Potter Val Cushing to Give Presentation at Cal U

World-renowned potter Val M. Cushing is coming to California University for a presentation Wednesday, Oct. 23, from 6 to 8 p.m. and workshops Thursday and Friday, Oct. 24 and 25.

This artist has conducted workshops/lectures and exhibited his work in 170 group exhibits and 32 solo exhibits in major private galleries in the United States, Japan, Canada, England and Norway.

Cushing has been professor of ceramic art at Alfred University in New York for more than 30 years.

Vanessa S. Lynn, director of Cooper/Lynn Gallery said, "Cushing has shaped and influenced the eye, mind and spirit of several generations of ceramic artists."

Cushing served as president of the National Council on Education in the Ceramic Arts, and was a recipient of the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching from the State University of New York and the Fullbright Award for teaching abroad.

"Pottery is at the heart of my ceramic expression," Cushing said. "I find references and influences for my work from diverse sources. Nature and organic forms are a primary source for my ideas. I want very much for it to communicate an emotional warmth, a feeling for humanity and a sensual connection to all the intimate personal and human implications inherent in pottery forms."

Cushing develops most of the clay bodies, slips and glazes he uses in his work.

He has a strong preference for colors and textures that evoke the warmth and richness of autumn in the Northeast.

Cushing said he uses materials and processes in the most skillful way possible, hoping the work expresses the highest levels of craftsmanship and professionalism.

That Cushing has achieved such a high level of craftsmanship and professionalism can be seen by the fame he has achieved for his work.

He has received the Ceramic Artist of the Year Award, an individual artist's grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, and numerous cash and purchase prizes from ceramic art exhibitions.

Cushing has had several articles and papers and numerous photographs of his work published in professional journals and magazines, and they have been included in several books concerning contemporary American ceramics.

He has also appeared on television and National Public Radio.

Cushing has pieces in several public and private collections. Among them are the Brooklyn Museum of Art, Renwick Gallery of the Smithsonian Institute and Honolulu Academy of the Arts.

Cushing's work can be seen in the Reed Arts Center gallery until November 14.

CU's Inter-Fraternity Council Closes Meetings

by Jami F. Marlowe

California University's Inter-Fraternity Council voted Tuesday to close all weekly meetings to non-greek persons.

The vote, 10-1 in favor, occurred after a motion by Delta Sigma Phi representative, Gordon Keck.

Referring to the October 11 issue of the Times article "Alleged Hazing Incident Reported," Keck said "It seemed to me the whole (Greek) system got a black eye," as a result.

Keck mentioned two quotations attributed to IFC president Chris Kucherawy that Kucherawy had asked not to be put in the paper. Keck claims the press took advantage of privileges.

Kucherawy gave permission after the October 8 meeting to be quoted.

Keck also brought up the issue of bias, saying the paper did not give fraternities and sororities a chance for good publicity, such as volunteer work with M.A.S.H. and other functions.

Barry Niccolai, assistant director of Student Association, Inc., said that closing IFC meetings may be within the rights of IFC when considering fraternity membership is exclusive by invitation.

However, he said an investigation is being conducted as to the legality of council's vote.

A representative of Sigma Tau Gamma, the only fraternity to vote against the motion, who wished to remain anonymous said, "We shouldn't try to hide anything from the press."

"They (IFC) have no right to throw out the press," he said.

In other matters, the $10 fine for leaving meetings early went into effect.

Representatives from Tupperware proposed selling Tupperware items as a fundraiser.

The pledge and associate meeting that was canceled on October 16, will be Monday, Oct. 12, in World Culture 100.

The Alpha Kappa Lambda fraternity and Delta Zeta sorority each sponsored activities for National Alcohol Awareness Week.

Disabilities Awareness Day Set for Tomorrow

by Katherine L. Shepard

To see the world through the eyes of the blind, you must wear very dark glasses.

As "temporary" as this situation may be, these dark glasses represent one of several techniques which will help aid the CAN-DO Club (formerly the Handicapped Club) to demonstrate the importance of society's awareness of disability during the Disabilities Awareness Day tomorrow in the lobby of Gallagher Dining Hall.

