Dr. John Cencich honors Dr. Katherine Mitchem at the Grant Writers Recognition Ceremony for becoming the University's latest 'Million Dollar Achiever.'

PR Prof Works With Weather Service

Dr. Susan Jasko has found a way to blend communications and meteorology.

A professor of Communication Studies at Cal U, Jasko is a self-described "secret science geek at heart." Earlier this fall she served on a service assessment team for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Weather Service.

Assessment teams are composed of experts who evaluate activities before, during and after weather events to determine the usefulness of NWS products and services.

With the goal of continuous improvement, the team generates a report that serves as an evaluative tool to address service deficiencies and share best practices in operations and procedures.

Jasko was one of 17 individuals who evaluated the NWS shortly after Hurricane Irene caused extensive flooding and wind damage this summer as the storm traveled through the Caribbean and along the East Coast.

Grant Writer Hits $1 Million Mark

At a ceremony honoring all of Cal U's grant writers, Dr. Katherine Mitchem was recognized as the University's latest "Million Dollar Achiever."

A professor in the Department of Early, Middle and Special Education, Mitchem's current research focuses on the use of electronic performance support tools to support students with learning disabilities, behavioral disorders and autism in inclusive settings.

The U.S. Department of Education awarded her four grants this academic year, for a total of nearly $250,000.

Those awards pushed Mitchem's career awards total over the $1 million mark, making her the 12th Cal U faculty member to reach that milestone.

"This is an amazing achievement," said Dr. John Cencich, dean of the School of Graduate Studies and Research. "Dr. Mitchem and all of our grant writers have made us all very proud by undertaking research and providing meaningful results."

The Nov. 16 ceremony honored every faculty or staff member who prepared and submitted at least one grant proposal, administered at least one internally funded project, or completed the requirements for the Grant Writers Fellowship.

Grant writer fellows participate in a comprehensive, hands-on enrichment program that covers topics ranging from strategically selecting potential funding sources to writing the critical sections of a competitive grant application.

Cheryl Vogrig, director of the Office of Grants and Contracts, praised Cal U's grant writers.

"This celebration is to recognize you and commend you for your efforts," she said. "Throughout the process, win or lose, we work as a team to seek external grant funding to help Cal U fulfill its mission."

Assisting Vogrig in the Office of Grants and Contracts are post-award administrator Lewis Honaker and secretary Kim Rabbitt.

Provost Geraldine Jones reported that during the 2010-2011 academic year, the office administered 125 grants and contracts totaling $4.4 million.

Of those, 87 new awards were received, totaling $1.8 million.

"Your work with grants is so important to this University, and it really sets you apart from the rest," Jones said. "The grant work you do not only brings recognition to yourselves but to the University as a whole, especially in these difficult economic times.

"I can't thank you enough for that." The 2010-2011 yearbook of grants activity, "Laude 2011," is available online at www.calu.edu/faculty-staff/laude.

Open House Message: You Can Afford Grad School

A graduate degree may be the ticket to a better job, a bigger paycheck or a leadership position in your chosen field — and earning a degree can be affordable in terms of both time and money.

That's the message Cal U is delivering when the School of Graduate Studies and Research holds an open house from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturday at the Cal U Southpointe Center in Canonsburg.

The program will highlight both Cal U's traditional master's degree programs and the array of degree and certificate programs offered through the Internet-based Global Online, which gives busy students the flexibility to complete their studies anytime, from anywhere in the world.

Keynote speaker Dr. Charles P. Nemeth, chair of the Professional Studies Department, will present "You Can Afford Graduate School."

His talk will explain how graduate assistantships, scholarships and financial aid can reduce the cost of earning an advanced degree.

Program directors will be on hand to discuss individual programs with prospective students.

Cal U offers more than 30 master's degree programs in fields that include business administration, education, nursing, counseling, athletic training, sport management, legal studies, exercise science, psychology, social work, applied criminology, and STEM education.

Certificate programs provide specialized training in areas such as sports counseling, autism spectrum disorders, Arabic language and culture, and Spanish for law enforcement and business.

The Graduate School also offers teacher certification in a variety of disciplines, as well as principal's certification or a superintendent letter of eligibility.

