Overpass plans stall lack funds

by JACK FURNISS

Last years' proposed pedestrian overpass is still in the planning stages because of a lack of adequate funds.

The safety project, initiated by Elton Hunsinger, administrator for campus services, involved the construction of an overpass further up Lightstreet Road than the present stairs. It was estimated that such an overpass, extending from the cliff on the campus side of the road to the hospital parking lot, (rented by the college), would cost about $180,000.

The present crosswalk, (with an overhead caution light), is utilized in numerous ways: (1) students walking to and from classes (2) students seeking medical attention at the health facilities located in the Bloomsburg Hospital Dispensary (3) students walking to and from the new Department of Nursing Building (4) students required to park in the hospital parking lot (5) visiting groups required to park in the lot (6) townspeople walking to and from the hospital.

A traffic survey of the area was taken last October between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m., revealing that 6,800 cars went past Penn Street on Lightstreet Road and 1,028 pedestrians crossed the highway near there. The survey, however, did not reflect the early morning student traffic in the area. It was also recorded that there had been 11 auto accidents, four persons injured, and one fatality during the past two years.

The feasibility of a traffic signal was denied because of the steep downgrade for west bound traffic on Lightstreet Road entering Bloomsburg's Business District. The District Engineer, Ken Larson, felt that a traffic signal or stop sign would increase the number of vehicular accidents, particularly rear end collisions, due to the eight degree curve to the left along with the 5.8 percent grade.

Mr. Hunsinger has looked into the problem extensively, touching base on the county, regional, and state levels, and also Congressman Daniel Flood on the Federal level. Congressman Flood has received letters of support and over 1000 BSC student signatures in the form of a petition. Flood has supported the plan 100 percent.

Dean Hunsinger was informed that regular federal highway funds (70 percent of the total), could be used if the local Planning Commission would include the project in its 12-year Transportation Improvement Plan. The ultimate decision as to whether the project will be added to the plan depends on the priority rating the Planning Commission assigns to the project.

Hunsinger added that there is an overpass on Route 54 in Danville, provided through funds from the Redevelopment Authority, to serve the families of a proposed development. The overpass was built before the homes, therefore giving the overpass extremely limited use.

Car accident incurs more than $100 in damages to campus wall

by BILL TROXELL

A car driven by an unidentified driver, ran up the curb and smashed into the stone wall around the tree in front of Haas

Auditorium in a hit and run accident which occurred at approximately 1:20 a.m. Monday.

The accident did not result with any injuries, but damage to the wall was assessed at over $100. Damage to the car is not known. According to several witnesses, the car was traveling in a wreckless fashion from Columbia Hall and attempted to negotiate a right turn towards Navy Hall. Failing to do so, he ran up the curb and struck the wall and immediately left the scene. The witnesses were sitting on a bench on the other side of the tree.

The car was later identified as a 1975 Plymouth Roadrunner. In scrapping the wall, parts of the headlights, fiberglass body, and a hub cap were left behind.

The driver whose name has not been released, turned himself in Tuesday morning, therefore putting an end to the investigation by D. S. Ruckle of Campus Security. Security has decided not to cite the driver for reckless driving or leaving the scene of an accident because he turned himself in and will pay restitution for damages.

Off on a tangent

JOE SYLVESTER

Big time intrigue

Don't be afraid to make waves

Last year, for the first time in BSC history the use of a lawyer became available to students. Although, he was only here in an advisory capacity, nearly 80 students saw the lawyer in the 12 hours he was on campus.

The thorn which has constantly been in the side of those working to obtain a lawyer has been the inability to determine exactly how many students might use a lawyer. However, with the aforementioned number it is very plain to see that many students could and would use a lawyer.

It is with this in mind that Tom Mulhern, CGA president, has initiated the movement to obtain a lawyer for students by appointing a committee of CGA to investigate the possibility of getting a bonafied legal service for students. The committee has worked hard and the bids were sent to five area lawyers on Wednesday. The bids give the lawyer two options. He will either be here on an advisory basis, as Tom James was last year, or he will be able to take action for students with the approval of CGA.

The time when students did not need a lawyer has passed. It is imperative that a lawyer is hired for students, especially in light of the struggles which students have at BSC. We could deal effectively with the housing "slumlords", the questionable contracts, which students are some times forced to sign and receive counseling on matters with legal implications.

