

Hockey Team EnRoute to Nationals

Huskies Obliterate Salisbury State in Finest Game of Season

By MARY HASSENPLUG

"Look out Virginia, here comes Bloomsburg!" shouted Karen Nilson. Virginia is the site of the National Tournament and the Bloomsburg field hockey team is on their way there.

The Huskies knocked out defending national champion (Division III) Gettysburg College in the semi-final regional match, at Glassboro State College, N.J., winning 2-1. The finals pitted BSC against Salisbury State College of Maryland. Bloomsburg was the overwhelming victor by a 3-0 score.

The Huskies had to come from behind to defeat Gettysburg as the opponents controlled the first half. Gettysburg knocked in their only goal with two minutes left in the half.

But the second half found BSC back to their true form. They outthused Gettysburg and quickly showed how strong their attack can be. With less than two minutes gone, Linda Turnbull tied the game with an unassisted goal. The second half moved very quickly with BSC getting numerous shots on goal.

After twenty minutes had been played, Diane Imboden came through with the winning goal. The victory assured the Huskies a berth in the National Tournament next weekend.

Coach Jan Hutchinson commented on the game: "Overall we didn't play well against Gettysburg, although the second half was definitely much better than the first. There was a lot of pressure on the players because they knew that they needed only one win to go to nationals. After we got the win, we were able to relax a bit."

The statistics had the Huskies way ahead in shots: 14-5. But Gettysburg held a 9-5 advantage in corners. However, the final score definitely had BSC ahead: 2-1.

In the final contest, BSC played their finest game of the season. They completely overpowered Salisbury and came away with a 3-0 victory.

Hutchinson said, "It was by far our best performance this year. We moved well and passed well throughout the entire game. We also got off a lot of shots. After winning this one, we should definitely earn a high seeding in nationals."

For the first ten minutes of the initial period, the ball did not leave the Huskies offensive end of the field. But with countless chances, BSC could not put in their first goal. The first half ended in a scoreless tie. Salisbury did not manage a single shot on goal the whole period.

The explosive Huskies quickly took control as the whistle opened the second half. Their attack overpowered the Salisbury defense. Finally, after ten minutes, Diane Imboden broke away and fired in the first score of the game. Jeanne Fetch assisted the goal.

