On-Campus Living

Students met with a few obstacles as they made their way from home into the world of dorm life. First, came the immediate horror of a roommate or, heaven forbid, two. Then came the issue of space. How could they possibly fit all of the stereos, chests, shelves, and footballs on just one side of the room? Third, just what they all needed, an R.A., . . . Big Brother come to life.

Finally coming to grips with the first few problems, the new dorm residents begin to feel proud when someone decides to use the bathroom. But where is it? One hundred yards down the hall of course!

Such was the great transitional entry to dorm life.

After students recovered from the first day's atrocities, they came to realize that dorm life wasn't quite so bad as it seemed.

Those who had previously been the only child instantly adopted "winglets" for brothers and sisters, and living up to true sibling performance, these new family extensions did not hesitate to beg borrow or steal edibles or clothing. Neither did they resist impulses to burst into a room and to dive tackle an adopted brother or sister.

Discoveries of new freedoms were made when the students realized that Mom and Dad wouldn't be there to yell when they came in late. However, Mom and Dad also were not there to let them in without their ID or to provide nursing services for their newfound diseases which involved frequent late night visits to the porcelain god.

As they adjusted to their new freedoms, students began to want yet more liberties. Soon they began to talk of off campus life.

Off-Campus Living

Students finally conquered dorm living. Then they tested their skills at money and banking, landlord etiquette, and human sexuality at their first apartments. Living off campus was definitely a learning experience!

For some students, a place of their own meant having parties, overnight guests anytime, and experimental cooking. But memories will also remain of walking through the snow up college hill, bundling up for record breaking cold days, and getting soaked in the rain. Those were the days!

The Gizmo

by William C. Voros

Twas a meal at the Commons
That's the place where I get led
I had just gotten my milk
And was now ready for some bread

I had walked back to the dinner lines and to my despair
I had walked back for nothing
Because no bread would be there

"It's out in that Gizmo" screamed a lady from the back
"Just go through that door
And it's by the soda rack"

And there it was
All shiny and bright
With five loaves of bread
Right there in plain sight

"But how does it work?"
I questioned with doubt
"I see the bread in there,
But how does it come out?"

I studied the gizmo
And gave it much thought
And then I pulled the lever
But something seemed to be caught

"This can't be right"
I said sort of loud
For now I was part
Of a rather large crowd

With anger and force
I tried the other lever
But to my surprise
The gizmo was too clever

I then walked back
To my now cold meal
With no bread in hand
How bad I did feel

The Gizmo had beaten me
Oh wouldn't it be fine
If the bread would be back
At the end of the dinner line?

Kehr Union

Sitting at a table, munching down someone else's fries, and discussing the day's current events is one of the most frequent pastimes of students in the Kehr Union building.

Not only is the Union a breeding ground for long discussions, but it is also equipped with a game room, T.V. lounges, bowling alleys, study lounges, and conference rooms for student use. The building contains the offices of many campus organizations as well as the Information Desk which is constantly surrounded by students wanting to sign up for racquetball, sign out a magazine, or ask their very important question.

The central location on Bloomsburg's campus provides easy access to the building which houses many of the University's extra-curricular activity.

Andruss Library

Is it for studying or socializing? The continuous debate on the purpose of the Andruss library provokes controversy among B.U. students.

Whether beginning a 30-40 page research paper that was assigned three months ago and is due tomorrow, or meeting your buddies upstairs "near the newspapers" to discuss your party plans, the library is the right place to be.

Books, periodicals and journals fill the building's shelves, while studious, frustrated, or tired students fill the chairs.

Although the library is a building some students try to avoid, it is perhaps the one building that represents the university best as an institution that provides an opportunity for knowledge and companionship to all who enter.

University Store

Whether a student needs a quick related birthday card for Mom, a cheap gift something to read or some good junk food, the University Store can be of service.

The start of every semester finds the store buzzing with students trying to get all of their books and supplies. Long lines of students with their arms overloaded form behind the cashiers. But within a few days the aisles clear and the store is back to a quiet place to check out the new B.U. clothing or spend your last few dimes.

The Fitzwilliam String Quartet

with

Barry Hannigan

Pianist

A visit from the Fitzwilliam String Quartet on Sept. 19 began the Community Arts Council's 1984-85 artist series.

Performing in Carver Hall, the English group spanned 200 years of music and performed pieces of Haydn, Brahms, and Mozart. Concert pianist and composer Barry Hannigan was featured in the program.

Masterplayers

World famous Swiss conductor, Richard Schumacher, directed the Masterplayers performance in Carver Hall on Oct. 9.

The Masterplayers are an orchestra of 18, about the size of a small symphony. Leading solo and chamber music players from all over Europe comprise the group. From their tours throughout Europe and North America, the musicians have experienced great critical acclaim.

National Theatre of the Deaf ...

Emmy and two time Tony award winner, Colleen Dewhurst, directed National Theatre of the Deaf's production of "All the Way Home", in Haas Auditorium on Jan. 30

Dewhurst won a Tony for her starring role in the original Broadway production of "All the Way Home" in 1961, and has adapted that experience to her directing role. She came into the position feeling challenged to see the characteristics of the NTD become a stronger force in the American Theatre.

The play the group presented combined sign language with the spoken word so not only could the audience hear the dialogue, but they could also see it. In her adaptation of the play to NTD's style, Dewhurst changed the family from hearing to deaf. Each member of the family had a different level of hearing impairment. For actors in the deaf roles, Dewhurst explains, "It is not a matter of deaf or hearing impaired actors playing rolls usually played by hearing actors, but of experienced talented actors playing characters who are deaf or hearing impaired."

Based on James Agee's novel "A Death in the Family" the play was experienced by the audience mostly through the eyes of a shy six-year-old boy. Through him the play explored the joys and sorrows of a family's love and that family's efforts to cope with the death of a member.

Homecoming 1984 "A Thriller of a Weekend"

B.U. provided students and the community with "A Thriller of a Weekend" in its 1984 homecoming celebration. This year's theme arose from the popularity of Michael Jackson's "Thriller" video and the Halloween season.

A pep rally was the first big event of the weekend. Fireworks in Waller parking lot and a bonfire burning of a Kutztown mascot highlighted the evening.

Saturday morning the Husky Mascot sculpture was dedicated on Carver Lawn. Later, ten floats and eight bands marched past the bronze statue in the homecoming parade.

B.U. won its homecoming game against Kutztown (14-3). At the game's halftime, winners of decorating competitions and the sweetheart contest were announced. Also, Dick Lloyd, of the class of 1962, was inducted into the B.U. Athletic Hall of Fame.

Finishing off the weekend was the dedication of the James H. McCormic Center for Human Services and the Homecoming Pops concert, featuring the Concert Choir, Husky Singers, and Women's Choral Ensemble.

Parents' Weekend 1984

After careful planning by the Parent's Weekend committee and frantic cleaning efforts of B.U. students, the University's 14th annual event began on Friday, Oct. 6.

Parents had the options of sitting in on their son or daughter's classes on Friday afternoon, and that night they had the opportunity to view the Bloomsburg Players production of "The Ice Wolf".

Servomation offered an Ox Roast luncheon in Nelson fieldhouse before the B.U. vs. Mansfield football game at Redman Stadium, on Saturday. Halftime activities included selection of the "B.U. Mom and Dad of the Day".

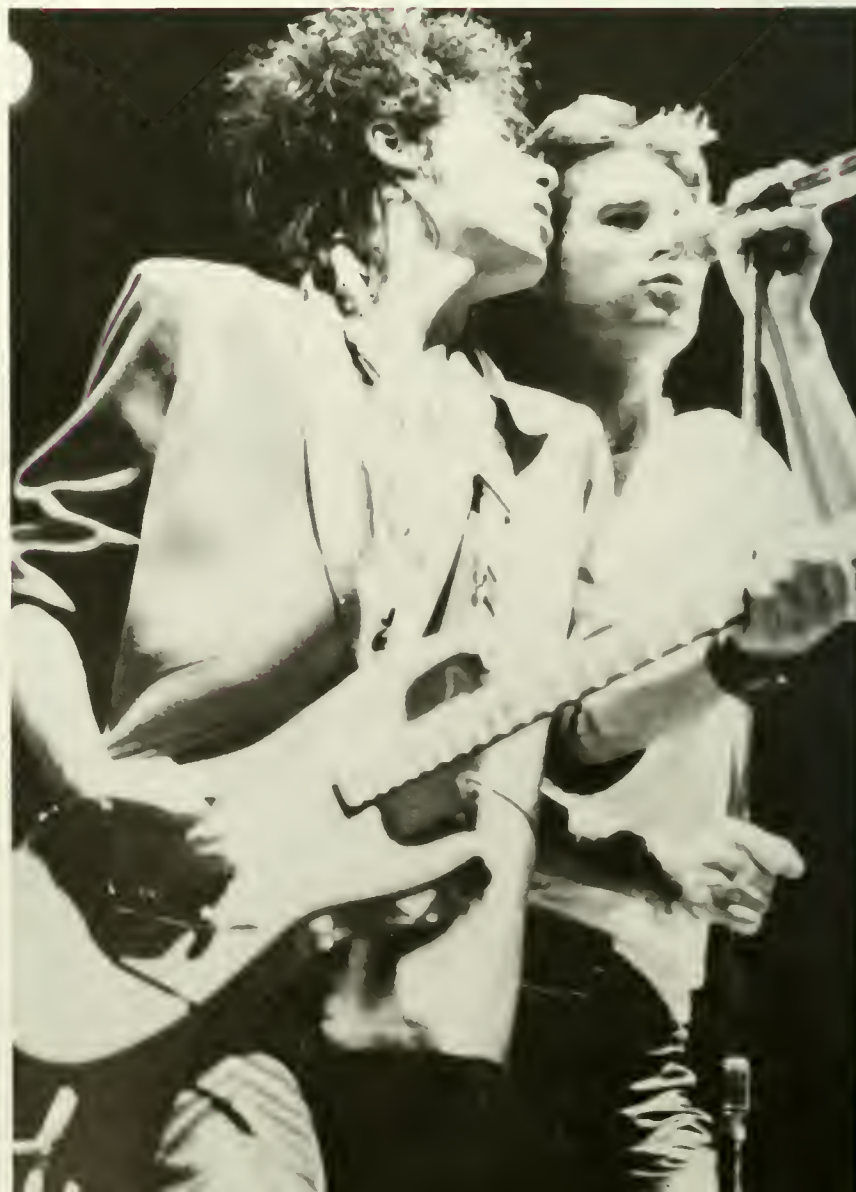

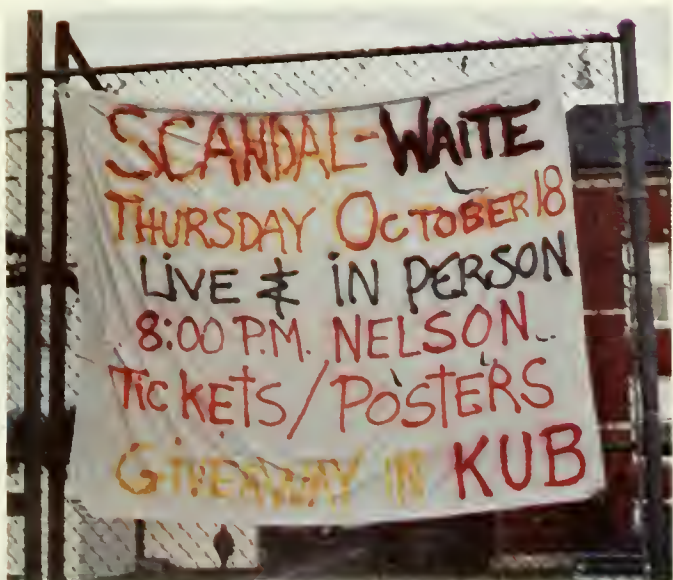

Along with two other performances of "The Ice Wolf" on Sat. and Sun., the film "Tootsie" was shown each day. The weekend closed with a Student Showcase in Carver Auditorium by student performing art groups on campus.

