Both subject matter and technique of teaching subject matter will be discussed in a series of conferences planned for the day.

Fraternities Cooperating

Fraternities composing the council include Phi Sigma Pi, Pi Omega Pi, Kappa Delta Pi, Alpha Psi Omega, and Gamma Theta Upsilon.

Authority On American Musical History

On Monday, May 4, Bloomsburg George Rommert, of the Biologisches Teachers College students will be given the opportunity of hearing the country's most distinguished interpreter of American music, Mr. John Tasker Howard, composer and author who is recognized as one of the leaders in the world of music both in the United States and in foreign countries.

> Mr. Howard will lecture, with piano accompaniment by himself, to the students of the College at the regular chapel excercises. While he has prepared many lectures for college platforms the noted authority on music will probably choose the one called "What is a Musically Educated Person?" in his lecture here. The lecture is really one on how to enjoy good music, and in it Mr. Howard tries to build up an appreciation of music which is a happy medium between the "musical lowbrow and the cultural snob."

Popular For His Works

The lecturer has followers almost without number-through his radio broadcast, books, and musical compositions and compilations. Since 1932 he has been almost continuously broadcasting on American music, accompanying many of his talks with piano music.

Mr. Howard's book on American music, which can be found in the College library, has become an accepted classic in his field, and the recently published "Stephen Foster, America's Troubador," has been widely read and commented on. Mr. Howard is also the author of several other books.

Also A Composer

As a composer Mr. Howard has also gained a name for himself. He has composed the music for "Wakefield," a masque by Percy MacKaye; "Foster Sinfonietta" for orchestra; "Foster Sonatina;" "March of the Grenadiers," and others.

In addition to his work as composer Digest," and the "Musical Quarterly." | well-known magazines.

Dear Editor:

I wrote this letter only after waiting a week or more in vain for someone else to write it. It concerns discipline - a term with which all teachers and prospective teachers are quite familiar. And it is presented for publication with the hope of reminding students of - well, whatever it does remind them of.

To be brief, a person may not rightly consider himself educated until he has mastered the art of listening. Listening is such a big task in itself that the person who has mastered the art is usually unable to combine it with such conscious motor activities why don't you as editor of the stu-

Dear Sir

I thoroughly agree with you. Your use of the words "discipline," "behavior," " audience," and "listening" leave little for me to add. However, I am not in the mood to write an editorial but shall publish your letter. The value, I'm sure, lies in the reader's ability to read between the lines.

HISTORY COMMERCIAL CONTESTS IN PA WRITTEN BY BLOOMSBURG INSTRUCTOR

For over a decade commercial conbookkeeping, shorthand, and typewriting. With the establishment of commercial teacher training work in the State Teachers College at Bloomsburg, the first contest was held in 1931. On May 2, 1936 the Sixth Annual Pennsylvania Commercial Contest will be held. The subjects tested are: Gregg shorthand, bookkeeping, typewriting, business arithmetic, and business law.

Based on this brief review of controspective view reveals certain posi- is the basis for making a school tive outcomes favorable to the pro- award in the form of a silver loving gressive movements in the field of education for business.

Since there is no rigid outline, course of study, syllabus or control of the content of various first and second year courses, our present contest examinations presume that stuings which may arise. The line between first and second year content is always a wavering one. In a measure a test based on two year's work avoids the tutoring of students over a period of one year by a particular teacher to the neglect of the other less promising members of the class. If tutoring is done, it must be for a prolonged period of two or more years. Such a policy tests the juniors or seniors at a time nearer their leaving school for a job. In so far as possible, contests should test the finished or end product.

By restricting the numbers of students entering the contests, typewriter-transcription in the Shorthand Contest is possible. The letter or other message in typewritten form is the outcome expected by the business man. This approaches the ideal of the "testing-as-business tests." This test device encourages more shorthand classes throughout the schools of Pennsylvania to meet in rooms where typewriters are available.

