A dedication for the new Phillipsburg Soccer facility will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. in between games against East Stroudsburg.

Soccer Teams Eager to Try New Turf

For Cal U's soccer teams, the new Phillipsburg Soccer facility is a dream come true. "Ever since we came back in August for training camp, we would drive by daily to look at the progress and check out what got done at the stadium," said senior Charlie Dagnal, starting goalkeeper for the Vulcan men's team and a 2010-2011 PSAC Scholar Athlete.

"When they laid down the artificial turf, it was like finally our prayers had been answered."

Cal U will hold a dedication ceremony for the new facility at 1 p.m. Sept. 24 at the soccer field on Orchard Street, just three blocks from Cal U's main campus.

The site, formerly known as Booster Field, was the home field for the Cal State football team from the 1950s until 1970, when the Vulcans moved to Adamson Stadium at Roadman Park, on Cal U's south campus.

New construction and extensive renovations have created a facility that meets all NCAA standards for intercollegiate soccer, including night games and broadcasting.

The complex features:

- A ProGrass artificial turf field with a walking track around the perimeter.

- A programmable lighting system whose 110-foot-tall light stands are designed to maximize on-field illumination while minimizing "light spill" into the surrounding neighborhood.

- An electronic multi-sport scoreboard.
- Bleacher seating for 500 fans, plus a "press box" for media.

- Newly renovated locker rooms for the Cal U men's and women's teams, visiting teams, coaches and officials.

- A first-aid and training room.

- A renovated concession stand and public restrooms.

Cal U's head soccer coach, Dennis Laskey, says the facility already has drawn the attention of student-athletes.

"Since we've been able to show them designs, both our (men's and women's) programs have been inundated with recruits. The attraction has been incredible," Laskey said. "This is the finest soccer facility in the eastern United States."

The dedication will be held on Family Day, when students' parents and siblings are encouraged to visit. Along with other campus activities, Cal U plans to have giveaways, special guests, a Mini Vulcan Huddle and

Criminology Professor Named Fulbright Specialist

As a member of the Fulbright Specialist Program, Dr. Aref Al-Khattar will spend his holiday season abroad, strengthening California University's ties in the Middle East.

Al-Khattar, director of Cal U's master's degree program in applied criminology, will depart Dec. 20 on a 25-day trip to the University of Sharjah, in the United Arab Emirates.

There he will work closely with the university's Department of Sociology and its criminal justice track in the Master of Applied Sociology program. He will give lectures and conduct seminars for graduate and undergraduate students, and he will work with Sharjah's faculty to review curriculum, help develop new courses and address issues related to online teaching.

"In general, Fulbright's mission is to provide assistance to organizations, and that will be my focus," Al-Khattar said.

The Fulbright Program is the flagship international educational exchange program sponsored by the U.S. government. Its goal is to increase mutual understanding between the United States and the people of other countries.

The Fulbright Specialist Program is a short-term complement to the core Fulbright Scholar Program. It sends U.S. faculty and professionals abroad for two to six weeks to serve as expert consultants on curriculum, faculty development and institutional planning at overseas academic institutions.

Al-Khattar, a native of Jordan, is a retired law enforcement officer with 17 years' experience. A former lieutenant colonel in the kingdom's General Intelligence Department, he

Cal U Again a Top 'Military-Friendly' School

For the third consecutive year, G.I. Jobs magazine has named Cal U one of the nation's top Military Friendly Schools.

"It's part of our campus culture," says Capt. Robert Prah, director of the university's Office of Veterans Affairs. "Cal U goes out of its way to help military members and veterans succeed."

The magazine's 2012 Military Friendly Schools list honors the 20 percent of colleges, universities and trade schools that are doing the most to embrace America's military service members and veterans as students.

The list was compiled through extensive research and a data-driven survey of more than 8,000 schools nationwide, according to G.I. Jobs.