Bloomsburg Fair 1984

Just in time to cure the end-of-the-summer blues the 1984 Bloomsburg Fair gave thousands a week of good times in the fall air.

The seven day event brought together school and farm exhibits, delicious food rides, and big name entertainment.

The famous performers at this year's fair included:

- A Country Music Spectacular with Tammy Wynette, the Whites, Steve Warner, and Razy Bailey
- Conway Twitty
- The Statler Brothers
- The Beach Boys
- The Charlie Daniels Band
- Chicago
- Rich Little and Atlanta

Throughout the event many enjoyed the free horse races, pulling contests, and shows. Other major afternoon attractions included a rodeo, demolition derby, and midget auto races.

Image: Music in Signs

Creativity and expression through interpretation of music in each performance are the goals of B.U.'s signing group, Image. The performers use sign language as an added dimension to their choreographed musical numbers.

The organization has spent the past year performing for hearing and hearing impaired audiences both on and off campus. A major performance for the group this year was at the Annual State Convention of the Pennsylvania Speech and Hearing Impaired where they provided the only outside entertainment for the evening.

BLOOMSBURG UNIVERSITY

Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania 17815

Office of the President

(717) 389-4526
PANET - 472-4526

Dear Class of 1985:

Congratulations! The trustees, faculty, and staff join me in extending our best wishes to you as you commence from Bloomsburg University. It has been our pleasure to know and work with you during your years at Bloomsburg.

Bloomsburg University has provided you a number of opportunities to learn and grow through active participation in many academic and extracurricular programs. We know you will continue to build on the foundation of knowledge gained at Bloomsburg and will contribute in a positive manner to the quality of life in the communities in which you choose to live.

As graduates you join the more than 28,000 members of the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association. Currently, there are graduates in every state, and many east coast regions have active chapters of Bloomsburg alumni. An active relationship with the Alumni Association will help you maintain contacts with friends and will keep you abreast of university events.

We hope each of you will be an ambassador for Bloomsburg University and share with others the positive experience you enjoyed here. We also ask you to keep in touch and to tell us of your progress. Your comments about and support of the university are important in contributing to the quality of educational environment for which Bloomsburg is known.

On behalf of the "Bloomsburg University Family", please accept our warmest wishes as you go forward to meet new challenges.

Sincerely,

High School Drop-outs

by
Adrienne Leinwand

By the middle of Robert Parrish's junior year in high school, he had missed 55 days of school, yet, as he put it, "was as healthy as a horse." By the middle of Jesse Bryan's senior year, he had been captain of the football and basketball teams, president of the choir and dramatics club, and served as an assistant in his physics and history classes. Yet, both these men dropped out of high school and joined the Navy. They now hold doctoral degrees and administrative positions at Bloomsburg University. Parrish is vice president for administration and treasurer of the university, while Bryan is director of Bloomsburg University's Center for Academic Development.

Despite his involvement in school activities, Bryan found his classes boring. "I thought high school was beneath me; I had many other things to do, and I didn't want to waste a whole lot of time doing the menial things other people were doing. High school wasn't useful or challenging for me." Consequently, in 1956, Bryan left his home in Lumberton, NC, to become one of the Navy's first black fire control technicians.

Traditionally, blacks were appointed to positions as cooks and stewards in the Navy. However, because Bryan (although a high school dropout) made the highest score on the Navy's achievement exam, he was named education petty officer . . . "When they called my name, everybody looked at me as though either I had made a mistake by standing up, or the Navy had made a mistake on the scores. It was kind of funny," Bryan said.

Parrish was also bored with high school. "I was not interested in what we consider the bread and butter courses like algebra and geometry. I was sort of a punk and had a gang." Two members of that gang, Sonny and Charlie, persuaded him to join the Navy. At that time, the furthest Parrish had been from his home in Bellaire, OH, was the 60 miles it took to get to the botanical gardens in Pittsburgh. The lure of cruising around the world on a destroyer made him badger his parents until they "threw up their hands in defeat. My mother almost had a heart attack," he recalls.

Unfortunately Parrish did well on the exam administered to him on his first day at boot camp, that he was sent inland to attend school. So, he waved goodbye to Sonny and Charlie, who were put out to sea. Parrish did get his opportunity to see the world, however, cruising for three years on the aircraft carrier the Wasp. "I had a good time," says Parrish. "Every time we went out to sea, it was a thrill when the wind would come across the deck."

After completing his years of military service, Dr. Parrish returned to Bellaire and went to work with the treasurer of Interstate Truck Service. While walking down the street one day, he ran across a former high school chemistry teacher who was then the dean of a branch campus of Ohio University. The dean urged him to take some courses, but not until Parrish learned that the GI bill would pay his tuition did he enroll in an accounting course. He remembers returning to school "with a lot of trepidation." However, after successfully completing his first course, he took more. In addition to working eight hours a day, he continued his schooling by taking evening courses — ranging from 18 to 21 hours per semester.

The branch campus of Ohio University only offered a two-year program. In order to pursue his education further, Parrish had to attend the main campus in Athens. "It's funny now when I look at all the soul searching I was doing as to whether or not to leave that sure position — and I think I was making about $275 a month — to go off and do this abstract thing of going to school," says Parrish. At this point, however, he believed he had invested too much time in his education to quit again.

There would still not be smooth sailing ahead for Parrish. During his junior year, it was discovered Parrish had never officially applied to the university nor had he received a high school diploma. The General Educational Development certificate he earned in the Navy was not sufficient, so at the age of 24, he returned to high school to take the required civics class to earn his diploma. Parrish was 27 when he received his Bachelor of Science degree in commerce. His first position in higher education was at Florida Atlantic University as comptroller and budget officer. He earned his master's and doctoral degrees at FAU as well.

Bryan also had a mentor who encouraged him to continue his education. Dr. Winston Coleman, dean of the College at Winston-Salem University in Charlotte, NC, was the father of one of Bryan's friends. He followed Bryan into a post hall one day, suggested he do something better with his time, and convinced Bryan to attend college. Similar to Parrish's situation, Bryan's high school would not give him a diploma despite having completed the United States Armed Forces Institute. So, he entered college on a probationary basis.

Philosophy was the only course Bryan found challenging and he recalls his frustration at only managing to earn a grade of "B." Other students, whose work, according to Bryan, was not particularly outstanding, earned "A's." "I asked the professor 'Why,'" commented Bryan and he said "they did all they could do; you have more to do."

Despite the years Dr. Bryan has devoted to the counseling and education of disadvantaged youth, he came very close to becoming a lawyer. In fact, says Bryan "I was on my way to law school — on the bus. I looked out of the window as we rode by a school, and kids were out in the schoolyard playing and it was only nine o'clock in the morning. I said, 'That's a shame and somebody ought to change that.' And I rode about 10 miles and said, 'If somebody changes that, it probably will be me. So I got off the bus at the next station.'

Instead of entering law school Bryan attended the University of Georgia where he received his certificate in counseling disadvantaged youth. He continued his study of counseling and guidance and came to BU as the Director of the Equal Opportunity Program, the predecessor of the CAD program. When invited to apply for the BU position, his response? "Where the hell is Bloomsburg?!" But, regarding his enjoyment of and dedication to his job at the university he says, "I see myself doing many of the things that were done for me. I provide the atmosphere for education to occur. It's a take-off on what Dr. Coleman did for me." Bryan earned his Ph.D. in 1977 from the University of Toledo.

Parrish passes dropping out of school off as "the thing to do at the time." But, not all of those who did it were willing to deal with the uncertainties of re-entry or make the effort and commitment to overcome the, sometimes endless, obstacles. Dr. Bryan and Parrish persevered.

Director Earns Doctorate by Pamela Shupp

Any student who's been involved in an organization at Bloomsburg knows his name; whether you're in CGA, Delta Pi, Women's Coalition, or the Obiter. His familiar, friendly face is always willing to help.

John J. Trathen, director of student activities and the Kehr Union, attempts to keep abreast of what's going on in the Union. Trathen proved that he has kept abreast in what's going on in the area of higher education. In August 1984, Trathen earned his D.Ed. in higher education at Penn State. After five years, which included a sabbatical, Trathen realized his ambition.

"It kept me current with literature and what's happening throughout higher education circles," Trathen says.

Trathen came to BU in the late 60's. At that time, he held a position at Bloomsburg Bank — Columbia Trust, and was working towards a degree in Business Education at Bloomsburg. He received his B.S. in 1968 and was promptly offered the position of Comptroller of Community Activities. Trathen continued in the comptroller position for four years. "I thought that I'd done everything I could in that area," Trathen says. So, when the job of Assistant Director of Student Activities and the Kehr Union became available in 1972, Trathen welcomed the opportunity. Taking the position would allow involvement with student activities in addition to the financial aspect. Trathen's new position meant that he could make suggestions on the layout of the KUB, constructed in 1973. An added benefit of the position was that it gave Trathen faculty status and also that of a state employee.

Trathen is advisor to various organizations including the Commuter Association, the Awards Committee, and the Committee on Student Organizations. He is not only active on college committees, but in community service as well. United Way, Bloomsburg Area Red Cross, and the Catawissa United Methodist Church are a few roles that Trathen plays in his community.

Trathen is not sure of his future role in the institution, but he now has the background credentials he needs. He hopes to see an expansion of management — intern experiences for students in KUB. He has high praises for the student managers of KUB, and would like to see further expansion in this area, with students receiving credit for managerial experience. "It would give the students a good grasp of what it's all about and in turn, would free KUB staff to do other things," he says.

Sean Mullen, vice president, CGA, says, "Dr. Trathen always has the time or is willing to make it." BU can be grateful for one man's dedicated service.

Devoted Educator

She thought she was going nuts! One night, while walking through the woods by herself, she noticed lights flickering around her. She was scared to death! She rushed back to the tent and told one of her friends what happened. It turned out she wasn't crazy — the flickering lights were fireflies!

Dr. Elise M. Brenner, assistant professor of anthropology, had been raised in urbanized Boston with little exposure to wild-life.

Since then, Brenner has participated in archaeological digs in the Middle East, England, Pennsylvania, and New England, as well as other places — and loves the outdoors.

Brenner identifies herself as an activist, anthropologist, educator, and archaeologist. She realized she wanted to study archaeology after writing a report on ancient Rome in fourth grade. She grew up during the Vietnam War, being exposed to much social/political activism. She said that her interest in anthropology probably stems from the fact that her parents, both psychologists, "exposed me to a lot of human variability."

Brenner earned her B.A. in anthropology from Boston University in 1977, graduating Magna Cum Laude. She also received, in 1977, a Bachelor's in Hebrew Letters from Hebrew College, Brookline, Mass., where she was valedictorian. She received her M.A. and Ph.D. in anthropology from the University of Massachusetts.

While earning her degrees, Brenner held some professional positions: graduate research assistant, graduate teaching assistant, instructor for the Division of Continuing Education at the University of Massachusetts, and a consultant for the Envirosphere Co. in New York. She did not like her job at Envirosphere because when one must follow guidelines set by the federal government, it is not very creative. She enjoys teaching much more.

Within one year of receiving her doctorate, Brenner came to Bloomsburg. From Boston to Bloomsburg required an adjustment in lifestyle, yet Dr. Brenner said she had no problem because of her six years in Amherst, Mass. That "was very similar to Bloomsburg." Although she was offered other jobs, she found Bloomsburg to be what she wanted; a relatively small state university with a good student-teacher ratio.

