Service is a two-way street

By Nancy Swartz Lychos '52
President, Alumni Association

"Ever upward, striving, climbing, onward Bloomsburg goes" are the words that complete the last verse of our Alma Mater. Written decades ago, they still accurately reflect what is happening in all facets of university life — and are especially true of the Alumni Association. We are constantly seeking ways to be of service to you and to involve you in our mission to promote the cause of education.

Our latest efforts may help you find that perfect job or perfect employee. We are indebted to Doug Hippenstiel, director of alumni affairs, for providing the idea — and the space in BLOOMSBURG. For complete details, refer to page 55.

As for how you can get involved, a list of specific ways is included in this issue. You will find a variety of suggestions which will keep your Husky spirit alive and vibrant. We hope they will also put to rest the myth that the only time you hear from Bloomsburg is when we want money. Your time and talents are even more essential!

Some of the volunteer "jobs" require significant effort (chapter steering committee, for example); some, just a little (keeping your address current). All can be personally rewarding, and you will have the satisfaction of giving something back to the school that gave so much to you.

We realize a few of you may have less than positive feelings about your Bloomsburg experience and, as a result, aren't interested in alumni activities. We are sincerely sorry if that applies to you, but we encourage you to contact us to tell us why. (Just send a note to the Alumni Office.) University officials have often told us that alumni are very important to them and have asked us to let them know if they can be of help. We will do everything we can to convey your concern to the appropriate person and follow up on any action taken. Even if we don't change your mind about Bloomsburg, we may be able to make a difference for future alumni.

For the Alumni Association to be as successful as possible, we need everyone's active participation and support. With all of us working together, Bloomsburg will continue climbing upward and onward.

UNIVERSITY LEADERS — As they waited for the December commencement to get underway, it was all smiles from Ramona Alley, chair of the Council of Trustees; Dr. Jessica Kozloff, president of the University; and Nancy Lychos '52, president of the Alumni Association. It was President Kozloff's first commencement at Bloomsburg.

Vice presidential searches underway; library campaign tops $3.375 million goal

By Jessica S. Kozloff, Ph.D.

President, Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania

As my second semester at Bloomsburg begins, it seems appropriate to reflect on the past, and to consider the future.

As an institution — as individuals — we have been marked indelibly by the tragedies we have shared this semester. In the loss of a respected professor and in the unfortunate deaths of five young people, we have experienced remarkable acts of courage and dignity, humanity and civility.

In these tragic events we have grown by reaching within ourselves to draw upon our strengths and talents. We are not quite the same as we were before.

Despite these tragedies, I continue to feel incredibly lucky to be here. This is a very good place that has the potential for greatness. I see it expressed in the talents of our faculty, staff, students and alumni — and in our commitment to the life of the mind.

Others also recognize the value of Bloomsburg. This past fall, U.S. News and World Report ranked B.U. fourth as a "Best Value" in higher education among regional universities in the northern part of the nation. I believe this ranking reflects our commitment to providing students with the highest quality education while keeping the cost of that education within reach of as many students and families as possible.

Bloomsburg is an institution with a proud past and a great future. One of the activities in which we are currently engaged will markedly affect how B.U. will evolve in the days and years ahead. I refer to our recently concluded search for a new vice president for student life and ongoing searches for a provost/vice president for academic affairs and a vice president for university advancement. As you recall, all three of these positions have been filled on an interim basis since the retirement of the former vice presidents.

Following campus interviews of five candidates, Dr. H. Preston Herring was selected as the new vice president for student life. Dr. Herring, an administrator at Rochester Institute of Technology, is expected to begin his duties on March 1. In the meantime, Dr. John J. Trathen is serving as interim vice president.

Interviews for the other two positions will take place early in the spring semester, with appointments to be made no later than July 1, 1995.

On a final note, I have one very good piece of news that I am eager to share with you. As of December 6, we — faculty, staff, students, alumni and Foundation Board members — have reached our $3.375 million goal for the library campaign by raising more than $3.5 million dollars for A Treasury of Ideas. I am very proud that the library, which is really the center of learning on any campus, will be the first building constructed at Bloomsburg during my tenure as president.

Congratulations and many thanks for your generous support.

Secret ingredient for success: passion

A William Kelly, a 1971 graduate who is president of WVIA television and radio, delivered the address at the 125th annual winter commencement on December 17.

Another alumnus, Dr. Curtis R. English, Class of 1956, was awarded an honorary doctorate in recognition of his service as interim president of the University.

Kelly began his life-long interest in radio at age 12, when he began broadcasting from his basement radio station. By ninth grade he was working at WTTC in Towanda and describing everything from Harry James' music to horse-pulling contests.

His radio career spanned nine stations in Pennsylvania and New York, where he became known for his attention-getting public service projects. His efforts as station manager of WYBG in Massena, N. Y., resulted in the purchase of a new ambulance for the community. While at WARM in Scranton, his 25-mile Winter Walk for the March of Dimes raised more than $25,000 to fight birth defects. Two years after the Hurricane Agnes flood, Kelly described the natural beauty of the Susquehanna River from a canoe in WARM's 100-mile "Great Canoe Expedition" down the river.

Today, Kelly is president of WVIA-TV Channel 44 and WVIA FM 89.9, the region's public television and radio stations. As the station's chief executive officer, he also serves as executive producer of several programs, two of which were nominees for the prestigious IRIS Award of the National Association of Television Program Executives. He is executive producer of "The News Directors" and host of the station's monthly series, "State of Pennsylvania." He worked closely with The New York Times as executive producer of "James Reston, The Man Millions Read," a major WVIA documentary aired by PBS in 1993. The Corporation for Public Broadcasting has recognized his efforts in fund raising and audience building with two national awards.

In 1988 he was named "Young Alumnus of the Year" by the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association. He has also received the Pennsylvania Medical Society's Walter F. Donaldson Award for Outstanding Medical Journalism and the Outstanding Volunteer Leadership Award from the Northeastern Chapter March of Dimes.

Kelly represents the state's seven public television stations as board member of the Pennsylvania Association of Broadcasters. He serves on the board of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Philharmonic, is an advisory board member of the Pennsylvania College of Technology in Williamsport, and is past president of the Marian Sutherland Kirby Library board of directors in Mountaintop. He has taught media courses at B.U. as an adjunct professor for many years.

Also a graduate of the University of Wisconsin Executive Management Institute, Kelly is a recognized speaker on communications theory and techniques.

He and his wife, Janice, are parents of three children. They live in Mountaintop.

Because Kelly's address was well-received by members of the graduating class and others in the audience, we would like to share some excerpts with you:

Twenty-four years ago this month, I sat in this room with my parents, and I wanted the speaker to make it QUICK! But I've always been in too much of a hurry for the next experience to appreciate the quality of the one at hand. So my first pearl of wisdom to you, the graduates of 1994, is to try to live in the moment, starting now!

The tests ahead of you still offer "multiple choices," but now the "professor" pays you, he or she can fire or promote you, and your employer is not sympathetic. In this new "classroom," you "ace" the tests by effort, attitude, a sense of organizational politics and a few other ingredients.

There are three things which have helped me: Good luck, hard work and passion.

Let's take them one at a time. My definition of luck is basically being in the right place at the right time, and having the instinct to "go for it" when you can. . . .

Hard work is one of those things your parents have probably talked to you about. It means, and pardon me if I sound like your parent, forgetting the hours you're supposed to arrive and leave, and sticking with the job until it's done so well that YOU are really proud of yourself! . . .

But the "secret ingredient" in my recipe for success is passion. What power passion has, and what mountains it can move for you! Call it intensity, or enthusiasm, but when you know what you want, and will do what you have to do to get it, you are credible, compelling and practically irresistible to enterprising and ambitious employers. I've come to believe that passion is as important in the job search as intellect and creativity . . .

This passion thing is nothing new, of course, artists, composers, lovers and even some politicians have it. It's that "sparkle," and the good news for you today is that you don't have to be born with it! I'm sorry that after all these years in classrooms, you, the Class of 1994, can't "crum" for passion or find it in a book! If you have it now, the challenge is to hang onto it despite inevitable setbacks. If you don't have and want it, you have some pretty important decisions ahead, and some not insignificant sacrifices as well. . . .

But, whatever you do, don't act like a victim! You will quickly discover how few people want to hear about your failures, and worse, it can sour you very quickly! Once your attitude has gone South, employers like me can pick it up in a flash, and you simply won't get a good start on your career by sounding like a victim! Wallpaper your room with those rejection letters, gain energy from them, and force yourself to do what you have to do. You've earned a degree today, NOT a good job! That's up to you, and it may well be the hardest thing you've ever done.

Remember, a little luck, a lot of hard work, and unshakable confidence in yourself! And, when you get the job, get noticed by the quality of your work, then make yourself too good to lose. . . .

They can't teach you in college how to become a sensitive person, or how to care about other people more than your self, or, and this is particularly important, how to know who you are. These are the hard things to learn, but they're essential to being whole and happy! . . .

Part of your college education was to raise your sights, to teach you to think critically about life, to judge for yourself about the ethics or morality of behavior, about the unfairness of stereotypes and racial or ethnic discrimination. In your youth and energy, and because of your education, you need only open your eyes wider to see your responsibilities to society. . . .

Service to others can open your hearts and minds, and getting involved in your community enriches your life. I know you have very little money, but learn now to give some to something you believe in. Find a youngster who really needs a Big Brother or Sister, spend part of this Christmas helping in a soup kitchen, inspire a young person to graduate from college. Although it may not seem so today, life is short and, as many of you learned this past semester, sometimes tragically short. So, resolve now not to waste these years; look around you, count your blessing, and through giving of yourself to others, learn to live life fully as soon as you can. . . .

Here's your last list from Bloomsburg University. I'll call it "Thoughts on a happy, successful life!"

1. Don't measure yourself, even in these early years, by money. This is easily said and not easily lived, but you will be most satisfied with work, and will know great peace of mind when you realize how few things of enduring value are acquired by money.

2. Don't feel entitled to anything you don't struggle for. Everyone gets a little bit of luck in their career, but the successful and smart ones don't congratulate themselves, but work harder than ever and earn the next big break.

3. Set goals in your life, and work systematically toward them. This takes discipline and patience, for the world will not move at your pace. Keep your eye on the goal, accept disappointments as part of the game, plan the work and work the plan, and you will get there!

4. Chances are you will work for several different employers in your career, and some are just not inclined to praise. Therefore, know yourself and be your toughest critic. Don't expect to be told you've done a good job. Impress yourself!

5. Marry for love (and passion), and then work at it. The greatest failure most people ever know is a failed marriage, and the victims are often those you love the most. Don't take each other for granted.

6. Don't waste your life with regrets! Live your life in the current and future, looking back only to gain perspective and insight that you can actually use. There really is only one time when regrets matter, so I leave you with these words:

At the end of your life, you won't think of the raise or promotion you didn't get, the new car you couldn't buy, or the deal you almost made. At the end of your life, you'll regret the time you didn't spend with parents as they aged, with the spouse you appreciated too late, and, certainly, precious time not shared with your children.

One hundred ten years ago, Justice that prior to 1800 most Pennsylvanians did not celebrate Christmas.

"In fact, many religious denominations objected strongly to any signs of celebration and the resulting controversy was evidenced in newspaper articles and in the State Legislature throughout the early 1800s. As Christmas became more accepted by the general public, the customs of the Pennsylvania Germans from Rhineland and Bavaria, such as the Moravians and the Lutherans, were adopted throughout the State."

Walter "Whitey" McCloskey '44, a beloved teacher and coach in the Danville Area School District for many years, died on November 6 at age 73.

Widely known as a highly successful basketball coach, he coached the Ironmen from 1952 through 1974, compiling a 350-183 record and winning several Susquehanna Valley championships. A trademark of his teams was their huge rosters. He did not believe in cutting players and would often carry 35 or 40 players.

More important than all the wins and championships was the impression Whitey left on all who came in contact with him, according to those who remember him. The community's high regard spread all through the Susquehanna Valley League, where virtually all his fiercest coaching competitors became his great friends.

Whitey attended classes at Bloomsburg from 1940 through 1943, when he enlisted in the Navy. After his time in the service, he finished school and began teaching at Columbia High School near Lancaster in 1946. He later taught at Bloomsburg High School before moving to Danville in 1949.

While at Bloomsburg, he was a three-sport athlete who captained the baseball, basketball and football teams. He also lettered in soccer his senior year when the Huskies did not field a football team because of the war.

It was during his wartime service in Jacksonville, Fla., that he met and married his late wife, Nan.

While at Danville, he also served as assistant football coach and started elementary intramural basketball, football and track and field programs. He was also director of the Washnes Playground for more than 20 years and director of the Sunnybrook Basketball Camp for Boys for 10 years. He brought some of basketball's most famous names — such as Bobby Knight, Stu Jackson and Matt Guokas — to the camp to give clinics.

Whitey and his wife raised eight children and adopted two others. Surviving are two daughters, Bethann Campbell and Kathy McCloskey, seven sons, Mike, Pat, Steve, Tim, Kevin, Frank Guthrie and David Reichwein.

Veterans Corner

By DALE A. KROTJIE '60

Chairman, Veterans Committee

Homecoming on October 22 provided an opportunity for the Alumni Veterans Committee to meet to review unfinished projects, continue planning for future improvements to the Veterans Memorial Garden, and promote ways to encourage alumni and public interest in veterans' affairs.

An early breakfast was enjoyed by several members and after the committee meeting there was lunch on the library mall, a football victory, and the Homecoming buffet and dinner dance at Magee's 24 West Ballroom.