The 1,518 colleges, universities and trade schools on this year's list prioritize the recruitment of students with military experience. The magazine recognizes them for offering scholarships, veterans' clubs, full-time staff and other services for military veterans. For the first time, G.I. Jobs also includes peer reviews provided by veterans on campuses across the country.

At Cal U, the Veterans Affairs Office provides resources for active-duty military members, reservists and members of the National Guard, as well as veterans and their families.

In addition, the University has joined forces with GoArmyEd, a gateway to higher education for soldiers stationed anywhere in the world.

Through the GoArmyEd portal, soldiers and their families have easy access to bachelor's and master's degree programs offered by Global Online, Cal U's Internet-based learning community.

Even after they graduate, service members have free, lifelong access to the University's Career Services office, which offers one-on-one career and job-search planning for all Cal U alumni.

"The men and women who serve in the military deserve our respect," said President Angelo Armenti, Jr. "It's only right that we make every effort to support these students, whether they are taking classes on campus or pursuing a degree online."

"They and their families have made enormous sacrifices on our behalf. In return, we are committed to helping them meet their educational goals and build rewarding careers."

The complete list of 2012 Military Friendly Schools, plus interactive tools to assist military members and veterans with their decisions about higher education, can be found online at www.militaryfriendlyschools.com.

Student Opinion Survey Coming in October

In early October, all Cal U students with 30 credits or more will be receiving a Student Opinion Survey through their Cal U e-mail.

The purpose of this national, standardized survey is to explore enrolled students' perceptions of the University's programs and services.

This survey was administered for the first time in fall 2001. For continuous improvement purposes, it has been conducted every two years.

"This is another opportunity to re-administer the student satisfaction survey and see how we've improved," said Norm Hasbrouck, director of the Office of Continuous Improvement.

Norm Hasbrouck

President Angelo Armenti, Jr. established the office as a way of responding directly to student needs and concerns.

Indicating the importance the President is placing on this student satisfaction survey, one survey respondent will be selected at random to receive a $500 award for 2012 spring semester courses at Cal U. The award will be provided by the Foundation for California University.

ACT, a national survey services company based in Iowa City, Iowa, will administer the survey, which is used by institutions across the country. ACT provides comparison data with these other institutions, in addition to scanning and reporting local results.

In addition to the standard survey, 30 questions have been developed to collect information unique to Cal U.

The survey takes approximately 20 minutes to complete, and all upperclass students are invited to participate. There is also an opportunity to submit written comments and suggestions.

The surveys will be submitted directly to ACT, and responses will be kept confidential; no individuals will be identified. Results should be available in January 2012.

Campus BRIEFS

Convocations Set This Week

Cal U President Angelo Armenti, Jr. will host the 2011 staff and student convocations this week. Both events will take place in the Natali Student Center's Performance Center.

The Staff Convocation will be held at 2 p.m. Monday, and the Student Convocation will be held Tuesday during the University's common hour, beginning at 11 a.m.

Kids Talk Democracy Tomorrow

Cal U will observe Constitution Day on Tuesday with "Kids Talk Democracy II," a panel discussion at 9:30 a.m. in the Old Main Chapel.

Sixth-grade students from Ben Franklin Elementary School in Uniontown, Pa., will share their views on freedom and the American Dream.

University President Angelo Armenti, Jr. will introduce the panel of youngsters. Moderator will be Dr. Holly L. Diehl, assistant professor in the Department of Early, Middle and Special Education.

Organized by the American Democracy Project, the program is co-sponsored by the Office of the President; Academic Affairs/Office of the Provost; the College of Education and Human Services; the College of Liberal Arts; the Department of Early, Middle and Special Education; and the Department of History and Political Science.

Wildlife Society Plans Field Day

The student chapter of The Wildlife Society will present its sixth annual Family Field Day from 12:30 p.m.-

4 p.m. Saturday at the Frich Biology Building.

The public may attend this free event conducted in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

Held rain or shine, the field day includes an archery demonstration, a fly-tying demonstration and casting contest, conservation stories with live animals, a display of animal tracks and displays of pelts from Pennsylvania furbearers, along with information about bluebird box construction. Refreshments will be available for purchase.