The game belonged to Bloomsburg by this time as the offense

Magazine Theft

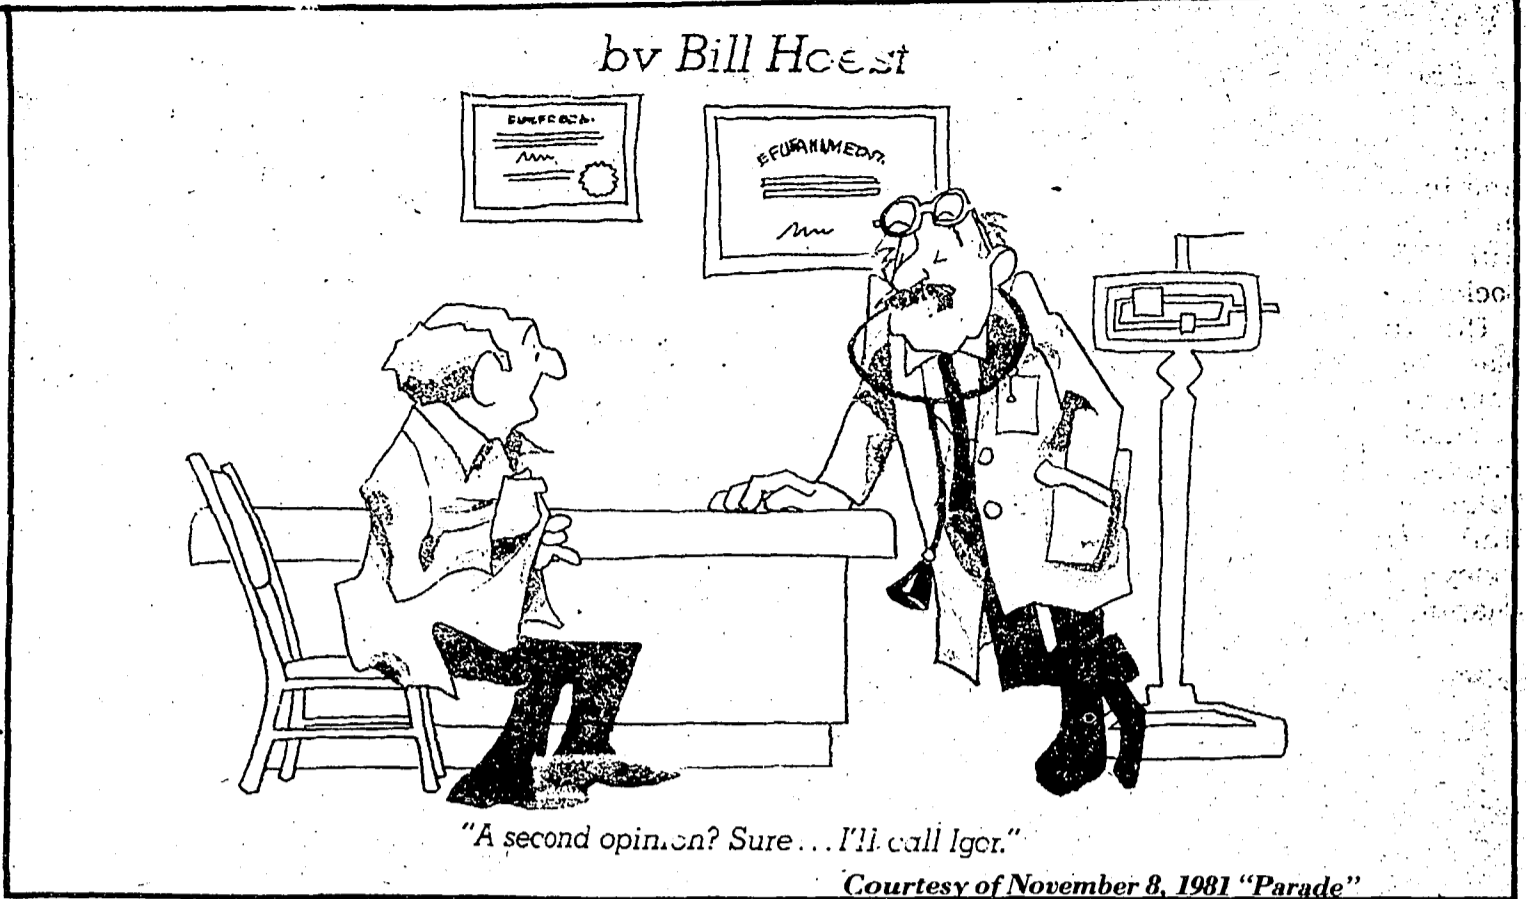

According to numerous complaints from students, a big problem on campus is the theft of magazines from Andross Library. Since many students use magazines for papers, and in keeping up with the latest developments in their majors, we, the staff of "The Campus Voice," feel that action must now be taken to stop further magazine theft. We would like to propose a possible solution to the problem.

Presently, no system is used by the library to curtail magazine theft. Unlike the illegitimate removal of books, the buzzer protection units, at both library exits, are not triggered by the removal of magazines. If a student wants to steal a magazine, all he has to do is walk out with it.

Our solution is to handle the periodical section in the same manner as the reserve desk is now used. Here, students are required to show their I.D.'s to a library employee working at the reserve desk. The student's social security number is recorded, and this makes theft or misplacement of articles, obtained at the desk, the responsibility of the student. If this system would also be used for magazines, theft would be almost impossible.

Of course our solution would require additional money in order to pay the employees working at a periodical desk. But, isn't this additional expense a small price to pay when considering how many students will benefit from finding all the magazines they want?

What do you think?

Letters to the Editor

From Inquisition Headquarters:
Dear Editor,

With Crayolas in hand we respond to the voluminous riposte from the voice that has cried out against the darkness: Congratulations Frank! Your second attempt at intelligent communication is better, and longer, than your first; however, you and other champions of the luscious liquor are woefully unaware of your surroundings. The article by Allen McCollum may be all that saves you from protective incarceration. At least the C.V. Staff are intimidating the sheep (students) with your talk of standing up for student rights and a rather unstillish threat "to act." In your misplaced vigor you have vastly overestimated the maturity and the intellectual capabilities of the flock at B.S.C.

You have the gall to suggest some sort of student response. You even imply the possibility of student unification. Look around you. We think you will make a rather puny mob! Frank Brock, the C.V. Staff, an ad hoc committee and a few C.G.A. officers can do nothing in the face of this authoritarianism!

Here at headquarters we expect the forces of darkness

(not to mention Dean Norton) to triumph over you. THE INQUISITION LIVES!

A Second Reply
Dear Editor,

I wish to reply to the statements made by Frank E. Brock in the November 4th edition of "The Campus Voice." I don't really think that the identity of The Spanish Inquisition matters. Surely you, Frank, being the educated (unlike the Spanish Inquisition, you say) realize that some of the most prominent authors in history assumed pseudonyms or remained anonymous. It is a writer's choice. I'm signing this letter with my initials because I wish to do so, not because I'm insecure.

I think, Frank, that "the inconsistent and sporadic enforcement" of the drinking age law should warrant a stronger desire to see better enforcement of the law. I don't believe arguing against the age has any benefits. Maybe it would cause the age to be lowered, but I don't think that would do any good, do you, Frank? It would probably just cause more problems and result in more young people exercising their right to drink to an extreme degree.

But your main concern is with students' rights, not the issue of drinking. I hope, just for the record, that you get your chance to debate the new policy with the administration. But I think it's pointless, Frank. The drinking age in the Commonwealth of Pa. is 21. I don't see any infringements being made on student rights by the administration's efforts to try to abide by such a state law.