Topics of the morning meeting included the following:

- Veterans Biographical Forms — Approximately 250 forms are on file to date. The Department of Defense has shown interest in contacting veterans who were involved in actions during the 1994-1995 commemorative period. Veterans are urged to call the Alumni Office at 1-800-526-0254 for a bio form in order to become part of our historical display at the Fenstermaker Alumni House.

- Scholarship — The $1,000 Veterans Memorial Scholarship will be presented annually to a student who meets the qualifying criteria. Anyone wishing to contribute to this fund may do so at any time by designating their contribution to the Veterans Scholarship Fund.

- Veterans Display — The committee will continue to encourage all veterans to update their biographical records. We hope to include the World War II Honor Roll as a permanent part of the display.

- Monument/Garden — We hope to install a flagstone sidewalk from the driveway to the memorial garden. We also plan to purchase flags of the five armed services for display on special days, as well as a new wreath for the monument.

- 1995 Projects — We plan to expand the committee by two members to include representatives of the Vietnam and Persian Gulf Wars. We hope to produce a new postcard featuring the Veterans Memorial Garden. We will participate in efforts to honor veterans during the Alumni Weekend festivities. We will continue contact with the Department of Defense through November 12, 1995 to promote our various projects.

- In Passing — Always a sad note, but we pay tribute to three B.U. veterans whose obituaries were recently published in the Press-Enterprise: Walter A. McClosky '44, a Navy veteran during World

Rohm remembered for many qualities

(The following tribute to Robert Rohm '60, who died on December 11, was written by John Babb '51.)

Bobby Rohm will be missed by so many people, but the qualities he instilled in his students and athletes at Montgomery, Bloomsburg and Central Columbia High Schools will long remain. His enthusiasm, honesty, sense of fairness, respect for others, love of life and devotion to God are but a few of the qualities he exhibited in his associations with everyone.

I remember so many events in Robert Max Rohm's life — his outstanding high school career at Muncy High, his even more outstanding athletic accomplishments while attending Bloomsburg State College; his first football coaching job at Montgomery Clinton High School; the camaraderie engendered while playing with the Mainville Baseball Team in the Tri-County League; his teaching my daughter and a few years later his effective and enthusiastic coaching of my son at Bloomsburg High; his professional handling of duties as a competent, well-respected PIAA baseball official; his many years of producing outstanding football teams at Central Columbia; his fair, warm treatment of gridiron opponents and officials; his years of working Sundays before Fair Week parking cars for the benefit of the Bloomsburg Hospital; his inviting my wife and me to his induction into the Bloomsburg University's Hall of Fame — I could go on and on . . .

In conclusion, in my many years of teaching, coaching and officiating, I have never found a person whom I would want to work with me, with my son or daughter, or with any other young (or older) individual more than Bobby Rohm.

Many Bloomsburg alumni work at Shared Medical Systems in Malvern, so we'd like to start an alumni business chapter there. The purpose of the chapter will be to plan and organize ways in which alumni can interact with current students, such as career day programs, the Share-a-Day program, and internships.

If you work at SMS, please contact Rick Mead '86 at SMS, extension 3774.

If you are employed by another business which employs a number of Bloomsburg graduates, we'll help you organize a chapter there, too. Simply call the Alumni Office at 1-800-526-0254.

B.U. joins tribute to Bill Foster

A tribute for Bill Foster, former B.U. basketball coach, was held in August. Representatives from all six universities where Bill coached were in attendance at the Host Inn, Lancaster, including the starting five from his Duke University NCAA finalist team.

Dick Lloyd '62 was master of ceremonies and played a major role in planning the event. Also representing Bloomsburg were David Spierdock '54 and John Scrimgeour '53. Other B.U. alumni in attendance who played for Bill were Jerry Doemling '64 and Phil Houser '61.

Sadly, Bill could not attend his big night. After a delightful Friday evening with friends, Bill suffered chest pains and was in a Lancaster area hospital while the Saturday event went on without him. By that time, however, he was resting comfortably out of danger, so his wife Shirley and four daughters were in attendance. Knowing that Bill was doing well, the group had a great time roasting and toasting him while Marion Lloyd video taped it all.

In a letter some days after the tribute, he explained that he had had a blockage in one of his by-passes (from previous surgery), but that the others were working well. Displaying his ever-present sense of humor, Bill wrote that if his basketball winning percentage had been as good as that of his by-passes (75%), he'd still be coaching.

Bill is currently assistant commissioner of the Southwest Conference.

Anthony J. (Andy) Waskie '68, coordinator of the foreign languages curriculum of the Pennsbury School District and Civil War reenactor, lecturer, organizer and author, was recipient of the 1994 Merit Award of the Delaware Valley Civil War Round Table.

Dr. Waskie, widely-known in the tri-state area for his first person historical impression of General George G. Meade, commander of the Union's Army of the Potomac, was the unanimous choice of the Round Table's board of directors as the embodiment of the group's objectives of education and fellowship. The award was presented at the Philadelphia organization's annual banquet on December 7.

"If you were asked to name one person, familiar to a wide audience of civil war enthusiasts in the Delaware Valley area, that person would be Dr. Andy Waskie," said Hugh Boyle, president of the organization. "He is prime mover and role model for all of us who are interested in the period of American history, aside from its birth, that has profoundly affected all Americans of today. His dedication is complete. His knowledge is encyclopedic, and his enthusiasm and energy are boundless."

A brief list of Dr. Waskie's Civil War-related activities:

— A founder and commander of the 28th Pennsylvania Volunteers Historical Organization

— Member of the board of directors of the Grand Army of the Republic Museum

— Past commander of the Sons of Union Veterans, Philadelphia Camp

— Founder and executive board member of both the Berks County and Greater Trenton Civil War Round Tables, and co-founder of the Mid-Atlantic Association of Civil War Round Tables.

— Author of articles for the Civil War Times and historical and military journals.

— For the past six years, an organizer of the annual Civil War battle reenactment at Neshaminy State Park

Dr. Waskie earned a master's degree and a Ph.D. in Germanic philology from New York University.

Since 1973, he has directed the foreign language program of the 12,000-student school district, offering French, German, Spanish, Latin and Russian. Over the past 10 years he has planned and organized several large educational conferences in the school district and at various other educational institutions in the Delaware Valley area.

Interim dean leads efforts for accreditation

Mary Erickson's first priority as acting dean of the College of Business during this academic year is to lead the college in its work towards accreditation by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business. She is also working to create an environment of learning, collegiality and excellence with all College of Business constituents.

"AACSB has gone through a transformation of how it accredits universities," says Erickson, professor of marketing. "The process is based on each college's mission statement. Under the new rules, schools which are teaching institutions have a better chance of getting accredited than they have in the past. The College of Business is in an excellent position to work towards accreditation."

"We have excellent faculty who are doing numerous teaching, service and research activities which will support the process. Also, we are fortunate to have excellent technology available to us, and we will build on these strengths to overcome any weaknesses we have."

The accreditation process can take up to five years, says Erickson, and the first step in that process will be to create a mission statement. "For accreditation, we will be judged on standards based in the mission statement which needs to reflect the college's mission, vision and objectives."

"AACSB accreditation encourages the pursuit of diverse paths to high quality in management education. Achieving AACSB accreditation communicates that a school's management education programs have reached a high level of quality as defined by the school's mission and objectives. Accreditation demonstrates that processes are in place to ensure continuous improvement and involvement of faculty, administration and constituents."

Eriksen assumed the responsibilities of acting dean on August 20. Her appointment continues through July 1, 1995, at which time Carol Matteson, interim provost and vice president for academic affairs, plans to return to her position as dean of the college.

Library Campaign Tops $3.375 Million Goal

Update

A Treasury Of Ideas

By Eric Foster
Editorial News Assistant

FRONT VIEW: The plans for the new library call for a long porch, reminiscent of Old Waller Hall, to be constructed along the front arcade. The Tiffany windows will be removed from Andruss Library and installed on the second floor in the new facility.

Bloomsburg University's library fundraising campaign, A Treasury of Ideas, has surpassed its $3.375 million goal, announced Anthony Ianiero, interim vice president for university advancement and executive director of The Bloomsburg University Foundation, Inc.

As of Dec. 13, $3,512,057 has been raised in gifts, deferred gifts, and pledges towards the construction of the much-needed new library.

"While we had some large donors, what you see here is a massive giving effort by many individuals who care about the university," says President Jessica Kozloff.

The campaign was unexpectedly completed with a gift of $225,000 received from the estate of Mary Taubel Rieder in memory of her mother, the late Mary Moore Taubel, an 1890 graduate of Bloomsburg Literary Institute and Normal School. (See related article on page 18.)

"This success is the culmination of months of hard work by many people," says Ianiero. "I want to recognize the alumni association, the students, parents, faculty and staff, and community businesses and friends.

"This library is an investment in the community of Bloomsburg and will serve as a vital resource for the students of the university as well as many people from the region," adds Ianiero.

National campaign chairperson, John Scrimgeour '53, faculty emeritus from Bloomsburg, isn't surprised at the success of the campaign.

"I think this campaign has been successful for a couple of reasons. One, the library is such an important facility," says Scrimgeour. "I also think that there are people from Bloomsburg, both graduates and people from the area, who have a good feeling about the school.

More than 5,000 alumni have contributed or pledged over $1.6 million to the four-year campaign.

A larger library has been Bloomsburg's top priority capital project for many years. Since the current Harvey A. Andruss Library was constructed 27 years ago, enrollment at Bloomsburg has doubled.

'I think this campaign has been successful for a couple of reasons. One, the library is such an important facility. I also think that there are people from Bloomsburg, both graduates and people from the area, who have a good feeling about the school.'

— John Scrimgeour

The campaign began in the spring of 1993 in conjunction with Operation Jump Start, announced by the Gov. Casey in October, 1992. Under the program, the state would provide 75 percent of the funding for the project — originally estimated at $11 million—and the university would raise the remaining 25 percent from private sources.

Bloomsburg was the first of the State System universities to meet the governor's challenge when it raised $2.375 million by June, 1994.

The total cost of the project, including the design cost and private and matching construction funds to meet the $10.5 million construction cost, will exceed $12.4 million.

The new library will be located on the present site of the softball field, next to Waller Administration Building. Seating will increase from 387 reader stations to 1,219 while the stacks will hold more than 400,000 volumes.

Construction of the library should begin in June, 1995 and will take approximately 18 months to complete, according to Colin Reitmeyer, facility planner at Bloomsburg.

BU Parents' Pledges Top $130,000

The combined pledges from freshman and upperclass Bloomsburg University parents totaled $130,787 in the annual fall Parents Fund campaign. According to Susan M. Helwig, acting director of Development, 400 parents of freshmen pledged $82,500 to A Treasury of Ideas, the campaign to build a new library. Most of these are pledges over four years.

"These parents represent 40 percent of freshmen class parents. We are grateful for this excellent response," Helwig said. "Their daughters and sons will benefit directly from the library campaign by being able to use the new facility during their junior and senior years."

"Parents have a special understanding of the dire need for a larger library," said Dean of Library Services, J. Daniel Vann

III. "They have assumed their share in helping to assure that the best resources possible are available for their children's use. We are indeed grateful for their support."

Helwig also reported that 891 parents of upperclass students participated in the annual campaign for the University Fund by pledging $45,872. Gifts to this fund are used to support many special initiatives including scholarships and faculty development projects to help them stay current in their subject areas.

Parents of student athletes pledged an additional $2,415 toward general athletics and specific sports.

A total of 3,935 parents were reached during the annual fall phonothon. As in prior years, Bloomsburg University students were the phonothon callers.

How One Woman's Legacy Made a Difference

By Markland G. Lloyd

Director of News and Media Relations

Many of us have fond memories of our college libraries. We recall the musty, comfortable smell of the stacks. We see, in our mind's eye, the long rows of end catalogs, the shelves of periodical indexes. We remember the late-night searches through the stacks for PR2759.C7.

Libraries haven't always been that way.

And they're not likely to be that way in the future.

When Mary Moore arrived in Bloomsburg in the late 1880s to begin her education at the Bloomsburg State Normal School, Queen Victoria still sat on the throne in England. On this side of the Atlantic, Grover Cleveland was serving his first term as President.

Women wore skirts that dusted the floor and collars that buttoned high and modestly to frame the face. Zippers wouldn't be invented for several more years.

Young lovers took Sunday afternoon horse-and- buggy rides and folks were all aglow over the light bulb that Edison had patented just 10 years earlier.

When Mary Moore graduated from The Normal in 1890, the school had a library, but no card catalog. Perhaps it didn't need one. Its collection was so small that its titles could probably fit on the front and back sides of one page from a legal pad.

It was professor Francis H. Jenkins who, "having a little time on [his] hands one day," established the first card catalog for the Normal — but not until 1897. During his 44 years at the Bloomsburg Normal School, professor Jenkins taught English, served as its registrar and business manager.

Perhaps not surprisingly, he was also its librarian.

When he retired in 1928, he recalled that, in the early years, the school's library was in his office. "There was not much to it," he noted. "What there was, was in disorder . . ."

He "straightened things out," he said.

And for his trouble, he got the job as librarian. He did not even have to apply for the position.

He held the job on-again, off-again from 1893 to 1897, when he finally asked to be relieved of his library duties.

It's uncertain how burdensome those duties might have been.

The school catalog in 1867 — the year "the Normal" moved up the hill and occupied Institute Hall (now called Carver Hall) — merely notes that a literary society "has a good reference library and the

that "a large room had been fitted up for a library," housing the two literary societies' books and the institution's periodicals and newspapers. It was this small collection that professor Jenkins "straightened out" in 1893.

The 1897 card catalog was, Jenkins boasted, "of the most approved kind."

By 1899 school officials reported that "several hundred dollars worth of books were added to the library each year."