Since a specified course content is not prescribed and enforced by state authority, the sample contest examinations have been mailed in large numbers. These serve to give an approximate idea of the content of the various commercial subjects. This is indirect supervision for those persons who, in many cases, have no source of information as to the content of courses other than the material contained in the particular text book in use. To cover the whole of the book is frequently impossible, since the published wisely gives too much material rather than too little. We are sure our contest can be improved. However, it is a worthy project in cooperation and warrants continuance.

Although there are some knotty problems, the net effect of over a decade of commercial competition convinces us that contests are a factor in the forward progress of business education.

SPORTS

VanGordon's remarkable time of 50:8 in his leg of the mile relay run at Susquehanna last Saturday is somewhere "in the vicinity of a record for the Susquehanna track," according to the last issue of "The Susquehanna."

This man Rompalo should carry a rabbit's foot with him when he goes on the diamond, if not for the luck itself, then certainly to have something to show for his tendency to get on base without having to hit. In Wednesday's game he was up to the plate four times and reached base thre times. He scored two runs but didn't get a hit. There seems to be something about him that makes a pitcher nervous.

Bloomsburg State Teachers College is listed among other colleges and universities to receive invitations to compete in basketball next season at the Williamsport Y. M. C. A., press reports say this week.

The Williamsport "Y" cagers announced that they are going into basketball in a big way next year and have already begun preparations by inviting such teams as Yale, Penn State, Bucknell, Temple, Syracuse, Bloomsburg, Stroudsburg, Lock Haven, and George Williams College, of Chicago.

The Huskies stepped into the lead in the first quarter last Saturday, and each runner increased the lead, Van Devender, the anchor runner for Bloomsburg, finishing more than fifty yards ahead of his Susquehanna opponent at the finish. Susquehanna was clocked in 3:40 flat.

The first quarter, run by both Blass and Zelesky so that Coach Buchheit could get a better idea of the strength of the men, was run in 54:2. Then VanGorden, frosh from Kingston, raced the 440 yards in the recordbreaking time of 50.8. This time was about two seconds better than the 440 record at the State Teachers meet last year.

Mulhern, also a frosh, registered a time of 54:2 for the third leg of the race, and VanDovender rang up another record mark of 51 flat.

As S-Burg Wins In Tenth

Three unearned runs by a good Shippensburg team, playing on their own diamond last Saturday, April 18, were enough to snap a winning streak of twenty-three consecutive scheduled games which has been piling up for the Nelson nine since early in 1934. The Gulian-coached team won the decision in ten innings,

While Captain Woody Litwhiler, on the mound for the Huskies, allowed only six hits and did some superb pitching, his mates couldn't do much at the plate to help the cause along, and the local players tasted defeat for the first time since their loss to the same team back in the first game of the 1934 season. Errors were costly to Bloomsburg, the Nelson diamondmen getting a total of five during the ten innings.

"TENNIS LADDER" IS NOVEL TOURNEY BY COLLEGE GIRLS

Something novel in the way of tennis tournaments is being tried by the girls of the College, who have formed what they call a "tennis ladder," listing thirty-two competitors for tennis laurels.

The rungs of the ladder are made up of individual players, whose position on the list was determined by the time they signed up for the tournament. The first one to sign was placed at the top; the last one was placed at the bottom.

According to rules each girl may challenge anyone two rungs above her on the ladder, the match to be played within two days of the challenge. If a person defeats someone above her on the list she is moved up on the ladder and the loser moves down. May 11 has been established as the closing date for the contest, the player standing at the top at that time winning the tournament.

SCHOOLBOY MUSICIANS SCORE HIT IN CONCERT

State-Championship Band From Berwick Plays Concert Of Eleven Selections

Students and townspeople of Bloom had the opportunity of hearing the best high school band in Pennsylvania and one of the best in the country last Friday evening, when the championship band from Berwick High School, playing under the baton of Director R. R. Llewellyn, presented a program consisting of eleven difficult compositions.