Yes, it is the job of local police to do the enforcing, but the situation has gotten out of hand. I don't find it hard to accept that the college is seeking to assume some responsibility for the actions of its students.

I do think that you can give more credit to the students here, Frank. I do think that those students coming from surrounding states, where the drinking age is lower, are able to adapt to the age executed by this state. You call that a social problem? I can think of worse ones.

Two years ago, a 19-year-old drunk driver became confused and hit the gas pedal instead of the brake. He rammed my five-year-old sister against a tree. Kelly died instantly. The driver was treated at the hospital for a bruised knee. I call the misuse of drinking rights a social problem. Any drunken driver could have killed my sister. But this one was under the legal drinking age. I hold no bitterness any longer, but I do not hold a place in my heart for anyone fighting for the right to drink.

Lastly, try to be more humble, Frank. It is the first sign of a good leader. A person, holding firm beliefs in his stands, need not flaunt, nor even voice how much support or praise he may receive from others. You will get your just rewards some day.

Sincerely,
A.M.S.

Cast Announced for Production

Bloomsburg State College Players announce the final cast of their second production Curse of the Starving Class. Mark Wagenhurst a sophomore at BSC will appear as the deranged son Wesley. Allison Deykes, a veteran Players performer will play Ella the Mother an untidy slovenly woman. Karen Howley will understudy the part of Ella. Emma, the daughter will be played by Ilene Steinberg. Ilene recently was seen as Melbi in The Great Magician. Sharon Kowry will understudy the part of Emma.

Taylor, a suave fast talking lawyer will be played by David Hill. Weston, the drunken father will be played by Tony Pastore, a senior Theatre Major. Ellis, the bar owner will be played by Doug Petruzzi, a freshman at BSC. Larry Murphy, a newcomer to the BSC stage, will be seen as the patrolman. Scott Baugher and Rob Sweeney freshman will be the hit men, sent to frighten Weston into paying his debts.

Curse of the Starving Class is set in a farmhouse somewhere in the American West. The inhabitants do have enough to eat but are starved emotionally. The action is filled with changes and counter-changes as the family decides to sell the house to raise money. The mother talks of running off to Europe or Mexico and the father sobers up and tries to take control of his life.

In the end the play and its people become a metaphor for the underside of American life, the benighted innocents, forever pursuing a diminished dream, and the illusion of fulfillment which remains ever beyond their reach.

Performances are November 19, 20, and 21 at 8:15 in Carver Hall. Tickets may be obtained by calling 389-3817 or 389-2802.

Bakeless Has Elevator

By KATHY WALSH

Bakeless Center for the Humanities was constructed in 1970. It contains the necessary classrooms and faculty offices for student learning at Bloomsburg. But very few students know that a three level elevator is located inside the Center. Noreen Friel, a student, asked "Well I've never seen it and I travel in and out of that place all day long." The elevator is not in public view. The ground entrance is on the basement level behind doors.

Why is the elevator positioned there? According to the Director of the Physical Plant, Doug McCollough, the elevator was in the original plans for Bakeless when they were drawn up.

McCollough and Robert Norton, Dean of Student Life, both agree that the primary purpose of the elevator is for the movement of classroom supplies and stock needed by maintenance. The elevator also provides service to handicapped people unable to use the spiral stairwells that are located in the center of the building.

Handicapped students may receive information regarding the use of the elevator by contacting the office of the Dean of Student Life and also through the Affirmative Action office. Adrienne Leinwand, director of Affirmative Action states there are approximately 149 declared handicapped students attending BSC this semester. This number is compiled by medical information submitted by the students to the office of the school nurse. Marion Kuhns. Therefore the total may be greater and all declared handicaps may not be mobility impaired.

Leinwand remarked that she does not know many disabled students that avail themselves to the elevator. There has never been a request she says from these students to the Affirmative Action office in regard to the use of the elevator in Bakeless. She believes this is due to the fact that relatively few students know of the existence of the office and - or its location. The office can be found in the rear of Carver Hall.

Community Assistants Aid Off-Campus Students

The Housing Office, under the direction of John Abell and Richard Haupt, has hired three upperclass students to serve as this year's Community Assistants.

After careful screening by Housing Office personnel, Meg Cullen, David Hill and Donna Wiest were hired on the strength of their personalities, communication skills, and their desire to meet the needs of BSC off-campus students as well as townspeople living near student residences.

Community Assistants are trained in community relations and are well-versed in the problems which may face student tenants and their neighbors. They work 10-15 hours a week visiting the residences of college students and the homes of neighboring townspeople for the purpose of promoting harmony and encouraging open communication between the two groups. Up until the spring of 1978, Abell and Haupt conducted these visits themselves. However, given the favorable response from students and townspeople alike and the dynamic growth of the off-campus student community, the Housing Office staff decided to expand the visitation program with the addition of several specially-trained upperclass students.

"1,969 BSC students presently live off-campus."