Despite investment of this scope, the library at the Normal grew slowly. By the mid-1920s, its collection had grown only to some 11,000 volumes. On the eve of World War II, when the Normal became the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, the library — still housed on the second floor of Old Waller Hall — held fewer than 20,000 volumes. By the late 1950s, its collection had doubled to 40,000.

But in the 1960s, things exploded. The Harvey A. Andruss Library, opened in 1967, was built to hold 200,000 volumes.

Today, the collection of the Andruss Library includes more than two million items. There are 340,000 books and about 1,700 current periodicals, 1.8 million microtexts, and 6,000 phonograph records and compact disks.

Mary Moore married after she left The Normal. She became Mary Moore Taubel. She raised a family.

She wouldn't recognize The Normal today. Not a horse can be found on campus. Zippers have been replaced by Velcro. Women's skirts have grown legs and become blue jeans — the uniform of the day, for men and for women.

Today's library is not what Mary Moore knew as a student in 1890. It is larger. It offers more services. Its card catalog — still of the "most approved kind" — is on-line from the university's mainframe computer.

And tomorrow's library will be even more different, thanks in part to Mary Moore Taubel's family.

BLOOMSBURG STATE NORMAL SCHOOL: Library in Old Waller Hall, c. 1900.

Her daughter, Mary Taubel Rieder, provided a bequest to the university — in her mother's name — that put the "Treasury of Ideas" campaign over the top in its quest to raise the institution's $3.375 million share of the new library building's $12.4 million cost.

The Rieder gift was the second largest contribution to the library campaign.

Her generosity also created a $100,000 trust that will provide scholarships for students majoring in history at the university.

The bequest in Mary Moore's name was but one of the gifts to "A Treasury of Ideas" campaign from 5,244 alumni, 231 faculty and staff, 2,100 parents, and hundreds of other friends of the university.

Together, these gifts and pledges will enable Bloomsburg University to increase the number of reading stations in Andruss Library from 387 to 1,219 in the new library — with 500 wired for electronic media capabilities.

The new building, to be located just west of Buckalew Place — which Mary Moore may have known as the "Senator's House" when she was a student here — will have four floors. It will contain 105,000 square feet of space — roughly the equivalent of 25 basketball courts.

When the new library building opens late in 1996, it will be the largest structure on campus.

If they were to visit the library today, professor Jenkins and Mary Moore wouldn't find imposing rows of card catalogs. The card files have been replaced with on-line data services and PCs connected to CD-ROM drives. Jenkins and Moore would discover an automated circulation system that permits students to search the card catalog from a PC in their dorm rooms.

Using the new library's Internet connection, students will scan the catalogs of the world's most prestigious universities — Oxford and Cambridge or Harvard or the Sorbonne. They'll review data from the U.S. Department of Commerce and read "Hamlet" from Shakespeare's 1623 First Folio.

They'll be able to retrieve books and videotapes on computer screens and project the images so that a dozen friends working on a history project can simultaneously review the same text.

Some of those history majors may be Mary Moore Taubel scholars.

These young people and generations of students after them will use library resources that Mrs. Rieder — and hundreds of other friends and university alumni — helped make available by their gifts to the campaign. A Treasury of Ideas.

These benefactors helped tomorrow's library — whether it's a repository for stacks of musty books or a terminal on the "information superhighway" — by connecting students with the ideas and aspirations of people from around the world. . . . And with the people from another, simpler time — when high-button collars were all the rage, and before zippers replaced buttons.

[I]n 1890 [the] collection was so small that its titles could probably fit on the front and back sides of one page from a legal pad. . . . Using the new library's Internet connection, students will scan the catalogs at the world's most prestigious universities — Oxford and Cambridge or Harvard or the Sorbonne.

commencement of a general library."

By 1875, there were two literary societies with space in what later became Waller Hall. Waller Hall, one of the first buildings on campus, occupied the area near where the Seranton Commons and Lyeomng Residence Hall now stand. Each of these early literary societies had a library containing a select collection of books for the use of its members.

By 1888, when young Mary Moore is likely to have first arrived on campus from her home in suburban Philadelphia, these two libraries were supplemented by the institution's "reading room — supplied with daily and weekly newspapers and with well-known periodicals," says a bulletin of the period.

The library advertised itself as being "very accessible."

Yet Mary Moore and her classmates a century ago would have found its doors closed "during school and study hours."

By 1890 or so, the school touted

Historic Carver Hall Boasts New Carpet

Recent installation of new carpet in the Carver Hall Lobby completes one more phase of the restoration program of this building. Constructed in 1867, Carver Hall is now listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

Bloomsburg Carpet Industries, Inc., located on Route 11, donated 84 square yards of wool carpet for the main floor project.

Using Bloomsburg's colors, the University's seal was woven, in gold, into the dark maroon carpet.

Bloomsburg Carpet Industries' donation represents one more in a series of "generous gifts" that the local mill has provided to the University, says Anthony Ianiero, interim vice president for university advancement. "Over the past several years," says Ianiero, "Bloomsburg Carpet has made four major gifts in kind to the University." The value of these gifts approaches $20,000.

"Partnerships between public universities and corporate sponsors enable public institutions to enrich their programs and services beyond what state subsidies and student fees can provide," says President Jessica Kozloff. "In addition to providing scholarships for needy students, funding faculty research efforts, and enriching the quality of life in this region through support of the cultural arts program, our corporate gift program has beautified our most historic building."

Previous restoration of Carver Hall has included refurbishing the Gross Auditorium on the building's second floor.

Planned Giving Tip #1

TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES

A trust is an arrangement whereby a named trustee holds, manages, and administers the trust property (i.e., cash, real estate) for the benefit of any persons or charity you name. Benefits of a trust:

- Flexible financial security for a spouse without settlement costs or estate taxes
- Provide income to a spouse or family members for life
- Provide for future generations — children and grandchildren
- Ultimately provide a gift to a charitable organization

A trustee should have a good judgment, integrity, financial responsibility as well as an investment ability and tax knowledge. A trustee may be a friend, a bank, or another organization.

New Scholarships for 1995-1996

Six new scholarships will be added this year to the 140 scholarships and awards available for students. While a handful of scholarships have been in existence for many years, most have been created within the past eight years by individual alumni and friends, organizations, and businesses and corporations.

Last fall, approximately $400,000 was awarded to nearly 350 students from the 140 scholarships and awards held by the Alumni Association and The Bloomsburg University Foundation. In addition to these recipients, are other students who received Board of Governors fee waivers and student-athletes who receive assistance from the General Athletic Scholarship Fund.

The six new scholarships are:
BU Association for the Hearing Impaired Scholarship by current BU students who are members of the Association — a $100 credit in the University Store for books and school supplies for an incoming freshman who is either deaf or hard-of-hearing.

Seth P. Gavason Memorial Scholarship by his parents, Dixie and Jeffrey Gavason — $300 to a student with a sensory, physical, or learning disability. Seth was an 11-year old who lost his life in a bicycle accident. Mrs. Gavason is a current BU student majoring in secondary education, comprehensive social studies.

Legacy Scholarship by the BU Alumni Association — $500 to a child of a Bloomsburg University graduate.

Nationwide Insurance Enterprise Foundation Scholarship by Nationwide — $700 (two awards) to a marketing or management major (one award reserved for a protected class member).

Sesame Street Scholarship by Donald and Kay Campese — $250 (6 awards) to residents of Sesame Street Apartments who are members of the tennis, women's soccer, field hockey, softball, men's or women's basketball and football teams. A resident of Sesame Street who is majoring in psychology will also receive a scholarship. Dr. Campese is professor emeritus of psychology, and Mrs. Campese is an associate professor of biological and allied health sciences.

Susquehanna International Folk Dance Scholarship by Oliver Larimi and Anne Wilson — $5,000 to a student experienced as a folk dancer who is willing to teach dances from his or her folk tradition and to dance regularly with the Susquehanna Folk Dancers. Dr. Larimi is a professor of philosophy, and Dr. Wilson is a professor of sociology and social welfare.

Additional criteria for these new awards and a complete list of scholarships are available from the BU Financial Aid Office. Information about establishing scholarships at Bloomsburg University is available from the Development Center.

Mary Taubel Rieder of Abington, Pa. who died in April, 1994, bequeathed to Bloomsburg University $100,000 to create an endowed scholarship in memory of her mother, Mary A. Moore Taubel, Class of 1890. Income from the endowment will be used for history scholarships, the first of which will be awarded in 1996.

The remaining $225,000 represents Bloomsburg University's share in the remainder of her estate. Because these funds were undesignated, they were directed to the University's campaign to build a new library, thereby exceeding the $3.375 million goal. (Please see High-Button Collars on Page 18.)

Mrs. Rieder was a graduate of Bucknell University.

By Susan R. Hicks

Assistant Director of Development

Commissioned in 1993 by The Bloomsburg University Foundation, Inc. Karen Singer Architectural Ceramics, Inc., has been working closely with the Development Center to design an annual recognizing donors of $1,000 to $14,999 to the new library campaign, A Treasury of Ideas.

Eighteen months ago, Karen Singer toured the Bloomsburg University campus and met with a small committee to discuss various options for designing a ceramic tile mural. The overall theme would include arches, reminiscent of the Old Waller Hall Long Porch and the Tiffany Windows, trees to reflect the rural countryside, and current campus scenes from an aerial perspective.

Following intense conversations and studying many campus photos, Singer presented two renderings — first a line drawing and later, a larger, water-color model — both drawn to scale, for review and comment.

Her intent was to capture a sense of people's feelings, memories, and visions about Bloomsburg and then translate them into physical form. In so doing, she challenges the viewers to expand their perception of the familiar.

After acceptance of the final version of the drawing, the four stages of production begin. (In the Fall, 1994 issue of Bloomsburg, readers will find a draft photo of the proposed mural.)

The first stage of production, creating the plastic pattern, was started in January, 1995. This is a full-size model from which the mural will be created. During the summer, the wetwork stage will begin. In this phase each tile will be sculpted, in low relief, according to the pattern. Singer anticipates it will take approximately six months to complete the 480 tiles which will comprise the 5' x 16' mural. Assisting Singer with this work will be Marcy Abhat, an accomplished painter, who helps with the plastic pattern enlargement and sculpting. Production manager, Evelyn Stanley, will also assist with the sculpting.

KAREN SINGER: From Bloomsburg University campus photographs, Singer sketches the scaled design that will eventually be transferred to the ceramic tile.

Peter Adlowitz is responsible for pressing the names of donors (or the names designated) into the tiles during the third stage. The tiles will be glazed and fired in the final stage. Each tile will be coded on the back to facilitate installation in the proper order.

In her Philadelphia studio, Singer has been customizing ceramic tiles for private collectors, galleries, schools, churches, and hospitals for 10 years. Persons living in southeastern Pennsylvania can find examples of Singer's commissioned work at The Pennsylvania School for the Deaf, the Germantown Friends School, Jeanes Hospital, Friends Hospital, Delaware County Community College, Philadelphia's Central High School, and Beneficial Corporation in Delaware.

Singer's art has been on exhibition, both solo and group, throughout the Philadelphia area in juried shows and in competition. She received Honorable Mention in a national, juried competition, for her entry in The Contemporary Terra Cotta Competition.

In addition to conducting ceramic tile workshops in her studio, Singer has taught at The Phelps School, Paoli, Pa., The Pennsylvania School for the Deaf in Philadelphia, the Fleisher Art Memorial, Philadelphia, and was a visiting artist with The Pennsylvania Opera Theatre, Philadelphia.

Singer earned an M.F.A. in sculpture from The University of Pennsylvania and a B.A. in art from Pitzer College, The Claremont Colleges, Claremont, Calif. She also studied printmaking at École Des Beaux-Arts, Paris, France and completed an apprenticeship at the Moravian Pottery and Tileworks in Doylestown, Pa.

Singer lives in Philadelphia with her husband and business partner, Peter Adlowitz. Adlowitz, who markets Karen Singer Architectural Ceramics, also deals with working out the technical issues related to the company's projects.

Future issues of Bloomsburg will feature photos of the sculpture as the work progresses.

Bloomsburg University Cited for Best Value

Bloomsburg University has been rated a "Best Value" in higher education among regional universities by U.S. News and World Report magazine. In the U.S. News best value rankings, published in October 1994, Bloomsburg is ranked fourth among regional universities in the northern part of the nation. Other regions represented in the survey are the south, west, and midwest areas of the nation.

The best value rankings are based on a quality score U.S. News determined using a variety of factors and dividing that score by the total of tuition, fees, and room and board for the 1994-95 academic year. Only institutions with a quality score in the top 20 percent in their region or top 50 percent in the nation were even considered for the best value rankings.

In placing fourth on the survey, Bloomsburg University is ranked with Trenton State College in New Jersey, first; SUNY College at Geneseo, N.Y., second; and Rutgers State University at Camden, N.J., third.

Bloomsburg was rated based upon its tuition for out-of-state students of $3,676 per semester for a total yearly cost of $11,400 including room, board, and fees. A second component of the survey lists university values by taking into account grants that students receive. However, public universities such as Bloomsburg are still ranked based upon their out-of-state tuition.

Ninety percent of BU students are Pennsylvania residents, and pay $1,477 tuition per semester for a yearly cost of $7,010 a year including room, board, and fees.

This is not the first time that national publications have taken notice of Bloomsburg University. In 1990, Money magazine ranked the University 30th for its quality relative to price in comparison to public institutions throughout the nation.

In 1993, U.S. News and World Report ranked Bloomsburg in the top 25 percent of the northern regional colleges and universities.

Tile Mural is Fully Subscribed

Alumni, parents, University employees, friends, and businesses responded very favorably to the concept of a mural by pledging gifts between $1,000 and $14,999. Early this past fall, the 480 tiles were fully subscribed.