For more information, contact Courtney Smay, president of the student chapter, at sma9129@calu.edu or Dr. Carol Bocetti at bocetti@calu.edu .

We Stand Corrected

Emeritus professor Dr. Peter J. Belch '64 served 37 years in Cal U's Department of Special Education, which is now part of the Department of Early, Middle and Special Education. His academic department was misidentified in a caption published Aug. 29 along with a photo of Belch donating two paper-wasp nests, which are now in display in the lobby of Frich Hall.

Forum Meets in New Location

The Cal U Forum, the University's governance structure, has changed its meeting venue. The monthly meetings will now take place in Room 327, Dixon Hall.

As always, the meetings will begin at 4 p.m.

Upcoming meeting dates this year are Oct. 4, Nov. 1 and Dec. 6. The Forum also meets Jan. 24, Feb. 21, March 20 and April 17, 2012.

The meetings are open to the University Community. For more information call 724-938-1633 or e-mail turcic@calu.edu .

Senior Spending Semester in Harrisburg

James L. Hawkins, a senior majoring in political science with a minor in pre-law, is working for the Joint State Government Commission as part of a 15-week internship sponsored by the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education (PASSHE).

Hawkins, of Clairton, Pa., is one of 14 students participating in The Harrisburg Internship Semester (THIS) program, which gives students the opportunity to work in all areas of state government while earning a full semester's worth of credits. THIS invites students from each of the 14 PASSHE universities to participate.

Students participating in the program will attend several academic seminars during their fall semester internship and each will complete an individualized research project as part of the program's requirements.

More than 500 students from PASSHE universities have participated in THIS since the program began in 1989, gaining valuable insight into the workings of state government at the policy-making level. Interns have worked with dozens of state agencies, as well as in the offices of the governor, the speaker of the House of Representatives and the attorney general.

"The Harrisburg Semester is a unique opportunity for Cal U students to learn about policymaking in the Pennsylvania government," said

Karen Primm, Cal U's Internship Center Director. "Students are given incredible networking opportunities with legislators and administrators in both the executive and legislative branches and other related agencies. THIS is truly a life changing and career-building experience for our students."

Students interested in participating in THIS may obtain information from the Internship Office or by calling the Dixon University Center at 717-720-4089. More information on the program also is available at www.passhe.edu/this .

'We Push Forward,' President Tells Trustees

On the night that Cal U's soccer teams played for the first time at the new Phillipsburg facility, the University's Council of Trustees took a firsthand look inside the Convocation Center, which is moving steadily toward completion.

"At a time when other universities are holding back, we continue to push forward," President Angelo Armenti, Jr. told the Trustees at their Sept. 7 meeting.

Construction is just one sign of progress the President chose to highlight for the panel. He also outlined the new Cal U Leader for Life program introduced this semester.

As the world's first FranklinCovey Leadership University, Cal U is working to roll out the program for all students, including those enrolled in Global Online.

"This is an advantage they will not be able to get anywhere else," the President said. "Our future will be secure ... if we continue to differentiate ourselves to students and their parents."

President Armenti also described the Cal U Fusion initiative, noting that a Teaching and Learning Center is being organized under the direction of Dr. Joe Zisk. The TLC will support faculty as they learn to use emerging technology and make optimal use of the "smart" classrooms on campus.

"We have just invested in the most important thing we do — teaching," President Armenti told the Trustees. "Our new Wi-Fi system and these high-tech classrooms will be part of our competitive advantage in the years to come."

In reports to the Trustees:

- Provost Geraldine Jones noted that Summer College enrollment increased by about 5 percent compared to 2010, and enrollment for the fall semester shows a 1 percent increase over last year. The official headcount will be reported on the 16th day of classes.

- She announced a 10-year re-accreditation for the Bachelor of Science in Athletic Training by CAATE, the Commission on Accreditation of Athletic Training Education.

- She also noted that 10 faculty were awarded grants totaling about $384,000 this quarter.