Although the lawyers duties will be limited to housing, rentals, contracts and leases for the present, the procurement of legal aid is a stepping stone toward gaining a full time lawyer to deal with all student problems. Matti Prima, who is chairing the lawyer committee, feels that, "students should have an outlet in the form of legal services provided by the student government to receive fair treatment that normally would be difficult for students to obtain." Prima also indicated that the committee's proposal to CGA for the lawyer will probably occur at the November 1 meeting of CGA.

It is only fitting that the money which students pay in the form of a community activities fee, should be put to use to gain a reputable legal service. We will only be helping ourselves by expressing the support for a student lawyer. If we all sit back on our collective butts and think that this thing will take care of itself, we're fooling ourselves. Some have expressed a desire not to have a lawyer, but many people seem to feel that one is needed.

If you really believe that a lawyer is needed voice your opinion to your CGA representatives, if you know who they are. If not go to the CGA meetings and make some noise in support of a lawyer. Without the endorsement of students the idea of having a lawyer will falter and then disintegrate. Don't be afraid to make waves by voicing your support.

DALE MYERS

Are students dumb because they continue to rent refrigerators that are unsafe, or are they dumb because they do not know how to counterfeit gold coins?

I wondered about that when I was reading the recent story in the Campus Voice concerning what is referred to as the 'Great Refrigerator Rip-off Case'.

In that story college students were called 'dumb' by Michael Arcus as he spoke in an interview from the Allenwood Federal Penitentiary. (There's a bit of irony for you.) He also said that college students are "no better than gargagemen and street cleaners". I realize that there are a few garbage courses offered here, but saying what Arcus said is going a little overboard.

Whatever the case, however, it looks as though quite a few students have been stuck with refrigerators which, if used, can cause overloaded circuits, power blackouts, or a fire.

It has been a disappointment for those students who have tried to get their money back. Some are out thirty-one dollars and others, forty-one dollars and, there is little hope for recovering their money in the future since they signed a legal contract with the Arcus Brothers when they rented the refrigerators.

It was recently made known to me that a reporter for the Campus Voice who did one of the stories on this refrigerator deal has been receiving strange telephone calls. I am not implying that it has anything to do with this whole mess of illegally rented refrigerators, or that it has anything to do with anything illegal, or for that matter even refrigerators. It's just something to think about.

But when I started to write this column about the refrigerators, I imagined just for the heck of it that maybe there really is something to this. If there is, I want to get in on it. I thought that kind of thing only happened in the movies.

You have to look at it from my point of view; I have never had a threatening phone call in my life. I saw this as an opportunity to get my first one. To call me would be no problem; information has my number.

Now that I got that off my chest I can get to my final point. It has been suggested that students, everyone of us, boycott the Arcus Brothers store. Even if a boycott only makes a small dent in their business, it is better than giving them the students' business. Continuing to patronize them would only give them one more reason to laugh at us.

Part II

PART II

After a concerted effort by the four of us, we managed to free my brother from the tenacious hold of the twisted power hoist. Undoubtedly it had saved many lives when in use, but it nearly claimed a life this time. Even with our strength nearly exhausted Clark and I managed to help the two Navy airmen, Paul Dawcett and Clyde Burke, drag Steven into the safety of a life raft. Once in the raft, we pushed off from the sinking helicopter.

By the time we reached shore the great hole in the sky had vanished, and the blades of the doomed chopper were barely visible beneath the swells of the red sea. Once on the beach we made our way back to the Cessna, where we determined the extent of my brother's injuries. They were minor, consisting of a turned ankle, bruised knee, and mild concussion. The cool seawater brought him around in a matter of minutes. Upon awakening he asked a veritable torrent of questions, all of which we had been through with Dawcett and Burke during the ride back from the sunken aircraft. For his benefit we again explained that this was another dimension, embodying the antithesis of our known laws of physics. I further told of the events leading up to our arrival here; that we were searching for their very helicopter.

"Then you've got things screwed-up, Bobby." My brother replied. "If you left to look for us yesterday, then it would have been on September thirtieth, not October second." Steve then showed me his calendar watch. I gasped out loud, partially because the date read October first, and partially because his damn three hundred dollar watch was running backwards. It was on checking my own digital watch that I noticed it too was displaying negative time! "Mine won't run at all." Dawcett stated. "Damn seawater!" Time, like everything else in this place, was backwards.

