Off-Campus Arrests Citations Can Effect Job Opportunities

By PATTI MARTIN

QUESTION 35: Have you at any time been arrested? An increasing number of employers will be asking this question on job applications and interviews. And what will the student's response be?

If the student is among the many people who have received citations, the answer is an unqualified yes.

"It could be a student or a town citizen and we would cite them equally."

"A citation is a summary offense, and it is an arrest," says Larry Smith, Bloomsburg Chief of Police. "It's the same as a speeding ticket or going through a red light."

Township police have come under attack recently by students for cracking down too hard on parties. According to Smith, though, the police are only enforcing the law.

"We are enforcing laws that come under the crimes code," he says, "whether or not the college instigates a party policy or not."

Since off-campus students are considered townspeople, law enforcement falls under the jurisdiction of the town police. Smith says that the college does not interfere in the policing, whether it involves a fraternity, sorority, social group or an individual.

"Off-campus students are town residents and they must obey the rules set up by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

We enforce the law, regardless. It could be a student or a town citizen and we would cite them equally."

Smith pointed out that most of the citations issued are for noise violations, not alcohol possession or consumption. He explained that the noise violations occur when there is unreasonable noise at unreasonable hours.

"People in the town of Bloomsburg have to work, and from Sunday to Friday they want their sleep," Smith stated. "People here are the same as anywhere else; they have to eat and sleep."

Citations for noise, though, are issued at the responding officer's discretion. "Upon arriving at a residence, they have my permission, providing that the noise is not excessive, to not issue a warning."

But, if an officer has to return to the same residence for the same violation during the same day or night, the offense becomes a misdemeanor. This could result in a possible arrest complete with fingerprints and mug shots, with the records sent to Harrisburg.

A citation or an arrest, though, is directly reported to the Office of Student Life.

A record is kept at the police station for 10 years after a person's death.

"Employers are checking into a person's background. Applicants are flooding the job market and job selection has become highly selective," Smith stated.

According to Smith, a party can consist of one to one hundred persons.

"A citation or an arrest, though, is directly reported to the office of Student Life."

When an officer arrives at a party he will knock at the door. If no one answers the door and the noise persists, he can justifiably enter the residence. "I trust my men," Smith said. "They will make every effort to get someone's attention before entering, and will do so, unannounced, only as a last resort."

If someone does answer the door, the officer will ask who is in charge of the party. If no one assumes responsibility, the party becomes an illegal formation and everyone is arrested. Party-goers over 21 could then be charged with misdemeanor offenses, such as corrupting the morals of a minor, providing alcohol to a minor, and possession and consumption of an alcoholic beverage.

What does Smith believe the reason is for under-age consumption? "I think it's a chance to show off. It makes a person feel like a big shot," he said. "I've noticed that once a person is 21 and he does not have to sneak it, drinking loses some of its prestige."

The rumors that the police are arresting students to increase revenue are unfounded, Smith declared. "Fines do not even account for 10 percent of revenue generated," he stated. "That would not even be able to pay two officers' salaries."

"Students have to grow up and face reality. Students will be here for only four years, while townspeople will be here forever," he said. "Why not try and use a little common sense?"

"Of the 5,000 students at BSC, only about 100 are arrested in one year's time. Why not ask the other 4,900 students what they do to stay out of trouble?"

As Smith reiterated, disregarding the law, might result in a lost job opportunity due to a blemish on a record. "The past WILL come back to haunt the student," Smith said, "It's inevitable."

Rep. Assembly discusses pledging

By ANGEL GRASSO

The effects of pledging on the academic work of students was one of the major concerns at the Representative Assembly meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 4. It was pointed out that the majority of students who pledge suffer a drop in their cumulative average because they are only allowed to set aside two hours a night to study.

"Peer pressure to pledge a Greek organization is so strong that students will risk the loss of a degree or job in order to have a friend," said Dr. Larry Mack, chemistry professor.

It was suggested that students should be made aware of the results of pledging. "As an academic community, we should organize ourselves more efficiently toward the educational aspect," said Mack. He added that guidelines for pledging need to be set.

The coordinating committees reported on the topics on the agenda for the upcoming year. Academic Affairs chairman Larry Hack noted the importance of communication between the Committees and the Assembly and added that

Workshop Helps Relieve Stress

By DENNIS BEAVER

The American Society for Personnel Administration (ASPA) and Phi Beta Lambda (PBL) are co-sponsoring a stress-management workshop on Monday, November 9, 1981 in the President's Lounge, Kehr Union Building.

The workshop will take place from 7:00-9:30 p.m. Instructors for the workshop will be Dr. Marty Salanack, a psychologist at the Lewisburg Penitentiary, and Mr. Tom Zimmerman, a licensed clinical psychologist at Devine Providence Community Mental Health Center in Williamsport, PA.

The workshop will be presented on a professional level similar to other workshops presented by Mr. Zimmerman and Dr. Salanack to professionals in various fields. The workshop will begin with a short review of common sources of stress; then the group will be separated into smaller groups to learn cognitive techniques to relieve stress as well as experiencing relaxation training.