Persons who have reserved a tile will be contacted this spring to verify the lettering that will appear on the tiles.

A roster will be maintained in the library that lists the name of each donor, the name(s) inscribed on the tiles, plus a brief explanation, as appropriate, of the person(s) being commemorated, and the location of each tile on the mural.

Please direct any questions about the mural to the Development Center at 800-526-0254.

Task force named in wake of tragedy

In October, the University community mourned the deaths of five young people who died in a fire at an off-campus residence on Friday, October 21, the day before Homecoming. Although the tragedy was reported widely by state and national news media, the following information is presented for those alumni who missed those reports.

The victims, all current or former University students, were Kyle Barton of Staten Island, N.Y.; Deborah Keeler of Milton, N.J.; Derek Mooney of Downingtown, James Palmer of Millville; and Joseph Selena of Wyoming, Pa.

At an open meeting on the day of the fire, more than 700 students, faculty and staff gathered in Gross Auditorium to express their sorrow and to receive information.

"We have suffered a loss today," said President Jessica Kozloff to the assembled crowd. "I know that many of you are sorting through a realm of emotions. This entire University shares your loss."

University officials and student leaders decided to cancel the homecoming parade and library site dedication. In place of the parade, the community gathered on Saturday morning along Lightstreet Road near the sorority houses in a silent vigil for the dead. A 10 minute memorial ceremony was held before the start of the homecoming football game.

On the following Monday, letters from President Kozloff were sent to parents and members of the University to inform them of the tragedy. In the letters, the president summarized the tragic events.

University officials learned of the fire at 57 Iron Street at approximately 5:30 a.m. In the letter, President Kozloff stated, "I tried to contact the parents of the young people who either lived in the residence or were guests there. I wanted to make sure that a personal contact from the University informed families about the possible tragedy before they learned of the fire from news sources. We invited these parents to Bloomsburg, where the University provided counseling and a place for them to wait as news developed."

Throughout the day on Friday, students on campus were alerted that there had been a fire. Notices were posted throughout the campus within two hours after the fire was discovered. Information was available through the Be Safe Hotline and the Rumor/Communication line. Students were encouraged to contact their parents to let them know they were safe.

Because of the scope of the tragedy, faculty were asked to be especially sensitive to student absences and missed class work. Counseling services were provided for any student for as long as counseling support was needed. The counseling was provided not only by the University counseling center, but also by the nursing and psychology departments, Family Counseling Services in the Town of Bloomsburg, and Geisinger Medical Center in Danville.

At a news conference on Monday, October 24, President Kozloff discussed the University's concern for students wherever they live. The University has a coordinator for off-campus housing who deals with landlord-tenant disputes and refers code violation complaints to the town's code enforcement office.

"The University has long had a cooperative relationship with town officials," said Kozloff. "Bloomsburg Mayor Bauman and I have already discussed plans to form a task force to explore how the University and town might work together even more closely to address off-campus housing issues."

The task force subsequently met on November 15 and 17. In the first meeting, the task force heard from parents, students, fire company officers, University representatives and town residents who voiced their concerns about student housing in the town.

In the second meeting, the task force listened to commentary solicited from a number of "experts." They included the Union County code enforcement officer, administrators from Bloomsburg and Wilkes universities, fire safety personnel from the town, an insurance industry executive, legal counsel from the State System of Higher Education, a representative from the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry and a state police officer.

A number of suggestions were offered to improve off-campus student housing, including the formation of a tenant association and the development of a tenant-rights education program for off-campus students. Other suggestions included stricter code enforcement, insurance penalties for irresponsible property owners and mandatory fire safety programs for University students.

Speaker after speaker suggested that resolving off-campus housing problems requires individual responsibility — by students as well as landlords.

The task force, co-chaired by Mary Lenzini Howe and Roy Pointer, represents a broad cross-

Football

Bloomsburg's football squad, under second-year Head Coach Danny Hale, earned a tie with West Chester for the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) Eastern Division title. The Huskies finished with an 8-3 overall record (5-1 in the PSAC East) to achieve its first winning season since 1988. After a 0-2 start, Bloomsburg rallied to win eight of its last nine contests, including a five-game winning streak to finish the season.

The Huskies' defense, led by senior All-American free safety Chet Hemele, keyed the turnaround by allowing just 17 points per game. Bloomsburg's defensive unit led the PSAC in turnover ratio at +17 and in interceptions with 21. Senior cornerback Bob James tied with sophomore cornerback Steve Foster for the individual lead in interceptions with five. Sophomore linebacker Frank Babula led the team in tackles with 76, and sophomore defensive end Jeremy Grimm paced the squad with 7.5 sacks.

Junior Mike Johnson became the first Bloomsburg running back since 1985 to rush for over 1,000 yards, hoisting a total of 1,007 yards during the 1994 season. He also set a Bloomsburg single game record with four rushing touchdowns against Cheyney. Sophomore quarterback Glen McNamie led the conference in passing efficiency and established a new Bloomsburg record with his 59.9 completion percentage during the 1994 season. Junior wide receiver Buck Eardley caught eight of McNamie's 16 touchdown passes and set a Bloomsburg career record with 2,128 yards receiving.

After the season, several Huskies garnered individual conference honors. Hemele, Grimm, junior fullback Syheed Brooks, sophomore punter Jim McCaffery, and junior center Kevin McCahe were named to the PSAC Eastern Division first team all-conference squad. Babula, Eardley, James, senior offensive tackle Kevin Fee, senior defensive tackle Ross Landers, and junior placekicker Bill Beall were named to the second team. # Bloomsburg alumni find success in political arena. . . .

By JODE MARCO, feature writer

The Huskies' football squad didn't receive a bowl game invitation this year despite sharing a divisional conference title. But the university fared well in other November competitions. This is a story, not about athletics, but about politics.

Alumni Mark Schweiker '75, Tim Holden '80 and Phyllis Mundy '70 won political battles that sent them to Harrisburg and Washington.

These elected officials enjoy more than fond memories of their days at the college on the hill. They share a strong interest in public education and service.

Lieutenant Governor Mark Schweiker

In his remarks at the conference of the Pennsylvania Council of Alumni Associations held at Bloomsburg University last June, candidate Schweiker forecast sweeping changes in Harrisburg over the coming months – changes with a conservative bent, of course. Many of his remarks focused on higher education in Pennsylvania and how he values his own education at a State System university.

But how did Schweiker go from undergraduate to lieutenant governor of the Commonwealth?

A lifetime resident of Bucks County – his parents still live in Langhorne – Schweiker began his trek from Bishop Egan High School, where he played football and basketball. At Bloomsburg he played basketball his first year. A variety of physical ailments limited his athletic activity. Years later (in 1983), doctors would diagnose a rare degenerative hip condition that ultimately resulted in Schweiker's undergoing hip replacement surgery in March 1992.

Schweiker was influenced by his father's career choice, and, when he graduated from Bloomsburg in 1975, the young Schweiker used his degree in education – with a minor in business – to get a marketing job with W. H. Sadlier & Co., a publishing firm.

Later, he worked as a securities broker for Merrill Lynch.

During this period, Schweiker also attended Rider College at night, earning a master's degree in administration in 1983. It was in graduate school that Schweiker first dabbled in politics. He worked on Elaine Zettick's successful bid for Middletown Township supervisor. Two years later, he ran for the same office and won. He served a six-year term, was re-elected in 1985, and served two more years before he sought a greater challenge, the office of Bucks County commissioner.

During his seven-year tenure as commissioner, Schweiker stressed fiscal responsibility and the need for economic development. When his work began to attract attention from colleagues across the state, Schweiker began to think about running for higher office, specifically lieutenant governor.

He has maintained that government – at all levels – should be "more service minded," . . . that "governing is more about service than process. . . ."

The lieutenant governor credits much of his success in life to the education he received at Bloomsburg. He emphasizes that he and the new government are committed to securing opportunities for higher education for future generations of Pennsylvanians.

"When I came to Bloomsburg . . . , I was unprepared for the great adventure we called life," he said. "I learned that with an education and with the guidance of skilled and dedicated mentors – many of them at Bloomsburg – answers could be found and problems solved." He says that college gave him the tools necessary to achieve his aspirations, that without education those accomplishments would have been beyond his reach.

"I came to learn how lucky I was to live in a state that ensured a college education was available to those of even modest means. . . . Tom Ridge and I will work to see that Pennsylvania remains a state . . . where how well you live and how far you go is determined by your drive and determination and not by the circumstances in which you were born."

In recognition of his accomplishments and potential, the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association designated him a "Young Alumnus of the Year" in 1990.

U. S. Representative Tim Holden

Democrat Tim Holden of Saint Clair is back in his Congressional seat for a second term after defeating Republican challenger Frederick C.

Levering by almost 22,000 votes last November. In 1992 he defeated Pottsville attorney John E. Jones for the post.

The Sixth District comprises half of Northumberland County, all of Berks and Schuylkill counties, and a segment of Montgomery County.

Because much of his district has suffered from a loss of its manufacturing base – large employers – the availability of quality jobs was a central campaign issue, and one that most likely will continue to haunt public officials across the nation. Holden also had to address voters' concerns about adequate health care, environmental protection, and the nation's stalled economy and plans for its economic recovery.

The campaign trail is familiar territory for this veteran stomper. He cut his teeth on local politics. His father, Joseph

Schweiker, Holden, Mundy – despite political differences – share legacy of commitment to public education, service

“Sox” Holden, a former major league pitcher, won unprecedented support as a Democratic county commissioner in a largely Republican county. The elder Holden held his position for 20 years.

Following in his father’s footsteps was a logical progression for the younger Holden.

An all-star linebacker for the Saint Clair Area High School football team, he earned a football scholarship to the University of Richmond. But fate would have it differently. Early on he was sidelined with tuberculosis. Circumstances eventually lead him to transfer to Bloomsburg, where he earned a degree in sociology with a concentration in criminal justice in 1980. New credentials in hand, he took a job as a probation officer for Schuylkill County.

Five years later, Tim Holden jumped into the political arena. In 1985, he became the first Democratic sheriff in 75 years to be elected in Schuylkill County. He was in the third year of his second term as sheriff when he challenged for the Sixth District seat in the Congress. His election victory gave Schuylkill County its first Democratic Congressman in 32 years.

Holden frequently notes his approach to public office echoes that of his father’s political credo: “Serve the people. You’re not there to be self-serving.”

His constituents would seem to agree with the Congressman’s stand on several priority issues. He supports a $20 billion public works program aimed at rebuilding roads, bridges, and sewer systems. His health care proposals also mirror national Democratic policies. Yet he favors some things Republican, namely, a capital gains tax cut and opposition to abortion except in cases of incest, rape or threat to the mother’s life.

Last summer, Holden voted for gun control legislation. When queried about his vote during the campaign, he said, “I’ve always had an independent record.”

Holden and his wife make their home in Washington, but he can generally be found in his district on weekends.

State Representative Phyllis Mundy

Phyllis Mundy returned to Harrisburg and the House of Representatives in January for her third two-year term. She credits her voting record and extensive service on the House Education, Professional Licensure, Federal-State Relations and Majority Policy committees for her victory in the November election.

During the past session, the Democrat served as Speaker Pro-Tempore of the House and as a member of the Pennsylvania Commission for Women.

Looking ahead, Mundy expects that “economic development will be a very important issue in this session.” Like Holden, she believes that Pennsylvania’s economy is a top priority that should be addressed expeditiously.

A native of Kingston, Mundy represents the 120th Legislative District, which encompasses 11 municipalities in Luzerne County. Prior to her 1990 election to the House, she was business manager for a local manufacturing company.

She has served as a volunteer for the Domestic Violence Service Center, the Junior League, and the Volunteers for Literacy Program. Her long-standing membership in the Wilkes-Barre Area League of Women Voters helped fuel her interest in politics. Mundy served on the board of directors, then as the organization’s president for two terms.

After graduating from Kingston High School, she earned a degree in secondary education at Bloomsburg. Her continued interest in education, evidenced also by her House committee assignment and by her numerous community activities. She is a member of the Wyoming Valley West School/Community Advisory Board and Wilkes University’s ACT 101 Advisory Board. In addition to serving on the boards of the Labor Management Council of Greater Wilkes-Barre and the Greater Pittston Chamber of Commerce, as well as on the latter’s Business/Education Partnership, Mundy is on the Advisory Committee of the Domestic Violence Service Center.

Her many achievements have garnered her several honors, including a Pathfinder Award from the Wyoming Valley Women’s Network and the John Heinz Friend of Nursing Award from the Pennsylvania Nurses Association in 1993.

She has been selected as a 1995 recipient of the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association’s Distinguished Service Award. It will be presented at the annual awards dinner on Alumni Day, April 29.

Career path leads to zoo

It's not far from Bloomsburg University to the Philadelphia Zoo, but for one B.U. graduate it took almost 10 years as well as 21 months of study in California.

Leslie Mitchell graduated from Bloomsburg in the spring of 1984. She received a bachelor of science degree in business administration with a concentration in marketing, with minors in social sciences and humanities. She participated in various organizations and was the advertising officer for the American Marketing Association.

In the five years following graduation, her career path led her to retail management, marketing research and financial management. But she always felt there was something else to be done, and she had a strong interest in animals and the environment. She visited numerous oceanariums, zoos and theme parks, and her interest in exotic animals grew.

During her visits, she would ask staff members questions like "How did you get your job?" and "What type of experience do you need to get a job like this?" She finally got an answer that would change her life.

In 1988, Leslie met a marine mammal trainer who said she had attended Moorpark College in California for exotic animal training and management. "That was the answer she had been looking for.

