey '80, Conshohocken; David Superdock '83, Lititz; Palmer Toto '69, Philadelphia; and the late Robert Lang of Milton.

BANTA WAS A MEMBER of the Huskies' basketball and baseball teams and played on some of the same units as former major leaguer and Athletic Hall of Fame member Danny Litwhiler '38. He won eight letters at Bloomsburg after a stellar career at Luzerne High School. He was an all-state selection for three consecutive seasons in basketball. He finished his baseball career with a .422 batting average as an outfielder in addition to pitching for the Huskies.

After a short stint in professional baseball, Banta moved into the teaching and coaching profession and spent more than 25 years at Hershey High School and Lebanon Valley College. His football, basketball and baseball teams earned league championships on 13 seasons.

His football teams at Hershey won the Capital Area Conference title three times, and he compiled an 11-year mark of 60-43-3.

LAMBRINOS AND LANG were two of the top performers on some of Bloomsburg's most successful football teams under coach Robert Redman. As with the majority of the players during that era, both performers played dual roles, with Lambrinos at quarterback and Lang at tailback in the single-wing set; defensively, they were at linebacker and defensive back, respectively.

Each was named to the all-conference squad and earned letters in other sports with Lambrinos playing baseball and basketball, and Lang performing as a member of the track and field unit.

Lambrinos' versatility on the football field allowed him to serve many purposes, including blocking and kicking, and earned him an honorable mention spot on the all-state team in 1951. He was considered one of the top performers on teams that posted a 32-2 overall record in four seasons and registered the school's only two undefeated seasons in 1948 and 1951.

He was a catcher for the Huskies and after graduation played professional baseball for several seasons in leagues throughout Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana. He was also a semi-professional football player. He retired from teaching and coaching after 31 years.

THE SOLIDLY-BUILT LANG was considered the top player in his era, contributing immediately upon arriving on campus. One of the leading scorers for the Huskies, he topped off his career with a superb senior season. In 1951, he scored 72 points on 12 touchdowns in only eight contests. He scored at least once in seven games and multiple times in five outings. The 12 touchdowns remain a single-season Bloomsburg scoring mark.

He held almost all of the Huskies' rushing records before most were broken by Hall of Fame member Mike Morucci.

One of Lang's trademarks was his ability to score from anywhere on the field. Among his records are many lengthy touchdown runs, including eight of the 12 scores in his final season which were from 20 yards or more. He earned first team all-state honors in 1951 and was seventh among all collegiate scorers in Pennsylvania that season.

After leaving Bloomsburg, he played semi-professional football in the region. Known to his teammates as "Daddy," he died at age 26.

MAILEY PERFORMED for the Huskies' soccer team in its early stages as a varsity program and set several scoring records that still stand. During his career, the Huskies enjoyed tremendous success building a four-year record of 37-10-1. The team achieved a national ranking as high as number two and made the lone appearance in the national playoffs. He also was the leading sprinter for Bloomsburg's track and field squad.

He holds the school mark for career goals (62) and assists (27). The speedster also established single-season marks with 22 goals and 13 assists. His career goal total makes him second on the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference's all-time scoring list.

He ran for two seasons with the track and field team and earned an invitation to the national championships in the 100-meter dash. He currently serves as a sales representative in private business.

SUPERDOCK WAS A FOUR-YEAR STARTER for the nationally-ranked men's tennis team and helped the Huskies to conference championships in each of his seasons. He built an enviable record of 106-31 and won seven PSAC individual titles, including four singles and three doubles crowns.

He was a three-time national qualifier and earned All-American honors in both singles and doubles.

He holds the Huskies' record for consecutive singles victories with 18, and he was the team's Alumni Award winner on two occasions. In addition, he was an NCAA Scholar-Athlete two times and the Arthur Ashe Award recipient in 1983 as the top scholar-athlete in NCAA Division II.

Following graduation, he received his medical degree from Penn State's Hershey Medical School and completed a three-year residency at the Medical Center of South Carolina. He now practices family medicine in Lititz.

TOTO WAS A THREE-TIME all-conference selection as the lead and point guard for the Huskies' basketball team. Freshmen were ineligible for varsity competition during his career, but he became an immediate contributor as a sophomore. He established school records for assists in a game (19) and assists per game.

He served as Bloomsburg's captain in each of his last two seasons and was considered one of the Huskies' first "true" point guards. He demonstrated a tremendous ability to direct the team on the floor and create scoring opportunities for his teammates. He earned several in-season, all-tournament selections during his three years with the club.

Following graduation, he served as a coach at Woodrow Wilson High School for eight seasons. As head coach for four years, he led his team to a Lower Bucks County title, a pair of appearances in the state quarterfinals, and earned several "Coach of the Year" awards.

He moved on to private business and currently serves as president of two companies.

Fall athletic teams boast winning percentage of .684

Boasting a winning percentage of .684, Bloomsburg University athletic teams enjoyed yet another successful fall season compiling an overall mark of 54-25-2 as four of the six squads competed in post-season play.

The Huskies field hockey team captured its fourth straight Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference and fifth national championship since 1983; the men's cross country team qualified for the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships; the women's soccer team established a new all-time win total; the women's cross country squad sent a runner to the NCAA championships; and the men's soccer, women's tennis and the football team each finished with respectable campaigns during the 1993 season.

THE FIELD HOCKEY SQUAD, under the direction of 16th-year head coach Jan Hutchinson, completed its second ever undefeated season at 21-0-1, outscoring opponents by a margin of 81-8 and outshooting opponents, 798-137. The Huskies defeated

Lock Haven in the PSAC title game, 1-0, and completed their undefeated season with a 2-1 national championship win over the Bald Eagles.

All-American Shelley Miller led the team in scoring, finishing second in the conference with 20 goals and 14 assists. The junior link had multiple-goal games six times and was one assist shy of tying Bloomsburg's all-time single season assist total. She was named the Broderick Award winner for the most outstanding player in Division II.

Junior attack Chris Fink and sophomore link Kim Mack scored 16 and 11 goals, respectively, for the Huskies, while junior Michelle McFalls, who was a second team PSAC selection and second team All-American, and sophomore Keli Fahy added nine and six goals. Fink and sophomore Chris Basalyga, a second team All-American and All-PSAC selection, each dished out six assists on the season.

The defense allowed only eight goals in 22 games, recording 15 shutouts. Juniors Rachel Trinidad and Lori Hippensteel shared time in goal for the Huskies, combining for 86 saves. Trinidad recorded a goals-against-average of .22, while Hippensteel's goals against average was .44. Hutchinson was recognized as the PSAC Coach of the Year, while Miller and senior back Nicole Schiavello were both first team All-American selections and first team PSAC selections.

THE MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY TEAM, under seventh-year head coach Lanny Conner, qualified for the NCAA Division II championships for the first time in the program's history. The Huskies finished 14th in the event, held in Riverside, California. At nationals, junior Dan Pszeniczny finished 28th, while Chris Konyar and Bill Hurst took 60th and 76th place, respectively. Bloomsburg qualified for the national event with a third-place finish in the NCAA East Regional Championships.

In the regional event, Pszeniczny finished in ninth place with a time of 32:20, two minutes and 55 seconds behind winner Martin Lyons of Edinboro. Konyar, a junior, took 16th at regionals, while Hurst, a senior, and Tim Thomas, a junior, finished 18th and 23rd respectively. Bill Shotwell, Jim Taylor and Wade Becker also qualified for the national event with their efforts at regionals.

On the season, the Huskies took team titles at the Susquehanna Invitational and Bloomsburg Invitational. The squad also finished third at the Lafayette Invitational and the Gettysburg Invitational. Pszeniczny registered first place finishes in the Susquehanna Invitational and Bloomsburg Invitational and also took fifth in the PSAC championships. Thomas took second place at the Susquehanna Invitational and the Bloomsburg Invitational for his top finishes of the season, while Hurst and Konyar finished fifth and sixth at Susquehanna for their top finishes of the season.

Coner was named the PSAC Men's Coach of the Year in voting by the PSAC coaches.

THE WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTY TEAM, also coached by Conner, took eighth place in the PSAC championships and sent one runner, Tina Wikoski, to the NCAA Division II championships in Riverside, California. Wikoski, a junior, finished 48th at the national event with a time of 19:30. She also took second place in the PSAC championships and finished third in the regional event to qualify for nationals. Her top finish on the season was first at the Susquehanna Invitational. She also took second at the Bloomsburg Invitational and fifth at the Lafayette Invitational. Junior Wendy Hoffman finished fourth at the Susquehanna Invitational and seventh at the Bloomsburg Invitational, while sophomore Erin MacNeal's season best came at Susquehanna where she finished 12th.

THE WOMEN'S SOCCER TEAM, under fourth-year head coach Chuck Laudermitch, qualified for the Eastern College Athletic Conference playoffs for the second consecutive season. The Huskies finished the season ranked 11th, according to the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America poll. Bloomsburg finished with a regular season mark of 15-4, but dropped their ECAC semifinal contest to sixth-ranked Keene State, 6-0.

The Huskies outscored opponents 34-28 for the season and outshot their opponents, 498-261. The team was led in scoring by sophomore midfielder Patricia Cobane, who scored five goals. Cobane also added two assists on the season. Junior forwards Tracee Kuska and Denise Pecoraro each added four goals in a balanced scoring attack. Pecoraro, who is second on the all-time scoring list at Bloomsburg with 27, led the team in assists with five, while freshman midfielder Jill Funn added four. The Huskies' defense, which recorded nine shutouts on the season, was led by sophomore goalie Amy Linn, who made 164 saves in 20 games.

FIRST-YEAR HEAD COACH John O'Leary's men's soccer team made only its third-ever appearance in the PSAC playoffs this season, finishing with an overall record of 7-9-1. It was Bloomsburg's first conference tournament appearance since 1990. The Huskies dropped the semifinal contest to eventual champion East Stroudsburg, 3-0. Bloomsburg completed their conference schedule with a record of 4-3-1.