Different Drummers

Students Valerie Herrero (left) and Eric McRae feel the beat as they join an interactive drum circle Nov. 15 in Manderino Library. Interactive drumming is a form of alternative healing that can relieve stress and ease anxiety. The instruments were provided by the Mesa Creative Arts Center, whose co-founders, Kate and Brad Silberberg, also spoke about alternative healing with Dr. Cassandra Kuba's medical anthropology class. Sponsored by the Anthropology Club, the activity was coordinated by Kuba and Dr. John Nass.

'Christmas Carol' Opens Thursday

The Department of Theatre and Dance welcomes the holiday season with its production of "A Christmas Carol," a heartwarming, toe-tapping musical extravaganza.

Performances of the classic tale by Charles Dickens are set for 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday in Steele Hall Mainstage Theatre, with matinees at 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

All performances are open to the public.

With music by Alan Mencken and lyrics by Lynn Ahrens, the musical tells the story of miserly Ebenezer Scrooge, who changes his ways after visits by the ghosts of Christmases past, present and future.

Michael Slavin directs the show, with musical direction by Ted Kovall and choreography by Diane Eperthener.

Cost is $12 for adults, seniors and children. Cal U students with valid CalCards are admitted free.

For ticket information, or to order tickets by phone, call the Steele Box Office at 724-938-5943.

Performances of 'A Christmas Carol,' a classic tale by Charles Dickens, begin this Thursday night in Steele Hall Mainstage Theatre.

Students Learn Law at Mock Trial

James Record wanted to create an engaging learning environment for his students in the Department of Justice, Law and Society — so he decided to put them "on trial."

Their final exam was a mock trial which took place Nov. 29 in the Carter Hall Multipurpose Room.

"I loved my time as a trial attorney, and I also love to teach," Record said.

"Not only did I want to combine two things that I love to do, but I thought the mock trial would help students better comprehend difficult subject matter."

Students in Record's Law and Evidence class spent the first half of the semester learning in a more traditional style, with lectures, readings and some videos, followed by a mid-term exam.

Since then, Record has turned to a "minimally invasive" teaching style.

"After the students unanimously voted to hold a mock trial, I informed them that part of their grade would be determined by how they prepare for trial," Record said.

"I am here to guide them and help when needed, but I see my role being a coach more than a teacher at this point."

Students divided themselves into prosecution and defense teams, witnesses, police officers, and forensic experts. They used class time to conduct research, prepare for the trial and practice opening and closing arguments.

Volunteers played the roles of jurors, and Record sat on the judge's bench to determine the outcome of a "sexual assault case."

Record said he purposely chose the topic to raise awareness about a national problem on college campuses, and his students have responded well.

"I think the trial has been an overwhelming success already, based upon the feedback I've been receiving," he said.

"The students have surprised me with their enthusiasm."

I've done in years," said Jasko. "I was very impressed with the quality of people who work for the weather service, the work they do and their dedication. I felt welcome and well regarded. They want and seek other points of view, which is rare in the world today."

Jasko's journey began when she helped communication studies students get involved with the highly successful StormFest event at the Carnegie Science Center.

A year-and-a-half ago, Jasko responded to a request for participation from the American Meteorological Society (AMS) and the National Communication Association to submit three abstracts dealing with communication issues and the weather service.

She collaborated on the project with colleagues Dr. Chad Kauffman, in the Department of Earth Sciences, and Dr.

Paul Hettler, in the Business and Economics Department.

The trio presented the abstracts at the AMS National Conference in Seattle, Wash. There Jasko met Dr. Vankita Brown, a social scientist with the NWS's Performance and Awareness Division. The two kept in touch, and Brown requested Jasko's help in early September.

"She's phenomenal," Brown said. "Susan's a high thinker who has a great feel for her discipline but also brings together so many important working parts. I think the world of her."

Jasko praised the NWS for quickly spreading the word about potentially dangerous weather events, but she noted that people don't always respond as expected. Jasko believes communication specialists can help.

Not everyone responds to a severe weather warning by leaving the area, for

"The NWS is worried about ... why people would not leave when they've been told they will be washed out to sea," she said.