"I knew I couldn't sell popcorn and work my way up somewhere," she recalls.

In the fall of 1988, she contacted the school and learned as much as she could about the two-year program, and she also took a volunteer position with the Philadelphia Zoo. She learned that there is another school in Florida with some similar courses, but Moorpark had more of what Leslie was looking for.

After a lengthy application process, she was one of 100 people from all over the world who was granted an interview. Three weeks later, a letter arrived accepting her into the program for the fall of 1989, along with 49 other students.

After driving across country, with minimal belongings, she began the grueling 21-month course. Besides carrying a full course load of animal-related courses, the students had to be on the animal compound at 6 a.m. seven days a week to take care of over 160 animals, ranging from large carnivores to birds, primates and reptiles. In 21 months, she had only 20 days off. Her graduating class in 1991 had dwindled to only 31.

With an associate of science degree, Leslie moved to San Diego and began volunteering with the Center for the Reproduction of Endangered Species at the San Diego Zoo, working on behavioral and hormonal studies with primates. When necessary, she fell back on her business degree and worked in accounting. Her next opportunity was as a veterinary assistant, working mainly with domestic animals, but on occasion with birds and reptiles.

Leslie flooded the market with resumes all over the United States. "You can't just say, 'I want to live here and hope there's a job available.' It's not like accounting, where you can go anywhere and find a job. You must be willing to go where the jobs are."

While back home in Pennsylvania in July 1993, Leslie landed an interview with the Philadelphia Zoo and was eventually lured as an open relief keeper, which means you fill in wherever you are needed. After three months, Leslie moved to an assigned relief position in the small mammal house and lion house.

"Working with felids was a professional goal for me, so I was lucky to get this position, which also allowed me to work with the lion cubs we had this year.

"This is a lifelong commitment which just begins with taking care of these animals. There is endless information to be learned about behavior, natural history and their status in the wild.

"Because of the loss of habitat and poaching, many animals face extinction. If this were a perfect world, I would love the animals to be free in their natural habitat. But as we destroy them, we destroy

QUEST: 20 years of exciting programs, trips

By Roy Smith

Director, Quest & The Corporate Institute

Quest, now in its 20th year, continues to expand its offerings of outdoor courses and trips abroad, to students, alumni, friends of the University and corporations from around Pennsylvania.

Over the past five years, our students have journeyed to places they might only have dreamed about before coming to Bloomsburg University. Our travels have taken us to the snow-capped volcanoes of Mexico, the remote Brooks Range of Northern Alaska, the high Andes of the Ecuador, the rainforest and rivers of Costa Rica and the headwaters of the Amazon.

In 1995, Quest will offer walking trips through the Lake District of England (July 5-17), the Western Highlands of Scotland (September 21-October 3), and the Alsace region of France (June 15-28).

The England trip will be led by Brenda Smith '91, who worked in the Lake District during the early 1970s. Jan Runge, a professional photographer from Colorado, will lead the walk through the Western Highlands. Dr. Helmut Doll, math professor at B.U., will lead the walk through the Alsace region of France, an area where he walked and biked as a boy.

An account of Quest's coast to coast walk across England

Around 10,000 B.C., at the end of the last Ice Age, rising seas finally broke through the shallow spit of land between Britain and the continent, creating an island nation, which in spite of its inconsequential size and miserable climate, became the center of an empire which in the 19th century spanned a fifth of the globe. The passing of centuries, the tramp of intruding Romans, Saxons, Vikings and finally the Normans in 1066, have left an indelible and distinctive mark on the British people and their land.

Our walk across the breadth of England started at St. Bees on the edge of the Irish Sea where in the 6th century the Abbess Bega, distraught at the turbulence in Ireland (little has changed), founded a nunnery in the protected cove there.

Thankfully, England is a small country, so a walk across its higher midriff is not too daunting a task — about 180 miles. We were to start on the west coast, first traversing the rugged fells of the Lake District and then proceeding eastward across the bleak North Yorkshire Moors to Robin Hood's Bay on the North Sea.

Our accommodations were bed and breakfast places — usually pubs and inns. The flight from New York to Manchester in England is always a wearying affair with little opportunity to sleep. Arriving in Manchester at 6 a.m., worn from the flight, we boarded a train at the airport and headed north along the magnificent coast line of the Irish Sea, quite literally to the back doorstep of Mrs. Smith's Stonehouse Farm in St. Bees, our first bed and breakfast and the starting point for our walk.

Only a half mile from the sea, we stretched our cramped travel legs and tramped to the almost deserted beaches. A Saturday game of rugby was in full swing on a field near the beach with the two sides, unprotected by any padding, bashing each other with unusual vigor. Presumably a grudge game. An extraordinarily clear, sunny day allowed us a wonderful view of the mountains on the Isle of Man some 30 miles to the west, but not Ireland, which is rarely seen from the British mainland.

The high hills of the Lake District loomed only a day away and 15 miles to the west. Our spirits were lifted by a traditional ploughman's lunch of tasty local cheeses, bread and chutney at the Queens Hotel, a 300-year-old inn, only a stone's throw from Mrs. Smith's Stonehouse Farm.

After several false starts, we were able to leave St. Bees behind and found the right footpaths and lanes that would take us across the narrow coastal plains, with its dairy farms and small villages, to the village of Ennerdale on the western edge of the Lake District.

Public footpaths are a delightful and enduring feature of the English countryside and allow the local or passing traveler to move from village to village, through a rural landscape, without having to be bothered by road traffic. Their legality stems from medieval law which allows a right of access across private lands if it can be proven that the path has been a traditional right of way for local people. Some of the paths have been in use for more than a thousand years. Others are of more recent vintage. Landowners who have public paths across their property — in the interest of minimizing potential damage to their land — often erect styles for the convenience of pedestrians, allowing easy access over thorn hedges and stone walls.

Walking through the Lake District is a journey into another century, to a world that by sheer good fortune and a consequence of geography and inaccessibility has retained the atmosphere and sense of timelessness of a pre-industrial age. This is sheep country. Little else is hardy enough to withstand the difficult weather, other than the locals who by natural selection seem genetically insensible to weeks of non-stop rain.

Small, ancient-looking farms with grey, weathered granite walls and moss-covered slate roofs occupy the valley floors, surrounded by emerald green fields enclosed by stone walls. It seems virtually every structure in this part of England is stone. Stone walls, laboriously built by generations — often of the same family — divide one small field from another. Some of these walls date back over 600 years when the production of wool became an important economic activity. Some date back even earlier to the time when Viking invaders decided to settle here in the 9th century. As the hillsides steepen, the tidy fields give way to a wild, harsher environment of glacier-scarred rock outcrops, alpine grasses and sedges, bracken, and purple heather.

Our second day, from Ennerdale into the heart of the Lake District, was a tough one for the group, whose ages ranged from 26 to 62. It is easy to imagine a walk across England to be a relaxed affair, peering over garden walls and taking afternoon teas at quaint country inns.

Lakeland hills are deceptively steep and sometimes seem interminable. We decided that an English mile bore no resemblance to an American one — it was thought to be roughly three times longer. The weather was magnificently clear, warm, and sunny, a rare combination for a region that "enjoys" 180 inches of rain a year and where summer can be sometimes measured in days. The mountain ash and birch trees became fewer as we climbed out of Ennerdale and at an elevation of only 2,000 feet, disappeared. The landscape is open and windswept, often scoured by low cloud and mist driven in by the prevailing westerlies off the Irish Sea. It is reminiscent of northern Alaska or northern Scandinavia.

Looking back, and now well below us, was Pillar Rock, a great buttress of dark granite where the earliest rockclimbers practiced in preparation for the first ascents of the Matterhorn and Mount Everest. To the west, we looked down on the sun-dappled water of Buttermere, and beyond, the Isle of Man — still there — and the glistening, magical waters of the Irish Sea.

From this lofty terrain we began our deep descent into the valley of Borrowdale, considered to be the most beautiful valley in the whole of Britain, which I remembered with great nostalgia, from the times I had spent there more than 30 years earlier.

Our tramp through the Lakeland fells and its many valleys was perhaps the major highlight of our walk. We spent an afternoon in Grassmere where Wordsworth lived, now buried in the local graveyard. Beatrice Potter, creator of Peter Rabbit and many other animal characters, spent her most creative years in this beautiful part of England. On her death, she gave her extensive Lakeland properties and farms to the National Trust to be preserved in perpetuity. I was intrigued to learn that of all the visiting foreigners, it is the Japanese who apparently show the greatest interest in Beatrice Potter and the enduring characters she created.

Beyond the Lakes, we visited the medieval, market town of Richmond with its famous castle and ruined monastery, a victim of King Henry the Eighth's notorious dissolution of the monasteries in 1540. England is strewn with the empty shells of those once thriving monasteries, which in addition to being religious centers also served as important local and regional centers of education, industry and agriculture.

Our final tramp, across the bleak, treeless, North Yorkshire moorland gave us a glimpse of the stark, gray world where the Bronte sisters were born, lived almost their entire lives, and died. You have to tramp across a Yorkshire moor on a wet, windy day to appreciate where the scenic imagery and the dark and sinister character of Heathcliff came from.

Our final day of walking was from the small fishing port of Whitby, where Captain Cook, one of England's greatest sailors, was born. Another impressive monastery dating back to the 7th century overlooks this picturesque town, its back overlooking the North Sea from where many of its principal antagonists came — the Saxons and Vikings. In spite of being abandoned in the 16th century and being shelled by a passing German battleship in the second World War, the ravaged ruins look as though they might easily last another 1000 years. A delightful eight mile walk along the 300-foot high sandstone sea cliffs seemed more like 15, but by now we were accustomed to the perverse humor of the guide book's estimation of distances. In the late afternoon, our destination, the village of Robin Hood's Bay, came into view with its slate roofed stone houses perched, some precariously, on the edge of a pleasantly calm North Sea.

That evening we walked to the

shore and watched the rising moon cast a bright though eerie light across the gentle sea. A grand and peaceful finale. Our memorable tramp across England was sadly over; it was time to go home.

Before leaving England, we visited the ancient city of York — a tourist city for more than a thousand years — to walk its narrow, cobble streets, its excavated Viking runs and to gaze in awe at York Minster, a great church even before William the Conqueror

Two of our alumni joined us last year on the walk.

"I found the walk across England to be one of the best vacations I've ever been on; it was absolutely beautiful." — Maurcen McOsker '81

"There is no better way to see a country than to walk across it."

"It's one of those experiences that gets better and better the more you think about it, and you think about it often."

"The Walk Across England was the hardest thing I've ever done, but I wouldn't have missed it for the world"

Walks in England, Scotland and France offered in 1995

England July 5-17

Land Cost $1,400

Join us this summer on a walk across the breadth of Northern England which will take us through some of the island's most beautiful mountains and moorland. Our walk will begin in the Lake District region of Northwest England and finish across the North Yorkshire Moors — from St. Bees on the Irish Sea to Robin Hood's Bay on the shores of the North Sea.

The walk passes through a mountainous and hilly landscape of highland sheep farms, villages of stone-walled houses, inns and ancient churches. It is the land of Wordsworth and James Herriot, author of All Things Bright and Beautiful. The Romans passed through this region two thousand years ago, followed by the Danes, Saxons and Vikings. Traces of their passing can be found along the old pathways, churches and landscape.

Scotland September 21-October 3 Land Cost $1,300

We will begin the Highlands of Scotland walk at the Rowdennan Hotel which lies on the eastern

Master's degree in accounting approved

A new master of science degree in accounting program will enroll its first students in the fall of 1996. Creation of the program was recently approved by the Council of Trustees.

Richard Baker, chairman of the accounting department, notes that "more than 30 states require either a total of 150 hours of education or 30 hours of education beyond the bachelor's degree as a minimum educational requirement for licensure as a Certified Public Accountant.

"We expect the Commonwealth to follow this national trend in the next several years," he said.

"Bloomsburg already has one of the largest undergraduate accounting programs in northeastern Pennsylvania. We think our new master's program anticipates the state's mandate and prepares students for a changing business climate."

Bloomsburg's undergraduate accounting program enrolls between 500 and 600 students and graduates between 110 and 150 students each year. More than 40 percent of the graduates take the CPA examination.

The new graduate program will complement the University's own undergraduate accounting curriculum and the programs of other nearby institutions. Other schools in the State System of Higher Education are expected to contribute graduates to the program.

"To our knowledge," Baker said, "nearby colleges and universities have not formulated plans to meet the fifth year requirement. There are no state-owned or state-supported schools within a reasonable distance that have an existing accounting program large enough to support a quality graduate program in accounting."

Baker indicated that, when it is mature, the Bloomsburg program could have as many as 50 to 60 students per year taking graduate courses in accounting.

Visit le Carrefour Europeen, the crossroads of Europe, in a two-week trip that leads from the towns of the Alsace into the mountains of the Vosges. We will begin the tour in the city of Mulhouse in the valley of the Rhine and travel north, with Strasbourg, the capital of Alsace, as our final goal. Our tour will take us along the G.R. 5, one of several long-distance hiking trails in Europe, leading us over moderate peaks and past impressive medieval ruins.

On the way north, we will visit Colmar, one of the region's most beautiful towns and a leading art center. After a few more days of hiking in the mountains, with views of the Alps and the Black Forest, we will descend again into the Rhine Valley where many small villages have preserved their distinctive Alsatian character. Here you will find impressive collections of art and some of the most delicious food and wine in the region.

Several moderate hiking days, interrupted by sightseeing in charming towns, will bring us to Strasbourg, known around the world for its cathedral, museums and picturesque neighborhoods.

During the tour, you will have the opportunity to attend local music festivals in Mulhouse and Strasbourg, and in the event that you want to spend additional time in a particular town, we will help make arrangements for you to rejoin the group again the following day.