If you are one of the 1,969 BSC students presently living off campus, you may be visited by one of these five people in the very near future. While their main objective is to promote good community relations, they also advise students on the many Housing Office programs - services designed specifically for off campus student tenants. When Housing Office personnel lack the expertise necessary to handle a situation, referrals are made to other college or community agencies which are better equipped to offer technical advice on such special housing problems.

Aside from their intensive training in college - community relations, the Cullen - Hill - Wiest team has also been thoroughly briefed on matters

Coffeehouse features Baltimore Brothers

Do you feel that the music programming at BSC doesn't have enough variety? Are you open to new types of music styles? Have you ever been to a Program Board sponsored Coffeehouse?

If your answers to the first questions were yes and you answered no to the last then it is about time that you attended a coffeehouse.

On Sunday evening, at 8 p.m. the brother duo of Aaron and Joel Marcus will take to the Kehr Union Coffeehouse stage to entertain the community of BSC.

The Marcus brothers are Baltimore-based musicians and singer-songwriters whose music draws from jazz, classical and folk idioms. They have appeared nationally at clubs and numerous college settings. Along with many festivals, they have been hired by Artpark, a nationally known arts center outside Buffalo, New York, to give week-long series of workshops and performances.

The duo has also written and recorded national radio and TV commercials.

An evening with Aaron and Joel will prove to be a mind expanding experience. Stop in at 8 on Sunday and broaden your horizons.

SINGER-SONGWRTIERS TO PERFORM. The brother duo, Aaron and Joel Marcus, will perform Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Kehr Union Coffeehouse.

Karate club offers instruction

The Karate Club offers a fun way to get and stay in shape to BSC students. It is held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m. in Centennial Gym.

The club is instructed by Joe Licata, who is also assisted by Jan Holub.

The first half hour is spent stretching out properly in order to avoid injury, such as pulled muscles. Participants carry out a wide variety of exercises, like hurdler's stretches and touching their toes. Next, the class practices various punches, blocks, and kicks. In addition, a new move is taught each week. Students are also instructed in a variety of defense tactics, such as escaping from a head lock or a full nelson. The hour and a half of instruction is wrapped up with some jumping jacks, sit-ups, and push-ups.

There is no fee required for the club, and no credits are received. But, the defensive skills you learn could be invaluable. Girls, these might be especially helpful to you when walking alone through the dark streets of Bloomsburg or on campus at night. Also, the Karate Club is a great way to stay in shape, and it takes up very little of your time. Why don't you give it a try? All are welcome!

Bloomsburg is only town in Pa.

By JOANNE MARRONE

Bloomsburg, situated along the North Branch of the Susquehanna River, takes pride not only for possessing one of the most picturesque landscapes in Columbia County but also for its distinctive form of local government.

Throughout Pennsylvania, three forms of local government prevail: the city, borough, and township. However, Bloomsburg is the sole exception. Whereas most municipalities the size of Bloomsburg are boroughs, Bloomsburg has the distinction of being the only incorporated town in Pennsylvania.

Originally established as a township in 1802, Bloomsburg's population grew so fast that by 1879, 3,341 people lived within the township's boundaries. This made it necessary to incorporate a form of government better adapted to fit a growing community.

"By 1879, 3,341 people lived within the township's boundaries."

According to Charles M. Barton, Historian for the Columbia County Historical Society, the community leaders wanted to divide the township of Bloomsburg in such a way that the built-up section would constitute a borough, and the rural section would remain a township.

However, due to the unique way in which Bloomsburg was situated geographically, community leaders found it difficult to separate the built-up section from the rural sections in such a manner that an adequate number of people would remain to support a township government.

Charles R. Buckalew, a distinguished lawyer from Bloomsburg and a state senator at the time, solved the difficulty by proposing the establishment of Bloomsburg as an incorporated town designated to include all the territory within the limits of the township.

The proposal was passed by the General Assembly on March 4, 1870, making Bloomsburg Pennsylvania's first and only town.

The town government of Bloomsburg is comprised of six council members and a mayor. The role of mayor is equivalent to that of the President of Council. He presides over meetings, votes on all issues, but does not have the power to veto.

Although the objective of a town is identical to the borough, they differ slightly in format. The borough council includes an additional councilman whose role is to be the President of Council. The function of the mayor in a borough is primarily that of a "figurehead", as his only authoritative power consists of his right to veto.

According to Allen L. Remley, the present mayor of Bloomsburg, the main advantage of Bloomsburg being an incorporated town is that it costs less to operate.

According to Mayor Remley, Bloomsburg saves approximately $2,000 by the mayor acting as president.

Barton noted that electing councilmen in a town is also an advantage: town councilmen are elected at large to serve the whole community, while borough councilmen tend to separate the community, as they give attention to the special interest of the ward that elected them.

In the 112 years that Bloomsburg has been incorporated as a town, only a few minor changes have been made in its charter. One of the discontinued provisions is that of "proportional representation."