With the skilled instructors and "hands on" participation, the workshop promises to not only help students in their post-college stressful lives, but also to help them find relaxation while still pursuing professional careers in college.

The stress-management workshop is being offered free to all ASPA and PBL members.

An additional 25 seats are available for any non-member who may wish to attend. Because of the limited number of participants, seats will be offered on a "first come, first serve" basis. There will be a $3 charge to non-members to help cover the cost of the workshop.

To reserve a seat, non-members should contact either Dennis Beaver (ASPA) at 784-3252 or Phil Hosler (PBL) at 784-0458.

Forensics Host Annual Tournament

Are you looking for something different to do this weekend? Then perhaps you would find it interesting to attend the 13th Annual Mad Hatter Speech Tournament, hosted by the Bloomsburg State College Forensic Team.

Under the direction of Professor Harry C. Strine III, the two-day tournament begins on Friday, November 6, at 2:00 p.m. and runs through Saturday, November 7, at 5:00 p.m. Over 300 students from 30-40 schools are expected to attend the tournament.

Schools such as the University of Kansas, Pennsecola College (Florida), Eastern Michigan University, University of Akron, Bradley University (Illinois), West Chester State College, Wilkes College, Lehigh University, Shippensburg State College, and Clarion State College are expected to be represented. BSC does not compete in the tournament.

Students will compete for trophies and savings bonds in the areas of Impromptu Speaking, Extemporaneous Speaking, Poetry and Prose Interpretation, Dramatic Duo, Persuasive and Informative Speaking, After Dinner Speaking, and Sales. The tournament is sponsored in part by a grant from the Reader's Digest Association, Inc.

According to Strine, "This will be the biggest and best 'Mad Hatter' in years. We are really looking forward to the tournament."

The tournament will be headquartered in Bakeless and competition will be held in various campus buildings. Additional information is available from Mr. Strine or from any forensic team member.

Who is to blame for concert failures?

By ROBERTA CLEMENS

Rumor has it that because of the inefficiencies of the Concert Committee, BSC will have no more concerts this year. The fact that there will be no more concerts may not be a rumor, but the suspicion of it being all the Concert Committee's fault is just that, a rumor, probably started by someone who doesn't know better.

I feel the students themselves are to blame for the failure of the concerts this year at BSC. The main reason for this is because students are not willing to expand their musical tastes outside of what is on the top 40 list, and played on WHLM day after day.

If the group featured has not produced radio hits, one after the other, then tickets won't sell. Students want things handed to them, very rarely do they strive to persue. Both Utopia and Ian Hunter proved to be very enjoyable concerts, but having a somewhat unfamiliar name, tickets didn't sell. Hall & Oates, America, (top 40ish) for example, both sold out.

Some other reasons why tickets don't sell are because students have studies and don't want to spend the money anyway.

So you have a test the day after a concert, and you must spend every second of time studying. But think of your actual study time? Most serious studying is done after 11 p.m., when all distractions have ceased. The two hours that you should have been studying and could have been at the concert were probably spent in front of a TV or spent chatting with your roommates. So you hit yourself in the head and say, "I should have gone to the concert."

"I don't have the money," is also a familiar complaint. Where else on this earth can you buy a con-

Marvelous Marv Motivates Men

By RICK DiLIBERTO

Anyone who has ever been in Luzerne Hall knows him — the tall, well-built fellow with the flat top haircut, wire rimmed glasses and pipe. He can be found hard at work on the first and fourth floors or in the lobby. His deep, rough voice can be heard echoing through the halls with a hearty, "Hey there, buddy," or "How's it goin' chief?"

The man described is Marv Keefer, a custodian in Luzerne.

He has been a part of the building for as long as anyone can remember. However, he is not an ordinary custodian, he has developed over the years a "family" in Luzerne.

"These guys all have to live here together, and they know how important it is to keep the place clean and to respect each other," says Keefer.

Besides his custodial duties, Keefer works closely with the Dean of Luzerne, and the RA staff in order to keep the atmosphere of the building as enjoyable as possible.

Marv has developed an "RA of the Month" contest in order to recognize the RA who has provided the best monthly programming and service to the residents of Luzerne. Also, for the past three years, he has coordinated the "Marvelous Marv Maintenance Contest" which pits the dorm wings against each other in a competition for the cleanest surroundings. Marv monitors the building for a week with a precise checklist and rating scale and awards the cleanest wing with a pizza party at the end of the contest.

He also runs a room decorating contest at Christmas, and is presently working with RA, Dennis Girton, in putting together a staff baby picture contest. In this contest, students in Luzerne will get a chance to identify the RA's and the dean by their baby pictures. Marv feels this will be beneficial in getting the residents to know other RAs in the building. A prize is offered for the winning entry.

"Besides his custodial duties, Keefer works closely with the Dean."

Marv's friendliness and good nature has become a constant "pick me up" to the men of Luzerne. So, the next time you're in Luzerne and hear, "Hey there buddy," or "How're we set for the weekend," track down the source of the greeting and give a big smile to marvelous Marv Keefer.

Letters to the Editor

Teaching Jobs
Dear Editor:

The Foreign & Domestic Teachers Organization needs teacher applicants in all fields -- from Kindergarten through College -- to fill between 500 and 600 teaching vacancies both at home and abroad.