By nightfall we decided to form an immediate plan of action. Since we were now living in an alien world, we must find out if there was drinkable water and edible food, else our survival would be academic. Burke, having the most scientific training of any of us, was delegated to collect and correlate as much data as possible about this place. Dawcett and Steven were in charge of guarding the plane against attack by whatever hostile animals might be lurking about. Evans, Burke, and myself would begin explorations as soon as it became light.

We slept soundly that night, unaware of the greenish glow of crude torches surrounding our plane, or of the padding of unshod feet outside the cabin.

Only when I thought I heard shouting did I awake to see the emerald fires burning outside the cabin window of the Cessna. Arousing the others, I climbed to the cockpit of the plane to get a better view.

The eerie torches outlined the brutish forms of things reminiscent of Pierre Boule's Planet of the Apes. While they walked erect like common men, their features were clearly ape-like. My momentary elation at having established contact with potentially intelligent life was overshadowed by the fear that they were also potentially hostile. Clark Evans went to the door and opened it slowly. He tossed-off our warnings of possible danger, and cautiously descended.

Fully illuminated in the light of those torches, Evans extended his empty hands in a gesture of good will. One of the creatures approached him carefully, holding a "L"-shaped piece of crystal in a threatening manner. Clark started backing up. Finally his back was against the ladder. Dawcett drew his .45 caliber automatic from its holster and whispered to him: "I'm ready to back you up, Clark, just give the word."

Something crawled from beneath the plane and seized Evans, knocking him and it thrashing onto the sand. The beast holding the oddly formed crystal let it go with a sudden, swift motion. It struck the hull just above the open door emitting a bright green flash and dull explosion. Dawcett fired on the retreating creature, sending it sprawling onto the dark sand of the beach. In order that my comrade's fire might be better directed, I instinctively switched on the plane's marker and search lights.

Everyone needs a little privacy

by JAY JONES

Privacy is something everyone needs. It's good to have friends, people in fact need friends, but privacy is something just as important. Everyone needs to be by themselves sometimes, to have certain things known only to themselves. We need our secrets.

Unfortunately it is a fact of life that in our so called modern society, privacy is quickly a disappearing thing. Not only are we squeezed together in our living spaces, our places of entertainment, our schools, but our personal lives and personal feelings and biases (we all have them) are now probably filed away in several different places around the country. Your race, color, religion, IQ just about everything you've ever put down on paper about yourself is probably filed away somewhere possibly waiting to be scrutinized by who-so-ever feels the need to do so. You're right, it's scary.

Over the past few years people have finally begun to ask questions as to where all this information is going, where it is being stored and most of all what is it being used for? Not the least of these people is an organization just about everyone has heard of, the American Civil Liberties Union. They have published an extremely informative and important little booklet entitled appropriately enough Privacy Handbook. It is this book's sole purpose to tell you exactly what may or may not be stashed away about you.

Of course, it's not that the government has cooked up some type of plot to file away every citizen in the US, it's simply that since the day you were born you've filled in forms, papers and what-not for almost everything. Just think back to the paperwork you filled out to get into school, or to apply for a grant or register for the draft, etc.etc.etc. The point is that there could be a lot of information piled up about you somewhere, some of it false, old or totally inaccurate waiting for someone to take a peek at it. Your old school records, any arrests, etc. even if they are false, could be there.

So how do you find out what

Swine flu

Nothing to sneeze about

by GENE W. WALTERS

Swine flu inoculations will be given to all Bloomsburg State College students free of charge to everyone wanting them, said Ann Koast, Health Center Day Nurse.

Swine flue is a strain of a particularly virulent influenza which threatens to cause a worldwide epidemic this winter season. Health experts predict that swine flue may be more serious than ordinary Asian type flue which made an estimated 40 to 50 million Americans ill in 1957-58.

the story is? How do you find out what you can and cannot see, not only about yourself but also what the organizations of the government are up to? Well, step number one is to somehow scrape up fifty cents and send it to the ACLU asking for their privacy handbook (ACLU), Eastern Missouri Fund 8011 Clayton Road, St. Louis, Missouri 63105). That will tell you everything you want to know about public, arrest, student, juvenile, employee, military, medical, credit, bank, and tax records. It is a good book to have.