Proportional representation allowed citizens to accumulate their votes in instances when a number of representatives on the school board or town council were to be elected. Each voter would have as many votes as there were offices to be filled, and he could distribute them as he pleased.

According to Barton, Charles Buckalew put this provision in the town charter in order to give the voters more power.

By the late 1920's, this type of vote was no longer in use. Barton says that Bloomsburg is the only municipality in the country to ever use such proportional representation in voting.

According to Mayor Remley, Bloomsburg's incorporation as a town has a direct effect on the state legislature since every law must include the words "and town" to pertain to Bloomsburg.

Because Bloomsburg is rather "novel", tourists passing through tend to remember Bloomsburg.

Mayor Remley said that when he welcomed noted celebrity Bob Hope to "the only incorporated town in Pennsylvania", Hope seemed genuinely interested in Bloomsburg. But the mayor mentioned that if Hope had been welcomed to the "Borough of Berwick", his interest probably would not have been as aroused.

It is possible for Bloomsburg to eventually become a borough, although it can only be converted if the town council so designates.

"We won't ever change it," declared Mayor Remley. "Even though there is pressure to do so at times, it would be going against the public. The citizens of Bloomsburg are proud to live in the sole town in Pennsylvania."

No centralized department exists for aiding handicapped students states Leinwand. That makes it difficult for a student to receive a reply to questions they may have concerning BSC and its facilities.

Nonhandicapped members of the college also have the privilege of using the Bakeless elevator. It is a public elevator operated by button not by key such as the one in Hartline. Supervision is not required in its use. Why the concept of button operation in contrast to key operation? Hartline's elevator is in full public view. The Bakeless elevator is hidden from the student's eye which means less people traveling on it.

According to Vice President of Administration Boyd Buckingham because the elevator operates on the side of the faculty departments it poses a great security risk. The risk involved is open access to these rooms, which may lead to break-ins as was the case a few weeks ago.

Preventive measures are and will be taken. The office of Safety and Security cited there will be tighter security all around concerning Bakeless Center. There has been a change of locks on the double doors leading to the elevator on the basement floor. The elevator may still be used by all, but only during operational hours. These hours are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Community Assistance

concerning student taxation, local housing codes and zoning ordinances, landlord relations, roommate disputes, tenant responsibilities and neighborhood courtesies.

Although the major thrust of the Housing Office is the prevention of off campus housing problems through educating future student tenants, the Community Assistant program serves the needs of current off campus students who are experiencing problems with various aspects of off campus life.

So, if any off campus students are having difficulties with their landlords, uncooperative roommates, utility companies, hostile neighbors or other problems, the Housing Office stands ready to offer assistance. While Housing Office personnel do not claim to know the answer to every problem and cannot guarantee satisfactory results in all cases, they will gladly listen to your concerns and offer practical advice on solving your off-campus housing problems.

Huskies Loose Ninth...

Tailback Dell Walker scored three touchdowns and Joe Ogeka booted a school record 46 yard field goal as the East Stroudsburg State College Warriors handed the winless Bloomsburg State Huskies their ninth loss of the season with a 49-0 win Saturday before a sparse crowd in the Redman Stadium.

Kicker Scott Taylor started things off for Coach Denny Dowds' Warriors with a 45 yard field goal aided by a strong wind. The score was set up by the first of three fumbles BSC would lose on the afternoon. Just six minutes and 40 seconds later, Ogeka bettered that 45 yard mark by a yard for the school record.

Walker got the first of his three scores on a one yard run with 4:01 remaining in the first quarter to make the count ESSC 14 - BSC 0, following a two point conversion.

Two minutes into the second quarter, Sam Granteed went over from the one, Taylor added the PAT kick, and it was 21-0. Then with just 1:35 left in the half, split end Jack Brunner pulled in a Joe Swiderek pass and Ogeka's kick made it 28-0 at the intermission.

The Warriors built their lead to 35-0 on Walker's second score and after BSC fumbled the ensuing kickoff it took ESSC just three plays to make the score 42-0 after three quarters.

The final touchdown of the afternoon came with 11:38 remaining in the game. Walker scored on a three yard run to reach the final mark of 49-0.

East Stroudsburg racked up 337 yards in total offense and forced three Husky fumbles while BSC had just 190 yards in offense.

The game was marred by numerous penalties with the Warriors being assessed 140 yards on 11 infractions and the Huskies 112 on ten penalties.

Frat Awarded

The Bloomsburg chapter of Phi Sigma Pi National Honor Fraternity, Iota, was given the Joseph Torchia Award for the outstanding chapter of the year at the 38th annual convention, held in Washington, D.C. on Friday. The recipient of the award is chosen on the basis of participation in fraternal functions, unity, and service to the community in which the college is located.

Sixteen members of Bloomsburg's chapter attended the convention along with their advisor Professor Richard Donald. Mr. Donald is also national vice-president of Phi Sigma Pi. The guest speaker was Gary Lee, one of the hostages of the Iranian crisis.