Brenner was amazed at the work load students at BU carry. She noted their diligence and respectfulness, although she would like students to question and challenge her more. Even though there are just 18 anthropology majors, Brenner is pleased by their enthusiasm about the field.

In addition, Brenner enjoys the informed exchange of ideas with her two colleagues, Robert Reeder and Dr. David Minderhout. "I admire them both. They give me so much feedback on my ideas," she explained.

Brenner is planning many projects for Bloomsburg, including a six credit course of intensive archaeology field study, 10 weeks, during the summer of 1986. She is also preparing for an archaeology lab to be built in Old Science Hall.

Two ideas she plans for the future are in her Ph.D. dissertation. One is a theoretical model on the Late Woodland period in the Northeast, and how native American political organization can be inferred from the archaeological record. The other idea will attempt to show how changes in burial practices reflect changes in political organization, especially during the Late Woodland to the contact period.

Brenner also has some ideas that she hopes will eventually result in publication. "Archaeology, because of the long time period it covers, helps pinpoint the processes that lead to our present conditions of inequality, exploitation, environmental degradation, and disease," she said.

To her, teaching anthropology and archaeology involves more than just studying physical and cultural development or examining the remains of prehistoric societies. "Anthropology teaches people to think critically about the world, and see ways to change social conditions and end suffering," she said.

Dr. Brenner plans to remain in Bloomsburg, but would like to study burial works of prehistoric native Americans in the Midwest, as well as conduct other studies abroad.

Even with all her private and professional work, Brenner finds time to enjoy bicycle riding, hiking, and the theatre.

History Unknown

by Kerry Scott Boll

Sheriff James Martin organized a "posse" to stop the marching strikers. Understand, the group that made up the "posse" was middle class. Martin told the marchers to stop, but they did not. Shooting began. The strikers started running. Shot with their backs to the "posse" — 19 died and 38 were wounded.

A story well told by George A. Turner, chair of the history department and coordinator of Elderhostel program, Bloomsburg University. This is not a story, though; it is history that has never been covered in Pennsylvania history textbooks.

Turner earned his Bachelor of Science in Education at the Eastern Illinois University, majoring in social studies. He then taught at Wiley High School, Terre Haute, Indiana, and Fort Collins High School, Fort Collins, Colorado. Turner earned his Master in American History at the Eastern Illinois University and taught at Florissant Valley Community College, Florissant, Missouri.

"Teaching high school and community college was not rewarding for me," Turner says. He was appointed associate professor of history at Bloomsburg, August, 1965.

Turner says, "I liked the location and proximity from New York, Philadelphia, and New Jersey of Bloomsburg. The idea of teaching at a four year institution was attractive to me."

He studied The Lattimer Massacre, one of the worst tragedies in American labor in history. Turner examined the conditions of the 1897 coal fields at Lattimer and why the massacre occurred. He wrote articles for Pennsylvania Heritage, Slovakia, and the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission; 1977.

"I feel The Lattimer Massacre was a case of grande omission," Turner says. "I cannot understand why it is not covered in any Pennsylvania textbooks."

In 1972, Turner was teaching a course, Arab/Israeli Conflict and American Policy, and got interested in Israel. He went on a three week study session and visited the Israeli Parliament, newspaper editors, the Egyptian Ambassador to Israel, Israeli families, and an Arab village.

"I went to Israel when the Israelis invaded Lebanon," Turner says. "I learned the separateness between the Jewish and Arab societies. There was not integrated community so there was an over-riding concern for personal security."

Dr. Daniel Pantaleo, dean, college of graduate studies and extended programs, Bloomsburg, created an Elderhostel program for the university. Elderhostel is a network of colleges/universities/independent schools/folk schools and other education institutions in the U.S., Canada, Great Britain, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, and Norway, which offer a special low-cost, one week residential academic program for older adults (60 years plus).

"Pantaleo asked me to teach a one week course in Arab/Israeli Conflict," Turner says. "I had preconceived ideas that the adults would be a very passive and bored group. I found the opposite to be true. He adds, "The Elderhostel participants are lively, inquisitive, knowledgeable, and awake."

Turner says that it was a rich experience teaching them because the adults wanted to learn. "You could even learn from them because sometimes what you teach has been experienced by these people," Turner says.

The following year, Turner became coordinator of Elderhostel at Bloomsburg and each year it has expanded. Lillian Kimmenger, one participant from August, 1984, says "George Turner's inexhaustible good humor, his willingness to listen to any complaints and fix them helped things to go smoothly. He made the week very special to me."

Turner says, "I believe in a good strong community. I was always interested in the United Way because I believe they enhance the quality of life in our communities."

In 1981, Turner became general chairman of the United Way, Bloomsburg and that year the amount of giving increased by 26 percent. He was then appointed president in 1982 and he has continued his support by being a member of the board.

"I have seen this institution move from a single to a multi-purpose institution," Turner says. "Expanded from the teaching school it used to be, I have seen the liberal arts, business, and professional areas of the university grow. I am proud to have been a part of the development of Bloomsburg University."

Actress to Director

by
Kerry Scott Boll

When she was 10, she read the Moss Hart biography, Act One. It drew a picture of the excitement of theatre and the closeness involved. When she was finished reading the last page, she set the book down and made a decision. Theatre was going to be her life.

Marci Woodruff, assistant professor of theatre at Bloomsburg University, was a member of the forensics team in high school. Her junior year, she placed first on the national level with a dramatic interpretation. In the summer of her sophomore and junior years, Woodruff attended the Midwestern Music and Art Institute at the University of Kansas where she was introduced to her first classes in theatre.

"Theatre is like Leukemia," Woodruff stated. "Once it is in your blood, you cannot get rid of it."

Woodruff started acting at the University of Kansas. She did not complete her degree in four consecutive years though; as a junior, Woodruff studied theatre in Vienna, Austria, at the Institute of European Studies.

"The highlight in my acting career was when I played Phoebe opposite to Marsha Mason as Rosalyn in As You Like It," Woodruff says.

She then took a year off to go to the West Coast to act professionally. Woodruff was a member of the American Conservatory Theatre (ACT) in San Francisco. Because of her involvement with ACT, she was able to get an agent with Grime Agency, a well known agency for actors at that time.

She appeared as Olivia's best friend's daughter on The Waltons, a runaway getting involved in a stolen car in The Streets of San Francisco, and a runaway getting involved in prostitution in Police Woman. Woodruff also appeared on several national commercials.

"Acting was always painful for me," Woodruff says. "But it was something I had to do." Woodruff explains that when she acts, she "reaches deep down into herself" and uses everything she can. She uses past experiences to help her set a mood for and to create a character.

Ralph Waite, who portrays the father on The Waltons, got to know Woodruff after being on the show and suggested she audition for some plays at his Los Angeles theatre.

Woodruff played Lizzy in The Rainmaker, Stella in A Streetcar Named Desire, Miss Hardcastle in She Stoops to Conquer, and Nina in The Seagull; all at Waite's theatre. But Waite saw a different side.

"Waite called me once because one of his directors was not available to direct his next play, Zoo Story," Woodruff said. "I said that I'd never directed before except scenes for class and didn't know if I could do it. But he told me he would help me if I needed it. Three days before the show opened, a blinding light hit me right between the eyes. I realized that this feels good. I was very comfortable with directing."

Woodruff completed her B.A. in theatre at Western Kentucky University. She then went to Florida State University, where Moses Goldberg was teaching. At that time, Goldberg's text on Child Drama was highly respected in the field. Woodruff studied one summer with Goldberg but he left to work in professional theatre. She received a masters in theatre and psychology and also initiated doctoral work in theatre at Florida State.

Currently the secretary of the Children's Theatre Association (CTA) Woodruff completed a trip to the Soviet Union for ten days where an international children's theatre conference was held. Russian theatre is one of Woodruff's teaching specialties and she's published several articles in that area.

"I was full of tears all the time because I was astounded that I was there," Woodruff said.

She first traveled to Leningrad where she did some sightseeing on her own. Woodruff then went to Moscow for six days to be a delegate at the ASSITEJ conference representing children's theatre from all over the world.

"The Russians are intrigued with anything that's American," Woodruff says. "The government portrays the Americans, through the media, as good-loving, peace-loving people. Reagan however is portrayed as a monster."

Woodruff was invited to study with Korogodosky artistic director of the Leningrad Children's Theatre in two or three years. She is learning the Russian language to prepare for this trip.

"Directing is the love of my life," Woodruff says. "I always get that same feeling on the opening nights of all my shows, that I first got in Waite's theatre in Los Angeles."

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Review

Co-captain Justine Landis became the all time winningest tennis player in the history of the school with her 60th win at the Trenton Invitational this year. Landis gained a bid last year to the NCAA Division II tournament. She was the number one PSAC singles champion for the second year in a row. The senior compiled a 63-15 overall record.

Landis and junior co-captain Kathy Masch gained the semifinals in doubles competition only to drop their first loss of the season. They ended with a 10-1 record.

Freshman Cortlee Gerhart, who played at the number three slot this season developed over the year and turned into a real asset for the team.

A good phrase to describe 1984-85's edition of the Women's basketball team would be "injury prone."

The Huskies lost their leading scorer and top rebounder, Jean Millen, early in the season to a knee injury. They subsequently lost five people to bring their numbers down to six healthy players.

Led by senior co-captains Sarah Hackforth and Jeanne Radcliff who finished 7th and 3rd respectively on the all-time scoring list, the Huskies compiled a 6-17 overall record.

Sophomore Linda King was the team's top scorer finishing the year with 264 points while Hackforth scored 263. Radcliff led the team in rebounds averaging 10.2 a game.

The Huskies finest showing of the season was the capturing of the Immaculata tournament in December. They downed Randolph Macon 71-62 in the preliminary game and beat California 63-62 for the championship.

Third year head coach, George Landis, lead the 1984 Husky football team to their first appearance ever in the "State Game" at Hershey.

Will anyone forget Bloomsburg's own "Hail Mary" pass from Jay Dedeo to Curtis Still in the last five seconds of the West Chester game to give the Huskies the Pennsylvania Conference Eastern Division title. Although the Huskies lost to California for the state title it was a pleasure for those who have watched a 0-10 team become the power of the Eastern Conference in 3 years.

Success came to individuals on the team as well. Junior Frank Sheptock was chosen to the Associated Press' first team little All-American, junior Tony Woods received second team honors while senior Mike Jupina was an honorable mention. Woods is BU's leading all-time interceptor with 16. All three were picked for the PSAC all-star first team.

Offensively the Huskies were led by Jeff Flickner and Calvin Robinson with Mike Glovas and Jay Dedeo directing the scoring drives.

The 1984 Field Hockey season was the best ever in the history of the sport at BU.

Under the direction of 7 year head coach Jan Hutchinson the Huskies finished with the school's first unbeaten record 19-0, won a second straight Pennsylvania Conference title and captured the NCAA Division III national championship.

The team recorded five shutouts in its first seven outings to begin a season that had been described as a rebuilding year for the defending NCAA Division II champions.

Division I Bucknell was the only team during the Huskies regular season to score more than one goal against the stingiest defense in the conference. BU finished regular season play beating eventual national tournament semifinalist Ithaca 3-1 and Lynchburg 1-0 a perennial top finisher.

The Huskies needed an overtime period in the opening round of the Pennsylvania Conference tournament to defeat Kutztown 1-0. Three second half goals helped carry BU over host Shippensburg to win the PC championship 3-1.

Millersville lost 2-0 in the national tournament opener to put the Huskies on the road to the national title. Salisbury State 3-1, Trenton State 2-1 fell as the Huskies continued their climb to the top. The show down was against undefeated Messiah with BU coming out on top 3-2 with and the Huskies third national title.