A wide variety of games are scheduled from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., each representing a different disability, such as deafness, dyslexia, paralysis and blindness.

SAI organizations (which will have booths at the event), including the Council for Exceptional Children, the Veterans Club and Delta Sigma Phi, along with student and community participants, will join CAN-DO to raise money through competitive game sponsorship.

Lisa Caputo, CU's 1991 Homecoming Queen, will be active chairwoman of the day's festivities.

Several small prizes, including an AM/FM radio, will be awarded afterward. Refreshments will be served.

Volunteers, interested persons, or groups should call 938-4976 for further information on this SAI-funded and sponsored activity, or Special Services at 938-4012.

You bring the glasses. We'll have the spectacle!

As the Senate Turns

Just when you thought that all television would have to offer in October would be Bart Simpson, Murphy Brown's pregnancy and the tomahawk chop of Atlanta Braves fame, we are presented with an even more important problem—the Senate's decision of whether or not to confirm President Bush's nomination of Clarence Thomas to the U. S. Supreme Court, a seat occupied since 1967 by Thurgood Marshall, who retired earlier in the year.

It started out pretty much the way one would expect: major interest groups chose their sides and the networks brought in their experts to show why said groups were drastically wrong.

And then someone in Congress, a Democrat, we have been led to believe, leaked a story that Thomas had sexually harassed his former aide, Anita Hill.

The events following this original accusation have led to almost a soap opera-tinged atmosphere, culminating with this past weekend's hearings in the Senate caucus room.

So, with that soap opera genre in mind, I pose these questions: Could Anita Hill and her supporters convince the Senate Committees that they could choose the wrong man for the nation's highest court? Was it justified to include as evidence at the 11th hour (or was it the 14th hour) a lie detector test that Hill had passed earlier in the proceedings? Can Ted Kennedy justify his asking people about their assumed adulterated personal lives?

Do we know? More importantly, does it matter?

Once again, the United States appears to be the laughing stock of the world when it comes to major national interest. The Times, from London to New York to California University, have had a field day with the story, and who can really blame them?

It does seem amazing that many people watched all 14 hours of coverage on Sunday. Perhaps they were eager to find how the entire fiasco would turn out, how the witnesses supporting Hill and Thomas would exchange verbal punches in this epic battle of political pugilism. Or maybe it was because they couldn't find their remote control.

While the need for Thomas' chance to clear his name appeared to be in the best interest of everyone, a national spectacle reminiscent of the Oliver North hearings of 1988 could have and should have been avoided.

After all, consider some of these panelists: Kennedy, Joseph Biden, Strom Thurmond, Orrin Hatch—definitely the Vienna Boys Choir of the Senate chamber.

My answer to these questions of utmost national importance admittedly sounds a bit improper, not to mention pretentious, but the damage to the reputation of both Thomas and Hill is irreparable, until at least one of them writes a book on the matter in an effort to further screw the system.

As he departed the caucus room early Monday morning, Missouri Senator John Danforth was quoted as saying, "The whole thing is a disaster. The whole process is a disaster."

"At this point, what more can be said?" asked Vermont's Patrick Leahy. I couldn't agree more.

TUNING IN TO TONE'S TOON

Tone, I too, am a big fan of the older cartoons featured on The Bugs Bunny/Tweety Show, and don't appreciate many of the new cartoons (particularly one where the little blue creatures go around smurfing one another). Similarly, I am distraught by the crass commercialism to which Saturday morning cartoons (or should I say half-hour commercials) have been reduced.

But I must ask you whether you have actually watched Hammer Man or New Kids on the Block, or do you simply have a beef with the titles, which do seem to promote the wealthy singing groups?

I would ask you to consider from where the cartoon characters you idolize came. You must realize that the television bigwigs are going to promote whatever seems to be a hit with the Saturday morning TV crowd.