The Huskies used a solid defense, allowing an average of 1.71 goals per game and a balanced scoring attack with nine different players scoring goals during the season to reach the post-season tourney. Sophomore Glen Haug stopped 132 shots in goal for the Huskies, recording six shutouts and giving up 24 goals for a goals-against-average of 1.65.

Senior Boh Dilliplaine led the team in scoring with four goals, while four other players, senior Tom Simonet, junior Mike Elliot, sophomore Gus Gorman and freshman Brian Stevens, each scored three times. Senior Tom Clayton and sophomore Ron Brown led the squad in assists with four apiece, and senior Frank Klein has been credited with three. Brown and Simonet were both PSAC All-Conference second team selections.

FIRST-YEAR TENNIS COACH Marion Reese guided the Huskies to a 6-5 record and a fourth-place finish in the PSAC championships. The youthful squad, which was comprised of three freshmen, seven sophomores and only three juniors, got an exceptional singles season from sophomore Tracy Seaman, who finished 9-4 playing in number four, five and six singles. Number one singles performer Trish Sweeney finished 6-6, while sophomore Whitney Ammerman and junior Heather Wilhelm finished 7-7 and 7-6 respectively. The doubles tandem of Sandra Romich and Cheryl Devol completed the season with a 6-1 mark, while Sweeney and Ammerman went 4-3 in number one doubles. The Huskies' total record in singles play was 42-36, while the squad's doubles record for the season was 22-14.

THE FOOTBALL TEAM rebounded from last season's disappointing 1-9 record to 5-6 this season under first-year coach Danny Hale. After winning only one of its first six games, Bloomsburg ended the season winning four of its last five, finishing with a mark of 4-2 in the PSAC.

Freshman Glen McNamee led the team to its strong finish, completing 60 of 112 passes for 849 yards, six touchdowns and only one interception. On the season, McNamee completed 67 of 130 passes for 929 yards and seven touchdowns. Sophomore quarterback Phil Ries also played a considerable amount of time this season, completing 52 of his 118 passes for 755 yards.

The Huskies' primary receiver throughout the season was junior Buck Eardley, who led the team in receptions and receiving yards and was third in the PSAC in receiving yards. He finished the season with 49 catches and 911 yards and nine touchdowns. Junior receiver Jeff Zoranski caught 28 passes for 411 yards.

Sophomore tailback Mike Johnson led the squad in rushing with 796 yards on 199 carries, along with six touchdowns, while Syheed Brooks contributed 476 yards on 114 carries.

Defensively for the Huskies, junior defensive back Chet Heniele, who was selected to the 1993 Eastern College Athletic Conference All-Star team, completed the season with 79 tackles, eight interceptions and six pass break-ups. He led the PSAC in pickoffs. Sophomore linebacker Frank Babula led the Huskies in tackles with 84. He also contributed three and a half sacks. Defensive back Jeremy Horton added 62 tackles, while defensive end Doug Klopp and linebacker Tony Zarzaca added 54 apiece. Offensive tackle James Smith was also named to the ECAC All-Star team.

Special event tents come from alumni couple

Have you ever returned to campus for an alumni event and noticed a tent as one of the centers of activity? Or you might have seen it at a groundbreaking, a building dedication, a health fair or a Husky Club event.

Whatever the event, the tent came from All Occasion Rentals, owned by Gene Morrison '53 and his wife, Sally Ridgway Morrison '58. Natives of the Bloomsburg area, they have been in the rental business full-time since Gene's retirement from teaching in 1987. He had taught biology, general science and mathematics at Bloomsburg Area High School for 32 years.

Sally had taught special education for a year in the Millville Area and for two years in the Allentown area, but gave up teaching for marriage and parenting. She has been a full on-the-scene partner in the rental business almost from the beginning. They have five children and are now at nine grandchildren and counting.

Since taking over the business, the Morrises have greatly expanded their rental offerings. The first tent was purchased in 1979 when Gene was a part-time employee of the previous owner. They now own 40 tents. The largest is 30 feet by 70 feet, and two are maroon and gold. Incidentally, the first tent is still part of the inventory. Gene says the secret to tent longevity is having their own staff do the putting up and taking down.

What else rents besides tents? How about china place settings for 400 people, folding chairs for 1,200, a metal detector, a log splitter, a linoleum roller, portable dance floor, or "Play-It-Again-Sam," the animated automated piano player! If it rents, Sally and Gene probably have it.

As much as the business has grown, it still has a distinct "mom and pop" flavor — along with son, Matthew, and Gene's brother, John. Home is five minutes away from the business at 200 Pine Street, Carroll Park, Bloomsburg.

PLAY IT AGAIN SAM — This animated, automated piano player — dubbed "Play It Again Sam" — is one of many items that can be rented at All Occasion Rentals in Bloomsburg, owned by two BU alumni, Gene Morrison '53, and his wife, Sally Ridgway Morrison '58. Their rental tents can be seen at almost every special outdoor event on campus.

Alum's 'winning' record at Redman Stadium remains intact

(We received a note from Wayne von Stetten '50 of Willow Street after the Homecoming victory over West Chester, reminding us of a special record he holds.)

I just thought I'd let you know that my record is still intact. Can you imagine my surprise and pleasure over the wonderful victory on Saturday? I recall telling you when you were here in the area of my perfect record (never having seen the Huskies lose at Redman Stadium).

I must admit I was concerned about losing that status when I saw the Homecoming opponent was West Chester. I was so happy to be there on Saturday and especially with my son, son-in-law and two of my grandsons. What a great day it was!

Tell Danny (Hale) I will continue coming up each year, and perhaps he can let me know if there is a particular game I should plan to see next season. Were you serious about arranging to have a helicopter pick me up for the ride to Bloomsburg?

Bloomsburg University is committed to providing equal educational and employment opportunities for all persons without regard to race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, ancestry, lifestyle, sexual orientation, handicap, Vietnam era status, or union membership.

The university is additionally committed to affirmative action and will take positive steps to provide such educational and employment opportunities.

'Little Brother' gives something back

(The following newspaper article about Vincent Kulbitsky '91 was written by Kathryn Geller for the Pottsville Republican.)

With his gentle looks and polite manner, Vincent P. Kulbitsky looks like the kind of guy who would have been an altar boy when he was younger.

Friends call him caring, compassionate and sensitive. Kulbitsky humbly adds "sincere" and "enthusiastic" to the list. "But it's not so much a conscious decision to be these things as it is just being myself," he said.

Kulbitsky, 27, a Minersville native who lives in Shillington, is the new executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Schuylkill County Inc., a non-profit organization which pairs children from single-parent families with caring adults.

Helping people while volunteering in non-profit organizations has interested Kulbitsky since he was a teenager.

While a senior of Nativity BVM High School, he earned the Altruism Award, given for "unselfish service for the welfare of others." The plaque hangs in his Pottsville office.

BUT 13 YEARS AGO, Kulbitsky was in need of help himself.

His parents separated when he was 13. The oldest of four children, Kulbitsky said he needed someone to talk to. "I really didn't have an older brother to bounce things off, and I became introverted," he said.

After Kulbitsky's mother contacted the Big Brother program, he was paired with the Rev. David Leibner of Pottsville, who is now working at St. Joseph's Church in Reading.

According to Kulbitsky, his Big Brother helped him turn his life around. A freshman at Nativity, Kulbitsky was failing algebra and barely passing his other courses. "I was a consummate underachiever," he said.

"Father Dave fostered a positive self concept and more of a sense of responsibility in me," Kulbitsky said.

By the second semester of his sophomore year, his grades were soaring.

"Without a Big Brother, I don't know if I would have gotten this far. I may have just remained an underachiever," Kulbitsky said. "I don't think I would have gotten a college education."

He graduated with honors from Nativity and enrolled at Bloomsburg University where he graduated magna cum laude with a bachelor of science degree in business administration.

AFTER GRADUATION and several offers from prestigious accounting firms, Kulbitsky took a job as a staff accountant with Ernst & Young in Reading. While with the company, Kulbitsky remained interested in non-profit, social work and was active as a volunteer in several organizations aimed at helping children and the homeless.

"My evaluations (at Ernst & Young) were above average, but my heart wasn't really in it," he said.

When the chance came to fill the vacancy with Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Kulbitsky did not hesitate.

In fact, he took a 50 percent cut in salary and benefits to move from Ernst & Young to the Schuylkill County agency.

"Money isn't the most important thing," he said. "Unfortunately, it's a fallacy many people have."

Kulbitsky's moral and ethical views stem from his Roman Catholic upbringing, something which he says is a motivating force in everything he does.

"Big Brothers/Big Sisters is a unique opportunity to give something back," he said.

"I know this program works. Spending time with a child can make such a difference."

"NOT EVERY STORY is going to turn out successful, but you can see positive changes in children," Kulbitsky said. "If someone can show them that there are positive things out there, the future seems so much brighter."

Volunteers for Big Brothers/Big Sisters need to give three to five hours a week for a one-year commitment, Kulbitsky said. An extensive interview procedure, which may take four to six weeks or longer, includes a background check for any criminal history or instances of child abuse by a potential volunteer.

Kulbitsky hopes to become a Big Brother himself when his 90-day probationary period with the agency is finished. Although he is busy and he realizes many individuals are busy in their own lives, Kulbitsky said he believes people can find the time if they truly want to give to the organization.

THERE ARE 50 CHILDREN waiting to be matched across the county; 42 have matches, Kulbitsky said. The large number of children from single-parent homes in the county explains the large waiting list, he said.

But there are other reasons for the shortage of big brothers, as well. "Some people are reluctant to step into a situation because they don't want to be perceived as an absent parent," he explained.