Rick Bonomo won the Sweet's National Championship at 118 while helping to lead coach Roger Sanders' Huskies to their best placing ever, finishing 10th in the nation at the NCAA Division I National Tournament in Oklahoma City, OK.

The Huskies sent four wrestlers to the national tourney with Rick Bonomo and Darrin Evans gaining births through their 1st place performances at the Eastern Wrestling League finals. John McFadden earned a wild card spot to make the mid-west trip with his third place finish at the EWL's.

Sanders hit the 200 mark in career wins this season as the Huskies wrestled 15-5 in dual meets. For the second year in a row and the fifth time in seven years, BU won the Pennsylvania State crown with the Bonomo brothers, Marty King, Dan Klingerman and Evans crowned champions.

Junior Glenn Noack scored the 100th point of his collegiate career this season as the Huskies marked their 19th straight winning season. Charlie Chronister, who has coached 14 of the 22 years, registered his 150th career win.

Noack and senior captain Wes Wright led the team in scoring with Noack finishing the year with 1096 points placing him 9th in the all time scoring list. Wright just broke into the top 20 of his final game of the season at number 20 with 762 career points.

Noack led the Pennsylvania Conference in free throw shooting percentage as did the team as a whole. The junior shot 88% from the free throw line.

The Huskies finished the season with a 15-12 record. It was the first time in four years BU had not appeared in post season play. Last year's disappointing loss to Mansfield in the championship game at Hershey looked like the Huskies would be contenders again this year since Chronister lost just one senior, Barry Francisco, from the squad. Unfortunately the Huskies were unable to find anyone to fill the void he left behind.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Review

The women's swim team had a superb season.

Senior Gwen Cressman set a record to make her the national champion in the 200 Individual Medley with a time of 2:08.56.

Five school records were broken at the NCAA Division II national championships held in Orlando, Fl.

Freshman Beth Roeder set the record in the 200 butterfly; the 800 freestyle relay team of Cressman, Kim Mader, Dana Grubb, and Kelly Knaus set the new mark at 7:49.270; junior Kelly Knaus 4:40.57 in the 400 Individual Medley; the 400 med-

The fine showing at the national meet placed the Huskies in the top ten in the nation.

The only bleak part of the Huskies' season was their inability to overcome nemesis Clarion at the PSAC championships. For the seventh year in a row they have lost to the Vulcans.

Early in the season Mary Gardner's team captured the Drexel Invitational out of a field of seven teams.

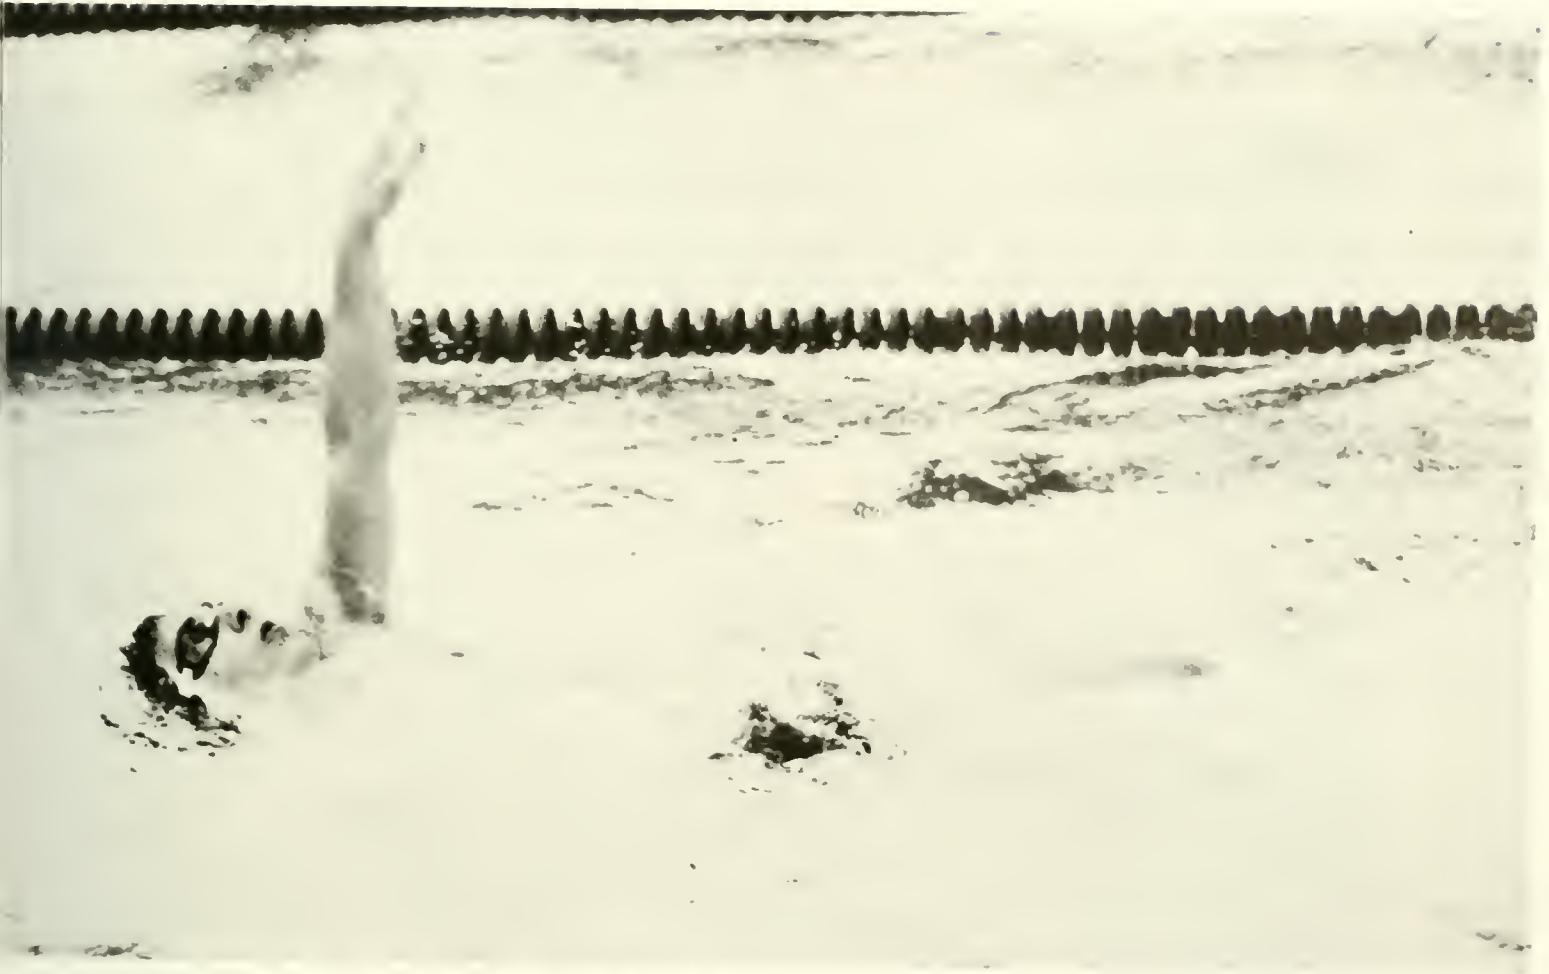

MEN'S SWIMMING

Review

The men's swim team finished third at the BU invitational out of a field of six teams. Coach Eli McLaughlin's swimmers compiled a 4-8 record. Led by senior captain Rick Fenton, their only wins were against Kings, Susquehanna, Hartwick and Lycoming. The team was comprised of freshmen with Jerry Shantillo and Rick Sheldon playing major roles in team efforts.

Review

The men's tennis team finished second at the PSAC tournament this year. Without senior Rob Lario, who broke his foot late in the season and was unable to compete in the conference championship, the team lost by just one point. It was one of the closest tournaments in several years.

Junior Michael Penny won the number four singles title and Dean Doria took the singles title at the number six slot to help BU up near the top of the tourney standings.

The team finished the year with an overall record of 23-7.

This year's lacrosse team under head coach Sharon O'Keefe was unable to win a game this season.

Their 0-7 record did not, however, reflect progress made by captains Denise Yergey and Joy Glassmeyer. They helped to mold players, who had never seen a lacrosse game in their lives, into a team with a great amount of potential for next year.

Review

Considering this year was predicted to be a rebuilding year for the softball team it can be said that another of coach Jan Hutchinson's teams has proved the critics wrong. For the third straight year they have captured the PSAC crown.

After beginning the season with a 10-1 record over spring break, the team returned north where they dropped a tough doubleheader to Penn State. Their only other loss of the season was a split doubleheader with Salisbury State.

The team remained undefeated in the conference, earning the top seed at the state conference tournament held at Ger Vaughn Park in Berwick.

Edinboro was BU's toughest opponent in the tourney, allowing them just one run for the 1-0 score.

Shippensburg fell 3-0 and the Huskies completed the sweep with a third straight shutout. The 2-0 win in the championship game over Lock Haven sealed an automatic bid to the first round of nationals.

The team played well in regional action and should be strong next year with the return of two time all-American Karen Hertzler and the complete mound staff of: Susan Kocher, Chris Moyer and Jill Solinski. The return of injured Jean Millen will also be a plus.

The men's and women's track and field teams under the direction of coach Ron Puhl ended the season with records of 4-6 and 4-3 respectively. Puhl had returned to the helm after a ten year hiatus.

The men's team was led by senior Bill Lutzko and captain Tony Woods.

The women's team led by captain Lori Wagner was paced by such individual standouts as Linda Hershey and Marianne Fidishin. Triple jumper Cindy Graby had a fine showing along with team mates Fidishin and Hershey at the PSAC championships at East Stroudsburg.

BASEBALL

Review

John Babb has never had a losing season and this year was no exception. The baseball mentor in his first year as head coach took the team to a record of 14-11. Babb came to BU after coaching 25 years at Bloomsburg High School.

Throwing for the Huskies this year were Dean Adams and Brian Salsman. Co-captain Todd Remley was the top hitter this year with a .472 batting average. He also led the team in stolen bases and RBI's. The senior was also the team's top hitter. He was joined in the captaincy position by fellow team mate Don Forbes.

This year marked the first season since 1981 the baseball team had a winning record.

They finished just short of the Pennsylvania Conference championships. Next year they should be a dominant force.

New Statue

This year marked the addition of something new to the Bloomsburg campus. Many will see it poised on the lawn of Carver Hall.

This is the bronze husky mascot that stands 50 by 30 by 24 inches and is permanently allixed to a concrete base. The statue was sculpted by E. Richard Borham, who was chosen after submitting a bid for the project.

Plans for the statue started two years ago and were commissioned by CGA and the Alumni Association (classes of '84, '83, '81, '79-'77, '75-'73, '65).

The creator wanted the husky to be standing and ready for action. And so it is, standing on its hind legs with its right paw on a rock.

The statue was dedicated on Homecoming, October 27, 1984, and it symbolizes the competitive spirit of athletics and organizations of the university.

Developments

Bloomsburg is awaiting the arrival of three new faces to the campus. Those faces are not of human form, but are developments to the campus.

A new walkway is being built that will go across Lightstreet Road near the hospital parking lot, a new picnic area will be built shortly northeast of Montour Hall, and a new dormitory is under consideration that if built, would be placed by Nelson Fieldhouse.

The walkway is being constructed because of the danger to those students who park in the hospital parking lot and walk to classes. There have been many accidents reported and the administration believes the walkway would be a great help to students.

The new picnic area will begin construction soon. It will include twenty picnic tables and eight lights for night use. Four catch basins will also be built to drain the area. Curbing will be put around the edges. The entire facility is expected to cover about an acre of land.