In your day and mine, when Bugs Bunny, Batman and Superman were big on the comic book

CU Officials Find Wheelchair Trip Difficult

Taking the grueling and frequently frustrating wheelchair tour of campus are (from the front) Dean of Students Dr. Paul Burd, Vice-president of Student Development Elmo Natali and Times editor Jami Marlowe, guided by the CAN DO Club's Doug Kearns. Watching the proceedings is Vice-president of Administration and Finance Alan Golden. Photograph by Nicole McDonough.

Three administrators, secure in their wheelchairs, launched off from the parking lot at the Downey-Garofalo Health Center. Gripping the wheel rails a little tighter for brakes, they rode down the hill. Course in mind and direction set, they started the campus odyssey at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 8. They had one hour to complete the handicap-obstacle course Doug Kearns set for them. "One hour? I couldn't do that just walking," said Elmo Natali, vice-president of student development and services and a participant in the race. Kearns has been pushing for administrators to sit up and take notice of the problems of accessibility facing wheelchair-bound students attending California University. His wish came true with the demonstration. Darren Danko of the Student Association Inc., Dr. Paul Burd, dean of student affairs, Natali, and Tim Susick, chairman of the Act 504/ADA Committee, steered their respective vehicles on a course that took them from the lot down and across Third Street and into World Cultures, where they had to maneuver themselves into the bathroom. After that, they traveled down University Avenue to the Frich Biology building where, once they were behind the building, they wheeled themselves up the ramp, into the bathrooms once again, and back down the ramp. From there the participants traveled over to the rear of the Keystone Education building, entered on the first floor, and took the elevator to the second. Once on the second floor, they realized they could not get back onto Third Street. Along the way, Kearns was sure to point out small hazards not normally noticed when walking. For instance, uneven portions of the sidewalks pose a problem to wheelchair-bound people, for they can get stuck or even thrown from their chairs. Buildings such as Dixon Hall, which houses the Word Processing Lab and Writing Center, are out of bounds for the handicapped, as is Old Main, where the president's office is located. Kearns discussed why these changes had to be made. "Handicapped people like to fit in as much as possible. They don't want to draw attention to themselves," he said. The biology building proved to be a difficult obstacle for the wheelchair riders. "I had to grab the rails and pull myself up," said Burd. Once inside, the men were asked to go to the restroom. While entering, the chair-bound participants encountered a bump that could cause problems. Opening doors once inside the restrooms was also tough. The steep incline is twice as dangerous declining. If the ramp is icy, Kearns suggests, a wheelchair is bound to slide down completely and run straight into the basement doors of Old Main. Fortunately, to his knowledge, this has never happened.

Three Cal U Faculty Elected to Presidential Search Committee

CU's president, Dr. John Pierce Watkins, will retire in May 1992 after 16 years of service. The succeeding president should begin his term by September. The Board of Governors for the State System of Higher Education has developed procedures for the presidential search which provide for fair representation, said Thomas. According to Counsel of Trustees Chairwoman Judy Ansell, to be in compliance with the procedures, the Presidential Search Committee will include four representatives from the Council of Trustees, one senior policy executive, one current or former university president within the State System of Higher Education (non-voting member), three faculty, one non-instructional person (a representative from AFSCME), one CU student, and one alumnus appointed by Ansell. "I will look at the committee to make sure it is well-balanced," said Ansell. Most of the committee members have been chosen, but other than faculty representatives, their names have not been revealed. The Presidential Search Committee faces a long and complicated process, but it guarantees a fair election, said Ansell. A professional consulting agency will assist the committee in the search. Ansell said the Presidential Search Committee will be established completely by October 31.