"Father Dave was a big brother. We're not asking people to take the place of a parent. That has to be stressed," he added.

If anyone can dictate the success of the Big

MENTORING PAID OFF—As a young man, Vincent personally benefitted from the Big Brother program in his community. Now, about 14 years later, he is executive director of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Schuylkill County Inc. Vince is shown here, left, talking with Rev. David Liebner during a visit to the Fenstermaker Alumni House this past summer. Father Dave was Vince's Big Brother, and they have remained friends ever since.

Brothers/Big Sisters program, it's Liebner, as he reflects on his 13-year relationship with his "little brother" and friend.

Kulbitsky changed from being extremely withdrawn to becoming generous and extroverted, the priest said. "When I first met him it was sometimes difficult to get him to talk.

"But Vince has really grown to be a very sensitive and good man with good judgment."

Liebner said a small part of him hoped Kulbitsky might someday be a priest. "But it's God's plan and he is giving service where he's needed. I'm just really overjoyed to see him doing that."

Kulbitsky — as the agency's executive director, caseworker, public relations person, financial advisor, and volunteer recruiter — said he often takes work home.

"But it's not a job that I wish I didn't have to bring home with me," he said. "I love what I am doing. It's that simple."

His longterm goals for the agency include increasing revenues, hiring another caseworker and matching all children with partners.

"I think we can become one of the best organizations in the county for helping children," he said.

Chuck Daly Way

To help put himself through school, Daly said he scrubbed pots and pans in the cafeteria, collected dry cleaning and laundry with his roommate, waited tables at the American Legion, was a night watchman at a Ford dealership on weekends, took care of the tennis courts, and cut the grass for the head of the speech correction department "because I wanted to get through there." He said he also remembers hitchhiking to Berwick to do his student teaching.

"I guess down deep I'm really a teacher. I think it goes back to my instincts here at Bloomsburg. I was raised a teacher and I guess I never changed as a teacher. When you're a teacher, you're a teacher for life."

When he left Bloomsburg in 1952, Daly never dreamed he would eventually return to the university for a ceremony like Wednesday's.

"Back then I was questioning whether I'd be able to finish," he joked. "I would say it's quite an honor. I didn't do that much while I was here to deserve that.

"But since that time I've been very fortunate . . . I've been put into some remarkable situations from a basketball coaching standpoint.

"They are the kinds of things you never think will happen to you."

Daly was recently one of four coaches and seven players nominated for the Basketball Hall of Fame. To be elected, the Daly needs at least 18 votes from the 24-member Honors Committee. The committee's selections will be announced on February 8, 1994.

After the ceremony and during the reception at the Fenstermaker Alumni House, Daly graciously signed autographs and posed for photographs with everyone who requested one.

Dear Fellow Alumni,

It has been an exciting six months since I assumed the presidency of the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association. In that period, I also took on the chairperson role for the new library fund. That means I am visiting the Fenstermaker Alumni House and the newly-purchased Development Center next door quite regularly.

Fenstermaker Alumni House is the hub for all of the many alumni activities. Earlier this fall, Doug Hippenstiel, Linda Long and a few student staff members were consumed with Homecoming business. Today, Doug was deeply involved with this issue of BLOOMSBURG, the students were cleaning out a room for a new occupant (Scott Richter '84, newly-appointed assistant director of development), and Linda, as usual, was attending to one memo, visitor, or ringing phone after another. I just don't know how Doug and his small staff do what they do. They are extremely productive.

I am also constantly amazed by the number and variety of activities which occur under the auspices of the Association. There are winter parties for prospective students, summer picnics for newly-accepted students, scholarship and loan programs for enrolled students, a send-off picnic for graduates and then a host of offerings for alumni: reunions, regional chapters, after-work mixers, pizza and ski parties, theater trips to Canada, faculty luncheon lectures, Alumni Day and Homecoming, publishing BLOOMSBURG — the list goes on.

My current involvement is to get some help for Doug and Linda through a cadre of volunteers. Given funding limitations and the growing association needs, it seems a reasonable way to get more done. Thus, volunteerism was one of the Hazel M. Guyler '50, widowed in 1991, moved to Port Charlotte, Fla., where she is very active as a volunteer with Meals-on-Wheels and as a trained leader in the Stephen Ministry Series in the United Methodist Church. She enjoys friends, flowers and the climate in her new city.

Another goal is being achieved as new regional chapters are starting nicely in the Williamsport, Reading, Berks and Lancaster County areas.

Still another goal of obtaining some much needed space was achieved when we were able to purchase the house next door, the former home of retired math professor, Ron Novak, and more recently the home of the Rev. Robert Peiffer family, Protestant campus minister, who recently moved to a new position in Ohio.

Purchased by the Alumni Association, the house is being leased to the university for use as a Development Center. (When you see "Development," think fundraising.)

Fundraising is a relatively new reality for those of us from state-owned schools, while it has always been a way of life for our friends from the private schools. It is a reality we must face, and fortunately Bloomsburg has gotten off to a very good start. Under Tony Jansen's direction, contributions and gifts valued at about $18 million have been received in the past nine years.

That has meant benefits for Bloomsburg students and faculty that would not have been possible otherwise — scholarships, computers, new or improved facilities, faculty and staff development, faculty research, and more.

As far as the cost of our new library is concerned, the state will cover only 75 percent. We must raise 25 percent, or $2,375 million. Actually, our goal is now $3,375 million because our Foundation Board had the wisdom to go for a completed fourth floor. After inflation took its toll in the years between project approval and project funding, that floor was to have been left unfinished.

Actually, the Foundation's "wisdom" was made possible by the wonderful early response by alumni (a response that has continued, I might add). The Foundation Board was sure we could raise the additional million, and I am sure they were correct.

We are now at about $2 million in gifts and pledges, most of which is from alumni giving. A very big thank you to those of you who have put us there. This library will be the heart of the university for years to come, and you will have made some part of it possible.

We still have a long way to go though, so if those of you who haven't given will consider doing so, we would love to hear from you. It was obvious from our Homecoming victory over West Chester that we are coming back in football, but I must tell you. Within the 14 state-owned universities, we are dead last in "library." We need a new one very, very badly.

One more bit about the library. The architect's plans are being drawn to include some kind of a "long porch" concept. That is a very exciting thought to the many graduates who fondly remember the old Waller Hall Long Porch with its long row of rocking chairs.

Yes, we are coming back in football. Head coach Danny Hale and his staff have done a great job. The decisive Homecoming victory over an old nemesis was beyond anyone's expectation. Look for more good news on that front.

It has been a pleasure having Curt English '56 come back to campus as our acting president. Curt's love for his alma mater is obvious as he conducts the duties of his office. Actually, he goes beyond his duties as he reaches out to campus and community members, getting to know them, thanking people for doing what they do, and generally spreading a lot of good will.

Beginning with this issue of BLOOMSBURG, you will see in the "Classnotes" section the names of graduates who have volunteered to help with the activities of their classes. I thank those volunteers very much, and I invite others to join them. If you are interested in helping with your class reunions, with legislative affairs or fundraising, please contact Doug Hippenstiel by letter or telephone (1-800-526-0254). The idea is to broaden the base of planners to enhance the chances for bigger and better reunions. It also spreads the load a bit and relieves the class presidents of sole responsibility in some cases.

If you have been with me all the way through this letter, I thank you. As with Curt English, it is a labor of love for me to be involved with Bloomsburg University. The school has given a great deal to me through the efforts of many fine people, so it is a pleasure to try to give something back. And is a particular honor to try to do so this year as your association president.

My hope is that you will join me by supporting the University in any way that you can. Together, we can make it a better and better place for generations of students to come. If we don't care enough to help out, who will? Let's do it!

Sincerely,
John S. Scrimgeour '53
President of Alumni Association

P.S. I would be remiss if I did not acknowledge the contributions of the 24 members of your Alumni Board of Directors. They give generously of their time and energy to the business of the Association. They also give financial support — very generously. They level of giving to the library campaign is almost double the goal of $15,000 that was set for the board! Now, that's doing it!

CLASS OF 1958 — Members of the 35-year reunion class at Homecoming in October were Richard Connolley, Margaret Lynch Whitehead, George J. Miller, Wayne Gavitt, Carol Ely Herman, John P. Phil Gergen '55 has retired after teaching in the Mount Carmel Area Junior-Senior High School for 21 years. He calculates that he taught democracy to 3,667 students during that time. He also served as an assistant principal.

This was actually the second time he retired, the first being after a 21-year career with the U. S. Navy, where he rose to the rank of lieutenant commander. During his two decades of service with the Naval Security Group, he had tours of duty in England, Germany, and Pearl Harbor, with special assignments in Ethiopia, Turkey, Lebanon, Morocco and Spain.

He also saw stateside duty, primarily with the National Security Agency in Washington, D.C.

He and his wife, the former Joan Boyle, are the parents of a daughter, Susan, and a son, Robert.

Edith Stackhouse Allen '57 was guest of honor at a surprise retirement party thrown by 71 first graders of the L. R. Appleman Elementary School in Benton — with some help from parents. She taught for 29 years, including 19 in the Benton District. She earlier taught in New York, South Dakota and Michigan.

Classmate Margaret Duck Follmei sent us the following tribute: "Edith was a Unityville 'farm' gal when we met in the Women's Day Room in the fall of 1953. We became fast friends and attended all of our elementary teaching classes together. She was even a bridesmaid in my wedding (1958) — some 35 years ago in Bloomsburg.

"Edith, I feel, represents the 'ultimate' elementary teacher. First grade is one of the most demanding and difficult to teach and one of the most rewarding. She is what the word 'teacher' is all about — dedication and hard work for nearly 30 years."

Raymond F. Edwards '57 of Doylestown Township died on October 22 at age 58. A mathematics teacher at Delaware Valley College, he taught at Central Bucks West High School for 28 years before retiring in 1991. He also taught at East Stroudsburg University.