The principle problem with first-year teachers is where to find the jobs.

Since 1968, our organization has been finding vacancies and locating teachers both in foreign countries and in all fifty states. We possess hundreds of current openings and have all of the pertinent information on scholarships, grants, and fellowships.

Our information and brochure is free and comes at an opportune time when there are many more teachers than teaching positions.

Should you wish additional information about our organization, you may write the Portland Oregon Better Business Bureau or the National Teacher's Placement Agency, Universal Teachers, Box 5231, Portland, Oregon 97208.

Sincerely,
John P. McAndrew,
President
Foreign & Domestic Teachers.

"Short" Writers Are in Short Demand

Campus Digest News Service Writers of short stories are operating in a very competitive market these days. Many of the students in this category find an outlet for their work in the small university literary magazines around the country.

But the competition for space, even in those magazines, has grown enormously.

There are approximately 2,000 small literary magazines in the country. About one third of those are estimated to be connected with some college or university.

One example of the influx of material for those magazines is the Antioch Review at Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio. That literary magazine received 1,925 unsolicited manuscripts last year. It had room to publish only 16.

Why the flood of short story manuscripts? One reason is a resurgence in the popularity of writing short stories. Although the market for selling the stories has not greatly increased, the number of people who like to write them has increased dramatically.

The literary magazines that provide this outlet for writers prove that the public is not quite as ready to read the short story as the writer is ready to write it. The average life of a small literary magazine is two years, five years if it is connected with a university.

The interest in writing short stories may stem from the multitude of writers coming out of the masters of fine arts programs around the country.

It also might be connected with a "I am going to work at something I really enjoy," attitude that swept the country during the 70s and spilled over into the 80s.

But no article on the mass of short story writers could diminish the number of that group. Because each and every one writes because he or she knows they are better than the next person. They know they are the ones that will make it to the top like they have dreamed of doing since childhood. They all will tell stories of how they wrote short stories while they were in high school.

But the truth is, it is only those who know they are the best that make it. Because there are thousands of great writers in America, but only a handful with the perseverance to prove it. So they are all out there trying to prove to others and to themselves that they belong to that handful that will make it. Thus, there is a flood of writers willing to put in their lean years, in hopes of finally climbing into that successful handful.

CAS members elected to national board

Three members of the Commonwealth Association of Students (CAS) were elected to national offices in two student organizations at the State Student Association Conference in Lincoln, Nebraska.

Craig Livingstone was chosen national vice-chairperson of the United States Student Association (USSA) at their Board of Directors meeting held during the conference. USSA is the lobby organization for over 3.5 million students involved in higher education across the country.

Livingstone, a senior at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, is also chairperson of the CAS Board of Coordinators.

The other two students were elected to the National Alliance of State Student Associations (NASSA) Executive Committee. The students, both of Slippery Rock State College, are Connie Sloan and Michael Burk.

Sloan, currently secretary of CAS, was elected NASSA vice-chairperson. Burk was elected as one of two at-large members to the Executive Committee.

NASSA, founded for and dedicated to the improvement and strengthening of state student associations, celebrated its first anniversary at the conference. The event was the Ninth Annual State Student Association Conference sponsored by USSA, and the National Student Education Fund's joint project on SSA development.

"I am looking forward to serving NASSA, the committee has some great ideas and we plan to work closely with the Development Project," Sloan said. "One of the major outreaches will be to encourage minority and women involvement in state student associations."

The other members of the NASSA Executive Committee are chairperson Jim Clark, Associated Students of the University of Missouri; Secretary-Treasurer Doug Hagar, Associated Students of Kansas and at-large member Nette Nelson, Nebraska State Student Association.

Travel Service Sponsors Trips

By FRAN LUBIN

The Kehr College Union Travel and Leisure Service is open to anyone, not just BSC students.

This travel service sponsors group trips to Florida every spring break, and skiing trips every January. In addition, three or four one-day trips are organized each semester to professional sporting events, Broadway plays, and to malls for Christmas shopping. The service also organizes individual services upon request.

The travel service sponsors the free vans to and from the Bloomsburg Fair each year. They also sponsor buses to Allentown and King of Prussia over breaks. The travel service was organized approximately five years ago by Frank Lorah, a former BSC student and BSC comptroller.

Orchestra Presents Concert

The Bloomsburg College-Community Orchestra, John Master directing, will present its initial concert of the 1981-82 season in Haas Auditorium, Sunday afternoon, November 15, at 2:30 p.m. Deborah Reeder, cellist with the famed Philadelphia Orchestra, will be soloist. The Women's Choral Ensemble, Richard Stanislaw director, will perform the Magnificat by Vaughan Williams, with Lucille Rosholt, contralto soloist. There will be a pre-concert performance by the Womans Choral Ensemble in the auditorium lobby at 2:00 p.m.

Admission is $2.00. Tickets are available at the Kehr Union Information Desk — telephone 389-3902, and at the door. No charge with Community Activities Card or Patron Card. We hope you will join us for this festive occasion.