If you're an American you have the right to privacy. Do yourself a favor and read this booklet.

For further information on specific dates and times of inoculations, call Ann Koast, Day Nurse, or Mrs. Marion Koons, Night Nurse at 389-3807.

The stated goal of Federal state and local governments is to vaccinate as many people as possible before the arrival of the flue season, with a special vaccine made from fertilized eggs.

One of the major dangers of swine flu, Koast said is that it may be fatal, and can cause defects to occur in vision and the liver.

Immunizations should not be taken by those allergic to egg embryo, or eggs, Koast said. If a tuberculosis fine test is taken, an individual should wait for at least 30 days before receiving swine flue vaccine.

Koast also said that at least two weeks should elapse between taking swine flu and regular flu shots, but it "should" be taken even if a regular flu shot is given.

High risk types should take the immunization immediately, Koast said, especially heart patients, diabetics and those having respiratory problems.

For further information on specific dates and times of inoculations, call Ann Koast, Day Nurse, or Mrs. Marion Koons, Night Nurse at 389-3807.

Dear Editor,

As many of you know there has been a memorial fund established at the college for my late husband, Dr. Lee E. Aumiller.

It is my understanding that monies have been contributed to this fund from time to time, the most recent of which was from members of the golf safari. Because I have not always been aware of your gifts, I would like to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of you. Please accept my apologies for contributions that were not personally acknowledged. Again, thank you.

The devil's sea

The result was both amazing and horrifying. The instant the lights came on, the sand became white once more, the sea was blue again, and the trees in the distance were green, but then there were the screams. Cries of torment beyond imagination rose above the shouts of Evans, Dawcett, and the others. Leaving the marker lights on, I shut off the powerful searchlights and passed back through the cabin to where the others had gathered. I was greeted by the unmistakable stench of charred flesh.

Now that the weather has stripped the trees of their fall foliage, the town is launching its annual campaign to clear the streets of fallen leaves and other debris.

Chief Haggerty has called upon me to remind you that the fall street sweeping schedule will begin on Monday, October 18, and continue for several weeks. Students parking on town streets are asked to consult the street sweeping schedules posted on signs on all town streets and to observe the parking restrictions in effect during those days.

Cole works with health institute

Dr. James E. Cole, Professor of Biology and Program Co-ordinator for Health Sciences at Bloomsburg State College, has been informed that he has been selected to participate in a training institute for Allied Health Administrators to be held in Washington, D.C. in the Spring, 1977.

The institute is funded under a grant from the Department of Health Education and Welfare, Bureau of Health Man Power and is sponsored by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. Dr. Cole was one of thirty people chosen from applicants of senior-level colleges and universities in eastern United States.

The institute will seek to enhance the capabilities of Allied Health Administrators by increasing managerial skills, increasing knowledge of legal and ethical aspects of allied health administrators and increasing the capabilities for long-range programmatic planning.

Since 1973, Dr. Cole has been involved in the planning and development of programs to educate health professionals in a variety of health-oriented professions.

Students find jobs and information

by BOB SCHLACTER

Take a few minutes to read this article, because it may be the key to your future career plans once you leave this place of higher learning.

It takes the form of the Career Development and Placement Center located in a remote part of the Benjamin Franklin Building. At the helm are two very confident people, Tom Davies and his assistant director, Joanne Day, who would not let me leave until they were sure I would get their point across...

The major function of their department is to furnish students regardless of their year, with career and planning counseling. Information is given to the eager student in the form of various resources to give them facts and figures about careers.

The unique feature of this center is the fact that you receive treatment on a one to one basis, with no pressure applied for a change. Students unsure of their majors at this time are not looked down upon at all at this center. "We are here for everyone and our philosophy here is to make the student as comfortable as possible", Davies encouraged.

Seniors are helped to find meaningful employment, but are on their own after receiving the proper guidance on where to seek their interests. The department works as a counseling center, and not a clearing house or placement service.

However, the job does not stop with seniors. The center offers student teachers' help also, with aides in resume writing, provide clerical services, post job information, and send out vacancy lists as well.

Perhaps the most advantageous position may well lie in the lapse of all the undergraduate students, who are offered an excellent chance to get a jump on career plans. The development of a career library that helps in finding employment and providing information on what career they may want to pursue, is the number one asset of the center.