"The way people process information is all contextual, and you have to understand that your messages are not the only thing competing for their attention. We interpret information based on what's happening in the moment, what's important to us and what others say."

Jasko's NWS assessment team began its work in the mid-Atlantic, headed south and ended up in Washington, D.C. They met with workers from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and a number of weather forecasting organizations.

Jasko said she especially enjoyed visiting the Office of Emergency Management in Brooklyn, N.Y.

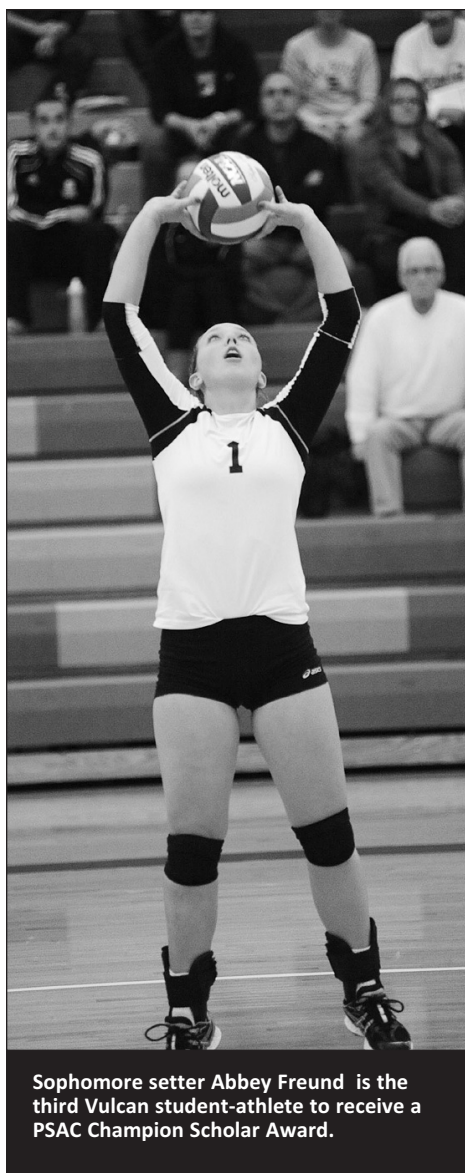

"That facility is like walking into a spaceship. The technology and setup in there was incredible."

After sharing information online and through conference calls, Jasko's team is expected to file an extensive report with former astronaut Dr. Kathryn Sullivan, assistant secretary of commerce for environmental observation and prediction.

Jasko also participated in an NWS webinar, where she gave a presentation about communication issues to 80 weather experts known as warning coordination meteorologists.

Upon returning to campus she shared her experiences with communication theory students.

"Many of them were quite interested, because it's an applied form of communication and critique," Jasko said. "There's also an important role for PR specialists, because the NWS needs representatives and community affairs people."

Sophomore setter Abbey Freund is the third Vulcan student-athlete to receive a PSAC Champion Scholar Award.

Volleyball Player Nets Scholar Award

A volleyball player has become the third Vulcan student-athlete to receive a Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) Champion Scholar Award.

Sophomore Abbey Freund, a setter for the team, accepted the award Nov. 11 during the PSAC Final Four Championship Tournament at Lock Haven University.

Freund shared the award with Clarion sophomore Hannah Heeter.

The Champion Scholar Award, new this year, is presented at each of the PSAC's 23 team championship finals. It honors the student at each contest with the highest cumulative grade-point average.

The selection criteria for the awards is identical to that of the NCAA Elite 88 awards, which honor the student-athlete with the top GPA at each of the championship finals sites of the 88 NCAA championships across divisions I, II and III.

A native of Cottage Grove, Wis., Freund is a communication disorders major who boasts a cumulative GPA of 3.969. She recently was named to the Capital One Academic All-District First Team.

On the volleyball court, Freund has recorded a career-high 621 assists this season and helped the Vulcans win their fifth PSAC title in seven years and advance to the NCAA Atlantic Regional championship match for a sixth straight year. The team finished the 2011 season with a 33-5 overall record.