Comedy Festival Presented in Kehr

The BSC Literary and Film Society is sponsoring a five-hour comedy festival, beginning at 7 p.m., tonight in Kehr Union, Room A.

According to Prof. Deena DiStefano, film society sponsor, the purpose of the festival is "to help us get over the midterms." DiStefano says that students are invited to "bring pillows and blankets, and just, relax."

TONIGHT'S SCHEDULE:

7 p.m., 3 Stooges, "Disorder in the Court," and Burns and Allen, "100 Percent Service."

7:30 p.m., Robert Benchley, "Sex Life of a Polyp," and the Marx Brothers, "Monkey Business."

8 p.m., Jayne Mansfield and Ronald Reagan in "Foreign Press Awards," and Abbott and Costello in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

8:30 p.m., "Star Trek Bloopers," and The Little Rascals in "Bored of Education."

9 p.m., Harold Lloyd, "Spring Fever" and a Pink Panther cartoon.

Brothers, "Pigskin Capers," and W.C. Fields, "The Dentist."

10 p.m., Buster Keaton,

"Cops," and a Bugs Bunny cartoon.

10:30 p.m., Laurel and Hardy in "The Music Box."

11 p.m., Charlie Chaplin, "The Floor Walker," and W. C. Fields, "Fatal Glass of Beer."

The evening's comedy festival is free to students, staff, and faculty.

Two orange, cushion chairs were stolen from the Kehr Union Coffeehouse between the late hours of Monday, October 26 and the early morning hours of the 27th. The chairs were positioned in the northwest corner of the lounge and were valued at $53 each.

In a non-related incident, a Texas Instruments calculator was stolen from a faculty office in Old Science Hall between 4:25 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 27.

Security would appreciate any information on either incident.

Recently, they have received an increased number of reports of stolen backpacks and textbooks which were placed on the steps of the Scranton Commons while students were eating. For this reason, students are urged to leave their belongings in the cloakroom outside of dining room "B" before entering the dining rooms. Remember, it could happen to you!

BSC Has SOUL

By BRIAN L. McCAFFERTY

Are you concerned about Human Life issues? Does it bother you to belong to a society that advocates killing as a viable solution to our social problems? If your answers are 'yes,' then Students Organized to Uphold Life (S.O.U.L.) is for you.

S.O.U.L., in its first year of existence on campus, is BSC's only Pro-Life organization. It is concerned with all aspects of human life, from the pre-born to the elderly. The purpose of this group is to increase the awareness of and interest in Human Life issues within the college community and provide opportunities for expression and action on these issues.

Contrary to popular belief, the Pro-Life movement, and the S.O.U.L. organization is not an organization of fanatics or evangelists and is not political or religious. Abortion, capital punishment, and euthanasia are viewed as social issues.

If you are interested in BSC's newest student organization, the next meeting of S.O.U.L. is Wednesday, Nov. 18 at 9:00 p.m. in the President's Lounge. The advisor for S.O.U.L. is Dr. Ron Champoux of the Department of Communication Disorders. If you have any questions, please contact Dr. Champoux, or Brian McCafferty at 784-0458 or Box 3680 K.U.B.

New York City Comedians to Humor BSC

ANDY SCARPATI. Andy is one of the featured comedians at the Comedy Concert Nov. 8.

The Kehr Union Program Board and Scarpati Productions will present a "Comedy Concert" Sunday evening November 8th. The show features top stand-up comedians from the New York City Comedy Clubs (Improvisation, The Comic Strip, Catch A Rising Star). The comedians take the stage in the Coffeehouse at 8:00 p.m.

The host and producer of the show is Philadelphia comic Andy Scarpati, who recently performed on a Public Television variety show. Scarpati hosts two weekly Comedy Shows - the "Comedy Cabaret" in Wilmington, Delaware, which features weekend comedy shows, and the Wednesday night show at John & Peter's-a night club in New Hope, PA. Scarpati's "COMEDY CONCERTS" tour the east coast.

Comedian Paul Lyons will tickle your funny-bone with his crazy comedy routines. Lyons performs throughout New York and Philadelphia. He recently completed a major motion picture called "Taps". Lyons had a small part in the movie. Tim Hutton and George C. Scott star in the film.

YOUNG COMEDIAN TO ENTERTAIN Paul Lyons appeared in the movie Taps and will entertain in the Coffeehouse.

grade inflation at BSC will be an important topic of discussion. The Secretary elected for this year is Marlyse Heaps.

General Administration chairman Mr. William Frost held elections for student members. Those elected to the committee were Carolyn Hufnagle, Michael Gitt, and Joanne Prekel. Secretary is Sharon Swank.

Dr. Kay Camplese of the College Life committee said that upcoming topics included the formulation of a Student Harassment Policy, a Greek Advisory Board, a Recreation Board, and an Alcohol Awareness Committee.

Dr. Adrienne Leinwand of the Human Relations Committee spoke about realigning the search and screen procedures by looking at the policies of other colleges, and making the Affirmative Action effort more efficient.

In other elections held previously, the officers for the Executive Committee are Dr. Robert Rosholt, chairman, and Marylyse Heaps, secretary. George Nuehauser of Luzerne Hall was named to the Space and Facilities committee. The members elected to the Athletic Advisory committee are Tom Williams and Chris McPhillips, students, and Professors Joe Mueller and Cathy Constable.