Shaw Festival: Drama, comedy, mystery music

Alumni and friends are invited to join us for the ninth annual theatre trip to Ontario, Canada. This year we will attend the Shaw Festival in Niagara-on-the-Lake, a beautiful Victorian town, from Tuesday, August 8, through Saturday, August 12.

The Shaw Festival is the second-largest theatre company in North America, and the only one in the world that specializes in plays written during Bernard Shaw's lifetime (1856-1950) — plays about the beginnings of the modern world. The plays are staged in three delightful and very different theatres.

The basic cost of the trip is $275 for bus transportation (from Bloomsburg) and hotel accommodations for four nights, based on double occupancy, plus $31 for each play you select.

This year the following plays will be offered:

Tuesday Matinee An Ideal Husband

by Oscar Wilde. In Victorian London's high society, a beautiful blackmailer threatens the reputation — and the marriage — of a popular and ambitious politician. Is he the 'ideal husband,' or is it the aristocratic dandy who is determined to rescue him? Filled with flirtation and intrigue, this play glitters throughout with the famous wit of Oscar Wilde. (The Court House Theatre)

Tuesday Evening The Philanderer

by Bernard Shaw. 'The fickleness of the women I love,' complains the title character, 'is only equalled by the infernal constancy of the women who love me.' Set in London in the 1890s, this comedy of sexual adventure is based on Shaw's own private life, and gleefully lampoons the causes to be championed. (The Court House Theatre)

Wednesday Lunchtime The Six of Calais

by Bernard Shaw. This lunchtime trifle is Shaw's little-known comedy of politics and marriage. In 1346, the English king juggles conflicting demands of warfare and of his queen. The task would be easier if

Join us for the Shaw Festival

he weren't so devoted to both! The price of this short performance is only $10. (Royal George Theatre)

Wednesday Matinee Ladies in Retirement

by Edward Percy. In an isolated area of England, a retired courtesan and her housekeeper-companion keep a cheery old cottage — until the housekeeper's two dotty sisters join the ménage. This season's suspense play combines the tension of a detective mystery with the eerie terror of a ghost story. (Royal George Theatre)

Wednesday Evening Waste

by Harley Granville Barker. A furtive love affair jeopardizes a promising political career, in this compelling drama by the most modern of Shaw's contemporaries. For over 30 years, Waste was banned in England due to its unflinching treatment of issues we now call 'pro-choice' and 'pro-life.' (Court House Theatre)

Thursday Luncheon The Zoo

by Bolton Rowe and Arthur Sullivan. At luncheon, a musical from the 1870s, from Sullivan before he teamed up with Gilbert. In the London Zoo, a love-sick young pharmacist threatens to throw himself into the bear pit, while a disguised duke woos a tart at the refreshment stand. Tuneful, light-hearted and charming. The price of this performance is only $15. (Royal George Theatre)

Thursday Matinee Cavalcade

by Noel Coward. The sweep of history, with Noel Coward's unforgettable characters and music, in a production of epic scale with over 350 costumes and characters. We follow two English families — one from 'upstairs,' and the other from 'downstairs' — as they are caught up in a whirlwind of changes from 1899 to 1929. With this production, the Shaw Festival proudly reprises one of its greatest successes, which had its North American premiere here in 1985. (Festival Theatre)

Thursday Evening The Petrified Forest

by Robert E. Sherwood. In an isolated diner in Arizona we meet an odd bunch of people. Some are lost, some yearning to get away, some frightened to leave, some happy to have arrived. The peace is shattered by the sudden appearance of a gangster and his small group of criminals on the run. A classic suspense tale of the 1930s, this was the play that made a star of Humphrey Bogart. (Festival Theatre)

Friday Matinee The Voice of the Turtle

by John Van Druten. It's New York, it's wartime, and the sound of rain softens the harsh noise of traffic and the clatter of the elevated railroad. Meeting by chance, a soldier on leave and an out-of-work actress find themselves falling in love — against their own better judgement. What could be more romantic! (Royal George Theatre)

Friday Evening You Never Can Tell

by Bernard Shaw. One of Shaw's most popular plays, this comedy tells of Mrs. Clandon, who takes her three grown children on a seaside holiday. There, to her horror, the children meet their estranged father, while the eldest daughter finds herself falling in love with a randy young dentist. Over it all presides a charming old waiter who, with a flourish of a table napkin, transforms tears into laughter and disaster into delight. 'You never can tell,' he whispers, as conflicts are resolved and the play dissolves into music and laughter and the sound of waves lapping at the sea-wall. (Festival Theatre)

Side Trips

In addition to seeing plays and enjoying the shops and restaurants of scenic Niagara-on-the-Lake, we will take a side trip to Niagara Falls on one morning, and we will also tour a local winery. In addition, historic Fort George is within walking distance of our hotel.

Our Own Resource Person

As always, we will be accompanied by Dr. Susan Rusinko, retired chairperson of the Bloomsburg University Department of English. Susan will not only brief us on the plays in advance, but will be available for post-play discussions over dessert and/or nightcap at the Prince of Wales Hotel or other popular nightspots.

Reservations

A $100 per person deposit will reserve your place. The balance is due by July 1. After July 7, we will be unable to refund your money unless a replacement is found. Participation will be limited to the first 40 persons who send a deposit. (Checks should be written payable to B.U. Foundation.) Although we will accept payment by credit card (Visa, Mastercard, Discover), we prefer payment by check since we lose a small amount of money on each credit card transaction.

Toll-free Number

Learning to be part of a community

By JESSICA S. KOZLOFF, Ph.D.
President of the University

Today's students have a lot to learn. And they're doing it inside — and outside — the classroom because, as we all suspected when we were undergraduates, some of life's most important lessons aren't found in the pages of a textbook.

In social and service organizations, today's college students learn something about being part of a community. They learn it by taking part in group projects and by living in college residence halls.

They learn it by experiencing tragedies that shatter life's expectations.

They learn about community by discovering the common bonds that unite us all — wherever we may be — as members of the human family.

When today's students leave the university, I hope their ideas about community have exploded — been made larger and more expansive. And, I trust that they have come to recognize their own personal responsibility in creating a community — a world — where each is responsible for those who walk along this way with us.

It's impossible to put a price tag on alumni time and ideas

By MARVIN METZGER '86
President, Alumni Association

In today's challenging environment, graduating students from regional universities like Bloomsburg, face competition from around the world. To maximize students' potential, the university must use every asset in its portfolio, including the perceptive input of its alumni.

The Alumni Association seeks to foster education by providing a communication channel between alumni and the rest of the university family. In our case, 40,000 alumni can make a significant impact by contributing their time and ideas. For example, alumni can refer prospective students to the university, participate in local chapter events, or offer students insights about careers and industries.

Last year, over 1,400 alumni and about 1,000 others (friends, students, parents, faculty and staff) participated in at least one of the 85 programs and projects. The number and scope of events and the large number of participants may be attributed, in part, to the success of the regional chapters. In the upcoming year, we hope to increase the number of participants. In addition, we want to integrate chapters events even more with the university's programs.

For example, faculty or staff members may make presentations at the regional events. Furthermore, we would like to see more alumni visit the campus as guest speakers and advisory board members in various fields.

It's almost impossible to put a price tag on alumni time and ideas, but these contributions are extremely important. Too often, alumni feel that the Alumni Association only wants financial contributions. In fact, fund-raising has been the responsibility of the Foundation Board and the Development Office for nearly a decade. The Alumni Association, on the other hand, is charged with the responsibility of "friend-raising."

We hope that students and faculty will use the ideas and resources of alumni to help students achieve a level of preparation they may not otherwise attain. Small contributions by 40,000 alumni can produce big results. Moreover, when the university excels, everyone's degree becomes more valuable.

If you have questions or ideas that will benefit the students, please take a moment to send me a note, in care of the Alumni Office, Bloomsburg University, 400 East Second Street, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

In May — during the first week of their summer vacation — more than 70 of our education majors spent a week teaching in 11 Harrisburg schools as part of an extended urban field experience. For many of these students, their experience in Harrisburg's schools was their first in an inner-city setting.

Another 14 Bloomsburg education majors spent 10 days in one of Philadelphia's inner-city schools learning first-hand about urban education in America. New and modern, with a strong vocational program and an on-site daycare center — Philadelphia's Edison High School shatters many of the stereotypes associated with an urban high school.

For students from small towns in rural counties, for those from suburban neighborhoods, these experiences may have been their slice of urban life.

Picture what it must have been like for Rie Ito, a junior majoring in education. Philadelphia may be three hours driving time from Bloomsburg, but it's light years from Rie's hometown — Tokyo.

Today's students live in a world community.

Last year, five Bloomsburg students spent their summer studying Chinese culture, history and language at Shenyang Teachers College in Liaoning province. Another will study Chinese this summer in Qinghai province. Bloomsburg alumni have also taken part in the university's exchange program with China. Several have taken one-year teaching assignments there. Christopher Moulton, a 1994 communications studies graduate, is scheduled to teach in Shenyang next year.

These exchanges are part of a formal program that Bloomsburg has operated with China's Qinghai Education Commission since 1987 when Howard Macauley, dean of the College of Professional Studies, visited the People's Republic as part of his Fulbright-Hays Fellowship program.

Dear Alumni, Parents and Friends,

An exciting new bi-annual publication with a familiar name is headed your way this fall. A redesigned BLOOMSBURG will inform you of new events and developments at the University and will report on issues of concern. It will also present feature stories that give a comprehensive view of the current academic, cultural, recreational and social life of the University. Stories will examine societal and cultural issues through the eyes of our faculty and students and will present significant developments in the professional and personal lives of alumni, faculty, staff and students. It promises to be intellectually stimulating, informative and visually exciting. In short, it will seek to celebrate the "life of the mind."

The 32-page tabloid publication will be distributed to all alumni, parents, friends, donors, community and political leaders, faculty and staff, and prospective students and their parents. In addition, it will be available to all current students.

The new publication will be prepared in the Office of University Relations and Communication, with Markland Lloyd serving as editor.

Early next year, a familiar publication with a new name will appear. The name of the new publication will be determined by a contest. Call us at 1-800-526-0254 to give us your suggestion. The winner of the contest, to be selected by the Alumni Board of Directors, will get an alumni sweatshirt.

The 32-page tabloid, will contain the ever-popular "class notes" as well as reports and photos of Homecoming, Alumni Weekend, chapter activities and other special events.

The publication will be distributed twice a year to alumni who have made a contribution during the 15 months prior to publication date. Others may receive the publication by paying a $10 annual subscription. Members of the most recent graduating class will receive two free issues of the publication.

The publication will be prepared in the Office of Alumni Affairs, with Doug Hippenstiel '68 serving as editor.

As a result of these exciting changes, we believe all members of the University family will be well served. Everyone will receive the new University publication, and contributing alumni/subscribers will receive the familiar alumni publication. In the process, both the University and the Alumni Association will communicate with our constituents in a most economical, cost-effective way.

We welcome your comments on both publications after you have had a chance to read them.

Quest plans trip to Peru

The Quest program is planning a trip to Peru over the winter holiday break, December 16 to January 12, 1996.

Participants will travel from Lima, the nation's capital, to the town of Huaraz, west of the Cordillera Blanca Range. From the Rio Santa they will trek eastward up the valley de los Cedros through the range, climb a peak in the Alpanayo region, and descend into the Amazon basin rain forest.

They will trek through valleys that were terraced and farmed for centuries until the conquering conquistadors decimated the local populations. Religious sites, burial formations and irrigation ditches are still evident in many of these remote valleys. They will trek over 15,000-foot mountain passes and will camp in remote, seldom visited valleys far from the beaten track.

After a visit to Cuzco, the ancient capital of the Inca empire, they will make a week-long journey to Machu Picchu, one of South America's most spectacular ruins. This religious center of the Incas, with its terraced hillsides and extraordinary stone structures, was built in such a remote and inaccessible hillside overlooking the Rio Urabamba that it eluded the plundering armies of the Spanish conquistadors. It was discovered by the outside world in 1911 by Hiram Bingham, the Yale archeologist.

The trip will be led by Roy Smith, director of the Quest program. He first visited the area in 1966 as a member of the British expedition that made the first ascent of the North Ridge of Alpanayo, the last unclimbed 20,000-foot mountain in the Andes.

The cost of the trip is expected to be about $1,700. For information, call the Quest office at (717) 389-4323.

Three alumni join Quest trip to East Africa

Three BU alumni joined a Quest trip to East Africa for four weeks over the last Christmas and New Year holiday period. They were Beth Bowman and Cathy Frick, who played for the BU field hockey team during some of its great triumphs, and Kevin Grecey, who played on the BU soccer team.

The trip started with a six-day trek on Mount Kenya, a 17,000-foot mountain where the Kikuyu God Mogan, Divider of the Universe, is reputed to live. From Mt. Kenya, they travelled north for three days across a rugged landscape to Lake Turkana, the largest of the Rift Valley Lakes, stopping on the way for a day in the Samburu Game Park.

The culmination of the East African trip was a six-day, 100-mile foot safari from Arusha in Tanzania to an isolated mountain called Longido, which lies west of the Amboseli Game Park near the Kenya border.

Quest will be offering another foot safari in Kenya and Tanzania for alumni and friends of the University in 1996. Call the Quest office at (717) 389-4466, and ask for Ruy Smith.

Alumni earn loyalty awards for 1994

One hundred thirty-seven Bloomsburg University alumni have earned distinction as recipients of the seventh annual Richard E. Grimes Loyalty Awards. They earned this distinction in 1994 by attending a regional alumni event, by returning to campus for either Alumni Weekend or Homecoming, and by contributing to the Annual Fund.