Earlier this fall, Cal U senior cross country runner Tim Lahmers and women's soccer senior defender Kristen Orrett earned the Champion Scholar Awards in their respective sports.

Tuesday is Hockey Night

Cal U, the official education partner of the Pittsburgh Penguins, will celebrate its second Hockey Night on Tuesday at the CONSOL Energy Center in Pittsburgh.

The men's and women's hockey teams will face off against collegiate rivals on the Penguins' home ice, with games scheduled for 2:30, 5 and 8 p.m.

In addition, the first 250 students and alumni to line up and sign a waiver will get a chance to skate on the CONSOL Energy Center ice. The activity is BYOS — Bring Your Own Skates.

During the Hockey Night festivities, the Penguins mascot and players will be on hand to sign autographs and pose for snapshots. An alumni reception, on-ice entertainment with the Penguins' Ice Crew, a Toys for Tots collection, entertainment and giveaways are planned.

Tickets are available at the information desk in the Natali Student Center, through Ticketmaster, and at the Trib Total Media Box Office at CONSOL Energy Center on the day of the event.

Cost is $8 for fans of all ages. Students are admitted free with a valid CalCard. Proceeds benefit the Penguins Scholarship Fund.

Students, faculty, staff and alumni

Cal U's spirited hockey fans are expected to make a strong showing at CONSOL Energy center in Pittsburgh Tuesday. Last year about 2,500 Vulcan fans rocked the state-of-the-art facility.

may ride a fan bus from the Natali Student Center parking lot to CONSOL Energy Center. Check the Cal U website, www.calu.edu, for details about departure times and registering to ride.

In Pittsburgh, parking is available in the CONSOL Parking Garage; fee is $7.

All participants in Cal U Hockey Night activities must enter through the Trib Total Media entrance at CONSOL Energy Center.

Those who wish to participate in the "free skate" at 7 p.m. must bring their own skates and sign a liability waiver.

Participation is limited to the first 250 skaters.

GACO Fair Draws 350

Cal U's Government Agency Coordination Office (GACO), Slippery Rock University and the U.S. Navy recently hosted the 24th annual Procurement Opportunities Fair at the Four Points Sheraton North in Mars, Pa.

Focused on providing western Pennsylvania businesses with contracting and subcontracting opportunities, the fair featured 108 booths occupied by government agencies, corporations, regional service organizations and area businesses. More than 350 participants attended the fair; most were sales representatives or owners of regional businesses.

According to GACO director Deborah Wojcik, local businesses assisted by Cal U's GACO program have reported receiving nearly 34,000 contracts and subcontracts totaling nearly $2.58 billion.

Cal U's GACO program is supported by grants from the Sarah Scaife Foundation and the Defense Logistics Agency.

GACO's 2012 Procurement Fair will be held on Oct. 24 at the DoubleTree Hotel in Washington, Pa.

Here Comes the Sun

Members of the campus community who would like to observe sunspots or learn the basics of using a telescope may join the Society of Physics Students at 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays in the courtyard outside the New Science building.

Solar observation depends on weather conditions. In the event of inclement weather, the activity will be postponed to the next meeting time.

SECA Organizers Say Thanks

"On behalf of the State Employee Combined Appeal (SECA) Campaign for the United Way and the United Way of Mon Valley, a great big 'thank you' to the staff at AVI for their support and generosity, and to the various Cal U staff members and students who assisted with the Halloween Day spaghetti luncheon.

"A special thanks to students from the Center for Civic Engagement, the rugby team, Alpha Lambda Delta and AmeriCorps, who packaged and delivered lunches on campus and in the community.

"The luncheon raised more than $1,400 for the campaign, and we appreciate the participation of all who were involved. This is the fifth year for this event, and we hope to increase participation in the years to come.

"As of Nov. 4, the SECA Campaign at Cal U has raised $24,000 toward its $40,000 goal. Thank you!"

Interpellation

Senator Madden inquired as to how to properly address a constituency concern. Presiding Officer Hoover noted either under new business or the next executive committee meeting.

Motion:

Establish a committee to review the constitution and recommend changes for the Forum's consideration; the committee to be made up of the following: Loring Prest, Parliamentarian; Sean Madden, Faculty Senator; Walter Harris, Student Senator (Student Government President); and two additional senators.