He was a supervisor of student teachers for Penn State and wrote manuals for the Navy. He completed graduate work at Temple University and Penn State.

William R. Freed '58 retired in August as superintendent of the Camp Hill schools, but he hasn't left the world of academia completely. He is teaching graduate students at Penn State-

Harrisburg and is working to establish a principal certification program on that campus.

Earlier in his career, he taught and coached in Mechanicsburg and West Chester. He later served as principal at Pottsville. He earned a master's degree at Villanova University and a doctorate in education at Lehigh University.

He and his wife, Cynthia, recently celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary.

George T. Herman '58 has accepted a two-year assignment with the Peace Corps, effective September 23. Dr. Herman will be working as a special education teacher/trainer in Honduras.

He retired in 1989 as director of special education for Intermediate Unit 16. He worked there since 1971, first as a psychologist, then as assistant director of special education. He was appointed director in 1978.

He earned a master's degree from Bucknell University and a doctorate from Nova University in 1985.

Wrestling fans in the Northumberland area know him as a former announcer for Shikellany wrestling on WKOK-AM.

Phillip H. Mosler '58 retired this year from the Glens Falls, N.Y., School District. He taught gifted elementary classes in Allentown for five years before moving to Glens Falls.

From 1967 to 1970 he was director of the American Cooperative School in Tunis, Tunisia, which was paired with Glens Falls in a school-to-school project sponsored by the Department of State.

In addition to his classroom duties, Phil wrote curriculum, chaired social studies committees, assisted in coaching wrestling. He was also actively involved in the N.Y. State Teachers Union.

He was a member of the Common Council of Glens Falls.

Theodore Reznick '58 retired in June 1991 after teaching for 33 and a half years.

Tom Sheeham '58 has retired after 35 years in education. Thirty-four of those years were at the two Bridgewater-Raritan high schools as math teacher, coach and department chairperson of mathematics and science.

Veteran administrator retires

John L. Walker, vice president for university advancement, retired June 30 after 28 years of service to the university.

During his tenure, he held numerous positions at Bloomsburg, including executive assistant to the president, assistant to the vice president for student life, associate dean of students, and director of admissions.

In February he will receive a lifetime achievement award during the annual conference of the Mid-Atlantic District of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) in Baltimore.

At Bloomsburg, Walker served on over 30 committees, holding leadership roles on several. One former colleague described him as "the perfect boss" and the "conscience" of the university. "His service to Bloomsburg University was definitely a labor of love."

His contributions to the State System included membership on the executive council committee for legislative and development affairs, governmental relations advisory committee and the subcommittee on advocacy. He has served as regional chairperson and campus coordinator for the State Employee Combined Appeal drive.

Among Walker's numerous community and civic activities are membership on the architectural review board of the Town of Bloomsburg, Bloomsburg Revitalization Inc., and the Columbia County Economic Development Council.

He has held numerous offices in the Bloomsburg Chamber of Commerce, including president and executive committee member.

Well-versed in historic preservation, he was instrumental in selecting the furnishings for the Alumni Room in Carver Hall, the Fenstermaker Alumni House, and the recently refurbished Kenneth Gross Auditorium in Carver Hall.

He holds bachelor's and master's

Mother's alma mater was dear to her, too

Catherine W. Evans did not graduate from Bloomsburg, but for many years attended luncheons of the Philadelphia chapter with her mother, Adda M. Brandon Westfield, Class of 1908. Over the years, Mrs. Evans developed such good friendships with alumni in the group that she continued to attend the luncheons even after her mother died.

She was a professional puppeteer, and she sometimes would bring a couple of her puppet friends along to the luncheons in entertain.

On April 17, 1992, Mrs. Evans died very unexpectedly. She left a bequest of $5,133 to the university in memory of her mother, and another bequest of $5,133 to the Alumni Association in memory of her mother's best friend, Margaret Butler Minner '23.

"Catherine was a beautiful person with a wonderful sense of humor," said Dong Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs. "It was always a joy to see her at the alumni luncheons."

Ronald E. Little '60 of Bensalem died on May 27 at age 55. He taught in Selinsgrove before moving to Bensalem, where he taught for 27 years at the Samuel K. Finst School.

He also earned a master's degree at B.U.

Surviving are his wife, the former Judith A. Wilk; two brothers and a foster sister.

William A. Criswell '60 has retired after a 33-year teaching career in the Mifflinburg Area School District. He earned a master's degree at Bucknell University.

William R. Morris '60 retired on April 1 as rear admiral in the U. S. Navy, following a 32-year naval career. He most recently served as the fourth Competition Advocate General of the Navy and as the deputy for Acquisition Policy, Integrity and Accountability to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

After being commissioned as ensign in 1961, he served as a surface line officer at sea and later served as the planning officer at the Naval Communication Stations, Morocco and Nea Makia, Greece. Upon graduating from the Navy Supply Corps School, he was assigned as supply officer on board the USS Manley. He then served as a detailer in the Office of Supply Corps Personnel and subsequently transferred to the Naval Supply Center in Pearl Harbor. He later became the director of the Aircraft and Engines Contracting Division at the Naval Air Systems Command.

He served as the director of contracts and subsequently as the director of the Weapons Systems Support Group at the Navy Ships Parts Control Center, where his responsibilities included provisioning, programming and inventory management of all spares and support for the fleet.

Following a tour on the staff of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy (Shipbuilding and Logistics), he returned to the Naval Air Systems Command. There he served as the assistant commander for contracts and was promoted to rear admiral.

By virtue of his inspiring leadership and through the Department of the Navy's Competition Program, the Navy competed over 60 percent of its $7 billion dollar budget, despite tremendous challenges posed by budget reductions, according to Congressman Ike Skelton of Missouri.

"His achievements will have a lasting and positive effect on the country's industrial posture, well into the 21st century," Skelton noted.

As the Assistant Secretary of the Navy's senior military advisor on acquisition matters, his technical mastery and foresight resolved countless complex issues and problems related to major weapons programs. His solutions saved millions of dollars, improved readiness and enhanced the Navy's capability to perform effectively in Operations Desert Shield, Desert Storm and Restore Hope.

"Throughout these and other substantial achievements, Bill has added immeasurably to the posture, support and readiness of our nation," Skelton added.

Morris' career decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with gold star, the Meritorious Service Medal with gold star and the Navy Achievement Award.

Bill is beginning his second career with the accounting firm of Cooper & Lybrand. He and his wife are the parents of two grown children and one grandchild. They reside in Alexandria, Va.

Roy Shiflet '60 has retired after teaching for 33 years, with 29 at the Mifflinburg High School.

He initiated the school's teacher orientation program and the American Red Cross mini-bloodmobile for seniors.

Vernon Slinn '60 retired in January 1992 from the North Penn School District after 31 and a half years of teaching. He recently was reelected for a fifth term as Montgomery Township tax collector.

Philip Underkoffler '60 is in his 34th year of teaching at Williams Valley Junior-Senior High School. He and his wife, Carolyn, have three daughters: Amber, Laura and Leslie.

Joseph A. Rado Jr. '63 is president and chief executive officer of WORLD Electronics, a Berks County firm which specializes in circuit board design and layout.

Rado's company has sophisticated machines that can place 1,800 components on a board per hour. Another machine can solder 16,000 component joints in less than an hour.

His company does board work for a variety of industries, such as AT&T and Nurion Industries, Inc.

WORLD was purchased by Rado in 1986, when it was located in West Chester with eight employees. He moved it to the Grace Industrial Center in New Morgan in 1987.

After receiving a degree in special education at Bloomsburg, Rado began teaching and eventually earned a master's degree in psychology at West Chester University in 1970. He taught school for 11 years, two in special education and nine years teaching health, physical education and psychology. He was also involved in coaching and "all the things that teachers do."

He later left teaching to establish a successful career in the insurance business. He was a top money-maker for his firm, topping $5 million annually for several years.

In 1987, while nurturing a small WORLD business, he had a hip replacement. A year later, he underwent open heart surgery, requiring four bypasses.

He and his wife, Elaine, are the parents of five children.

James K. Sample '63 has received a doctor of education degree at The Janiero serves in interim role as vice president

Anthony Janiero, assistant vice president for advancement, is serving as interim vice president for advancement. He succeeds John Walker, who retired June 30 after 28 years of service to the university.

Janiero served in the same capacity last fall during Walker's sabbatical leave. He has over 17 years of experience in various areas of university advancement.

In his current role, he oversees the offices of university relations and communication, alumni affairs, legislative relations and affirmative action, in addition to development and the Bloomsburg University Foundation.

Janiero will continue to direct A Treasury of Ideas, the $3.3 million fund raising campaign for the new library. "The entire advancement staff is committed to the library campaign. This is the primary objective on our agenda. This campaign must be a team effort on the part of everyone at the university," he said.

Janiero came to Bloomsburg in 1984 as director of development and executive director of the Bloomsburg University Foundation. In 1989, he was promoted to assistant vice president for advancement.

Shortly after coming to Bloomsburg, Janiero initiated the reactivation of the University Foundation. Total university support has increased by more than $16 million under his leadership. Since Janiero's arrival, the university received a $3.5 million bequest and over $1 million in scholarships.

Nearly a million dollars in deferred gifts through life insurance policies, wills and trusts have been procured during the last two years.

The Development Office staff successfully initiated and completed a three-phase $3.5 million capital campaign, The Trust for Generations, to support the library, scholarships and academic enhancement.

He earned bachelor's and master's degrees at Trenton State College.

Reese retires after 25 years as tennis coach

By Patrick Lester
Sports Information Assistant

Tennis and Burt Reese have been an inseparable pair at Bloomsburg University for the past 25 years. After building the program to national prominence during his tenure, the Huskies' veteran coach has recently announced that he is stepping down from the post. And he does so with very few regrets and a lot of friends after developing a reputation that many college coaches would envy.