These people have tried to reach you right away, from the minute you came to orientation, but most people tend to forget all about them.

"We still have a lot of students to reach," Day added, and reaching is exactly what they're trying to do. First, the center is preparing programs to be set up for residence halls offering information on various majors offered. They also intend to hit the parents for Parents Day weekend by presenting them with information and displays in the union. They will be talking with parents and students as they present facts about subject area and career options. These people are even interested enough to go out and chase down companies and school districts who are looking for recruits.

When asked how the program has been growing, Ms. Day replied that a lot more students had been coming around, and was very impressed with how many students came in and made appointments with them. I also find that we are more visible to students here than at other colleges.

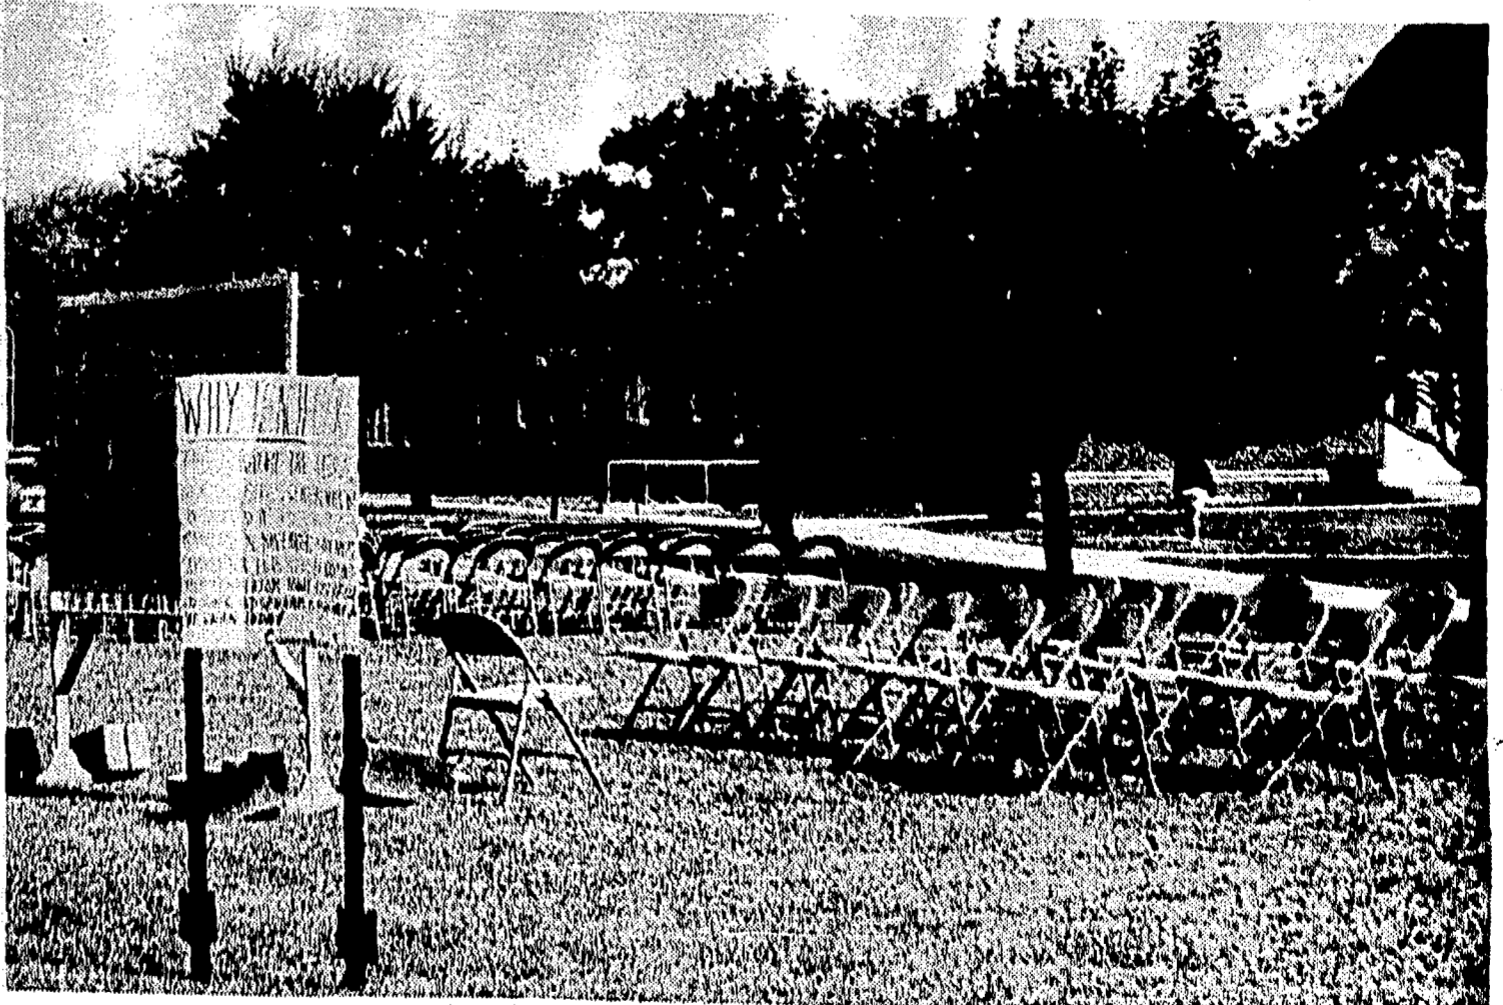

Day and Davies are trying to get closer knit with the faculty by developing meaningful relationships and setting up liaison committees to develop closer communication. The problem that the center encounters in doing this is that there is not enough staff to handle the time that it takes. They feel that there is a lot of support behind them and are getting all the help possible by administrators.

The center is open every day and offers Wednesday nights till eight pm to come in for the people who can't make it during the day. Saturday mornings are also available to off-campus students from 11 am till 12 noon.

There are no hassles involved in the Career Development and Placement Center, and it may even give you a chance to make something of yourself and restore confidence to your distant plans. As for Tom Davies and Joanne Day, they are taking on a big burden but are insistent on the fact that "Students are the reason we are here."

The site of the new Human Services Building was not used even on Student Activist day because the activists were afraid of rain and damp feet.

PSYCHOLOGY INTERNSHIP

Students with at least 12 hours of psychology may apply for a spring internship position. Students receive academic credit, nominal pay in some cases, and professional supervision, in return for 10 hours of work per week. Interested applicants should see Professor John Baird (26 Old Science, 389-2919) or Mrs. Sandra Long (31 Old Science, 389-3916).