The new dormitory is still under consideration and may be for a long time. The new dorm would be built like apartments, but those that live there would still have to obey dorm type rules. The purpose of the new dorm is to reduce the number of triples, allow married, and transfer students adequate housing.

Although the university is not sure if the new dormitory will be allowed on the campus, the walkway and picnic area will be a reality that the students may be able to enjoy and use soon.

Aid Cuts?

At noon on April 2, students rallied in front of Kehr Union to protest the financial aid cuts. The theme of the rally was "Send the Real Picture," the underlying message being that the insulting picture of students painted by U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett recently, needs to be corrected. It was Bennett who several weeks ago stated that the 25 percent cut in student aid would only cause "divestiture of stereos, cars, and three week at the beach vacations."

Local CAS Coordinator Pam Shupp, who organized the rally, called on students to "correct this gross misconception which Bennett has painted to the public and the U.S. Congress."

CAS is also rallying against the proposed tuition increase. CAS President Carolyn Constationo said that, "We already pay the second highest in the nation. With these cuts in mind, they should be talking about reducing tuition, not increasing it."

CAS is also against the raise in room and board fees at the university.

With cuts in aid and a higher tuition, many students will not be able to finish their education or they will have to take on extra jobs just to get by.

Accreditation

The nursing program at Bloomsburg University has been granted national accreditation for the next eight years by the National League of Nursing.

Since the program's inception in 1975, more than 400 students have earned a bachelor's degree in nursing. There are currently 25 faculty members and 320 students in the nursing program. Forty of those students are registered nurses who returned to school to earn their degrees.

Bloomsburg carries a 100 percent placement of its nursing graduates, and it offers outstanding clinical, experiential programs via affiliations with organizations such as the Bloomsburg and Berwick hospitals, the Geisinger Medical Center, the Danville State Hospital and a diversity of community agencies and institutions.

Bloomsburg was granted maximum accreditation by the 10-member NLN Board which shows the strength of the program.

New President

by Gary L. Wessner Jr.

Once July 15th arrived, Bloomsburg University was under the leadership of newly elected President Dr. Harry Ausprich. Prior to this position Ausprich was the Dean of Fine and Professional Arts at Kent State. The Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education officially announced its decision on March 19th, 1985.

"I am pleased and honored to recommend an educator and administrator of Dean Ausprich's caliber to the Board for appointment to the position of President of Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania," said Chancellor James McCormick.

Ausprich was the only one of the three finalists who came from outside the state system. The other two finalists were Dr. H. Erik Shaar, vice president for Academic Affairs at Shippensburg, and Dr. Larry W. Jones who was the Interim President at Bloomsburg.

"The entire administration and staff under Jones did a fine job," McCormick said. "It will be a healthy and strong environment for Mr. Ausprich to begin."

"I don't see any problems that need to be addressed in the immediate future," said Ausprich. "Bloomsburg University is well managed and had good academic planning." Ausprich wishes to increase relations with community leaders as well as work closely with the Alvina Krause Theatre in downtown Bloomsburg. He recognizes the importance of cultural events at BU and hopes that they can grow with such actions.

He has been the author of many articles which have appeared in such publications as Speech Teacher, Players Magazine, and Southern Speech Journal. These publications deal with communicating, which is Ausprich's speciality. He completed his Doctor of Communications and Speech degree at Michigan State University. He holds a Master of Science degree from Michigan State University. He holds a Master of Science degree in Theatre and Broadcasting from the University of Wisconsin and a Bachelor of Science degree in Communication and Education from the State University of New York at Buffalo.

According to Chancellor McCormick some of his other outstanding qualities include an excellent record of leadership ability and the great skill of working with people.

Ausprich and his wife Lorraine have been looking forward to their stay at Bloomsburg. "Our two daughters are a little reluctant going to a new school and finding new friends, but everything will work out if it hasn't already," said Mrs. Ausprich.

At Kent State he was responsible for establishing ten schools of discipline which include: Architecture and Environmental Design, Art, Family and Consumer Studies, Fashion Design and Merchandising, Journalism, Music, Speech, Pathology and Audiology, Technology, and Theatre.

Ausprich also served as Dean of the Blossom Festival School Program held annually near Kent. The location is the summer home of the Cleveland Orchestra, the Porthouse Summer Theatre and houses the Eels Art Gallery where students from across the country come to study the arts.

Chairman of the Bloomsburg University Council of Trustees, Mr. John Dorin states, "The Board's decision will make a good university better!"

Alumni House

Bloomsburg University Alumni Association purchased a spacious 55-year-old house near campus to house BU's Alumni Affairs office.

The association signed a sales agreement to buy the home and four acres on Lightstreet Road on April 11, 1985, according to Doug Hippenstiel, BU director of alumni affairs.

Purchase price was $110,000, said Hippenstiel, and "about one-third of that money was committed before the actual purchase agreement."

The association held a special fund drive this year to raise additional money. Some financial backing was provided by CGA in the amount of $25,000.

The home — on Lightstreet Road above the BU maintenance building — was owned by the estate of Harold P. and Dorothy J. Dillon.

Ralph Dillon, son of Harold and Dorothy Dillon, said, "It is the family's position that we're delighted to have it used for this purpose."

Dillon said the house was built between 1927 and 1930. His mother was a BU graduate and an active supporter of the association, he said.

With a "real premium for space on campus," the home will provide "office space and facilities for the university's alumni affairs program," Hippenstiel said.

Previously, alumni affairs offices were located in Carver Hall.

Hippenstiel emphasized that the alumni room in Carver "will still be the focus for at least some activities on alumni weekend and homecoming."

Tentative plans call for the first floor of the Dillon house to contain a reception area, kitchen, living room and dining room, plus one office. The second floor has space for three more offices.

"We see this as a very bold step for the association to take," Hippenstiel said.

"We don't anticipate that the purchase will curtail any other programs already in place," he added.

Mr. Kapil

Prakash C. Kapil, 53 professor of political science at Bloomsburg University, died January 26 in Geisinger Medical Center of a heart attack where he was taken after being transferred from the Berwick Hospital.

Dr. Kapil was a professor at Bloomsburg University since 1967 and served on many department and university committees.

Dr. Kapil graduated from Delhi University, India with honors and obtained a master degree in social sciences from the same institution.

He obtained a second masters degree from Penn State University, where he was a candidate for a doctoral degree in political science.

Before coming to this country he was a social worker with the Delhi government and a news correspondent for the English Daily in New Delhi.

Dr. John Retires

by Nancy Chapman

As a girl, she had piano lessons in Old Science Hall. Twenty-five years later, she joined the Bloomsburg State Teachers College faculty. By then, her piano room had become an office — her office. At the end of this current semester, Dr. Mary Lou John, department of foreign language chairperson, will leave the office to retire after teaching foreign languages at Bloomsburg University for 25½ years.

When Dr. John moved to Bloomsburg from Detroit in 1926, she was two years old. She attended kindergarten through her first four years of college in Bloomsburg. Her education began on the campus of Bloomsburg State Normal School. Her kindergarten and first grade classes met in Noetling Hall, which has since been torn down. Her second through sixth grade classes were held in the Benjamin Franklin Building. Dr. John attended Bloomsburg High School for seventh through twelfth grade.

Because of her ancestral ties, and because she liked Bloomsburg, she has always wanted to live here. "I've always wanted to remain in the area," says Dr. John. "My father and son are here, and so are my roots."

Dr. John's ancestry is French Huguenot. Her ancestors came to the U.S. in 1684 and to Columbia County in approximately 1830. About 1888, her grandmother graduated from Bloomsburg State Normal School. Dr. John's parents continued the tradition in 1912 when they graduated from the university. From 1912-1963, Dr. John's father, Dr. Howard F. Fenstermaker, taught French, Latin, Spanish and German at BU. He also taught history, math, music and botany.

"He was the entire language department until the university hired professors under him," added John. "Then he became the first department chairperson."

Even though Dr. John grew up around French, she hadn't studied the language until high school.

"I knew a few little phrases from home," she states. "Then in high school, I took languages and liked them. They seemed to be what I was best in."

Dr. John continued to study languages. In 1945, she received her B.S. in Education from the Bloomsburg State Teachers College and was certified to teach French, Spanish, English and social studies. She earned her master's in history from Bucknell University and 1978, a Ph.D. in French from Pennsylvania State University.

As a college student, Dr. John worked year round. She had a scholarship, but it only paid for her tuition and activities fee. She had to work for her spending money and to pay for her books. "In winter," says Dr. John, "I worked in the president's office typing and mimeographing. For two summers, I was a waitress in summer resorts."

Between her job and classes, Dr. John participated in college activities. She was CGA president, a member of the Dramatic Club, and sang soprano in the Women's Chorus. She was also a member of Alpha Psi Omega (national honorary society in Theatre) and Kappa Delta Pi (national honorary society in education).

Before Dr. John joined the BU language department, she taught Spanish at Central Columbia High School for two years. Since she came to BU in 1959, the department has expanded considerably.

"When I was here as a student," John noted, "there was one language professor — that was my father. When I joined the department, there were at least four or five."

As a BU professor, Dr. John achieved a Director of Cultural Affairs and Director of International Education. She has also been a director for the International Club, Phi Sigma Iota (national foreign language honor society) and the French Club.

"I think it's important to be active and to know what's going on in the profession," commented Dr. John.

During her teaching career, Dr. John added the exchange teachers program to England and helped organize trips to Europe and Canada.

"We're working to get other languages set up in that same way when we have native speakers here," states Dr. John.

As a student, Dr. John acted and directed plays and worked with the stage crew. As a member of the Bloomsburg Players she acted in "Our Town" last year.

She has "mixed feelings" about giving up teaching for retirement. "But in retirement," points out Dr. John, "I'll have more time for my other interests."

Dr. John has a variety of ideas in mind for her retirement. "I want to do some writing in my field (17th century French Literature) and maybe organize some more educational trips."

Dr. John is not planning to stop teaching. This time she wants to use her English certification. "I'd like to teach English as a second language," she says. "There are many people coming to the U.S. who need to know English."

Dr. John is leaving BU, but she isn't leaving Bloomsburg permanently. She wants it still to be her "home base." Therefore, adieu (farewell) isn't appropriate, but Au revoir (to meet again) is.

Dr. Roberts

Dr. Percival R. Roberts III, 48, died October 3, 1984 after a long bout with cancer.

Dr. Roberts came to Bloomsburg University in 1968 as chairperson of the art department. He had been recognized for his outstanding books on art, his acrylic paintings, and his poetry.

His paintings have been widely exhibited, and his poetry has been read in presentations throughout the northeast.

Many at Bloomsburg credit Dr. Roberts with developing the art department into an outstanding program. He was also a founder of the Bloomsburg Theatre Ensemble.

During his life, Dr. Roberts was recognized for prestigious accomplishments. He was the ninth poet laureate for the state of Delaware, the first person to acquire outstanding works of art for the Commonwealth through grant funding, and was listed in many Who's Who publications.

Before coming to Bloomsburg, Dr. Roberts was a United States Naval officer, and a graduate of the University of Delaware and Illinois State University. He received an honorary degree from the University of Asia and belonged to many professional organizations.

His talents as a teacher and artist will be missed by many at Bloomsburg.

Retired Profs

Six faculty members, with a total of 140 years of service to Bloomsburg University will retire at the end of the 1984-85 academic year.

Benjamin S. Andrews, associate professor of communication disorders and special education, is leaving Bloomsburg after 16½ years at the university and 37½ years in the field of education.

A native of Orange, N.J., Andrews earned his bachelor of science degree from the University of Virginia in 1947 and his master of arts degree from the State University of Iowa in 1950. He received a diploma for advanced graduate study at the University of Virginia in 1960.