Comedian Warsaw Willie will be on hand to create laughter. Warsaw is a regular in the Philadelphia Comedy Club circuit and he has also performed in New York. He is noted for his humorous stories about his family.

Non-Discrimination vs.
Affirmative Action:
There Is A Difference

By:

Adrienne Leinwand

I had a two-diet cola "business" lunch with a colleague the other week when an interesting thing occurred. We got together to discuss the searches his office would soon be initiating and he asked me to read the charge that would be given to the search and screen committee along with the qualifications that were expected of the chosen candidate. As I read the charge and the selection criteria a great wave of uneasiness came over me "You can't do this," I protested. "It's not specific enough. It's discriminatory. It could leave us open to a law suit." A swig of Tab and a bite of salad and my excitement abated somewhat. I began to explain my position in a more rational manner.

The problem, as I saw it, was that the charge to the search committee was too loosely worded, thus making it possible to "bend" the criteria to fit a particular candidate. I have always advocated making the selection criteria as specific as possible so that an applicant's

Career Register Benefits BSC Grads

Career conscious college graduates will receive a boost this year in their efforts to find employment. A company called The National Graduate Register will prepare and publish the career profiles of qualified graduates who wish to be listed in the large, yearbook-like volume. The publication will be distributed for free to the key hiring executives of the FORTUNE 500 and other major corporations and organizations.

The career profiles, to be prepared by the Register's editors on the basis of information furnished by applicants, will highlight the achievements, skills, and aptitudes of the listees. To further aid the job seeker as well as the recruiter, the career profiles will be classified in the book by academic major or special skills areas. Graduates with double majors or special skills may request multiple listings.

In addition to the free distribution of the Register to major employers and recruiters, the book will also be advertised for sale nationally in such publications as The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, The Washington Post and The Los Angeles Times to attract a mass of smaller size firms.

Recent graduates of graduating seniors who wish to be listed in The National Graduate Register will be charged $35.00 for a single listing, and an additional $15.00 for a second listing under the different classification. The publisher claims that job seekers can save at least two hundred dollars considering what it would cost them to produce and mail their own resumes to as many prospective employers.

Those wishing further information about the Register may write to Dr. Egon Mayer at The National Graduate Register, 212 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10010 or call (212) 563-6933.

Positively speaking

credentials could then be matched to a pre-determined set of criteria. This would help ensure that the search committee members would, in fact, be judging the applicant on his or her qualifications such as education, teaching experience, research, contributions to the previous institution, student involvement, etc. rather than devise job criteria to fit an individual they especially liked. Such a technique could easily be used to exclude women and minorities.

My colleague pointed out, however, that the charge and selection criteria were written in that manner so as not to exclude women and minorities. Rather than require the chosen candidate to have a specific number of years of teaching experience, or research interests in a particular field, or prior experience in a similar position, his criteria left the door open to consider all individuals whose combinations of skills, interests, competencies, and experiences suggested they would be successful in the vacant position. My colleague claimed that not only were the charge and selection criteria non-discriminatory, they were "affirmative" in their approach.

I read the materials again, discussed the issue further with my colleague, and suddenly began to laugh for I had caught myself doing what I consistently tell others they should not do. That is, in my effort not to discriminate, I was not acting affirmatively. I was quite startled when I realized the posture I had taken.

It is important to make a distinction between non-discrimination and affirmative action. Non-discrimination is easier to define; it involves treating all persons equally without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or handicap. In terms of hiring, it means evaluating job applicants on the basis of job related qualifications only.

Affirmative action, however, goes a step beyond non-discrimination. It requires an institution to take additional steps to hire members of protected classes. The first of these measures is to prepare a job description and criteria that accurately reflect the needs of the position but that do not unnecessarily restrict the size of the applicant pool. One of our goals is to encourage as broad a pool of applicants as possible, and the criteria developed by my colleague would, indeed, do just that. Another way to increase the size of an applicant pool is to advertise the vacant position as widely as possible. This would include advertising in newspapers and journals, sending job announcements to other colleges and universities, contacting colleagues who might be interested in applying or asking them to recommend other qualified persons, and making the vacancy widely known when attending professional conferences.

Affirmative action also involves making the application process a positive experience for the applicants. This would mean providing as much information about the job, the college, the community, and the region, as possible, and responding to letters of application in a courteous and timely manner. During the interview process a candidate should be made to feel welcome so that Bloomsburg State College will be viewed as a highly desirable place to work should a job offer be made. In other words, it does us no good to develop a broad applicant pool and then conduct our search and screen procedures in such a way that applicants are turned off in the process.

The most remarkable thing about affirmative action is that it makes sense; it is good personnel policy. If the bottom line is to hire the best people we possibly can for our vacant positions, what better way is there than to take an active role in reaching the many well-qualified people who would be able to contribute to BSC in so many different ways.

Comedy Concert

Comic-juggler Mike Rynolds will amuse the audience with his hilarious comedy routines. Rynolds, New Yorker, has worked all the top comedy clubs (Catch a Rising Star, Comic Strip) and colleges along the east coast.