The Arts Council, with the help of the art department, is sponsoring a five-year retrospective exhibition of the works of Julio Da Chuna. The works are on exhibition in the Haas Gallery through October 29.

Professor Da Chuna was on hand recently for the artist's reception, where he presented a "rather unorthodox demonstration, written this past summer, on the experience of the artist during the "creative process."

The presentation, consisting of slides from his early work to his most recent, was set to a contemporary musical piece which Da Cunha felt was the perfect combination with which to convey the text.

The works in the exhibition cover five periods of Da Cunha's career, the years 1970 through 1975. He explained that these works represented a "rest period" in his career. He had been working with figures, but spent that time doing abstract.

During that time, his works have been the subject of five one-man shows. The series on display include "Flowers of Evil", which Da Cunha completed in 1970. "The Fallen Angels and Other Images", "Geometric Solids", and Embrollos I and II complete the exhibit.

A professor at the University of Delaware, Da Cunha earned his Master of Fine Arts Degree from the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan.

His close associations and friendship with Percival Roberts, III, chairman of the department of art, made it possible for him to bring this exhibition to Bloomsburg. Roberts was one of Da Cunha's first students and they have come to be close friends over the past twenty years, which, as Da Cunha said, "dispels the myth that professors and students have to be adversaries."

Many of Da Cunha's works are contained in both public and private collections. "Three of his paintings were included in the American Painters in Paris Exhibition held in connection with the Bicentennial."

The exhibition will be in the Haas Gallery until the 29th of this month. The gallery is open Monday through Friday from eight to five p.m. and admission is free.

Golden Rams butt Huskies, 17-0

In the game last weekend at West Chester, the Huskies dropped another exciting game to the Golden Rams 17-0. The score doesn't tell the whole story.

The Rams made the first attack on the Huskies stick by scoring on the first drive of the ball game going 90 yards in all, capped by a twelve yard passing play. The West Chester team could not get up another offensive scoring drive for the rest of the game. For that matter, neither could the Huskies.