"It was a slow process to develop (the program), but it got better," said Reese. A couple players came and then a couple more. The keys early on were bringing in a combination of good players, good students and good people."

One regret Reese did allude to was that his teams did not manage to place in the top four on the national level. Finishing in the top four in the country is something Reese always wanted to accomplish. In fact, he often exhibits his dry wit when inquiring about the many trophies on the his colleagues has accumulated.

On many occasions, Reese has told Jan Hutchinson that he has always wanted one of the many national place-winning trophies her field hockey and softball teams have earned over the years.

"I'm still attempting to buy one of Jan Hutchinson's trophies," Reese said jokingly, referring to the field hockey coach's past success in national play.

"I just wish we would have finished in the top four (during my career) so we would have gotten one of those trophies." Reese may emphasize the fact that his teams did not finish in the top four, but he modestly fails to mention the outstanding success his program has accumulated and the vast respect he has gained during those years.

Over the years, Reese's name in tennis circles, as well as Division II college athletics, has become teaching — died on March 8 at age 71.

Following graduation from high school in 1940, he was an aviation cadet in the Army Air Corps, received his commission and was sent to bombardier school. He served in the Mediterranean theatre, flying 70 combat missions. He stayed in the Air Force after World War II and flew 62 more combat missions during the Korean Conflict.

He remained with SAC flying B47s until he retired in 1962. A master navigator with over 15,000 flying hours, he was awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross and various air medals.

After leaving Bloomsburg, he began teaching junior AF ROTC at Allentown-Dieruff High School. Upon retiring from teaching in 1985, he and his wife, the former Geraldine Furrington, moved to Panama City.

Also surviving are three children: John, Tom Max, and Lisa.

Priscilla Green McFerrin '65 had the lead role in "Mame," York Little Theatre's 60th anniversary season finale. Priscilla is executive director of the Hanover Public Library.

After teaching at York High School, she took a job at Martin Memorial Library in York. She subsequently earned a master's degree in library science at Simmons College.

Priscilla met her husband, Hal McFerrin, during a 1971 production of "Mame" by the York Little Theatre. "'Mame' has always been special to us because of that," she said.

She likes to tell friends that she and Hal have spent a lot of time in theater seats. "When I die," she says, "I'd like to come back as a theater seat." That way, she won't ever miss a performance.

For the 1993 production, husband Hal and daughter Lydin both worked backstage.

Nancy Long McIntyre '65, director of the Educational Center for Earth Observation Systems at West Chester University, was recently named a recipient of the 1993 Aerospace Educator Award by Women in Aerospace.

Headquartered in Washington, Women in Aerospace is a nonprofit, professional society open to both men and women. It is a networking organization that encourages and supports women's opportunities for career advancement and increasing their visibility as aerospace professionals.

At West Chester, Nancy coordinates the spring national Satellites and Education Conference, which provides opportunities for educators to learn more about the utilization of satellites in classrooms and the summer American Space School for high school students. She is also secretary for the Satellite Educators Association and is on the Board for the Greater Philadelphia Section of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, serving as the 1993-1994 newsletter editor.

John Murtin '65 has been named superintendent of the Mahanoy Area

School District, after serving as acting superintendent for the 1992-1993 academic year.

He joined the faculty of his alma mater in 1965 as a high school history teacher. He served in other posts, including intermediate school principal from 1980 until this appointment.

In November 1991 he was named Citizen of the Year in recognition of his service to the community, including youth sports programs.

In a newspaper interview at that time, he said he prides himself on being fair and knowing all his middle school students personally.

"I would really say that I'm a pro-people type of person. I can deal with teachers and students and have a good rapport with them."

One slogan he has relied on throughout his teaching career is "treat (the pupils) right, and they'll do what's right. I never met a child I didn't like. I never met a kid I couldn't get along with."

Murtin still collects sports cards and comic books and considers himself a kid at heart.

Stepping into his office is like walking into a toy store. Lining the walls and shelves are teddy bears, postcards, photos and other mementos given to him by past and present pupils.

He received a master's degree at Lehigh University in 1969 and received his superintendent's certification in 1991.

He founded the high school girls' track and field program in 1977 and served as coach until 1981. He also founded the district's cross country teams.

Murtin was named a "Friend of Education" by the Mahanoy Area Education Association in 1986. He served as vice president of the MAEA from 1973 to 1977.

He is married to the former Judith Demshock M'69, and they are the parents of two sons, Mike, a second year student at B.U., and Jonathan, a sixth grader at Mahanoy Area.

synonymous with success and respect. During his career as head coach, his teams won 12 Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference championships and completed the season ranked nationally in the Division II top 20 on 13 occasions. Reese also produced 97 singles and doubles champions in the PSAC, not to mention several Division II All-Americans and a national champion.

"He is a very hard working coach who has produced very good teams and players during his career," said Leo Scoda, head coach at Phoenixville High School for the past 31 years. "There's a lot of adjectives I can use to describe him. He's just very gracious and certainly a gentleman and has been a model for me as a coach as I've seen his program grow."

That success Scoda was referring to, however, didn't come immediately. Taking over the program during the 1968-1969 season, Reese's squads had a combined 9-19 record through his first three seasons as coach. Reese said that early on it was difficult to bring in the quality players necessary to compete with the top Division I and II teams.

"There were severe limitations back then," he said. "There were no tennis courts on campus, the team played down town, and we had trouble recruiting outstanding players without the facilities."

"Bloomsburg didn't even have courts when I decided to go there, I went for one reason and that reason was Burt Reese," said Tom Sweitzer '75, Reese's first-ever recruit who went on to record a 52-15 mark at Bloomsburg.

"He sold me on the school and the great business program first. After that, it was obvious he was the best coach from a number of standpoints, especially the fact that he could play with you and teach you to win by example. Very few coaches in the country could do that," added Sweitzer, who is owner of Central Penn Tennis Service and one of only 113 USPTA Master Professionals in the world.

In 1972, a tennis complex was finally constructed on campus which, according to Reese, "helped attract a higher level of tennis player." He explained that building that level of success was gradual. "My initial goals were to eventually win the conference championships. We had several third and fourth-place finishes, but it took nine years before we won it."

After those three developmental seasons, the Huskies rebounded during the 1971-1972 season with a 9-2 mark. Since that time, Reese has transcended the basis game of tennis at Bloomsburg, accumulating an outstanding winning percentage of .687 with an overall mark of 376-171, which included a career-best win total of 26 during the 1987-1988 season. The team's initial PSAC title came in 1979, and now the Huskies are seven-time defending champions in the conference.

Prior to coaching the Huskies, Reese, a native of Taylor, earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees at East Stroudsburg, where he co-captained the tennis and basketball teams. He then joined the faculty at Old Forge High School, where he was an assistant football coach and basketball coach. He moved to Abington Heights High School and served as athletic director and initiated and coached varsity tennis to a 45-6 record before coming to Bloomsburg. As a player, he was ranked among the top 10 singles players in the Middle States Tennis Association and was a member of one of the top three doubles tennis several times.

Reese, who has been selected PSAC "Coach of the Year" six times, was NCAA Division II national "Coach of the Year" in 1988. He was also Central Pennsylvania Tennis Association "Coach of the Year."

He has helped his players maintain a balance of both athletics and academics. "I stressed academics first, tennis second, nothing comes third and fourth, and a social life comes fifth. I put constant emphasis on that. Most players have come in down the line and worked their way up."

Because there have been so many successful players to go through his program, it's difficult for Reese to point out specific players that were integral to the program's success. However, he does mention the 1980 and 1989 seasons as two of his most memorable.

"1989 was probably the best year," he said, referring to the squad that finished 18-8. "We finished fifth in the county, Mark Billone won the national championship, and Lance Milner was selected as an All-American. From the standpoint of achievement, that was our best year."

"It seems that winning helps everyone feel better about themselves, but I've also had great times with teams that weren't as good as those teams. You don't have to win all the time to have a good time in this game. But out of the 25 seasons, there were a lot more highs than lows. In fact, there weren't too many lows at all. There are a ton of guys that have done a great job for the program."

In terms of his relationship with the many players that have come and gone through the program, Reese said he demanded a sense of respect from them, and he continues to keep in touch with a majority of former players.

"I want them to be my friend after they have gone through the program," he said. "I want them to pick up the phone and call me at any time"

And needless to say, his players have developed a sense of respect for Reese, not only for the success he has achieved, but also for the values he instilled in them.

"What impressed me the most was that he emphasized that he wanted us to improve as human beings, to mature as individuals," said Drew Hostetter '76, who owns the school's best winning percentage with an 81-18 record. "He expected us to better ourselves in all aspects including socially and intellectually. He is very competitive and was a good leader and example for us as players."

"The values and ideals he taught us off the court were as important as any of the technical things we learned about the game of tennis," added Jim Hollister '78, a former player who finished with three PSAC titles and a 95-40 mark under Reese. "His straight-forward approach and ability to analyze our strengths and weaknesses as players made us better in a hurry." Hollister is now director of sports information/athletic development at Bloomsburg.

Not only have players continued to keep in touch with Reese, but many colleagues who have developed a tremendous amount of respect for Reese over the years keep in contact.

"But and his program certainly have gained a lot of respect over the years," said Scoda. "It seemed that he developed a respect as a good coach, and it was just a matter of time until he attracted talented youngsters from outside Pennsylvania. He has a tremendous knowledge of the game and, personality wise, he's a good recruiter who instills values in his players, which is very important."

Although Reese will no longer coach the men's tennis program, he will continue his duties as faculty member and assistant athletic director.

"Coaching tennis has been rewarding for me, and I hope all the players learned a lot about tennis and being successful in life. I wanted them to get a sense of right and wrong and to learn how to deal with other people. I hope the experience was also rewarding for almost all of the players, too."