The four comedians will hopefully provide enough laughter to entertain all aspects of the college community. Come on out Sunday at 8 p.m. and split your ribs!

Concert blame

cert ticket for $6.50. How many of you have spent an outrageous amount to see a concert? Sure the Concert Committee can book big names, but along with big names comes big money. Would you have $15 to spend on a concert. Remember, too, Hass and Nelson have a very limited seating capacity.

The Concert Committee is compiled of students, all listening and looking for student input. Last year a poll was taken asking what type of music should be booked as a concert. The poll showed that more hard rock was wanted. So the Concert Committee booked something out of Top 40, harder rock. (Ian Hunter and Utopia). As you know, tickets didn't sell.

So don't blame the Concert Committee because there will be no more concerts this year. Many reasons must be considered Blame yourself, blame your fellow students.

Just a few notes to support my view: The Concert Committee has been successful in the past programming many sell-out concerts. Last year may have been their most prosperous year. Those concerts scheduled were Beatmania, Pure Prarie League, James Taylor and Hall & Oates.

2. Many former concerts featured artists that eventually became big musical stars, such as Billy Joe, Peter Frampton, The Kinks, Dave Mason etc.

3. This same problem of low ticket sales is happening at many other schools. Utopia played at Lock Haven State College two days after they played here, and ticket sales were worse. Presently Bucknell University is having trouble selling tickets to their upcoming Marshall Tucker Band Concert.

The accusing finger can not be pointed at a specific group or one person. Many factors must be considered when a concert fails.

High Schoolers Warned About Recruiters

Campus Digest News Service

High school basketball players from the Chicago area got some unusual advice at a seminar preparing them for college life and those shrewd recruiters that would soon be stepping into their lives from every direction.

Most of the players were from the ghetto and sure to be contacted by graduation next spring by college recruiters. What they heard at the seminar was to think before they leaped into a decision and that all that is promised is not always delivered.

The program is called Athletes for Better Education. Run by Arthur "Chick" Sherer, a former high school basketball coach, the program was conceived to prepare the players for the pressures of recruiting programs and the challenge of higher education.

The program started in 1976 in Chicago and since then has expanded to Los Angeles and New York. It is composed of a 10-day summer camp, all free of charge. From each city, 125 of the best junior and senior basketball players are invited to participate.

The summer camp is more than athletics, although that is included. It also contains information session on academics.

Besides the summer camp, sessions are offered during the school year for an additional 1,000 students to give them tutoring and counseling. Also, the program sponsors a series of all-star games in the spring to help participants get athletic scholarships that they other wise may not be able to.

The message offered throughout the program is a de-emphasis on the importance of athletics in college and emphasis on the importance of academics. That more concentration should be used on books and tests than on scoring on the court is drilled into their head.

The athletes learn that their future depends more on the academics than the athletics. Many basketball players who are very good think college is basketball and nothing else. AFBE is geared to expand the viewpoint and goals of potential college scholarship winners.

The program is not without its critics. With a white leadership, it catches a some criticism from the black community. Others say it puts top stars into certain colleges while denying other colleges.

One university that has gotten a good deal out of AFBE is DePaul University which has netted about six of the players that have gone through the program in recent years.

Another criticism of the program stems from its public sources of revenue, namely the City of Chicago and the U.S. Department of Labor.

The program started in 1976 after he was able to bring together $55,000 from a variety of sources and interest other coaches to help him out in his venture. The coaches also helped him pick out those student-players that were likely to get a visit from the fast-talking college recruiters.

The budget today is a far cry from the $55,000 Sherrer started with. He receives $750,000 from the city and federal governments, 30 corporations and the National Basketball Association players' union. Also included in this total is money earned from tickets to the all-star games and auctions at which sport celebrities offer personal items for sale.

AFBE has a good track record. About 125 juniors-to-be attend the first summer camp. They graduated in 1978 and 108 went on to college. After the first year 101 were listed as survivors and after the second year 95 were still hitting the baskets and the books.

Sherrer believes 75 percent will of those who went through the program will graduate within five years of enrolling. This figure is much higher than that for athletes and students in general.

These figures are startling considering the academic level of most of the players entering the AFBE program. More than two thirds of them, before the program, were below the reading levels of their grades and some of them were as much as six years behind.

The basketball camp remedies the situation by building up their confidence by giving them assignments they can handle. The reading drills are very intensive and the players can't slide by like they might in their high school classroom.

The program of course does not ignore the basketball side of the coin. The training in this department is based on telling it like it is. The odds are 18,000 to one that a varsity high school player is going to make it to the National Basketball Association team. The abilities of the players are ranked honestly after daily scrimmages. Words are not minced so that the players know exactly where they stand and so that they don't build up their expectations if they are not as good as they might think they are.

Those picked to attend the program sometimes come in with a chip on their shoulder because they know that at least someone else thinks they have the potential to play college ball somewhere. They almost always know themselves that they will do well in the college arena.

And the players are given

game tests students' knowledge in a wide range of subjects, including many that are covered in a Liberal Arts curriculum, other undergraduate studies, and current events.