The scoring for the Rams came on a field goal in the second quarter after a stalled drive and good defensive play by the Bloomsburg team. The last touchdown was "given" to West Chester in the last few minutes of the game on a fumble by the offensive team in the end zone.

"We thought we had the stuff to beat them, but our mistakes overshadowed our hopes, and we couldn't get a sustained drive going," commented Coach Puhl.

"They were a tough team but I feel we still are gaining respect in our league. After the game, a lot of the players thought the game was going to be a push over but, like I've said in the past, they hit up until the final gun goes off," stated Coach Puhl.

In total offense, the Huskies gained 181 yards with 112 in passing and only 69 in rushing. Lou Sannutti had the lone Husky interception, and West Chester had three, but both teams had the opportunity to gain statistics in that department if they didn't drop the ball.

The Huskies are now 1-3 overall and 1-1 in the conference, just like West Chester, and this weekend the Bloomsburg team has the opportunity to up their winning percentage when they face Millersville on Saturday.

"We would like to win this one for the alumni and other people that support us plus the fact we would like to pay Millersville back for the game last year, in a like manner if possible," expressed Coach Puhl.

The Maurders are presently 2-2 with losses to Slippery Rock and West Chester and wins over Mansfield and Kutztown. The Husky coaching staff looks forward to a good hard hitting game with Millersville, and they hope they and the team will be able to make Homecoming weekend a success. SUPPORT THE HUSKIES. Game time is 1:30 pm at Redman Stadium.

Huskiettes tops S.U., J.V.'s stand perfect

by DENISERATH

Defeating host Susquehanna University on Tuesday past, the varsity field hockey team now holds a 3-2-1 record. The junior varsity, in shutting-out S.U. 3-0, remains undefeated.

Playing under perfect weather conditions, Bloomsburg dominated the first half of the game. After numerous scoring opportunities, the Huskies finally capitalized on a drive by Cheryl Krouse. Freshman Pat Beans deflected the shot into the goal for the score, the first of the game. At the close of the half, BSC led 1-0.

Early in the second half, Kathy Hotchkiss extended Bloomsburg's lead to 2-0, scoring on an excellent play. The Huskies then appeared to be content with their lead. The hosts, after a succession of penalty corners, finally scored. This goal by S.U. was apparently the spark that BSC needed to get itself moving once again. With eight minutes left in the game, halfback Donna Santa Maria left the game with a knee injury. Because Bloomsburg had already made the two substitutions allotted to each team, the girls were forced to play short-handed. This provided for an exciting finish to the game. The Huskies, realizing their situation, fought even harder than before. At the two minute mark, Sharon Gettel scored a short-handed goal for BSC. Susquehanna, despite its advantage, failed to score.

All the women played well and contributed to the 3-1 victory.

Bloomsburg's junior varsity again played very well. The squad is having a fine season and this win extended their record to 4-0-1.

Barb Freeby, on an excellent deflection, put the Huskies ahead in the first half. Though BSC had many scoring chances, they failed to do so. But S.U. also did not score and trailed at the half 1-0.

Ann Joan Baldasano's goal, coming midway in the final half, capped a good rush at goal. Once again, Susquehanna was held scoreless by the strong Husky defense.

Cross-country captain runs despite hard luck

by BONNIE EPLETT

Perhaps you've seen a pack of bearded harriers (cross country symbol) making their way through the streets of Bloomsburg out to Catawissa and back again. Competing against time, nature, and physical endurance makes it hard to fathom what one can obtain from taking his body to the physical limit, but Garry Lausch, captain of the cross country team, feels great satisfaction and self-respect after winning this most personal competition.