Fellowship to Meet

Jewish students at BSC will soon be able to benefit from an organization like the Catholic Campus Ministry or the Protestant Campus Ministry. This new organization, called Jewish Fellowship, will hold its first meeting this afternoon at 4:30 p.m. in room 20, Old Science Hall.

According to Dr. Michael M. Levine, advisor of the club and member of the department of psychology, the organization has three prime objectives. First, to give Jewish students a chance to get to know each other and find someone of the same religious background and heritage.

Also, the organization will be a means by which to learn about the congregation in town and services available to students. The last objective is to give students contact with Jewish members of the faculty and community.

The Jewish Fellowship will have a social, cultural and religious orientation, but the cultural and social aspects will probably be emphasized. The group will get together periodically for lox and bagels, potato latcakes, and religious services at Beth Israel (in Bloomsburg).

Advisors to the organization are Levine and Dr. David Heskell, of the business department. All Jewish students are invited to attend this first get-together meeting this afternoon.

Act Anniversary

The academic year of 1981-82 culminates 10 years of productivity for ACT 101 sponsored programs. The central office in Harrisburg and ACT 101 Programs throughout the state are marking this anniversary by a series of commemorative programs throughout the year - the first of which was held in Pittsburgh, PA, on October 16 & 17, 1981. The two-day conference sponsored workshops on legalism in Higher Education, careers in the 80's, and alternative funding sources. The honorable K. Leroy Irvis, who sponsored the original enabling legislation, delivered the keynote address. Mr. Irvin was also honored with several awards and plaques for his efforts on behalf of non-traditional and disadvantaged students.

Phi Kappa Phi Holds Forum

"What Happens to a Person to make Him-Her 'Educated'?" will be the topic of the second Phi Kappa Phi forum of the semester, Tuesday, Nov. 17, from 3 to 5 p.m. in Haas Gallery, Bloomsburg State College.

Four panelists, each with a special intellectual perspective, will address the question. They are: Dr. Hans Gunther, professor of history at BSC; Dr. Andrew Hannan, a senior lecturer in ethnic studies at the City of Birmingham (England) Polytechnic, who is teaching at BSC this academic year; the Reverend David C. Kingsley, the recently installed pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Bloomsburg; and Ms. Sandra Smith, a graduate student in communication at BSC and former teacher. Dr. Lawrence B. Fuller of the English department will moderate the discussion.

Following the initial presentations, members of the audience will be welcome to ask questions. The meeting is open to the general public and refreshments will be served following the program.

Phi Kappa Phi is a national interdisciplinary honor society founded in 1897. The BSC chapter received its charter in 1977.

Marty Coyne - God, Lisa, and Tennis

By DAN CAMPBELL

The Scranton Commons. A girl asks a friend's friend if he knows who the top four tennis players in the world are. She needs to know for a tennis class. The friend of a friend just happens to be the number one player on BSC's tennis team. He tells her Bjorn Borg, Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe and ... Marty Coyne.

"Who's he?" she replies.

"Well, he's the guy that's doing the latest 7UP commercial," the stranger replies.

"Oh, I've seen those," the unexpecting female responds.

The next tennis class comes along and the instructor - who just happens to be tennis coach Burt Reese - asks the class who the top four tennis players in the world are. The first three responses come up easy but the class is stumped on the number four player, until a girl blurts out, "Marty Coyne."

"... And that story is brought up quite often on away trips," adds Coyne as he gets up to leave the lunch table. Those left sitting at the table are in tears of laughter.

You see, Marty Coyne is a good tennis player - but he's not quite the number four player in the world. He is, however, the number one player on a very good Bloomsburg State College team. He is also a very good story teller.

Better known as "Bootser" to friend, foe and opponent, Coyne is currently a junior at BSC and is in his second year as the resident number one player.

He may not be a world ranked pro but he is a ranked amateur, being ranked in the mid-twenties in the mid-east. But that was before BSC's own fall tournament in which he beat two top ranked players - Dave Andrews of Navy and Goodwin Emeh. Emeh was a Division II semi-finalist last spring. Coyne lost 7-6, 7-5 in the finals to Ravi Saverwai of Mercyhurst, who won his second BSC Invitational title. As a result of his fine showing, Coyne will undoubtedly move up in the rankings.

Booster (that's an old family nickname, one which is used by everyone) is a fine prankster and joker as well. The preceding story is just one of his classics - any of which he'd be glad to tell you if you'd sit still long enough.

If you go by first impressions, however, you might miss what this person is all about, but then again you might not.

On first sight of Bootser, you'd probably laugh - a thick untrimmed mustache, droopy at the ends, accompanied by curly, unarranged, blonde hair. Usually he's dressed in one of an assortment of bright colored Adidas warmup suits. Strapped over his shoulder you're likely to find two or three tennis rackets and a couple of cans of tennis balls - any of which he has the ability to juggle.

But there is more to Marty Coyne than that - I think.