- Robert Thorn, interim director of Administration and Finance, reported that the exterior of the Convocation Center is 97 percent complete and he expects to obtain an occupancy permit next month.

The soccer complex was finished two days ahead of schedule, and the baseball field at Roadman Park has been completed.

- Dr. Nancy Pinardi, acting vice president for Student Affairs, reported that 175 students are attending classes under the Post-9/11 G.I. Bill, and the Cal U Veterans Club traveled to Joplin, Mo., to deliver donations to veterans affected by the spring tornado there.

- Peer educators provided 53 programs to more than 2,000 students through Options@CalU, a prevention initiative funded through a grant from the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board.

Three former Vulcan baseball players are playing in the minor leagues, she said. Four Vulcan football players are competing in the NFL, and one more is on injured reserve.

- Dr. Charles Mance, vice president for University Technology Services, reported that 20 "smart" classrooms have been completed and 50 more should be upgraded by September 2012.

- The campus Wi-Fi network upgrade is 30 percent completed, with robust wireless signals in the residence halls, the Eberly Science and Technology Center and the Natali Student Center.

- Craig Butzine, vice president for Marketing and University Relations, pointed to two news stories as examples of his office's work in media relations.

More than 200 print, broadcast and online news outlets carried the announcement of Cal U's designation as the world's first FranklinCovey Leadership University, he said, and the story about a letter that arrived at Cal U after 53 years appeared in 426 U.S. and foreign news outlets.

- Ron Huiatt, vice president for University Development and Alumni Relations, reported that a new Annual Fund Campaign, "300 Gifts in 30 Days," resulted in 322 new gifts from alumni, including 117 online donations.

In addition, the Campaign to Build Character and Careers has reached $26 million, on its way to the $35 million goal.

The next meeting of the Council of Trustees is scheduled for Dec. 7.

Defense Logistics Supports GACO

Cal U President Dr. Angelo Armenti, Jr. presents a cooperative agreement for $175,118 from the Defense Logistics Agency of Fort Belvoir, Va., to Deborah Wojcik, director of the Government Agency Coordination Office (GACO) at Cal U. Effective through Aug. 31, 2012, the federal grant will support GACO's efforts to assist regional businesses as they pursue federal, state and local government contracts and subcontracts. Sponsored by Cal U, GACO was established in 1985 as a Procurement Technical Assistance Center (PTAC). For 26 years the Defense Logistics Agency has been providing funding for the program, which now provides contracting assistance services to 1,643 businesses in Allegheny, Beaver, Butler, Greene and Washington counties. Since GACO's inception, these businesses have reported receiving more than 33,479 contracts and subcontracts totaling over $2.5 billion. For more information about GACO's services, contact Tracy Julian at 724-938-5881 or visit www.calu.edu/business-community and click on 'Business Owners and Employers.'

other events at the soccer field throughout the day.

"Other teams are going to want to come and play us, because now we have this state-of-the-art facility," said Dagnal, whose former roommate Derek Yobbi '11 now plays professionally with the Pittsburgh Riverhounds.

"It's closer to the main campus than Roadman Park, so hopefully we will have some more fans. Everyone knows it's there and is intrigued by it. I think it should help the school in general and not just the soccer programs. It's great."

The public may attend the dedication ceremony, which will be held during the intermission between the women's and men's varsity soccer games on Family Day.

Both teams face East Stroudsburg. The women's game begins at 11 a.m. The Vulcan men play at 1:30 p.m.

Criminology Professor Named Fulbright Specialist

was awarded the Medal of Independence for his role in protecting the security of Jordan.

He holds a bachelor's degree in Arabic language and literature at the University of Jordan, and earned his master's degree and Ph.D. in criminology at Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

At Cal U, Al-Khattar is a professor in the Department of Justice, Law and Society and an active member of the Institute for Criminological and Forensic Sciences.

"Dr. Al-Khattar is an internationally recognized expert on terrorism and counterterrorism," said Dr. John R. Cencich, dean of Cal U's School of Graduate Studies and Research and director of the forensic sciences institute.