In 1963, he was on the Board of Directors of the Speech and Hearing Association of Virginia. He holds a Certificate of Clinical Competence in Speech Pathology granted by the American Speech Association.

John A. Enman, professor of geography, came to Bloomsburg in September 1959 from Washington and Jefferson College. Enman has served 25½ years at the university and 36½ years in the field of education.

His bachelor of arts degree was received from the University of Maine in 1943. He earned a master of arts degree from Harvard in 1948 and a doctorate from the University of Pittsburgh in 1962.

Enman has been a member of numerous departmental and college-wide committees. He was a member of the former College Senate.

Charles C. Kopp, professor of English, will retire after 25 years of service to Bloomsburg University.

Kopp, came to the university in 1960 from the Celanese Corporation of America. His bachelor's degree was earned at Frostburg State College in 1953 and his master's from the University of West Virginia in 1954. He earned a doctorate at Penn State in 1963.

Francis J. Radice, professor of finance and business law, will retire at the end of the summer sessions of 1985 with 28 years of service at Bloomsburg and 36 years in the field of education.

Radice is a 1949 graduate of Bloomsburg State Teachers College. Both his masters of education and doctor of education were earned at Penn State in 1954 and 1967 respectively.

Radice has served on a variety of committees for both the College of Business and the university as a whole. He has been a faculty representative to the Bloomsburg Foundation and a member of its board, as well as chairperson of the Faculty Evaluation Committee.

Richard C. Savage, associate professor of English, completes 25 years at Bloomsburg and 32 in the field of education when he retires in May 1985. Prior to coming to Bloomsburg in 1960, he was an assistant editor on the Saturday Evening Post.

Savage received a bachelor of arts degree from the University of North Carolina, 1949, and a masters degree from Columbia University, 1951.

Savage served on the staff of the Springfield (Mass.) Union newspaper and was a reporter for the Transcript-Telegram of Holyoke (Mass.). During his tenure at Bloomsburg, he served as an advisor for the school newspaper for more than 10 years. He was chairperson of the Publications Committee, 1964-68, and advisor to Alpha Phi Gamma, honorary journalism fraternity.

Norman E. White, professor of chemistry, is retiring after completing 44 years in the field of education, 20 of which were at Bloomsburg.

White came to Bloomsburg in 1965 after serving 18 years at Drexel Institute of Technology. His bachelor of arts degree was received from Whittenberg University, 1938, and both his masters and doctorate degrees were earned at the University of Pennsylvania in 1941 and 1954.

White has been a co-chairperson of the university's Meet and Discuss Committee.

New Building

by Durrell Reichley

When it was announced at the groundbreaking ceremony in the spring of 1983 a new human services center would be named after former BU President James McCormick, he was so surprised, he was speechless. On October 28th, at the dedication ceremonies for the James H. McCormick Center for Human Services, he said that he was "again without words."

McCormick, who was very instrumental in getting the new facility, was the featured guest during a weekend to honor the former BU president.

"This building is a result of teamwork (on the part of the academic community)," McCormick said. "It is one symbolic example of what can be done. It was not supposed to be fun, but it really was."

Plans for the building were conceived in the early 1970's and after more than a decade of work and support by the university community, faculty, legislators, alumni, the local community, and Governor Thornburgh, it was completed late this summer.

As Chancellor of the SSHE, he said, "We have great expectations for this building."

McCormick said that the main goal of the SSHE is a "commitment of the system to deliver high quality undergraduate and graduate education to the people of Pennsylvania." The three major areas he stressed were quality teaching, public service, and research.

He feels that through the use of the new building, "students will be able to learn, to grow, to be all they can be."

More personally, McCormick thanked the university community for the "love and caring that you have given us. What a privilege it was to serve this wonderful institution."

James Lauffer, president of APSCUF, said "This new building does not guarantee better instruction, but the enthusiasm leads to better learning." Lauffer added that he can see the excitement and enthusiasm felt by faculty and students alike. "It is the faculty and students that will reap the greatest benefit."

Bret Hoffmaster CGA President, said, "Students here at Bloomsburg are very excited about what effect it will have on their future," and added that the new facility "may attract finer quality college students."

Approximately 200 people attended the ceremony which culminated in the laying of the cornerstone at the front entrance of the building. The time capsule placed inside the cornerstone features items from various eras of BU history. They were donated last year at the dedication ceremonies which marked the changeover from BSC to BU.

Turkey Hill

by Marvin L. Meneceley, Jr.

A very large "Country Suite" complete with fireplace and jacuzzi. A glass-enclosed dining area with a sky roof. Fine gourmet cuisine. Sounds like a quaint country inn in New England.

It's not. It's The Inn at Turkey Hill and it is found right here in Bloomsburg. The Inn at Turkey Hill is a restaurant-inn complex located off of the Lightstreet-Bloomsburg exit of Route 80.

The restaurant occupies what was once the home of the late Paul Eyerly, Jr. and his wife Elizabeth. The Eyerlys purchased the home in 1943 and resided there until the late sixties. After that it was rented privately until early 1983.

The house was part of the Turkey Hill Farm owned by the Eyerlys. The estate covered part of what is now Route 80 and a major portion of the land surrounding the farm house.

In 1983, Elizabeth "Babs" Eyerly Pruden, daughter of Paul and Elizabeth, developed the idea of a restaurant-inn. Originally, Pruden had wanted to establish a "unique" nightspot in the farm's barn. However, she could not obtain a liquor license for a nightspot, so she pursued plans for the restaurant-inn.

"It was a dream of my father's to do something for Bloomsburg," says Pruden. "We saw the need for Bloomsburg to have an inn. We wanted to do something different."

The Inn is different than other restaurant-hotels found in this area. Every room's furnishings from the "Country Suite" to the three distinct dining rooms, are hand-crafted or made especially for The Inn.

One of the dining rooms has a mural depicting scenes of rural Pennsylvania. Another has stenciled wall designs. The third, and largest, is "The Greenhouse." Here, patrons can dine while viewing a pond and gazebo outside. In the evening, a canopy covering "The Greenhouse" can be pulled back to reveal an excellent view of the night sky. In the tavern area, there are gameboards adorning the wall that can actually be taken down and used.

Each of the rooms at The Inn are completely different from one another. There are rooms upstairs in the main house that share a common bathroom and give the guest the impression of staying at someone's house. In every room, there is a remote-controlled color TV, a down comforter, and extra pillows.

"I wanted these little touches to give the guest something a little extra," said Pruden. "I want them to feel more comfortable."

Bruce Howes, freelance writer has stayed at The Inn once before. The first time he stayed was merely by accident. That time, the hotel he usually stays at in the area was full, so he came to Turkey Hill.

"The situation here is very unique. It's a very warm atmosphere. The people here are very hospitable," said Howes. "The last time I came here I was working on an article at the bar. I really became involved in it (the article) and they brought my dinner to me right there."

Howes' article later sold for $10,000. He is now working on another article and decided to see if The Inn could "help" his writing again.

"I like it here. I can work undisturbed and afterwards I can go right upstairs (in the main house) to my room," said Howes. "I travel over 100,000 miles a year in my work and I stay at a lot of places. The prices here are fair and I think the restaurant's cuisine even challenges New York to a degree."

The rooms are very unique and totally different than anything in the Bloomsburg area, but it's the food and its presentation that make The Inn at Turkey Hill a one of a kind establishment.

The list of entrees on the menu is limited but offers a widely diverse variety of cuisine. The choices range from the standard char-broiled New York strip steak to Hasenpfeffer (fresh rabbit).

"I chose the rabbit for a menu item because it is from this region," said Chef Tom Giambelluca. "I did a lot of library research to find out what is common to this area. I believe in local and regional cooking. I wanted to make our entrees from fresh seasonal ingredients found in this particular region."

Giambelluca originally came in from San Francisco as a consultant to Pruden and the project's developers. He was then asked to stay on as head chef. After returning to California, he decided to come back to Bloomsburg and accept the position. He has since bought a home in the area.

The prices at The Inn are a little bit higher than at other restaurants in the area. The lowest priced item is $7 and the highest $15. "The prices are commensurate with the type and quality of food being served," said Giambelluca. "We offer gourmet cuisine with only fresh ingredients and we use a standard industry (price) mark-up."

Although the number of items is small (nine), different fresh vegetables and soups are offered each day. In addition, when Giambelluca discovers a new recipe or item he likes, he'll adapt it and incorporate it into the menu.

"I try to get to New York at least once a month," said Giambelluca. "Each time I go I visit a new restaurant. If I find something that's good, I'll try to use it here, with adaptations of my own."

The Inn also serves a limited lunch menu. Patrons have the choice of several sandwiches, salads and two casseroles. Lunch chef Dan Bradley is also known for his fine soups. According to Giambelluca, plans are being made to expand the lunch menu. Although The Inn is not open to the public for breakfast, inn guests receive a complimentary continental breakfast and additional items are available upon request.

The menu has changed a few times since The Inn opened. The pan-fried Trout was dropped because, although native to this region, it is too common and did not go over too well. Giambelluca says that The Inn's patrons tend to like more exotic fish like Swordfish and Salmon.

Giambelluca has an idea he would like to experiment with in the near future. It's called prix fixe, French for fixed price. On a predesignated night, each patron would be required to pay $25 for the entire meal, with no choice of what's being served. A complete menu with food native to one particular regional area such as Northern Italy, the Rhine in Germany, and south-western United States would be offered each week.

"I'd like to experiment with new things," said Giambelluca. "If the customer is paying more, he (or she) should get something more than the usual. I also like to take precautions to keep from repeating menus and boring the customers."

Pruden has implemented some ideas, although not entirely original, that add to the quality of the dining experience at The Inn. One good example for this is dessert. Instead of the waiter or waitress telling the customer what is offered, he or she brings out a silver tray with all of the dessert entrees in full view. The choices are explained, item by item, from what's on top to what ingredients are inside.

"I thought that the customer would like to see what's offered, right in front of them, rather than have a waiter list the choices," said Pruden.

Pruden says that being in Bloomsburg she would like to see The Inn develop a closer relationship with the university. It already has a five percent discount for anyone associated with BU.

"This definitely isn't a college hangout," says Pruden. "But it is a good place with a nice environment for students and their parents to eat when they visit."

All of the little things done at The Inn, from the down comforters to the extra attention at dinner, are done to make the entire experience more enjoyable than at another restaurant or hotel.

"When people are paying a lot of money for something, they want something a little bit special," says Pruden. "We try to give them a little more for their money than other places do."

Jamboree

Several thousands people gathered on Main Street in Bloomsburg, April 27, to take part in the festivities of the town's annual Renaissance Jamboree.

Activities, which ran from 10:00 a.m. — 5:00 p.m., included entertainment, and food, arts, and crafts sales. Proceeds from the food sales went to charity.

One form of entertainment that generated interest was a jello wrestling competition. In Bloomsburg's own version of 'Wrestlemania', separate tag teams of men and women became drenched as they grappled in a large tub of jello.

The sign language group, Image, also attracted a lot of attention. The group of BU girls delighted the audience as they performed sign language renditions of various popular songs, including "We Are the World."

The group Tropix, which performed at February's dance marathon, gave a rock concert, while the air band Oreo Connection mimed and lip-synced to the song "Easy Lover." The group placed third in an airband competition at BU on April 19.

Non-musical entertainment featured clowns who tempted children with balloons. In addition, Bob "Mr. Simon Sez" Schaffer made his annual appearance, as he led volunteers in a game of 'Simon Sez'.

CAS Rally

Gorbachev

On March 10, 1985, 2 p.m., a simultaneous broadcast on television and radio announced the death of Konstantin Ustinovich Chernenko, General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and President of the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. after grave illness.