Bootser has always seemed to be an involved person. And according to friends and Lisa Christiansen, he's a loving person as well.

Lisa is "Bootsie's" (everyone has their own version of that incredible nickname) fiancée. They plan to get married in May and then "go bankrupt", according to Bootser. Lisa, who graduates in May, doesn't think so.

"I don't mind answering questions as long as they're about Bootsie," she adds, eyes sparkling, as they always do when she talks about Bootser or is with him.

Bootser says the most exciting time he had this summer or in all of his teaching career was finally getting Lisa to "hit the ball well," with emphasis on the "well."

"We met at FCA," Lisa continues. "At first I thought he was weird, walking in (to the meeting) with clogs on and all."

FCA, it turns out, is the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, a non-denominational Christian fellowship group at BSC.

Religion and Christianity seem to be an important part of Bootser's life. In the past he has been a member of Bloomsburg Christian Fellowship's Rainbow Connection, a drama group. Presently he is involved in the Protestant Campus Ministries' Clown Ministry. He is also an eucharistic minister in the Catholic Campus Ministry.

It is in this position in the CCM where he is presently involved in what he calls "one of the greatest scams ever." Being a eucharistic minister, Bootser is involved in the serving of communion. As a result, he has one of his teammates believing that he's a priest on sabbatical.

"There is a Father Coyne in the CCM," Bootser explains.

"And he (the teammate) thinks its me. I told him I was a priest on sabbatical and that Lisa is a nun. I asked him to keep our engagement quiet. Coach Reese is in on it and is backing it up." Is nothing sacred Bootser?

Bootser was raised Catholic. But he really became involved in religion and Christianity upon arrival at BSC. "... And after meeting me," Lisa throws in. His life seems to be a mixture of Lisa, Jesus Christ, ... and tennis.

Bootser got his start in tennis in the tenth grade. In junior high he was into a lot of different sports. But going into senior high, he decided to specialize. He chose tennis, taught himself how to play, and has been playing ever since.

Bootser is now 24 years old. He joined the Army after graduating from high school in Hazleton, Pa.

After the Army, Bootser got a job teaching tennis in the Hazleton area. It was here where he was recruited by Penn State and Bloomsburg State College.

The coaches of each school contacted Bootser, who favored Penn State at the time. But the Penn State coach contacted

Men's Swimming Opens Season

The Men's Swimming and Diving team opens their season Sat., Nov. 14th, at 12:00 noon. Last year the Bombers beat the Huskies 67-46, but the score does not reflect the closeness of the competition. Both teams will have eleven swimmers and two divers so the meet could be a toss-up this year.

Representing the Huskies will be team captain, junior, Phil Spampinato; sophomore, Matt Thran, Carl Helstrom, Phil Christian, Tom DiMarco, Tom Grazioli and George Weatherstone. Freshmen expecting to see a lot of action are John Murphy, Dave Henwood, Rick Fenton, Kurt Hill and Jim McFadden. A transfer, junior Tom Baumann, will also be included in the projected lineup.

Bomb defused at U of Utah

Campus police at the University of Utah averted disaster when they safely detonated a bomb that was found in a hallway of a classroom building.

Over 100 students were in class near the gasoline bomb when it was found by a student on the third floor. It was not known who planted the bomb.

Tennis Recap

By PRINCE MASSEY

Last year the tennis team carried an 18-7 record. This year's team finished its fall season with a perfect 6-0 record in dual matches, losing only two of nine individual matches. The scores in these victories, and the losing teams were Havorford, 8-1; Scranton, 9-0; West Chester, 9-0; Upsala, 9-0; Lycoming, 9-0; and Bucknell, 8-1.

Out of the top six men from last year's team, four returned and two freshmen are filling up the top six line-up. The individual scores of these six men in singles were Craig Diehl, senior, 8-2, alternating first or second player; Marty Coyne, junior, 9-2, alternating first or second player; Dave Superdock, junior, 9-2, number three player; Robert Laario, freshman, 6-3, fourth player; Brett Briscoe, sophomore, 7-3, number five player and Chris Antipas, freshman, 6-3, sixth player.

In doubles sets, the scores were Coyne and Superdock, 1-2 first pair; Diehl and Briscoe, 9-2, second pair; Antipas and Laario, 6-3, third pair.

In the BSC Fall Tournament, BSC finished sixth out of eight teams. In the ECAC Division One Tournament, BSC finished tenth out of the sixteen teams that played. No teams in BSC's conference attended these tournaments.

For the past three years, BSC has been the Pennsylvania Conference Champs. Last spring the team made a clean sweep in the championships, winning all six singles sets and all three doubles sets that are played in a dual match.

THE VOICE

SPORTS

Field Hockey

Nationals, Here We Come

took total control. With two minutes left to play, the midfield line rushed the defense, and Linda Turnbull had the final stick on the ball as it went through, making the score 2-0.

The final goal came with 45 seconds left. Linda Hershey broke down field and made a beautiful cross pass to Polly Dougherty who drove it in for the third and final tally.