"Without question, he is the reason Bloomsburg tennis has reached its high status," said Hollister. "His strengths as a man and a coach have allowed him to build a lot of very good teams and influence many players in a positive way, myself included."

"He was the strongest influence during my four years of college other than my father," added Dr. David Superdock '83, a former All-American and the nation's top tennis scholar/athlete in 1982 and 1983, who finished with seven PSAC championships and a 106-31 record.

DEDICATION OF THE KENNETH S. GROSS AUDITORIUM

About Kenneth S. Gross . . .

An alumnus of Bloomsburg University, Kenneth S. Gross, along with his brother, Larry J. Gross, founded the Tri-State Alarm Company in 1977. They expanded the business to encompass a customer base of 25,000 over an area of ten states, employing more than 500 employees when the business was sold in 1989. Since that time, he has been president of the Kenneth S. Gross Investment Group which owns and manages its own real estate holdings and other investments, including three restaurants and a party supply franchise. In addition, the Group oversees the Kenneth S. Gross Scholarship Trust, a program which provides educational funding to more than 50 children of former employees to attend the colleges of their choice.

Having attended Bloomsburg in the 1970s, Gross renewed his contacts with the university in the late 1980s, and recalling close friendships and fond memories he made there, he decided to find an opportunity to give something back to the university.

This "something" came in two forms of "lead gifts." The first was an endowed scholarship fund, in his name, for adult, single-parent students. The second was support for the renovation of the 600-seat auditorium in Carver Hall, recently named in his honor. Both of these lead gifts provided special impetus to Bloomsburg's first major campaign, The Trust for Generations — Phase II, Scholarships and Phase III, Academic Excellence.

Gross is a member of the Board of Directors of The Bloomsburg University Foundation, Inc., and serves his community as a board member of United Cerebral Palsy. In addition, he sits on the board of The National Bank of the Main Line and is president of the Lower Merion Business District Authority. He also volunteers as a soccer and basketball coach for his children in a local recreational league.

History of the Kenneth S. Gross Auditorium . . .

On April 4, 1867, the auditorium in Carver Hall was used for the first time. The occasion was the dedication of the new library constructed in "East Bloomsburg" by the Bloomsburg Literary Institute. At one o'clock on April 4, with the Bloomsburg Brass Band leading the way, students, faculty, parents, and patrons paraded from the old Academy building at the corner of West Third and Jefferson Streets to the glorious new building at the top of the hill.

Construction, begun in the early summer of 1866, was completed by the following spring. The architect and contractor was Henry Carver, principal and teacher at the Institute. At a cost of $24,000, the building had been erected and furnished. The lumber was bought at the mill in Espy, while the sun-drenched bricks came from the brick works in Bloomsburg. The building was spoken of as Institute Hall.

The day of the dedication, the new auditorium on the second floor was filled to capacity with friends and well-wishers. Speeches by dignitaries, prayers by the town clergy and special music were offered that afternoon. In the evening, literary exercises by students were so elaborate and extensive that the dedication exercises were not complete until the following night.

Among its many uses, this auditorium has greeted students for chapel, at first daily, then three times a week, and finally, until about 1960, only on Tuesdays and Thursdays. It has been the site for plays enacted by students, original works from the campus community, musical performances by faculty and students, and many fine productions by professional artists brought to the school from the world of entertainment. Lecturers, famous worldwide, have spoken from its lectern.

Through the years there have been some changes, all without the auditorium losing any of its distinctive beauty or its perfect acoustics. During the Welsh administration (1890-1906), renovations to Institute Hall were extensive. A new auditorium floor was laid, the stage was enlarged, the gracious balcony (spoken of in old minutes as "the gallery") was added, and 1,026 wooden opera chairs were installed permanently. Until 1891-1892, portable chairs had been used for seating in the auditorium. Although the changes to the front

University Honors Gross Family at Homecoming

Several years ago, Bloomsburg alumnus Kenneth Gross asked university officials how he could help his alma mater.

On Friday of Homecoming Weekend, the Gross family and friends gathered with members of the university community to dedicate the results of one of his subsequent acts of generosity.

Gross provided the lead gift of $100,000 for the renovation of the 600-seat auditorium in Carver Hall, named in his honor. Another generous gift was provided by Milco Industries, whose officials were also present for the dedication.

The dedication of the Kenneth S. Gross Auditorium was one of many homecoming activities planned to honor Gross and his family. Earlier in the day, faculty and staff had the opportunity to meet the family and see the auditorium at an informal reception.

The dedication ceremonies preceded a Celebrity Artist Series performance by Academy Award-winning composer and pianist Marvin Hamlisch. Interim President Curtis English '56 opened the dedication ceremonies by noting the financial gift of Gross and the attention to the detail and hard work of "many people at the university, including tradespeople, who were instrumental in the project."

Kevin O'Connor, chairperson of the Council of Trustees, explained the trustees' role as stewards of the university's physical plant. "In fulfilling our duty to name university buildings, it is our privilege to honor a distinguished graduate who has helped enhance our standard of excellence," he said.

Citing the willingness of Gross to "give back in tangible ways," O'Connor officially named the newly renovated facility the Kenneth S. Gross Auditorium. "This lovely auditorium is a visible reminder that commitment to a goal can make that goal possible," he said.

"This room is full of memories. I am pleased to help preserve this portion of Bloomsburg's history. It gives me great pleasure to know new students will create new memories in this auditorium," Gross said after explaining his donation was really a "family gift."

Gross applauded the "professionalism and courtesy" afforded him by the development staff and Anthony Ianiero, interim vice president for advancement. He thanked his parents, who were in attendance, for "providing the opportunity for me to spend four of the best years of my life at Bloomsburg."

of Institute Hall in 1900-1901 did nothing to the interior of the building, the "gleaming white tower," then completed, seemed an especially appropriate entrance to the gracious "public room" at the top of the stairs.

At the annual meeting of the Alumni Association in the spring of 1927, O. H. Bakeless proposed naming three buildings on campus for outstanding teachers. Institute Hall, he suggested, should be called Carver Hall in memory of Henry Carver. His proposal was adopted, but through the years and through the changes and renovations, the auditorium in Carver has remained nameless.

For example, on Feb. 19, 1954, ceremonies were held in Carver Hall to open to the public the new administrative offices which replaced the original classrooms on the first floor, the press report merely stated "the exercises were held in the auditorium." From there, that night, the lights in the tower were switched on for the first time in honor of the alumni and students who died in World War II. (Every night since that event, the tower, officially named The Bloomsburg Beacon, has been illuminated.)

By the 1960s, the wooden opera chairs had seen their best days and were replaced by green overstuffed theatre seats, reducing the capacity of the auditorium to 900.

In 1982, extensive work was required to shore up the tower and renew the front of Carver Hall. For the first time in its history, the auditorium was closed.

Even after Mitrani Hall opened in the Haas Center for the Arts, a use remained for the smaller auditorium in Carver, but it was sorely in need of repair. The inadequate stage facilities and the worn condition of the audience hall restricted its use.

Within this past year (1992-1993), through the generous gift of a former student and friend of Bloomsburg University, Carver Auditorium, once again, became the gem of the campus. Hereafter, it shall be known as the Kenneth S. Gross Auditorium.

Math alumni return for career day

A number of alumni returned to campus on the day before Homecoming (October 22) to participate in a career day planned by the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science. Participating in various panels during the day were the following:

Nadine Dudge '89 (IMS America),
Alise Szymczak '91 (PP&L),
Kathy Szymczak '93 (Bristol-Myers Squibb),
Colleen Brady '92 (Martin Marietta),

Dawn Inio '90 (Naval Warfare Center, Aircraft Division), Nicole Layanu (Metropolitan Life),

Susan Misiewicz (Moore Business Forms),

Mark Mnoor '92 (Electronic Data Systems),

Jennifer Fnalke '93 (Substitute teacher), and

Kathy Rhen '76 (Cedar Crest High School).

Also participating was Scott Inch '86, now a member of the B.U. faculty.

Each panelist described their work and their job-search process and offered suggestions to over 100 math and computer science majors who participated in the day's events.

Panelists encouraged present students to gain internship experience while in school, if possible, and to diversify by preparing in more than one field — for example, combining mathematics with biology or statistics or physics, or combining computer science with accounting or chemistry.

The department is looking for other alumni who want to get involved in helping the department and its students. Please contact Professor JoAnne Giowney if you would be willing to:

Participate in a career information panel to talk about your job — how you got it, what you do, and so on;

Speak to a class or to a faculty-student seminar on a mathematics or computer science topic;

Speak/entertain at a Math Club or Kappa Mu Epsilon meeting.

Reese may have been denied a top-four finish in the nation and a deal with Hutchinson, but two things can't be denied: the success he has achieved, and the respect he has gained during the past 25 years from players and colleagues.

Successful wrestling coach steps down

Roger Sanders, who led the Bloomsburg wrestling program for the past 21 years, has stepped down as head coach. Eight-year assistant Tom Mantucci has been named to succeed him.

"I want to thank Bloomsburg University for giving me the opportunity to teach and coach," Sanders said in announcing his retirement from coaching. "Most important, I was lucky to have talented student athletes and good assistant coaches."

"I would not trade the experiences and the friendships of the past 21 years for anything," he added.

A native of Fairless Hills, Sanders is a 1964 graduate of West Chester University, where he was an NCAA College Division champion.

His first head coaching job was at Palmyra High School, where he spent two years prior to landing the head coaching job at New York University. During his five-year tenure at NYU, he built a 50-18-1 mark.

Sanders came to Bloomsburg in 1973 and in only his second season produced a pair of College Division champions: Ron Sheehan '74 (167 pounds) and Shifty Hitchcock '74 (177 pounds). Hitchcock went on to win the NCAA Division I title.

"That year was one of my most memorable," said Sanders, who has gone back to the classroom as a full time faculty member.