The news about Chernenko's death was hardly unexpected, given his age, 73, and his increasingly poor health. The medical report, signed by Dr. Yevgeni Chazov, the chief Kremlin physician, revealed that Chernenko had died of heart failure brought on by chronic emphysema. The report noted that the late General Secretary had also suffered from chronic hepatitis, a deterioration of the liver.

The real surprise came the next day when Soviet citizens lined up at newspaper kiosks to buy Pravda. The front page of the Communist Party daily was not dominated by a black-bordered picture of the late Soviet President, as had been the case when Brezhnev and Andropov died; readers had to turn to the second page for a glimpse of Chernenko. Instead, the front-page space was devoted to the official portrait of the new leader, a balding, round-faced man, and the announcement that Mikhail Gorbachev, 54, had been chosen by the Central Committee as General Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

Peace Mission

The scene was filled with poignancy, the mood as dark as the grim German day. The President of the United States, holding the hand of his wife Nancy, paced somberly through the museum of Bergen-Belsen, one of the concentration camps where Holocaust victims were exterminated as part of Hitler's Final Solution. As the Reagans passed picture after picture showing the wretched state of memories of the Holocaust and World War II (strained relations between U.S. and West Germany), it provoked worldwide debate. As the tumult raged on; before Reagan's visit, Reagan and his West German host, Chancellor Helmut Kohl, moved gamely through their appointed rounds, more the prisoners than the proprietors of their enterprise.

Anger had stirred on three continents by the President's plan to visit Bitburg cemetery, which had the remains not only of ordinary German fighting men but also 49 members of the Waffen SS, a branch of the elite Nazi guard that ran the death

The decision to give over the front page of Pravda to Gorbachev was more a matter of protocol than an intended slight of Chernenko. But it did reflect the unprecedented speed of the latest succession in the Kremlin. News of Gorbachev's promotion to the highest post in the land came only five hours after Chernenko's death was announced. In Geneva, Soviet negotiators signaled the U.S. delegation, which had arrived there early last week to resume arms-control talks, that business would continue, despite Chernenko's death.

Before moving into the future, Gorbachev had to take leave of the past. His first days in power were filled with the pomp and panoply of a funeral that brought heads of state and other dignitaries from 49 nations to the Soviet capital. Television coverage gave Soviet citizens a closer look at their new leader, who is better known in the West than in his own country thanks to the extensive Western press coverage of his visit to Britain last December. Evening news programs showed Gorbachev Politburo and the delegation as they paused inside the House of Trade Unions to contemplate the alabaster profile of Chernenko, whose open coffin was set high amid a bank of purple, red and white flowers. During the 42 hours that Chernenko's body lay in state, convoys of buses brought groups of party faithfuls, many of them workers and farmers from outlying regions, to swell the crowds that waited patiently to walk past the bier.

At the cemetery, both the President and the Chancellor were determined to keep the wreath laying there as low-key as possible. They succeeded. Air Force One carried the two leaders into a U.S. air base on the outskirts of Bitburg. A motorcade took them through open country, then into a residential area and to the small cemetery.

Reagan and Kohl spent just eight minutes at the cemetery. They walked a path encircling the headstones, then stopped at a gray wall, where four German soldiers attended two tall wreaths. Then they stepped back and stood solemnly as a German military bugler sounded a German tribute to lost soldiers. Reagan passed German and U.S. military honor guards and met some relatives of German soldiers who opposed Hitler.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, normally a loyal supporter of Reagan policies, responded to a Labor M.P.'s attack in Parliament on the Bitburg visit by noting that "I have considerable sympathy with what the honorable gentleman said."

But no amount of public pressure was Later Gorbachev met privately with many of the leaders. French President Francois Mitterrand described the new General Secretary as "a calm, relaxed man who appears willing to tackle problems firmly."

Vice-President George Bush came away from his 85 minute private session with Gorbachev in a cautiously optimistic mood. His feelings, Bush said, were "high, high on hope, high that we can make progress in Geneva, high for an overall reduction of tensions." Bush hand-delivered a special message to Gorbachev from President Reagan. Reagan decided not to go, mainly because there was insufficient time to prepare for a meeting with Gorbachev and little prospect of fulfilling the high expectations such a trip would inevitably create.

In Washington, there was a discernible sense of skepticism about whether a new age was dawning in East-West relations. Many analysts felt the Gorbachev, however young and personable, could ultimately prove to be a supremely talented apparatchik, but one without national reforms or a reassessment of the Soviet Union's relations abroad.

Clearly it was much too early to take more than a quick measure of Gorbachev. First impressions, whether of new U.S. Presidents or new Soviet General Secretaries, have proved too often to be false impressions.

going to make Reagan change his mind. As he told TIME's Hugh Sidney only hours before leaving for Bonn: "We're not going there in the sense to forgive and forget. What I believe is needed is a recognition of what has been accomplished in Germany . . ."

Reagan's advisors did what they could to distract attention from Bitburg. Shortly after the President's arrival in Bonn, they announced an embargo on trade between the U.S. and the Marxist Sandinista regime of Nicaragua. They also quietly suggested that Kohl was mainly responsible for the Bitburg debacle, even though they publicly insisted that there had been no damage to the close relationship between the two leaders and their countries.

Chemical Tragedy

The first sign that something was wrong came at 11 p.m. A worker at the Union Carbide pesticide plant on the outskirts of Bhopal, an industrial city 466 miles south of New Delhi, noticed that pressure was building up in a tank containing 45 tons of Methyl Isocyanate, a deadly chemical used to make pesticides. At 56 minutes past midnight, the substance began escaping into the air from a faulty valve. For almost an hour, the gas formed a vast, dense fog of death that drifted toward Bhopal.

The vapor passed first over the shantytowns of Jaiprakash and Chola, just outside the walls of the plant, leaving hundreds dead as they slept. The gas quickly enveloped the city's railway station, where beggars were huddled against the chill. In minutes, a score had died and 200 others were gravely ill. Through temples and shops, over streets and lakes, across a 25-square mile quadrant of the city, the cloud continued to spread, noiselessly and lethally. The night air was fairly cool, the wind was almost calm, and a heavy mist clung to the earth; those conditions prevented the gas from dissipating as it would have done during the day. A few hundred yards from the chemical plant, M.A.

Khan, a farmer, was lying in bed when he heard several thumps at a nearby farm and sensed that his own cows were milling about restlessly. He arose and went outside. Two cows were dead on the ground. A third gave out a loud groan and collapsed as Khan watched. The farmer's eyes began to smart painfully. He ran into the darkness. The day after, at Bhopal's Hamidia Hospital, with his eyes shut tightly and tears streaming down his cheeks, Khan described his fear: "I thought it was a plague."

Others thought it was a nuclear bomb or an earthquake or the end of the world. As word of the cloud of poison began to spread, hundreds, then thousands, took to the road in flight from the fumes. In cars and rickshaws, on foot and bicycles, residents moved as fast as they could. As in some eerie science-fiction nightmare, hundreds of people blinded by the gas groped vainly toward uncontaminated air or stumbled into one another in the darkness. Others simply collapsed by the side of the road. At least 37 people who had inhaled the fumes died hours later from the effects, having reached what they thought was safety.

By week's end more than 2,500 people were dead in the worst industrial disaster the world has known. At least 1,000 more were expected to die from the fumes in the next two weeks. Some 10,000 remained critically ill. In all, 15,000 people were treated at hospital and clinics in Bhopal and surrounding communities.

Within hours of the leak, hundreds of victims had lined up at Hamidia Hospital and makeshift clinics where doctors and nurses worked frantically to ease their misery.

Pauv Gandhi broke out in campaigning for the national elections to visit Bhopal. Expressing his shock and sorrow, Gandhi announced a $4 million relief fund. In addition, Anjun Singh, chief minister of Madhya Pradesh, state of which Bhopal is the capital, promised compensation of about $500 for every family that suffered a death and $200 for every family that had a member hospitalized. President Reagan sent Gandhi a note expressing the grief shared by him and the American people.

In Bhopal and elsewhere, medical authorities began to grow concerned about the long-term effects of exposure to methyl isocyanate. There is no evidence that the chemical causes survivors to suffer from emphysema, asthma or bronchitis, although, some medical experts suspect that the poisoning could result in damage to the liver and the kidneys, and could have other even more harrowing effects.

Assassination

by Shona Fraser

On October 31, 1984, the world suffered a great loss. One of the world's most powerful and respected leaders was gunned down by her own security men while she was greeting them.

Indira Gandhi had been prime minister of India for the past 16 years. Her death was a result of her country's turbulent politics. The religious community of Sikhs had been striving for two years to become an independent nation. Last June, Mrs. Gandhi sent the army into Punjab and into the most sacred of all Sikh shrines, the Golden Temple. The result was death for at least 600 people, including a Sikh radical leader. This action may have led to Mrs. Gandhi's assassination; the security guards that shot her were Sikhs.

Mrs. Gandhi's political career could also be called turbulent. Her career began while her father, Jawaharlal Nehru, was India's first independent prime minister. Mrs. Gandhi was often called to her father's side and was his closest confidant.

In 1955, she was asked to serve on the 21-member administrative working committee. Her duties included making speeches, organizing charities and traveling on party business. Within four years, Mrs. Gandhi was elected president of the party, mainly as an honor to her father. She proved, however, to be a very forceful leader.

After her father suffered a stroke, Mrs. Gandhi aided him in running the country from his sickbed. After a second stroke, Nehru died and his successor, Lal Bahadur Shastri, took over.

After less than two years in office, Shastri died. Mrs. Gandhi was asked to serve as prime minister until the party could agree on a new successor.

She lost in a general election but after her successor ruled for two years Mrs. Gandhi was reinstated. Indira Gandhi showed strength and leadership. She became known to the world as a woman of great power, one who had the capabilities to run the struggling country of India and set it back on its feet again.

Her death has left India in a state of rioting. Sikhs are being attacked and killed and confusion has set in. Her son, Rajiv, is now in control, and many wonder if he is ready for the responsibility.

Mrs. Gandhi was not afraid of death and in a speech she made the day before her death Mrs. Gandhi stated, "If I die today, every drop of my blood will invigorate the nation."

Miss America

After the controversy surrounding the resignation of former Miss America, Vanessa Williams, this year's winner, Sharlene Wells, believed that the judges wanted to choose a conservative woman. The judges did just that.

Wells is a Mormon Sunday school teacher, who holds fast to her Mormon beliefs. She does not smoke, drink, or gamble, and would never engage in sex outside of marriage. She also said she opposes abortion and feels the Equal Rights Amendment is unnecessary.

The controversy that surrounded Vanessa Williams was that she had posed for nude photographs later published in Penthouse magazine. She was then asked to step down, which she did.

When Wells was asked whether she had any secrets that could mar her reign, she said she had lived her life "above reproach."

National News

Conviction

Salvatore Salamone, Bloomsburg restaurant owner, convicted of possessing an illegal machine gun and falsifying federal firearms forms, was sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $35,000 by a federal judge.

Government prosecutor Wes Clark, described the weapons as ones you would not find "on a Boy Scout shooting range. These weapons were purchased for one purpose — to kill."

Clark also said that the guns Salamone bought at Renco Too in Bloomsburg were discovered in pizzerias in New Jersey and in the possession of other heroin ring defendants.

Salamone's lawyer, Hyman Greenberg, stated during the trial that Salamone's brother, Filippo, was the criminal and objected to Salamone's "being linked with a member of a (crime) family by the government — that's an allegation."

Despite Greenberg's objections, the jury found Salamone guilty and the judge sentenced him accordingly.