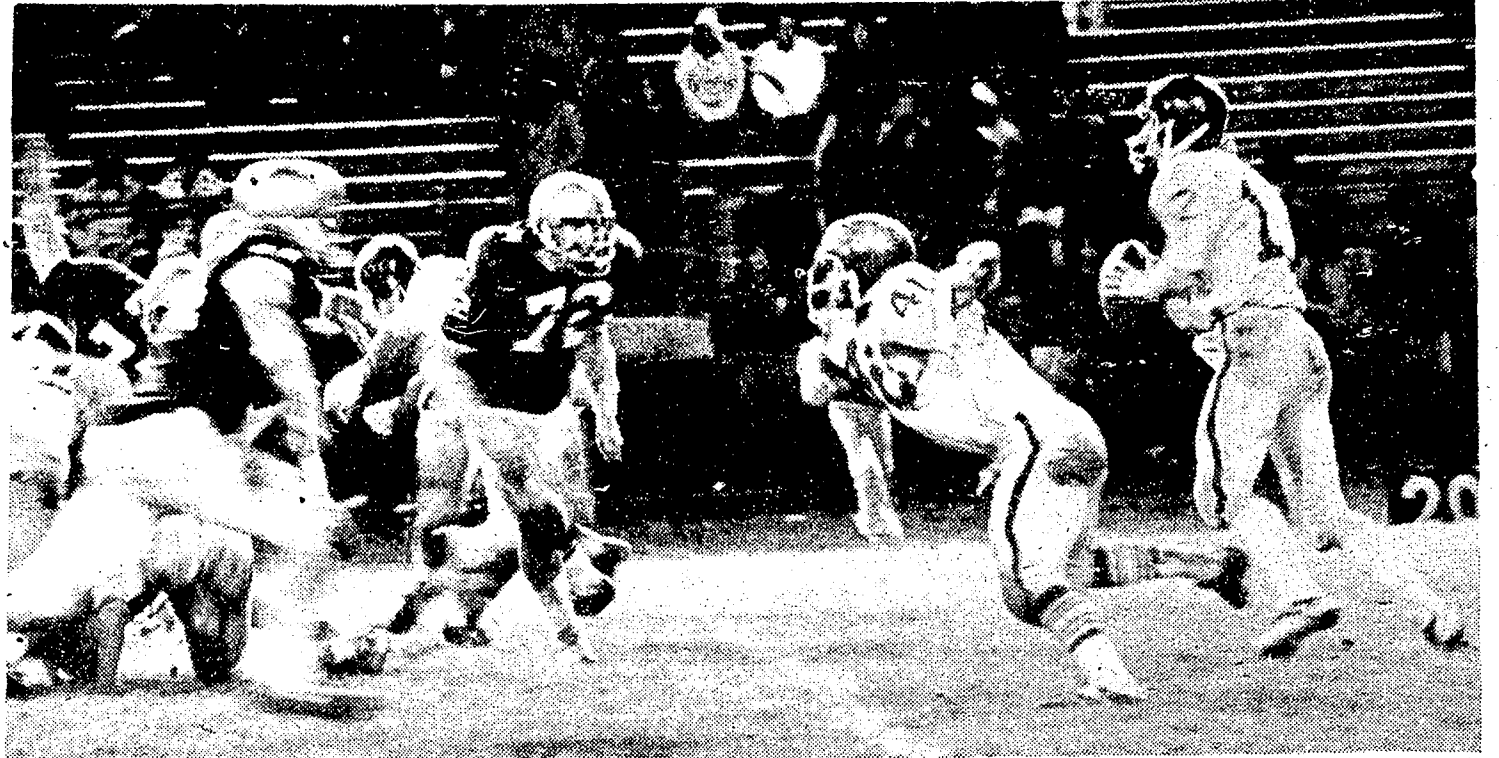

Not only has Garry competed against other runners, he has had to contend with a demanding assortment of afflictions. Due to either mononucleosis or wounded ligaments and muscles, this unfortunate harrier has never seen the completion of a cross country season. Yet Garry does not allow his past destroy his self-confidence and currently runs the five mile course in an astonishing time of 26 minutes 16 seconds.

As a senior, Garry has learned through experience. Troubled sometimes by the individualistic attitudes taken by some of his teammates, he feels they must learn to work more as a unit and encourages each one to become brothers to the others. Even though at times he feels separation he is the first to admit the needs of running in groups. They help one another when a difficult hill becomes almost impossible, and remind themselves at grueling moments the tremendous feeling of accomplishment that floods through them after they cross the finish line.

Once a swimmer for Bloomsburg, Garry turned to running all three seasons. As long as his joints hold together and endure the constant banging he says he will continue to run. After his graduation in January, he plans on running with the Norristown Striders in A.A.U. competition.

The cross country state championships will be held November 6, at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Garry will surely be a top contender for honors there - and also in any other track and field games in which he chooses to compete.