The questions, which are researched by the College Bowl Company, and authenticated by Time Magazine, are closely guarded and known to only a handful of officially designated people prior to the game. Examples of the questions asked are the ones asked in the beginning paragraphs of this article.

College Bowl can be played on an intramural basis, with teams competing within a given school, or on an intercollegiate level.

This program is being offered to BSC students by the BSC Program Board so scholars sign up now!

The games will be played at BSC starting the week of Nov. 22. They will be played in the Kehr Union. Applications have ammunition to deal with the college recruiters. For one thing, there is list of 50 questions handed out dealing with academics, financial aid and social life in addition to the basketball program. A few of the questions: "What percentage of the athletes who enter your school actually receive their degrees?" and "Are athletes kept separate from other students and looked at in a one-dimensional view?"

AFBE might be a program of the future, expanding to other cities and in general, making life better for upcoming athletes both during their basketball careers and the greater portion of their lives afterward.

been placed in all student organization mailboxes this week, but registration is not only limited to student organizations. Groups of friends, roommates or classmates are eligible. Again, the teams consist of four members, one of them being a team captain.

If you are interested in becoming a part of this scholarly sport, send a list of your team members to Box 2540, Elwell Hall and a phone number where your team can be reached. You will be contacted as to when the games will be held.

Last year's College Bowl Champion at BSC was Schuylkill Hall with team members Pete Pavulish, Ann Kromphold, Lynn Montagna and Paul Stockler. The team participated in regional competition at the University of Maryland. Their championship game against the University of Maryland was broadcasted on the CBS Radio Network.

Any BSC student may become a member of a College Bowl team, although there are a few requirements. Up to two members of your squad may be graduate students, but the graduate students must be full time students; undergraduate students must be registered for at least 7 credits, and players on a team must be registered in school for the semester which the games are being played.

Sign up for your team now, again deadline is November 6.

If you need further information, contact Franzine Spady, College Bowl Coordinator or Tammy Chacona, Program Coordinator at 389-3304.

KEVIN'S KORNER

Now that the World Series is history, let's take a look at the NFL. There are good races going on in all six divisions of the league.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

In the AFC Eastern Division, the Miami Dolphins are sitting on top with a 6-2-1 mark. Don Shula's men visit the New England Patriots this week. In second place, just a half-game behind Miami, is Buffalo. The Bills (6-3-0) play Monday night against the Dallas Cowboys. The third place team in the division is New York. The Jets sport a 4-4-1 record, and if they get some consistency they could make the playoffs.

The Cincinnati Bengals own a one game lead in the Central Division. Their record is 6-3 thus far. The Pittsburgh Steelers are just one game back at 5-4, so things are pretty tight. Cleveland and Houston are both 4-5, so it appears that the division is very much up for grabs with seven weeks left. Cincinnati must face San Diego this week, while Pittsburgh is at Seattle.

San Diego, Denver, and Kansas City all have won six of their first nine contests. The trio of teams lead Oakland by two full games heading into Sunday's action. Kansas City will host the Chicago Bears this week, while the rejuvenated Broncos host Cleveland.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

The Dallas Cowboys and Philadelphia Eagles share the lead in the NFC East. The Cowboys knotted things up with their 17-14 triumph over the Eagles last Sunday at Veterans Stadium. The Cowboys, as prior mentioned, host Miami Monday night, and the Eagles visit the St. Louis Cardinals. The NY Giants are two games back at 5-4. The New Yorkers, coming off a 26-7 loss to the Jets, will travel to meet Green Bay this week.

The Central Division is the weakest in football. The Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the Minnesota Vikings are tied for the top spot with 5-4 records. Detroit is next at 4-5. The Bucs and Vikings meet on Sunday, so that should take care of the tie in the standings.

The West is commanded by the San Francisco 49ers. Joe Montana has the 49ers sitting pretty at 7-2 thus far. The Atlanta Falcons are in second place at 5-4. Atlanta will be at San Francisco this week.

I had my best week of the season in predicting last week! I was correct on 14 of 15 games last time. This makes my overall record 79-24-2. The highlight of my week was once again coming up correct on my UPSET SPECIAL! My choice wasn't a very popular one around these parts, but I thought Miami would win the game against PSU, and they did!

Here goes with this round:

ILLINOIS AT MICHIGAN: The Wolverines had a big day at Minnesota last Saturday, and I feel they will have a good day in Ann Arbor this week. The Illini will put up a mild tussle before succumbing 28-10.

YALE AT CORNELL: The Yale team is having its best season in a long time. Cornell will bow in this clash 31-14.

CLEMSON AT NORTH CAROLINA: This is a great game!! The Tigers are undefeated, and coming off an 82-24 victory. Surprise, surprise, I'm going with the home-standing Tar Heels, 23-21.

PENN STATE AT NORTH CAROLINA STATE: The Nittany Lion express was derailed last week, but the Pack won't have the guns to stay with a mad group of Lions, regardless if Curt Warner plays or not! Penn state wins this one, 34-16.

TEXAS AT HOUSTON: The Longhorns are heading into unfriendly territory this week, but I think they will pull through. Give Texas a 28-24 triumph.