Salamone is not yet done with judges and juries; this summer he will face a trial in New York City. There, he, his brother, and several others are charged in the "Pizza Connection" case. The charges include conspiring to buy, sell, and distribute heroin, and money laundering.

Salamone's plight has not seemed to stop Bloomsburg students and residents from eating at his restaurant. Every time one passes by the place, it is still packed and probably will remain that way for some time.

Star Wars

When many people think of Star Wars, they are waiting to hear about Luke Skywalker's adventures, but what many aren't expecting is that Star Wars has now taken on a new meaning, that of Strategic Defense Initiative.

This plan, proposed by President Reagan, is used to render offensive nuclear missiles impotent and obsolete, by constructing a defensive shield based in outer space. Star Wars would employ a variety of still emerging technologies, including laser beams and high energy particles, to shoot down attacking warheads before they reach their targets in the U.S.

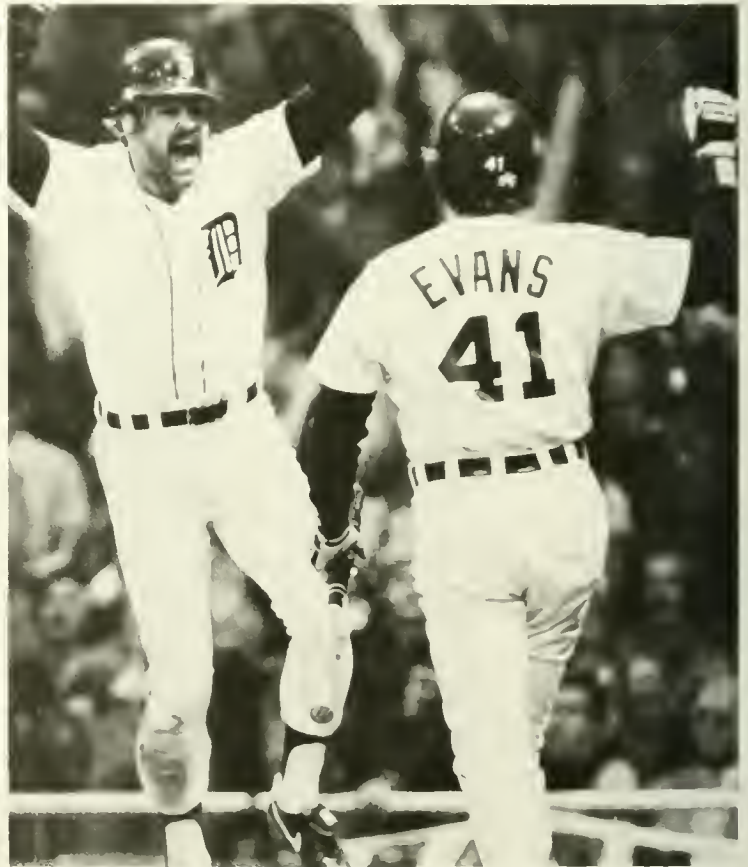

Star Wars was a major issue in the 1984 presidential election and it is still an issue in world politics. The Soviets walked out of the Geneva Bargaining table 15 months ago because they wanted the U.S. to withdraw those "offending weapons," even though they too own similar weapons.

After vowing not to resume the talks, the Soviets are once again back at the bargaining table. The stipulation to the agreement was that other matters would be discussed as well as the Star Wars plan.

So next time you hear someone talk about Star Wars, make sure you hear the name Luke Skywalker before you jump into the conversation.

Superbowl XIX

World Series

Superbowl XIX was won by San Francisco, January 20, 1985. Here the 49ers quarterback looks for receiver behind protective blocking of left guard John Ayers (68) in first half of the game in Stanford Stadium. Rushing Montana is Dolphins, Don McNeal (28).

The World Series saw the Detroit Tigers beat the San Diego Padres four games to one. The Chicago Cubs came close to getting into the series but the Padres won. In the American League, the Kansas city Royals lost in the playoffs to the Tigers. The photo show Kirk Gibson of Detroit jumping for joy after scoring in game five. Darrell Evans is the on-deck hitter.

Summer Olympics

After the boycott of the 1980 summer Olympics in Moscow, America was ready and eager for the 1984 games in Los Angeles. Many were disappointed that the Russians and other eastern-block nations would not be competing at the games, but as the Olympics drew nearer, America was beginning to get caught up in the spirit and excitement that surrounded the upcoming games.

The United States was not disappointed. From the opening, when former Olympic champion Rafer Johnson carried the flame up the long flight of stairs where it would burn for 16 days, until those final moments when all of the athletes joined hands and danced together, the Olympics gave this country a feeling of nationalism that it hadn't felt since the hockey team upset Russia in the final game of 1980 Olympics.

It all began with the most magnificent light show to open the games, and the electricity from those opening moments remained throughout the entire games.

America started out strong by capturing many medals in swimming. 1980 team members, Tracy Caulkins and Rowdy Gaines, finally got their chance to prove that they and their teammates were the best that the world had. The Americans out-swam all others in the pool on their way to Olympic gold.

America found a new sweetheart at the games by the name of Mary Lou Retton. The four foot, nine-inch little dynamo vaulted herself into the hearts of many people. Although the U.S. team placed second (their best showing ever) behind a strong Rumanian team in the team competition, Retton captured the crown for best all-around gymnast and became a household name.

On the other side of the mat, the men won the team competition after an emotional defeat of the powerful Chinese team. Peter Vidmar finished second in the all-around, another first for American gymnasts. Tears flowed from the eyes of the team as the medals of gold were placed around each member's neck.

As the first week came to an end, the Americans found themselves in first place in the medal standings.

Track and Field began the second week. All eyes were on Carl Lewis. Lewis was attempting to tie Jesse Owens' record by taking the gold in the men's long jump, men's 100 meter run, men's 200 meter run, and men's 4 X 100 relay. By the end of the week, Lewis had achieved his goal, and his name was placed in the record books next to Owens.

Controversy could not be excluded from these games. Mary Decker, after many years of injuries, was finally able to run an Olympic race. Decker's biggest competition came from the young Zola Budd. They set out for the 3,000 meter run, but before they had finished, Decker was lying on the infield of the track in extreme pain, and Budd was in tears as she finished out the race. An entanglement during the race caused this, and no one is sure whose fault it was to this day. Decker blames it on Budd's lack of experience while others say that it was Decker's fault. Their names are now known in Olympic history, but not how either would have wanted it to be.

While the events were taking place outside, the boxing ring saw much of the same excitement. Nine of the 12 gold medals were given to Americans, and they also received a silver and a bronze. The Americans dominated the boxing competition.

It had been 56 years since a man won both gold medals in springboard and platform diving, until Greg Louganis won them. His diving was outstanding, and there were no competitors who could come close to surpassing him.

These were just a few of the outstanding performances by the Americans. At the final medal count, the U.S. surpassed Russia's 1980 record for the most medals won. But more important than medals was the enthusiasm that had spread throughout the country.

Restoration

The Statue of Liberty celebrated her 98th birthday in 1984 and she began to show her age. The statue was worn from constant pummeling by wind, salt air and acid rain, and the iron ribbing supporting the copper covering was badly corroded. A two-year restoration began in July 1984. It included a new gold-plated torch.

Mom & Dad!

To the reader:

Obiter, the title of this annual, is derived from the Latin phrase "obiter dictum;" as defined, it is an incidental opinion, a passing remark, something said by the way. This book marks the 69th edition at Bloomsburg.

The poem found on page 33 was written in mind for a theme so that you may hopefully remember your years at Bloomsburg University. The 1985 Obiter is your book of memories to last a lifetime and I believe we were successful in catching and publishing those memories.

Being a member of the staff for four years, I have been looking forward to being editor for 1985. When I reflect back on this year, I remember frustrating, confusing, and long houred days. But I especially remember the pride that everyone, this year, took into making each page. If I had the chance to do it again, I would because I loved every minute of those times, whether they were frustrating or not.

I would like to take this chance to thank a few members individually for helping me make the 1985 Obiter the best!

Karen: Your English experience is just overwhelming! Thank God for Copy Editors. I hope the love and friendship we have enjoyed will last and flourish the rest of our lives.

Tammy: Hey! Thanks for sometimes being my gopher, alright — always! The Organizations look great and the time you spent photographing, layouting, and typing them sure paid off. Oh — Please lock the door when you leave.

Becky & Theresa: You two just found a way to always light my day! That's an understatement. Events just look marvelous.

Jen: Make me write bad checks! Thanks for your friendship, love, and support this entire year.

Pam & Kathy: Woobah! We've been through a lot. I just hope we can always stay in touch. I love you both!

Doug: Thanks for supporting us, guiding us, and especially computerizing us.

Kevin: Man, I cannot describe the help you have given me. The pictures, advice, and time you've spent with me have been greatly appreciated. Super!

Britt: Well without you I'd be up s- -t's creek without a paddle. You have talents above and beyond the call of duty. Thanks for my most memorable year with the Obiter. Oh, Yo Mama!

Goals are dreams and wishes that are not easily reached.
You have to work hard to obtain them, never knowing when or where you will reach your goal.

But keep trying!
Do not give up hope.
And most of all ...
Never stop believing in yourself.

One day at a time — that is enough.
Do not look back and grieve over the past for it is gone — and do not be troubled about the future, for it has not yet come.
Live in the present and make it so beautiful that it will be worth remembering.

Alumni Association

Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815, (717) 389-4058

Welcome to the largest branch of the Bloomsburg University family — the Alumni Association, with over 28,000 members in all 50 states and 25 other countries.

I hope you will be an active, caring member of the Association. You can demonstrate that care in a number of ways: By encouraging family members and friends to attend Bloomsburg; by sharing your career experiences with the University Career Development Center; by reflecting the quality of education you received at Bloomsburg in your work; and by joining over 10,000 other alumni who have been contributing members of the Alumni Association.

I am proud of the many ways in which alumni contributions have made the University a better place. I would like to cite just two examples: During the past 10 years the Alumni Association has provided over $86,000 for scholarships (over $18,000 in 1985-1986) and nearly $17,000 since 1976 to improve and maintain the very attractive appearance of the campus. In addition, over $15,000 is spent annually for alumni publications to keep you informed about what's happening at the University and in the lives of your classmates. There are many other ways in which alumni have helped to provide "the margin of excellence."

I also draw your attention to an interesting publication, PROFILE OF THE PAST, A LIVING LEGACY, a history of the University from 1839 to 1979. I am sure that as a graduate, you will want to know as much as possible about the history of your Alma Mater. This book, written by an alumna and illustrated with many photographs, is very readable, and I recommend it highly.

I invite you to participate in alumni chapter meetings held in your area, and I hope you will return to Bloomsburg from time to time, especially for special occasions like Alumni Weekend in the spring and Homecoming in the fall.

Best wishes to you for success and happiness in your career and in your personal life.

Sincerely,

Douglas C. Hippenstiel
Director of Alumni Affairs

INCANTATION IV ("Red Ghosts Riding")

Faces from this dead progression passing in review
possess disquieting mystery far beyond the chill of our quick recognition.

Carried on thin, red wings of screams
I watch my once proud Iroquois ancestors driven like seeds
across barren, inhospitable soil — some absorbed the rest massacred —
left like leather to parch
before an unforgiving sun.

Haunted by the empty blue space they leave, between generations, still mourning,
between lakes & streams,
Red Ghosts gallop fast across earthen minds in robust confederation stirring up incidents centuries old.

I am running with them,
my heart among the lead riders of these hunted souls who wrestle our present to discover their collective identities.
Strung like ungulate beads
each event becomes an incremental grain dipped in the dark yellowness of setting suns.

Memory is the glue of this tentative, glimpsed existence.

My past is grasped in grave concentration.