Attending both Alumni Weekend and Homecoming can substitute for a regional alumni event, since the latter are not held in all areas every year.

The award honors "Barly" Grimes, a retired teacher from Harrisburg, who has missed only one Homecoming (1954) and no Alumni Weekends since he graduated in 1949. He earned life-time status on the Alumni Board of Directors last year after completing 14 years of service.

"It's something I've dreamed my whole life of receiving," she said in a recent interview.

"And when you do, it's heartwarming."

But to many current and former Millersburg students, the award is a confirmation of something they've believed for a long time — that Mrs. K. is one terrific teacher.

"The love, respect and admiration I see past and present students shower Kay with is truly touching," fellow teacher Bryan Campbell wrote in a letter nominating Klinefelter for the award.

Perhaps that's because she brings a sense of mission to the classroom.

"I believe in what I teach because I know they'll use it someday," she said. "And when you see that they value what they've learned, it gives you a great deal of personal satisfaction."

Another goal, she says, is helping each student feel a sense of accomplishment in class. She also emphasizes the importance of goal-setting, time management, study skills and self-motivation.

Even after a quarter-century, her enthusiasm for teaching has only grown. She tries to keep learning enjoyable by injecting humorous stories into the classroom setting and by getting students involved in projects like setting up a new bulletin board in her room every few weeks.

"I want them to feel upbeat about coming to class and receptive to learning," she said.

In addition to serving as advisor to various school organizations, she is also involved with the Millersburg Civic Club, Millersburg Community Task Force and the Upper Dauphin County Arts Alliance.

Master's degree in accounting gets green light

The creation of a master of science degree in accounting at BU has been approved by the Board of Governors for the State System of Higher Education.

The new graduate program is expected to enroll its first students in the fall of 1996.

According to Richard Baker, chairman of the accounting department, "more than 30 states require either a total of 150 hours of education or 30 hours of education beyond the bachelor's degree as a minimum educational requirement for licensure as a Certified Public Accountant.

"We expect the Commonwealth to follow this national trend in the next several years," he said. "Bloomsburg already has one of the largest undergraduate accounting programs in northeastern Pennsylvania. We think our new master's program anticipates the state's mandate and prepares students for the changing business climate."

Bloomsburg's undergraduate accounting program enrolls between 500 and 600 students and graduates between 110 and 150 students each year. More than 40 percent of BU's graduates take the CPA examination.

The graduate program will complement BU's own undergraduate accounting curriculum and the programs of other nearby institutions. Other schools in the State System of Higher Education are expected to contribute graduates to the program.

"To our knowledge," Baker added, "no nearby colleges and universities have not formulated plans to meet the fifth year requirement. There are no state-owned or state-supported schools within a reasonable distance that have an existing accounting program large enough to support a quality graduate program in accounting."

Baker indicated that, when it is mature, the BU program could have as many as 50 to 60 students per year taking graduate courses in accounting.

A Treasury of Ideas — A Capital Success Story Featuring BU All-Star Cast of Thousands

It's summertime. Traffic on campus has thinned; shorts and sunglasses are in; and marigolds have replaced hardy mums — all telltale signs that another academic year has slipped into the past tense.

It has been a roller-coaster year for Bloomsburg, packed with triumphs and tragedies of every magnitude. Dr. Jessica S. Kozloff took the helm as Bloomsburg's 18th and first woman president. Three vice presidential searches—for academic affairs/provost, advancement, and student life—ended successfully, entrenching a new top administrative team in Carver Hall.

On the deficit side, Bloomsburg suffered the loss of five students in an off-campus fire; incidents of underage drinking and misconduct were reported; and we lost valuable and cherished friends in the deaths of Richard Benefield, Richard Wesner, and Boyd Buckingham.

Amid the hailstorm of events that defines BU 1994-1995 is a bona fide success story with a 105,000 square foot happy ending. The title of this best seller is A Treasury of Ideas. The story line details the University's efforts to underwrite construction of a crucially needed building by executing its first capital campaign.

The Bloomsburg University Foundation and the Office of Development functioned as the campaign's creative team, hammering out strategies and matching fund appeals with prospective donors.

Raising money for a library is the "stuff" development people in higher education dream of. The very nature of the project attracts broad-based support. Academic libraries serve every discipline at all interest levels. Its users include both the browser and the researcher. Libraries also function as a key resource for neighboring businesses, industry, and schools.

Via the information highways such as Internet, it can benefit users worldwide. (Library plans include 500 public-access connections for personnel computers, several laptop computers available on request, 145 stations with computers, CD-ROM databases, and an on-line catalog.)

For Bloomsburg building a new library facility was a project of uncontested need. Enrollment had more than doubled since Andruss Library's opening in 1966. Alumni, faculty, staff, students, and parents were keenly aware of problems with overcrowding, lack of storage, and noise.

A larger facility was first proposed in 1986, and although approved, the project lacked funding until it qualified for state aid under the Higher Education Capital Construction Program in 1992. The University immediately swung into action. The initial challenge was to raise $2.375 million from private sources. The goal later grew to $3.375 million when it was decided to finish the fourth floor. Building costs stood at $12.4 million.

In early December 1994, Anthony M. Ianero, current vice president for advancement, declared the campaign had surpassed its goal. A $210,000 planned gift from the estate of Mary Tauhel Rider in memory of her mother, Mary Moore Taubel, Class of 1890, pushed the fund drive over the top.

The many heroes of this story can be found among the names on pages 18-49. They include alumni, parents, employees, businesses, organizations, foundations, and individuals — all of whom have contributed to the campaign.

Heroes come in all shapes and sizes. And this campaign has a wonderful cast of them. There's Jack L. Mertz, Class of 1942, who stepped forward early in 1992 to make the lead and what would prove to be the largest single gift to the library fund, donating a half million dollars.

There's a lovely lady named Harriet Hill Knorr of Berwick, a 1918 graduate of Bloomsburg State Normal School, who was the first to sponsor a ceramic tile in the fund drive's special recognition project. Mrs. Knorr celebrated her 100th birthday June 11 at the Berwick Retirement Village. She looks forward to the new library's opening in the fall of 1997.

Alumni formed the backbone of the campaign. Some 3,800 alumni contributed

$1,637,968. The Alumni Association's Board had 100 percent participation. Several classes tapped their treasuries to contribute over $83,000. (See page 40.)

The tile mural, being crafted by Karen Singer of Philadelphia, is another chapter in the success story. The 5'x16' design, shown above, depicts three views of campus and neighboring Route 11 on 480 tiles. It is fully subscribed. Once sculpted, each tile will have a name or message pressed into the design, then be glazed and fired. The first batch of names should reach Singer's studio by mid-June.

Ground breaking is anticipated in early December or the spring of 1996, contingent on weather. The final chapter of BU's success story will close with the opening of the new Harvey A. Andruss Library in fall 1997. Mark your calendars!

Site Dedication Brings Major Donors To Campus

Ceremonies were held on campus, April 29, to dedicate the site of the new Harvey A. Andruss Library. Some 172 alumni, students, employees, friends, and major contributors to A Treasury of Ideas, the library construction campaign, assembled next to Waller Administration Building for the dedication and reception.

John J. Haggerty, vice chairperson, BU Council of Trustees, delivered the welcoming remarks. Interim Provost and co-chairperson of the Library Steering Committee Carol Matteson was the lead speaker. She was followed by Wayne G. Failor, vice chancellor for finance and administration, who conveyed congratulations from the State System of Higher Education, Ramona H. Alley, chairperson, Council of Trustees; and Dr. J. Daniel Vann III, dean of library services.

Michael Gillespie '95, president, Community Government Association and John S. Scrimgeour '53, national chairperson, Library Construction Campaign spoke of the hacking of campus constituents.

A special thank-you was extended by President Jessica S. Kozloff to businesses, foundations, and individuals who made major gifts to the campaign. Jack L. Mertz '42, of Venice, Fla., was introduced by President Kozloff and applauded for making the lead gift to the library. Page 17

Bloomsburg University applauds the following people and collectives — alumni, parents, friends, businesses, foundations, organizations, and faculty and staff — for their support, their vision, and their fine example. These generous gifts have provided numerous resources vital to the success of today's students and served to enhance a dynamic learning environment which benefits the university community at large. For those dependent on scholarship assistance, such contributions can literally make the difference of a lifetime. Faculty and staff development activities, research projects, and alumni programs and services also rely on The Bloomsburg University Foundation annually for a measure of funding. The Foundation recorded gifts totalling nearly $1.7 million in 1994.

The individuals, businesses, and organizations in the seven major donor clubs have earned an honored place in the history of this institution. Their support assures the continuance of quality education at Bloomsburg University.

Alumni

Alumni support is the backbone of the University's Annual Fund — supporting vital capital campaigns, scholarships, academic programs, and alumni activities that set Blbomsburg above its competition. The following graduates merit the respect and gratitude of students, faculty and staff, parents, alumni, and friends of the University for their generosity in the past year. They contributed over $550,000 in 1994.

Seven receive Alumni awards for 1995

The Alumni Association honored three alumni at its 1995 awards dinner on Alumni Day. Two other individuals were designated as honorary alumni.

John S. Scrimgeour '53 and Phyllis B. Mundy '70 received Distinguished Service Awards, and David A. Williams '81 was recognized as Young Alumni of the Year.

Dr. Robert Warren and Elbern (Ed) Alkire were named honorary alumni.

Scrimgeour, a former faculty member at the university and past president of the Alumni Association, served as chairman of the capital campaign for the new library. The "Treasury of Ideas" campaign surpassed its $3,375 million goal in February.

Mundy, a civic leader in the Wyoming Valley, has emerged as a political leader in the Democratic Party in the Wilkes-Barre area. She is the only Bloomsburg graduate serving in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives.

Williams, a former director of a Houston (Texas) food bank, is senior vice president with Habitat for Humanity in Americus, Ga.

The two honorary alumni have provided significant service to the university for many years. Warren, faculty emeritus, has been advisor to the Sigma Iota Omega fraternity for more than 30 years. Alkire, a former member of the university's Council of Trustees, is an active member of the BU Foundation Board of Directors.

Honored as "Volunteers of the Year" were Nancy Feher Edwards '70 and Sandra Jefferson Rupp '71.

Housing Safety Task Force submits report

The Student Housing Safety Task Force, created last fall after an off-campus fire killed five BU students, has issued its recommendations to President Jessica Kozloff and Mayor Daniel Bauman. The recommendations were delivered during the last week of the spring semester.

Among its recommendations, the report calls for increasing the number and scope of safety education and training programs for students, the addition of a second code enforcement officer by the town, and the formation of a tenant association to assist students in their dealings with landlords.

The report also called upon the university and the town to create a new task force to explore issues of alcohol and substance abuse among students.

The Student Housing Safety Task Force began its work last fall with two public hearings. Throughout the winter, the group collected expert testimony and completed research into housing and safety issues. Two public meetings that presented preliminary findings were held in April, prior to formal delivery of the group's findings.

University celebrates inauguration of 18th president

Jessica Sledge Kozloff's inauguration as the 18th president of Bloomsburg University was celebrated on April 22.

Several hundred guests from the academic community representing more than 50 colleges and universities attended the event. Trustee Robert Buelner served as master of ceremonies.

Guests and speakers included F. Eugene Dixon, chairperson of the State System Board of Governors, Mayor Daniel Bauman, and representatives of many campus constituencies, including faculty, staff, administrators and students.

"Bloomsburg is family. I have been personally overjoyed and impressed by the individual who has come to this family," said Chancellor James McCormick, president of Bloomsburg from 1973 to 1983.

Keynote speaker James B. Appleberry, president of the American Society of State Colleges and Universities, discussed the need for the universities to adapt to fundamental changes in technology and culture.

In her address, Kozloff examined how the university has evolved from its medieval origins and how it will continue to evolve.

"I am particularly conscious, because of the pomp and circumstance of this inaugural ceremony, that we are celebrating not just my presidency," said Kozloff, "but the traditions that have been with us for hundreds of years — almost a thousand years — extending to the first universities, established in Italy during the 11th century."

Kozloff discussed the symbolic importance of the academic mace. Originally a weapon of war, the academic mace has become a symbolic weapon in the fight for knowledge.

"As the medieval knight brandished the mace against enemies on the battlefield, today's scholar takes up arms against ignorance and narrow-mindedness, against hopelessness and despair," said Kozloff. "The struggle is just as intense — the stakes equally high.

"If there is any word associated with this decade, it is change."

"We stand at the threshold of a new millennium. The prospects before us are exciting and dangerous."

The president looked at how universities are being asked to bring their resources to bear on today's problems.

"There are some who doubt whether the modern university can respond to the remarkable events that are occurring about us," said Kozloff. "I am convinced that we can respond to the challenges before us.

"It has been done before. We must — and can — do it again."

"Like the medieval institution that has bequeathed us so many symbols and so much of our academic tradition, our early years were not perfect. . . . But this fledgling university, as imperfect as it was, laid the foundations that define what we are today.

"We must continue to celebrate the life of the mind.

"We must continue to excite intellectual curiosity so that our graduates can confront change and embark on journeys to brave new worlds.

"After all, in the course of a lifetime, career options may change. Organizations may be reengineered. The nature of institutions may be irrevocably altered. But the power of human intellect and spirit to confront challenges and invent solutions

New alumni president, board members elected

Marvin Metzger '86 of Mountaintop was elected president of the Alumni Association on Alumni Day. The youngest graduate to serve as president, Metzger works for Tenenbaum's Travel in Kingston. He and his wife, the former Angela Zuba '87, are the parents of a daughter, Lindsay.