Senator C. Smith presented the motion on behalf of the Faculty Senate. The rationale for this motion is so that a review of the university forum can be conducted according to the Constitution of the California University Forum (Article VIII, Section 1, page 11): "The Executive Committee shall have the authority and the responsibility to assure the proper functions and periodic (biennial) review of the California University Forum, according to its approved Constitution and Bylaws."

There being no further discussion or questions, a vote was taken. VOTE: Motion carries unanimously.

It was recommended that Presiding Officer Hoover select the two additional senators; there were no objections.

Motion:

Be it resolved, that the Budget Committee shall review the University budget and report to the Executive Committee in a timely manner so that the Forum may review and comment upon the budget.

Senator C. Smith noted that the Forum and Executive Committee minutes for the last two academic years included no reports from the Budget Committee. Senator C. Smith noted that it is thought that the Forum is an inert, non-functioning body. Senator C. Smith cited the section concerning the Budget Committee in the Constitution of the California University Forum (Article VIII, Section 4, page 14):

THE BUDGET COMMITTEE – The Budget Committee shall monitor the development of the University Budget, not on an audit-type or line-by-line review of all expenditures, but rather to make certain that major allocations of funds among the colleges, schools, activities and interests of the University are in accord with the Annual Statement of University Policies, Priorities, and Resources. This document will be developed by the University administration, with input from the Planning and Priorities Committee, and will be finalized after review and comment by the University Forum.

The Budget Committee shall maintain liaison with the administrative group designated by the University President to formulate the annual University Budget. The Budget Committee shall report its activities to the Executive Committee for inclusion on the agenda of each regular meeting of the Forum until such time as the budget has been formally presented for review and comment by the Forum. The Budget Committee shall immediately notify the Executive Committee of any proposed allocations that are not in accord with the Annual Statement of University Policies, Priorities, and Resources.

A discussion was held regarding ALL of the standing committees; it was noted that the intent of the motion is for the committee to fulfil its specific charge based on the language of the constitution.

There being no further discussion, a vote was taken. VOTE: Motion carries unanimously.

Motion:

Be it resolved, that that the Planning and Priorities Committee shall review the Annual Statement of University Policies, Priorities, and Resources and report to the Executive Committee in a timely manner so that the Forum may review and comment upon the Annual Statement of University Policies, Priorities, and Resources

Senator C. Smith noted that the Forum and Executive Committee minutes for the last two academic years included no reports from the Planning and Priorities Committee. Senator C. Smith noted that it is thought that the Forum is an inert, non-functioning body. Senator C. Smith cited the section concerning the Planning and Priorities Committee in the Constitution of the California University Forum (Article VIII, Section 7, page 15):

THE PLANNING AND PRIORITIES COMMITTEE - The Planning and Priorities Committee shall have the authority to make recommendations to the Forum regarding long-range institutional goals, as well as annual goals for the University as a whole. The Committee shall also have authority to recommend priorities for fund raising, for the construction of new buildings, and for major additions and/or renovations to existing buildings, on a University-wide basis. A key responsibility of the Planning and Priorities Committee shall be to review and offer comment on the Annual Statement of University Policies, Priorities, and Resources, as that document is being developed by the University administration, and prior to its being presented to the Forum for its review and comment.

After a brief discussion, a voice vote was taken. VOTE: Motion carries unanimously Senator Koury moved for a roll call; Second by Senator Wickham. Motion for roll call passed.

ROLL CALL VOTE: Yeas: 17. Nays: 11. Motion carries.

New Business

Senator Madden recommended that Multicultural Awareness not be REMOVED from General Education at the University. Senator Madden noted that if it were to be removed, California University of PA would be the only university without this academic component.

Senator Madden moved to keep Multicultural Awareness in General Education at California University of PA. Second by Senator Brooks.

A discussed ensued on the importance of keeping the Multicultural Awareness as a component.

Senator C. Smith moved to amend the motion as follows: The forum recommends that Multiculturalism remain on the General Education menu. Second by Senator O'Rourke.