The program opened with the march, "Vanishing Army," by Alford. Tschaikowsky's famous "March Slav," depicting the horrors of living among the Russians just before the War of 1812, was presented next on the pro-

The first soloist of the evening was DeRae Deitrich, who played "The Bluebells of Scotland" on his trombone. The selection was composed by the well-known Arther Pryor and is unusually difficult to play, requiring | ing in the wards. triple-tonguing in a major portion of the selection.

The next composition, "Tannhauser," by Wagner, is seldom attempted by such youthful musicians. It was presented here as only the second attempt by the band before an audience, they having played it for the first time in the auditorium of self-expression and imagination. which the older boys were producing at Berwick last Friday morning.

Novelty Is Hit

"Roosters Lay Eggs in Kansas," a composition in a much lighter vain and certainly a feature selection on any program, was played next on the program. The selection was so popular that Bloomsburg students are still singing it and humming it. George Bird Jr., a cornetist with the band, sang a solo as part of the novelty.

The next selection, and one which won the wide aproval of the audience, was George Gershwin's famous "Rhapsody in Blue," the special arrangement for which was loaned to the Berwick band through the courtesy of Ernest Williams, director of the Williams Band, which played in the college auditorium a few years

William Levan, clarinetist, played "The Flight of the Bumblebee," a difficult solo by Rimsky-Korsakov. Then came the novelty composition made popular by the United States Marine Band, "Whistling Farmer Boy," in which the band men were given the opportunity to show how well they can whistle. The selection Campus Reflector, Shippensburg pawas written by Fillmore.

The next composition, played upon universal and previous approval of the audience, was Denardi's very difficult "Universal Judgement," a selection which every band entered in Class "A" of the national contest must play. It depicts the judgement day, with the praying of the sinful throngs and final destruction of all

The snappy march written by the great Sousa, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," brought to a close the regular program. The march was feautred by a chorus of brass instruments brought to the apron of the stage.

So voluble was the applause brought at the close of the program that Director Llewellyn offered as an encore number, the delightful composition by Edwin Franko Goldman, "The Children's March."

Prof. Edward A. Reams presented Mr. Llewellyn and the band with a basket of pink and yellow tulips in appreciation for the fine program.

Miss Ethel Shaw Collaborates With Another Writer In Published Story

Miss Ethel Shaw, formerly an instructor in the English Department of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, is the co-author, with Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, of an article called "Finding Livingstone," in which the authors depict a vivid and realistic picture of the experiment with a group of six boys, all able to use their minds, but not able to use their legs.

The experiment grew out of Miss Shaw's work at the Grasslands 'Hospital, Vallhalla, New York, last summer. MissShaw had been employed by the hospital to introduce another innovation in the "Activity program in a

The boys became especially interested in stories of real "he-men," and finally the idea of writing a play about the Stanley-Livingstone story was developed. In order to bring in the necessity for better pronunciation and enunciation the play was written as though for production on the radio.

of guests. But Miss Shaw and her associates solved this problem by gradually building up good social practices in the boys.

In the ward in which the instructors were working there were three small boys who wanted to take part in the same kind of activities as the bigger boys. So with the aid of their teachers they studied and read about the jungles and the animals. In addition they made clay models of animals and also posters advertising the play efforts would be scorned by the other boys were given the parts of little newsboys who shouted "Extra! Extra! Stanley finds Livingstone!"

> The boys gave two performances. Their beds were moved close together at the end of the room and hospital screens were placed in such a position as to cut them off from their audience. The group assumed the name of "Grasslands Boys Dramatic Club," and began their performance by playing an accompaniment to "Pop Goes The Weasel" on their own rhythm

The play scored a huge success and so pleased the director of the hospital that the controlling Board has since decided to continue such work. One The next problem was in getting doctor remarked that this was the