Other officers for 1995-1996 are Sandra Jefferson Rupp '71 of Bloomsburg, vice president; Cliff Maurer '66 of Wescosville, secretary; and Dr. John J. Trathen '68, treasurer.

Elected to serve their first two-year terms on the Alumni Board of Directors were Betty Fisher '48 of Bloomsburg; Carolyn Vernoy Reitz '51 of Horsham; Joseph M. Geiger '74 of Hummelstown, and Cindy Hepler '86 of Reading. Fisher served six years on the Alumni Board from 1975 to 1981.

remains unchanging.

"Today, I ask you to take up arms with me — and join the battle.

"The cause is just, the company good."

In-depth coverage of the inaugural activities will be featured in the debut issue of the new BLOOMSBURG, coming this fall.

Re-elected to two-year terms were Dr. William H. Selden '43 of Berwick, Mary Anne Majikas Klemkosky '59 of Orwigsburg, Nelson Swarts '63 of Lewisberry, Sandra Jefferson Rupp '71 of Bloomsburg, Susan J. Lilly '79 of Bethlehem, Scott Aike '86 of Cherry Hill, N.J., Marvin Metzger '86 of Mountaintop, and Joanne Derricott '89 of Allentown.

Elected to fill a one-year unexpired term was Nancy Feher Edwards '70 of Bloomsburg. She formerly served on the Alumni Board from 1988 to 1994.

Interim business dean appointed

Gene R. Remoff has been named interim dean for the College of Business at the university. His appointment was announced recently by President Kozloff.

As interim dean, Remoff will direct a business program at Bloomsburg that enrolls more than 1,400 undergraduate majors and offers degrees in accounting, business education and office administration, computer and information systems, finance and business law, management, and marketing.

Remoff retired from the ARAMARK Corporation in 1993 after having served as corporate vice president for human resources for ten years. One of the largest private sector employers in the nation, ARAMARK employs 130,000 people.

Remoff has taught as an adjunct instructor in the College of Business at BU and has served as frequent guest lecturer for college seminars and symposia. He was a faculty member at the USSR Institute of International Relations and World Economy held in Moscow in 1990.

He has served as a member of the executive committee of The Conference Board's Human Resources Advisory Council and as a member of the Private Sector Task Force on Human Resources Management for the City of Philadelphia. He is a member of the Academy of Management and the Organizational Behavior Teaching Society.

Remoff holds a graduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania and an undergraduate degree from Fairleigh Dickinson University.

Schweiker issues challenge to grads

Lt. Governor Mark Schweiker, a 1975 BU graduate, addressed over 900 graduates at the University's commencement exercises on May 13. It was 20 years and two days after he sat in the audience as a graduating senior.

In his address, he stressed the responsibility people have to serve their communities.

"You have been given a great gift at Bloomsburg — a gift of knowledge, growth and opportunity. But with that gift comes responsibility and an obligation to give something back.

"To this point, as students, your natural focus in life has been one of getting. Of getting a high school diploma, getting into college, getting a job and getting ahead. But from this point forward, I challenge you to make your focus one of giving. Of giving your time, giving your talents, giving your energies to helping others.

"I challenge you to tackle the problems of your community. Don't wait for a new government program to come along. Join together with your neighbors and work side-by-side, street-by-street, until the job is done."

Speaking earlier at a press conference,

Schweiker

Schweiker called Bloomsburg "very much of a career-maker for me — one of the most significant seasons of my life."

The affordability of Bloomsburg was an important consideration for Schweiker and his family.

"I'm from a family of modest means. To know there was an affordable higher education option available was reassuring. Bloomsburg and the State System fit very nicely into the outlook. Affordable, solid, close by."

Recalling his first visit to Bloomsburg more than 20 years ago, Schweiker said the campus was "clean and green," and "within five minutes, I had three people come up to me and ask 'Can I help you?'"

Schweiker said he had been looking at schools like Delaware and LaSalle, but the personal attention helped sell him on Bloomsburg.

"It doesn't stop with the calibre of teachers on campus. It was the town, their sense of expectation in you."

In recognition of his accomplishments and potential, he was honored as "Young Alumni of the Year" by the BU Alumni Association in 1990.

Key university leadership posts filled

Bloomsburg University has filled two senior leadership vacancies with the appointments of Wilson G. Bradshaw as provost and vice president for academic affairs, and Anthony M. Ianiero as vice president for university advancement.

Both appointments were made by Jessica S. Kozloff, president Bradshaw, described by Kozloff as "an accomplished scholar with academic vision, good humor, energy and commitment to collegiality," has served for the past five years as vice president and dean for graduate studies and research at Georgia Southern University in Statesboro, Ga.

At Georgia Southern, a public university enrolling about 14,000 students, Bradshaw provided leadership for a number of innovative programs, including those involving distance-learning. He chaired several policy groups representing institutions in the University System of Georgia.

Prior to joining Georgia Southern, he held administrative posts in the graduate studies program at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton.

Bradshaw will assume his duties at Bloomsburg in July and will be responsible for the university's academic program, including graduate studies and its colleges of business, professional studies and arts and sciences.

He earned bachelor's and master's degrees in psychology from Florida Atlantic University and completed his doctoral work in psychobiology at the University of Pittsburgh. He continued his research activities as a post-doctoral fellow at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass. He is a 1994 graduate of the Harvard Institute for Educational Management.

Bradshaw

"Dr. Bradshaw's talents are a remarkable match for the opportunities we face here at Bloomsburg," said President Kozloff. "His experience will be particularly helpful in program development and strategic planning as we create a five-year plan that will position the institution for educational leadership in the 21st century."

Ianiero, named as vice president for university advancement, has served in the position in an interim capacity for the past 20 months. Prior to that, he was assistant vice president for development.

He has been at Bloomsburg since 1984. Since then, philanthropic support for the university has increased by nearly $20 million, including a recently concluded capital campaign that raised $3.5 million for the university's new library.

Prior to coming to Bloomsburg, he was assistant director of college development and director of alumni affairs for Trenton State College, where he earned his undergraduate and graduate degrees.

As vice president for university advancement, Ianiero is responsible for fund-raising, marketing, public relations, as well as alumni, governmental and community relations. He also serves as executive director of the BU Foundation.

Ianiero

Active in community affairs, Ianiero has served as a member of the Scott Township Zoning Committee. He co-chairs the Town/Gown Relations Committee and is a member of the Bloomsburg Area Industrial Development Authority.

"For ten years, Tony has served the university with distinction," said Kozloff. "He brings a great understanding of the university and the community to his post and provides continuity and insight to the leadership team."

Kozloff, who came to Bloomsburg last July 1, said she expects that "the next five years will be crucial. The course we set may well affect this institution for the next century. In adding these two people to the leadership team, a team has been assembled that will, with our faculty and staff, preserve all that has served us so well in the past and embrace the changes that are necessary for academic excellence in the future."

Legacy Scholarship offered to an alumni son or daughter

All children of BU alumni who are enrolled as students at the University for the fall semester have a chance to receive the second annual Legacy Scholarship — if their names are entered in a drawing to be held on August 1.

Alumni parents should call the Alumni Office at 1-800-526-0254 prior to August 1 to register the names of their children.

The $500 scholarship is provided by the BU Alumni Association in honor of those alumni who have sent their children to share the Bloomsburg experience.

Parents

Parents who furnish that extra measure of support for their children's education deserve singular recognition. They understand the linkage between excellence and quality and the cost of sustaining a growing, resourceful learning environment. In 1994, the Parents' Fund raised $83,000 from approximately 1,700 donors.

Professors plan trip to Amazon

(Editor's Note: Two BU professors, Frederick Hill and Joseph Pifer, are planning a week-long trip to the Amazon River and rainforest of Peru, departing on January 7, 1996. The trip is open to the general public. For more information, contact either Hill or Pifer.)

By Frederick Hill, Ph.D., Professor of Biological & Allied Health Sciences

The Amazon is an integration of rivers and rainforest combined to form the largest wilderness area in the world, the Amazon Basin. Occupying over 2.5 million square miles and including major portions of nine South American countries, this area contains an enormous diversity and abundance of fauna and flora. The largest river on Earth, the Amazon is truly one of the world's greatest natural wonders. Originating as a tiny brook 17,000 feet up in the Peruvian Andes, less than 100 miles from the Pacific Ocean, the Amazon flows 4,000 miles through Peru and Brazil.

It was with this in mind that Joseph Pifer, a meteorologist, and I set out last year on an incredibly fantastic journey. After flying to Iquitos, Peru, we encountered the Amazon River for the first time. Words cannot describe the magnitude of this river. At Iquitos, which is nearly 2,200 miles upstream from the mouth of the river, the Amazon is over 40 feet deep. The real surprise was to learn that it gets at least 30 feet deeper during spring runoff from the Andes. We were surprised to see a major ocean-going freighter at anchor in the middle of the river. This is the farthest upstream on any river in the world that ocean-going commercial ships can navigate.

We went by motor boat about 50 miles down river to the Explorama Lodge. The rainforest loomed above as our riverboat turned off the mighty river and continued along a narrow stream to the lodge. The lodge is almost invisible through the trees, but the dock provided a welcoming group of guides who helped us disembark. It was immediately obvious that we were in the jungle. Dozens of brightly colored birds whose colors were only rivaled by the myriads of brightly colored flowers greeted us as we walked up from the boat dock to our living quarters.

We were pleasantly surprised by the accommodations, they were much more than we had originally envisioned them to be! Meals were also a pleasant surprise in that the food was plentiful and good, featuring various meats (I had never eaten water buffalo before!) and a wealth of fresh fruits and vegetables, rice and beans, all carefully and deliciously prepared and served. While at Explorama, we hiked well-groomed trails where our guides pointed out the plants and animals (shhh — there is a troop of Pygmy Marmosets up ahead in the trees; look quickly or you will miss them!) and explained how the local people utilized the abundant resources of the forest.

Amazon

We left Explorama by boat (there are no roads in the jungle so you either walk or take a boat) and traveled approximately 43 miles up the Amazon's Napo and Sucusari Rivers to Explornapo Camp. Nestled in remote rainforest off the boundary of the Sucusari, this camp is composed of large, open, thatch-roofed structures on stilts, lit by the warm glow of kerosene lanterns (there is no electricity at any of the camps).

From Explornapo, we explored a black water lake (ever see a water lily pad that is six feet across?) and visited a colony of Hoatzins (very primitive pheasant-sized birds that have gastric fermentation and you still have claws on their wings much the same as Archaeopteryx, the first bird) in their native habitat.

We also saw four species of Kingfishers and dozens of individual birds in one small area, as well as three three-toed sloths up close and personal! This truly was a highlight of our trip.

One afternoon we took a walk into the rainforest and visited a Yagui Indian village and had an opportunity to trade t-shirts and hats for blow guns and beads — truly a unique experience!

We hiked to our next lodge, code-named ACEER, for Amazon Center for Environmental Education and Research. (By the way, the guides carried all of our gear for us, all we had to do was to hike and enjoy the wilderness!) This lodge is dedicated to study of the rainforest canopy. It is here that they have built one of the three Canopy Walkway Systems in the world, truly an engineering feat! It is a quarter-mile-long, multi-level system of aerial platforms and pathways designed to be ecologically sensitive and allowing for researchers and ecotourists to interact with the living rainforest.

We climbed into tree forts connected by rope walkways that are up to 120 feet above the forest floor. As we traversed the walkway, climbing ever higher, the secret life of the canopy began to reveal itself. Thousands of species of epiphytes crowded the branches, and flowers of every shape and color provided a show rarely seen by the human eye. The bold primary colors were almost too much for the senses to absorb.

Several species of birds, insects, Poison Arrow Frogs, arboreal mammals and flowering plants were easily observed and studied from the ACEER Canopy Walkway, promising an almost endless source of new information about this environment.

It was with great regret that we ended our trip, but we agreed that we would go back soon to study and visit. Upon our return to Pennsylvania, I quickly put together a course in neotropical biology that will be offered this fall for undergraduates and graduate students. Students will study at BU during the fall semester, and then we will travel to Peru on January 7, 1996 to experience the Amazon River and rainforest in person.

Seven teams make tourney appearances

Men's basketball, women's swimming, wrestling, baseball, softball, and men's teams all reached the national playoffs this year, concluding successful seasons and capping another very solid year for Bloomsburg athletics.

Those results, along with the field hockey unit's national runner-up finish in the fall, mean that seven Husky squads made national tournament appearances and helped the athletic program build an enviable .658 winning percentage with a 208-107-5 record for the recently completed 1994-1995 academic year.

The Husky teams that ended their seasons in the latter half of the year finished among the conference's top four teams in seven of the 11 sports. The men's basketball team finished second in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference Eastern Division and dropped a pair of tough games in the conference semifinals and NCAA first round. The Huskies finished 18-9.

An eighth place showing by the women's swimming team in the national meet followed a runner-up finish in the PSAC tournament.

The women's basketball team missed the conference playoffs and finished 14-11, while the wrestling team struggled in dual matches but placed fourth in the PSAC tourney and placed three wrestlers in the NCAAs.

The spring saw four teams have fine seasons led by the softball team, which finished as the national runner-up after winning its 13th PSAC title in the last 14 years. Baseball enjoyed its best season ever as the Huskies finished second in the PSAC and made their first-ever NCAA tournament appearance winning the North Atlantic Regional and playing in the Division II World Series. They finished with a .37-21 mark.

Men's tennis had a 12-9 dual match record against some of the East's top Division I and II teams and won its ninth straight PSAC title. The Huskies were one of only 16 teams invited to the national tournament. Women's lacrosse tied a team record for wins in a season with a 10-4 and senior Tina Wikoski won the PSAC 5,000-meter race and finished ninth in the 10,000-meter race at the national event to cap the track and field seasons.