MIAMI AT FLORIDA STATE: This is another great matchup! The Seminoles get to host the team that upset the top squad in the country. Miami's luck will run out this week, as FSU hands them a 21-20 defeat.

MICHIGAN STATE AT NORTHWESTERN: The MILDcats are having a terrible season, and the Spartans will not let this game be close for even a quarter. MSU wins big, 49-13.

GEORGIA TECH AT NOTRE DAME: The Irish finally got untracked last week, and the Yellow Jackets will not have the manpower to keep up with Gerry Faust's hungry Irish. Notre Dame remembers being tied 3-3 last year at Atlanta, you can book it! Notre Dame gets even on the year with a 34-10 win.

USC AT CALIFORNIA: The Trojans are the best team in the country, I think, and the Golden Bears will be no match. After a close first half, USC will prevail 28-7.

NEBRASKA AT OKLAHOMA STATE: Here we are, UPSET SPECIAL time!!! The Cornhuskers are going Cowboy hunting this week, and they will get shot down. OSU sends the Huskers home 25-23 losers!

EAST STROUDSBURG AT BLOOMSBURG: Until the Huskies can put a good defensive effort together, it looks like there are three things certain on earth: Death, taxes, and a BSC loss! ESSC in a romp, 48-20. MAKE ME WRONG PLEASE!

THE REST: OHIO STATE 33 Minnesota 13; IOWA 14 PURDUE 13; SMU 41 RICE 7; OKLAHOMA 56 KANSAS STATE 10.

Hockey Team Wins Regional Opener

By MARY HASSENPLUG
In an extremely exciting regional playoff game, the BSC field hockey team fought their way to a 2-1 victory over a strong Messiah squad.

BSC totally dominated the first 15 minutes of the game; play was centered on the Huskies offensive end of the field. The defense started out a little timidly, but then went on to play a very fine, aggressive game. The Huskies midfield line had an excellent game as it constantly rushed the opposing goal and did a good job of getting back on defense.

The first half statistics were basically even, as BSC had six corners to Messiah's three, but Messiah led in the shots category 6-5.

It was in the second half that Bloomsburg really came alive. Lynette Kyle and Polly Dougherty had great breakaways and put out a lot of effort to get an attack started. The Huskies put a great amount of pressure on the opposing goalie, but she remained strong until 17 minutes had been played in the half. Linda Hershey then broke away from the pack and made a beautiful cross pass to on-rushing Kyle, who drove it in for the Huskies first goal.

"The defense started out a little timidly, but then went on to play a very fine aggressive game."

Messiah countered with a score off of a penalty stroke three minutes later, but the Bloomsburg squad was not about to give up. They continued to attack the Messiah defense and force their goalie to make many tough saves.

The Huskies finally drove in for the winning goal with less than one minute left in regulation time. Kyle again was responsible for the goal, she was assisted by a pass from Dougherty.

The stats belonged to Bloomsburg in the second half. The Huskies had 12 shots to four attempts by Messiah. The opponents registered zero corners to BSC's seven.

Senior captain Joan Mahoney could be heard yelling after the game, "I'm so damn happy!!" Coach Jan Hutchinson was equally pleased with the victory, "It was a real cliffhanger, and I'm really glad we pulled it out. Every one did their job out there today and put together a great team effort."

For the Huskies, it's on to Glassboro where they will meet Gettysburg in the final four. The top three finishers in the regional tournament will go on to Nationals in Virginia.

The Huskies put on a great performance and hopefully will continue to play with the same spirit and drive that helped them to have such a successful season.

Men's Swimming Preview

Coach Eli McLaughlin, beginning his 20th season with the Men's Swimming team, will build his 1981-82 squad around a nucleus of five returning lettermen. They are, junior team captain Phil Spampinato, and sophomores Carl Helstrom, Tom DiMarco, Matt Thran and Phil Christian.

New members expected to compete in the swimming events are junior Tom Baumann, freshman Rick Fenton, Dave Henwood, Kurt Hilss, Jim McFadden, John Murphy, and John Connolly. Tom Grazioli, a sophomore, will return to the team with experience in the one and three meter diving events, along with sophomore George Weatherstone and freshmen Pete Allen and Wayne Frick.

The pre-season training started October 12 in preparation for the opening dual meet with the Ithaca Bombers to take place away on Saturday, November 14. Last year Ithaca won 67-47, but the Huskies feel they can reverse the score this year according to team captain Phil Spampinato. "Everyone is working-out pretty well and will provide great flexibility in the team entries for dual meets" said Spampinato.

After traveling several years to many Swimming and Diving relays, the Huskies have decided to host their own Invitation Relays on Saturday, November 21 at 1:00 p.m. in the Nelson Pool. There will be no admission fee, entry fee or contemplated awards for the event. The meet is being sponsored by donations from friends and local firms.

In addition to BSC teams from State University of New York Binghamton, Hartwick, Kings, Lycoming and Ursinas Colleges are contracted to compete.

"It is designed mainly to give the coaches an opportunity to get an overview of the talent on their team," state Meet Director Eli McLaughlin.

We hope you will plan to see us in action.