Another milestone was late last season when Bloomsburg beat Lehigh to give Sanders career win number 300. Sanders ends 26 years of coaching with a sparkling 300-122-9 mark.

"The time has come to step down," said Sanders. "The program is strong, with everyone back from our BWT championship performance, and I feel we are in great hands with Tom and his new assistant Dave Kennedy."

Noting that several of his former wrestlers have gone on to head coaching positions themselves, he said is especially proud of their

A walking tour of the Alsace

($1,700 per person)
May 23 - June 6, 1994

Vist le Carrefour Europeen, the crossroads of Europe, in a two-week trip that leads from the towns of the Alsace into the mountains of the Vosges. We will begin the tour in the city of Mulhouse in the valley of the Rhine and travel north, with Strasbourg, the capital of Alsace, as our final goal.

Our tour will take us along the G.R. 5, one of several long-distance hiking trails in Eurpoe, leading us over moderate peaks and past impressive medieval ruins. On the way north, we will visit Colmar, one of the region's most beautiful towns and a leading art center.

After a few more days of hiking in the mountains with views of the Alps and the Black Forest, we will descend again into the Rhine valley where many small villages have preserved their distinct Alsatian character. Here you will find impressive collections of art and some of the most delicious food and wine in the region. Several moderate hiking days interrupted by sightseeing in charming towns will bring us to Strasbourg, known around the world for its cathedral, museums and picturesque neighborhoods.

During the tour you will have the opportunity to attend local music festivals in Mulhouse and Strasbourg, and in the event that you want to spend additional time in a particular town, we will help make arrangements for you to join the group again the following day.

This trip will be led by Dr. Helmut Doll of our mathematics department. For more information, please call 717-389-4466.

professional success — even when it's been against the Huskies.

Sanders coached 13 NCAA All-Americans, including three-time national champion Ricky Bonomo, winner at 118 in 1985-1986-1987. Led by the Bonomo twins, Ricky (1st) and Rocky (4th), the Huskies placed fifth in the NCAA in 1987.

Sanders was also president of the National Wrestling Coaches Association for a two-year stint beginning in 1989. He is presently the coordinator for the United States Association for Blind Athletes.

"I was fortunate to receive tremendous support from the university and the community, and I want to thank everyone who ever contributed in any way to the success of the Bloomsburg wrestling program," he said. "It has been a tremendous part of my life, and I will cherish the memories forever."

Plans are underway for a reunion of all former BU wrestlers and their families on June 24-26. Watch for details.

Wrestling assistant takes over

Tom Martucci has been named to succeed Roger Sanders as head wrestling coach. Former Huskies' standout Dave Kennedy has been named his assistant.

Martucci served as an assistant for the past seven seasons under Sanders. During those years, the Huskies compiled an impressive record of 99-44-5. He helped coach one national champion in three titles, four all-Americans, nine Eastern Wrestling League champions and 15 Pennsylvania State Conference champions.

Prior to joining the Bloomsburg staff in 1984, Martucci served as an assistant coach for the University of North Carolina and was the head coach at Chowan Junior College. He is a 1981 graduate of Trenton State College, where he compiled a two-year record of 61-1-2 in addition to winning both the NCAA Division I and III championships his senior year at 190 pounds. Before transferring to Trenton, he began his collegiate wrestling career at Louisiana State in 1977 and 1978.

Dave Kennedy, a 1990 Bloomsburg graduate, will serve as assistant coach with his main responsibilities working with the lower weights, recruiting and also strength training. He returns to his alma mater after coaching stints at The Citadel and Bucknell University.

As an undergraduate, he had a standout career, posting a 110-28-4 record. He captured three PSAC titles and one EWL crown. He also had a runner-up and third-place showing in the EWL tournament which earned him three trips to the national championships.

Kennedy graduated from Athens High School, where he compiled an impressive 152-10 mark, including 89 pins.

Headcount enrollments at the 14 State System of Higher Education universities decreased for the second consecutive year for the 1993 fall semester.

Overall, the headcount enrollments at the state-owned universities totaled 95,962, a decrease of 2.7 percent below the 1992 fall total of 98,624. Enrollments of non-resident students and part-time students contributed to the drop in students.

The decreases in headcount enrollments follow nine consecutive years of increases at System universities. Between fall 1982 to fall 1991, System enrollments increased by 20,528, or 26 percent, to reach a peak of 99,850 students.

State System Chancellor James H. McCormick indicated the decline was the result of the System's long-range planning initiatives and increases in non-resident tuition. In July 1991, the State System's Board of Governors adopted the System's Enrollment Management Policy to meet a recommendation contained in the State System's planning document, Priorities for Pennsylvania's State System of Higher Education during the 1990s.

Priorities recommended that, "Unless the capital and operating resources required for growth are provided, State System enrollment should be stabilized for at least the next five years in order to maintain educational quality."

"Because of our large enrollment gain since 1982, the State System universities reached the limits of their physical capacity and staffing in continuing to provide the legislatively mandated mission of a high quality education for an affordable cost to Pennsylvania's citizens," Chancellor McCormick said.

"The Board of Governors and the university presidents have addressed this situation by working together to design and implement the Enrollment Management Policy."

"The policy is a guideline for the universities in their efforts to better serve students with diminishing available resources," he said. "For the first time in our history, the System's state appropriation accounted for less than 50 percent of the 1992-1993 instructional budget. This fiscal year, the universities have continued to reduce their expenditures by capping or decreasing enrollments."

"Additionally, the increase in non-resident tuition for this academic year has affected enrollments in that student sector," McCormick added.

TKE GOLF OUTING—The sixth annual Robert McCarty TKE Open drew 52 players to Pickering Valley Golf Club near Phoenixville on July 17. Everyone enjoyed the beautiful weather and challenging golf while raising money for the TKE Scholarship Fund set up in the name of Bobby McCarty, a TKE brother who was killed in a 1986 car accident. For information about next year's tournament, contact the TKE Open Organizing Committee at 215-623-8730 or (AP)-722-5443.

Recreation center underway

The university broke ground for a new student recreation center on October 5. Located opposite the tennis courts, the 56,000 square foot recreation center will include four racquetball courts, a free weight room, a room with nautilus and other equipment, a multipurpose room designed for aerobics and dance, a jogging track and an arena with four intramural size basketball courts.

The south side of the arena will feature an eight-foot glass wall section so joggers can view Catawissa Mountain and surrounding countryside.

"Our other athletic facilities are also used by classes and the intercollegiate sports teams in addition to student recreation," says Jennie Carpenter, interim vice president for student life. "This will be a building students won't have to share with classes or intercollegiate sports."

Bloomsburg students voted in 1991 to assess themselves a $60 per semester fee to fund the construction and operation of the facility. Construction of the $5.3 million center is expected to be complete in December of 1994.

"Security is a priority and has been carefully planned," said John Trathen, director of student activities and Kehr Union. "There will be three outside mounted security cameras on the building. Individuals will be required to show photo identification to enter through a single entrance. All other exit doors will be alarmed.

"The building will be utilitarian. Wherever possible, natural light will be used to reduce utility expenses," Trathen said. "This project is totally funded by the students, and we want to keep the upkeep and maintenance as economical as possible."

Amin appointed to graduate post

M. Ruhul Amin has been appointed to a nine-month term as interim assistant vice president for graduate studies and research.

He replaces Peter J. Kusvinsky, who left Bloomsburg in August to be dean of graduate studies at Youngstown State University in Ohio.

A walk across England

July 30 to August 11, 1994
$1,700

Join us this summer on a 12-day walk across the breadth of Northern England which will take us through some of the island's most beautiful mountains and moorland.

Our walk will begin in the Lake District region of Northwest England and finish across the North Yorkshire Moors — from St. Bee's on the Irish Sea to Robin Hood's Bay on the shores of the North Sea.

The walk passes through a lilly landscape of highland sheep farms, villages of stone-walled houses, inns, and ancient churches. It is the land of Wordsworth and James Herriot, author of All Things Bright and Beautiful. The Romans passed through this region two thousand years ago, followed by the Danes, Saxons and Vikings. Traces of their passing can be found along the old pathways, churches and landscapes.

The walk across England will be led by Brenda Smith and Dr. Barbara Smith (not related). Brenda is a teacher, and Barbara is an education policy writer and lobbyist.

Alumnus seeks #2 job in state

Mark S. Schweiker '75, a Bucks County commissioner since 1987, has announced his candidacy for lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania. He will run in the 1994 primary as a Republican.

Noting that he is confident of success, he said he is "apprehensive because anyone who is a candidate is, by definition, a politician. Anything a politician says these days is viewed with suspicion — particularly words that are said after 'I promise you'."

"I'm not going to tell you that electing me means less spending, lower taxes and safer streets," he said. "I want this as much as you. But the lieutenant governor is not the chief policy maker of the Commonwealth, even though recently, with a tied Senate and an ailing governor, it has become, as one commentator wrote, 'A key office in the Keystone State.'"

In 1990, Schweiker was recognized by the Bloomsburg University Alumni

Schweiker

Association as a "Young Alumnus of the Year."

Re-elected as a committee member in 1991, he led a ticket that returned majority commissioners to office for the first time in the 20th century.

Schweiker, 40, today represents the citizens of a county with a population greater than each of three states. A strong advocate of fiscal soundness, he has successfully implemented programs to increase productivity of a workforce of more than 2,000.

When he was first elected committee member at age 34, he had already held elective public office for eight years, including service as a Middletown Township supervisor. He won that first election in his heavily Democratic hometown.

Before entering politics, he served in the securities industry as an investment manager with Merrill Lynch and later as an evaluation consultant with McGraw-Hill. He continues limited work in the private sector as senior partner of a management consulting firm.

A member and former chairman of the Delaware Valley Regional Finance Authority, Schweiker also serves as a member of the United Way Board of Directors.