"It's one thing to teach this subject from a book, but Aref brings real-world experience to students from around the world. It comes as no surprise that he received the much-coveted Fulbright award and will share his experiences at the prestigious University of Sharjah."

Al-Khattar already is familiar with the university, founded in 1997. Through the institute, he ran training activities for four graduate students and a professor from Sharjah when they visited western Pennsylvania last summer.

In June, Al-Khattar, Cencich and Arabic language instructor Odeese Khalil visited Sharjah to sign an articulation agreement with the university — Cal U's first formal agreement with an institution in the Middle East.

"We have developed what we believe will be a long-term relationship with the University of Sharjah, a world-class university with an exceptional vision for the future," Cencich said.

"We already have several agreements in place relating to our Master of Arts in Applied Criminology and our new Arabic language degree. I cannot think of a better university in the region to partner with."

"We are reaching to a new audience of students and faculty," Al-Khattar added. "We now have a presence in the Middle East for the first time, and other majors can benefit from this. It's an exciting time."

As a Fulbright Specialist, Al-Khattar's name will appear worldwide on a roster of available experts for the next five years.

He credits University President Angelo Armenti, Jr. for his support during the yearlong application process.

"It's a prestigious honor to have Fulbright status, and it brings an obvious sense of satisfaction," Al-Khattar said. "But it's good status for Cal U, as well."

"I am promoting Cal U and putting Cal U and Fulbright together, so it's a win-win for both Cal U and myself."

Center Played for Cal's First State Hoops Title

Editor's Note: Cal U will hold its 17th annual Athletic Hall of Fame Banquet Oct. 21 at the Performance Center in the Natali Student Center. For reservations, contact Montean Dean at 724-938-4418. Throughout the fall, The Journal will profile each of the 2011 Hall of Fame inductees.

Rich "Tree" Kotarsky's dominant play in the paint helped the Vulcan men's basketball team win its first PSAC-West title.

A three-year starting post player, Kotarsky was a four-year letter winner from 1963-1967.

He finished his collegiate career with 1,067 points — the fourth highest total in school history at the time. (He now ranks 27th.) Kotarsky joins teammate Pat Hobart as Hall of Fame inductees from the basketball team's first PSAC-West championship squad.

"Islands are only in oceans and lakes, but when you get placed on one with such a great honor like this, you have to remember how you got here," Kotarsky said. "It's not really an island when you think of the many people that supported you along the way, and even years later in being selected. This has happened because of my family, friends, teachers, coaches and teammates."

During his senior year, Kotarsky led the Vulcans and Cal U Hall of Fame coach Myles Witchey to the program's first of 15 PSAC-West titles. He scored 30 or more points during three different games in 1966-1967, including 31 points in the division championship-clinching win over Slippery Rock.

That year the Vulcans competed in their first PSAC "State Game" and were defeated by perennial powerhouse Cheyney. Cal has now made 14 appearances in the championship game, winning eight crowns.

"Winning the division and playing for the state championship was a very big stepping stone, and the program just built from there," Kotarsky said.

The Vulcans improved each year that he played. Cal went 9-10 in his freshman season and 12-11 in 1964-1965. The team achieved consecutive 16-win seasons over his final two years in the program.

Kotarsky credited Witchey with building a stagnant program into an annual contender.

"Myles was a tough character. We practiced every day, and they weren't easy (practices)," he said. "But Myles was with us every step of the way, and you believed him when you looked him straight in the eye. He was intense and successful in life and coaching. He gave me passion for the game that I have carried with me."

After his senior season Kotarsky received NAIA All-American honors, as well as Associated Press All-State and first-team PSAC-West recognition. As an undergraduate, he also was an active member of Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity, the Young Democrats Club and the International Relations Club.

Witchey said Kotarsky, a native of Marianna, Pa., deserved every accolade that came his way. He was a standout in basketball and football at Beth Center High School, despite being unable to play sports until his sophomore year because of Bright's disease, a kidney ailment.