The final stats illustrated the complete dominance of the Huskies. They outshot Salisbury 19-2 and had 20 corners to the opponents 2. The Salisbury goalie was forced to make 11 saves while BSC goalie Laurie Snyder was required to stop only one shot.

As the whistle marked the end of the contest, BSC became the new division III regional champions. As it ended, Fetch yelled, "I told you we were going to Nationals!"

Senior in Joan Mahoney commented, "I've watched this program grow for four years and I knew it was coming. Everyone worked really hard to make this come about. I also think we have the best coach in the region."

Deb Long added, "We played as a team and when we play as a team, we play great! I also feel that Jeanne (Fetch) played a great game."

Coach Hutchinson voiced the final comments on her team's performance. "Everybody seemed to be hot today. It was great! It's really nice to see them win the big one. Throughout the season, the team has learned the finer points of hockey, but they have learned even more than that. They have learned how to control the mental aspects of playing. They can handle the frustration and anxiety that goes along with the game. This weekend they proved that they can handle the pressure. Their performance here will be a great help to them at nationals."

So for the BSC field hockey team, it's on to Virginia for the National tournament. We wish them the best of luck in their quest for a national championship.

BSC coach Burt Reese to see if he knew anything about a tennis player from Hazleton named Marty Coyne. Reese said yes, that he knew of the person, but that he was a self-taught player who wouldn't develop into much.

Well, the Penn State coach failed to ever contact Bootser again. As a result, Bootser thought that Penn State had lost interest.

In the meantime, Reese had been actively recruiting Bootser. So, Bootser chose Bloomsburg and became a Business Education major. And as a sophomore he became the team's number one player.

According to Lisa, "Coach never told Bootsie till just recently - I wonder what the Penn State coach thinks everytime Bootsie beats them."

"At the time I didn't feel that he (Bootser) could play for a Penn State," Burt Reese explained.

plained.

"But as a freshman, he just kept on improving. He improved a lot last year - he was our number one man and probably will be this year, at least on the faster surfaces. He's a good server and volley player, which makes him excel on the faster surfaces. He may split the number one spot on slower surfaces with Craig Diehl." Reese added, "Both are ranked in the top 20 in the middle eastern states region of all tennis players under 25."

By the way, Reese says that Bootser has never lost to a Penn State player.

It was while in the Army that Bootser got a job teaching tennis in Germany. One of his students was Mrs. Alexander Haig. One day her husband, the Supreme Allied Commander at the time, dropped in for a visit and a game of tennis.

"He was a terrible tennis player, but he was dominating," recalls Bootser, who bowed out of the doubles match with Haig "to allow someone more on that level of skill to play." "His presence was overwhelming despite being a short small guy. He had bodyguards - and they were big, I mean real big."

Bootser has played tennis with other prominent people as well. He was a doubles partner with Roscoe Tanner in an exhibition against Stan Smith and a Williamsport pro.

"Roscoe was the dominating force," says Bootser.

Lisa said, "I don't think Bootsie did too good."

And then there was last spring. Actor William Windom (who had his own television series and who has appeared in Star Trek, Dallas, Love Boat and many others) was on the BSC campus performing his one man show "Thurber".

In an impromptu talk in Haas Auditorium, Windom mentioned that he played tennis. Bootser happened to be in attendance and before you knew it, the two were out on the courts.

"He was really bad - I don't think he won a game in four sets - but he was really funny. It was a lot of fun."

Even though Bootser won, Windom treated him to a steak dinner at the Hotel Magee.

Booster could use these instances as his claim to fame but he doesn't. He doesn't have to. He'd rather tell you about his friend, who thinks he's a priest.

BSC Soccer

Huskies 7-8-1

By STEPH RICHARDSON

The Bloomsburg State Huskies ended their 1981 soccer season with a 7-8-1 record.

Since the last soccer article, the Huskies traveled to Cheyney (on October 24). The contest was lost by a score of 4-2 with goals being scored by Bill Sypawka and Mike Keller. Cheyney is now undefeated, and they are rated number one in the nation.

Next, the team hosted Juniata at Redman Stadium on October 28. Bloomsburg won by a score of 3-1. Fred McCaffrey scored the first goal on an assist by Mike Byrnes. Mike Rinkis had the second goal and was assisted by Mike Connell. Sonny Maboge had the third goal which was unassisted and was an "excellent" 35-yard shot.

On October 31, the Boosters again played on their home field against Wilkes College. Goalie Eric Pettis allowed Wilkes only one goal compared to the no goals scored by the BSC team. Among the goal scorers were three fullbacks: Roger Stetler, Gary Gallagher and Lou Mickley.

East Stroudsburg was the next opponent for BSC. The game was held at E.S.S.C. where Bloomsburg had a 4-2 victory. Goals were scored by Keller, Sypawka, and freshman Dean Groves.

The Huskies final game was played at Susquehanna University where the Boosters lost by a score of 3-1. The only BSC goal was scored by Groves.