He earned a master's degree in administration at Rider College in 1983.

Schweiker and his wife, Katherine, are the parents of two sons, Brett and Eric, and a daughter, Kara. They live in Langhorne.

Michael R. Weaver '87 and Tracey Jo Bilger are planning an August 27, 1994 wedding. Michael is employed as a chemist for Merck and Co., River-side.

Leslie James Wendler '87 and her husband, Eric, are the parents of a daughter, Paige Allison, born on January 31.

Buckingham

Retired VP appointed to board

Boyd B. Buckingham '43 was recently appointed to the Bloomsburg University Foundation board of directors.

Vice president for administration emeritus at BU, Buckingham has been active in various community organizations and has been publicly recognized for his dedicated service.

A native of York, he left Bloomsburg State Teachers College during his senior year to serve in World War II as a second lieutenant, a 17 combat bomber pilot in the European Theatre of Operations. Following his discharge, he taught for two years in the Athens (Pa.) High School and six years in the Sayre (Pa.) Area High School.

He then joined the BSTC faculty where he taught for seven years. Leaving his position as associate professor, Buckingham first served in the administration for 15 years as director of public relations and development. In 1970 he was promoted to associate vice president for development and external relations, and in 1974 he became vice president for administration, a position he held until his retirement in 1981.

Buckingham's community service has included presidencies of the Bloomsburg Chapter of the American Red Cross, the Bloomsburg Chamber of Commerce, the Jacques Weber Foundation, Inc., and the Columbia-Mintour Torch Club. He has also served as chairperson of the Bloomsburg Town Planning Commission and the Columbia County Redevelopment and Housing Authority.

He was a member of the board of directors of the Columbia County Housing Authority for 13 years, and he is presently a long-time member of the board of directors of the Bloomsburg Area Industrial Development Association and the advisory board of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

BU employees exceed goal for charities

Bloomburg University employees have exceeded the State Employees Combined Appeal campaign goal of $31,392 by pledging $31,487 to charitable causes, according to Michael Vavrick, dean of extended programs and chairperson of this year's campaign.

Bloomburg's fundraising goal is the highest among the 14 State System universities.

The campaign attracted 307 participants, or 83.7 percent of the university's 367 employee participation goal.

Philadelphia student named as trustee

Bloomsburg University senior John McDaniel has been appointed by Gov. Casey to serve on the university's Council of Trustees. He will serve until he graduates, which is expected to be in December 1994.

A criminal justice and social welfare major, McDaniel, 21, has served as treasurer of the Community Government Association, where he oversaw a budget of over $357,000. He has worked to promote racial diversity in the community through the University-Community Task Force on Racial Equity and Students Together Alleviating Racial Tension (START). He was an organizer of last year's Hands Across Bloomsburg project, in which members of the university and town came together to form a human chain from Carver Hall to Market Square.

McDaniel planned the gospel music festival held at Bloomsburg in February of 1992 and 1993. In the summer of 1992, he was the first student from Bloomsburg to be selected for the Minority Leaders Fellowship Program in Washington, D.C., and worked for the Bureau of Rehabilitation, Inc., a non-profit agency contracted by the Superior Court of Washington, D.C., to monitor suspected criminals who have been released until trial.

After graduation he plans to attend Temple University as a graduate student in criminology or public administration.

Search committee at work

The university officially announced the search for a new president in the September 20 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education, according to trustees James T. Atherton and John J. Haggerty, co-chairpersons of the university's presidential search committee.

The composition of the search committee and the constituencies they represent, established by the Council of Trustees, is as follows.

James T. Atherton, trustee; Nancy E. Edwards '70, Alumni Association; John J. Haggerty, trustee; Anthony M. Imler, management; Rosemary T. McGrady, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees; Encl F. McGuire III, student; Lynnda Michaels '88, State College and University Professionals Association; David J. Mindertout, Aaron Poluovsky and Pamela Wynn, Association of Pennsylvania State College and University Faculty, and Gail Martin Zarlek '81, trustee.

Acting in an advisory capacity: David E. McFarland, president of Kutztown University; and Edward P. Kelley Jr., vice chancellor of the State System of Higher Education for employee and labor relations. Secretary to the committee is Arlita Lamm Harkin.

Dr. Curtis R. English '56, interim president, is not eligible for consideration as permanent president.

The Council of Trustees and the presidential search committee will be assisted by the Academic Search Consultation Service, a nonprofit group located in Washington, D.C. The ASCS is composed of former faculty members and academic administrators who have assisted over 290 colleges and universities in searches for presidents and chief academic officers. Two consultants visited Bloomsburg's campus last spring to interview the various constituencies for the purpose of helping the committee focus on the needs for presidential leadership and to help us ensure that our search process if conducted in a highly professional manner.

The committee has discussed the consultant's report and has come to a general agreement with the analysis of the consultants. The report is on reserve in the Andrus Library.

The committee has adopted a plan and timetable which calls for them to recommend three to five candidates for president to the Council of Trustees in February 1994.

New organization fosters global awareness

In the spring of 1991 a group of Bloomsburg University professors met to form an organization dedicated to increasing mutual understanding among the people of the globe through person-to-person exchanges of ideas and information.

The result was the Global Awareness Society International, a non profit organization with members around the world and branch chapters in Korea and Japan.

"Our goals are future oriented toward the 21st century," says Dr. Chang S. Roh, sociology professor and founder. "The world is made up of interdependent parts, and this dependence is becoming increasingly important as the forces of globalization shrink the planet."

Other founding members from H.U. include James H. Huber, sociology, who is GASI executive director and journal editor, Jim Pouffret, mathematics and computer science, who is treasurer, and Woollong Lee, economics, who is a member of the board.

Major activities of the new society have included the 1992 annual international meeting in Washington, D.C., the 1993 meeting in New York City, publication of Global News, the GASI newsletter, and the publication of the first issue of The Journal of Global Awareness, the official journal of the society.

GASI seeks to create networks of people from around the globe to work on understanding the issues associated with globalization and to provide forums for interested individuals and organizations to share ideas.

The meeting in New York City this past July featured a keynote speech by John Healey, executive director of Amnesty International, art exhibits by Japanese potter Shiko Kanzaki and Pennsylvania artist David Armstrong, and a discussion of global issues related to nuclear waste disposal conducted by David Leroy, former governor of Idaho.

Presentations by Bloomsburg faculty included "Global Computer Networks" by Bob Abbott and Charles Hoppel, "Art as Globalization" by Ken Wilson and Gary Clark, "Multicultural Education" by Hussein Pereshieh and Rosemary Radziewich, "Children's Rights in a Global Village" by Sue Jackson and Dale Sultzbaugh, "Privatization in Eastern Europe" by Frank Limbenfeld, and "Global Trade" by Woo Bong Lee and Rob Obutelewicz.

Future plans of the Global Awareness Society include an international meeting in Chicago (June 3-5, 1994), a meeting focusing on "Population and Environment" in Shanghai in June 1995, and the expansion of its educational activities including multicultural workshops for teachers. Membership is open to all people interested in globalization, and B.U. alumni are particularly welcome as members.

Alumni in the Chicago area are es-

Town-Gown committee discusses goals

The Bloomsburg town-gown committee met in November to discuss the goals of its new leadership for the 1993-1994 academic year.

Co-chairs of the committee are Dan Bauman, mayor-elect, who succeeds George Hemingway, and Tony Ianiero, interim vice president for advancement, who succeeds John Walker.

In opening comments, interim president Curt English announced his goal to try to "resolve town-gown issues before they become problems."

He reported that he will be visiting fraternity and sorority houses in the town. He said the idea of these "social calls" has been well received by the students.

Bauman announced plans to conduct a survey of the community and students, using a random sampling, to identify all the issues and concerns of the community at large. This is an "education, re-education program, which needs to be done every year if we are to achieve the goals of the committee."

Speakers will be invited to the meetings to address issues of concern to them, said English.

Other town representatives on the committee are Blb Hrobst, town councilman-elect; Katy Miller, resident and landlord; Jerry Depo, town manager; Larry Smith, police chief; Bruce Bowman, downtown business representative; and Charlie Felker, code enforcement officer.

Other gown representatives include Marie Conley, Community Government Association representative; Jennie Carpenter, interim vice president for student life; Robert Parrish, vice president for administration; Roy Pointer, faculty representative; Don Young, assistant director of student standards, residence life; and Ed Valovage, resident director, Montgomery Apartments.

Spectrum wins top honor from CSPA

Spectrum, the university's student magazine, has been awarded the Medalist Honor by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

The Medalist Honor, the highest granted by the CSPA, is awarded to the top five percent of publications entered in the competition. Receiving 960 out of 1,000 possible points for the 1992-1993 issues, this is the fifth consecutive medal Spectrum has won from the CSPA.

The 48-page, full-color magazine is designed to serve permanent residents of Columbia and Montom counties.

"Very creative magazine. Wonderful outreach to the community."

"Variety and in depth coverage of articles is excellent."

Spectrum editor-in-chief is Walter Brasch, professor of mass communications at Bloomsburg. The executive editor for fall 1992 issue was Patricia Perrin, who is currently an information specialist for the American Association of Publishers in Washington, D.C. Executive editor for spring 1993 issue was Stacy Tassone of Philadelphia, who is production director for THE magazine in Trenton, N.J.

Spectrum has also won five consecutive All American awards from the Associated Collegiate Press, which honors fewer than two dozen college magazines each year. It has also been judged first in overall excellence by the American Scholastic Press Association in 1992 with a perfect score of 1,000.

Task force considers master's program in physical therapy

A task force has been organized to investigate the feasibility of establishing a master's level program in physical therapy at Bloomsburg.

The university presently sponsors a pre-physical therapy program in the department of biological and allied health sciences. However, students in that program are required to matriculate elsewhere to complete the degree.