"Richard came from a coal mining family and worked extremely hard throughout his career to get better," said Witchey. "Every year he improved, and he went on to do well with his education. California needs to be proud of him."

Kotarsky earned his bachelor's degree in social studies and his master's degree in special education from Cal in 1967 and 1971, respectively. He earned certification in special education from Duquesne University in 1974 and in special education supervision from Slippery Rock in 1980.

Kotarsky went on to a 36-year teaching career at several hospitals and school districts before he retired from Keystone Oaks High School in 2003.

While at Cal he held a student job sweeping rooms after practice; he also worked pumping gas.

"I would finish sweeping those rooms and go outside and look at Old Main," he said. "Seeing those towers just sort of hit you, why you were here and what this place was doing for you."

"Cal gave me a base of education that was outstanding for teaching. Classes were small. People cared about you and worked with you to get you through."

Throughout his teaching career, Kotarsky was a longtime basketball official at all levels, from high school to NCAA Division I. He officiated at PIAA state finals games and at numerous collegiate conference and regional tournaments before retiring in 2010. He still umpires college softball.

Kotarsky is in his second season as coordinator of men's basketball officials for the Pennsylvania State Athletic Association. He also is the western assigner for the Collegiate Softball Umpires Association, rules and mechanics interpreter for the Collegiate Officials Association, and the PIAA District 7 (WPIAL) softball interpreter.

Kotarsky runs three summer camps for basketball officials and serves on the Cal U basketball team's Sixth Man Club Golf Committee.

Senior Catches PSAC Sportsmanship Award

Cal U senior Eric Berringer, a catcher on the Vulcan baseball team, is one of two recipients of the 2010-2011 PSAC Sportsmanship Award.

West Chester University swimmer Kristen Montello also was honored this year.

Implemented by the PSAC Student-Athlete Advisory Committee (SAAC) at the beginning of the 2008-2009 academic year, the Sportsmanship Award recognizes one male and one female student-athlete who have represented their institutions in a positive way during competition. Award winners also must have demonstrated good citizenship outside of competition by fostering a good public image.

All PSAC personnel, including administrators, coaches and student-athletes, are eligible to nominate a student for the award. The winners are chosen by members of the SAAC.

Berringer is the second Vulcan in three years to receive this honor. Former Cal U cross country standout and five-time All-American Christopher Clark received the inaugural award.

A two-year member of the baseball team after transferring from Montgomery College (Md.), Berringer batted .309 in 41 career games and 29 starts. He was a key reserve on Cal U's 2010 PSAC championship team.

While serving primarily as the team's bullpen catcher, he showed why he earned the recognition during Cal U's Senior Day game against IUP last spring. In the fourth inning he hit a double and was replaced by a pinch-runner. In a spot where others might have been upset, he raced to the dugout and began cheering his teammates.

"Eric was the consummate team player and also a very good baseball player," said head coach Mike Conte. "He had a tremendous work ethic, great leadership qualities and was very coachable. He is very deserving of the award because he always put the team before himself, and his teammates recognized this."

Berringer was surprised to learn he had won the award and said he simply acted naturally.

"From the moment I got here, we all got along and became a family. Pretty much everything we do, we do as a team. We all eat lunch together. We have a lot of classes together. So putting the team first is not something I think about. You just do it."

Also a member of the Athletic Director's Honor Roll, Berringer is majoring in electrical engineering technology. He plans to graduate in May 2012.

"When the coaches contacted me (about joining the team), the first thing I did was see if Cal had an electrical engineering program," he said. "I saw how well the EET program had done, and its success was a big part in me coming here."

Berringer's collegiate baseball career has ended, but this summer he served his second year as an electrical engineering intern with the Naval Surface Warfare Center in Bethesda, Md.

"I loved playing for the baseball program and being at Cal," he said. "Coming here was definitely a good decision."

Senior catcher Eric Berringer is the second Vulcan student-athlete in three years to be honored with the PSAC Sportsmanship Award.