CU Hosts Musicological Society

California University's College of Liberal Arts will host the fall meeting of the Allegheny Chapter of the American Musicology Society on Saturday, Oct. 26, beginning at 10 a.m. Scheduled speakers include: Dr. Irving Godt of Indiana University of Pennsylvania speaking on "Marianne von Martines: Academica Filharmonica"; Dr. Deane Root, University of Pittsburgh, "Politics and Myth in the Case of Stephen Foster"; and Dr. Alan Krueck, CU, "Concepts of Requiem in the Second Half of the Twentieth Century: Attitudes of Text and Musical Techniques." Following lunch and a business meeting, the afternoon will continue with Franco Sciannameo, Carnegie Mellon University, speaking on "The Extraordinary Music of Giacinto Scelsi: A Personal Experience"; Istvan Hegy, IUP, "Strata in Hungarian Folk Music"; and Dr. Carl Rahkonen, IUP, "Shamanism in the Finnish Kantele." The AMS's Allegheny Chapter, which meets twice yearly, has memberships in Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia and parts of Ohio. For additional information, call Dr. Krueck at 938-4246.

Support Group to Begin Meetings

Walking Together, the bereavement support group, will begin meeting early next month at the California Senior Center. The group is intended to support anyone grieving the death of a loved one. Sponsored by the senior center, the meetings are scheduled for every third Thursday of each month, beginning on Thursday, Nov. 21, from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Reverend Elwood Vandvier of

Tribute to a Funny Man

Tone Cimaglia

Sadness. Shock. Emptiness. Those were some of the feelings that I experienced upon hearing that long time funny man Redd Foxx had collapsed and died of a heart attack Friday, Oct. 10.

Foxx was rehearsing for his new sitcom, The Royal Family, when he collapsed on the set, and was pronounced dead at Queens of Angels Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center. He was 68 years old.

Foxx was nationally known for his portrayal of the scratchy voiced, bow-legged, crabby junk peddler Fred Sanford on the sitcom Sanford and Son. The show only ran from 1972-77, but it brought Foxx a world of fame.

Whenever Sanford's son Lamont (Demond Wilson) threatened to leave the house, Foxx would grab his chest and fake a heart attack, calling out to his dead wife, "I'm coming, Elizabeth! I'm coming!"

How ironic that what he was most famous for on the show would, in reality, take his life.

Foxx was born John Elroy Sanford on Dec. 9, 1922. He started out as a funny, albeit foul-mouthed, comedian who frequently headlined in Las Vegas. He encountered many problems in his youth, but as he grew, so did his career. In the early 1950's, he performed at Harlem's Apollo Theatre, and from 1951-56 he worked with comedian Slappy White. He got his first television break when he appeared on the Today show in 1964, and made other guest appearances on talk shows.

His first major movie role was in Cotton Comes to Harlem in 1967, and later appeared in Norman, Is That You?

Foxx tried to resurrect the Fred Sanford character in a sitcom in 1980, but it eventually fell through. After filing for bankruptcy in 1983, in which the IRS claimed that he owed $2.9 million dollars in back taxes, Foxx seemed to be fading from the screen. He tried a comeback by starring in his own variety show in 1986, but it also failed.

Eddie Murphy gave Foxx new life by giving him a part in his 1988 movie, Harlem Nights, and this year, he was awarded yet another sitcom, The Royal Family, in which he was to co-star with Della Reese. The show received rave reviews from the critics, and Foxx seemed to be back in the business.

I can still remember watching Sanford and Son with my father when I was a kid. Oh sure, I was only six years old, but I remember my father laughing hysterically at the antics of Foxx. And thanks to the age of reruns, I had the opportunity to watch the show when I was old enough to understand what was going on, and I loved it.

I know that there are some of you that really don't feel as bad as I do about the death of Foxx, and understandably so. But when you've watched as much television as I have, you can't help but to feel saddened by the event.

Foxx will always be remembered for his role as that Watts junk dealer, but he was more than that. He was a man that made millions laugh at his jokes and antics.

He was a man that faced the extreme hardships of life, but still had the courage to go out there every night and make people happy. He was a pioneer of comedy, and will always be remembered in this columnist's mind as one of the great ones.

"I'm coming, Elizabeth! I'm Coming!"

Take good care of him, Elizabeth. Take good care of him.

Former Russian Soldier Speaks at ROTC

Captain Andy Kwortek, assistant instructor, recruiting officer, and staff adjutant for California University ROTC, poses with Maxim "Max" Merzlikin, a former Russian soldier who attends CU. Mike Avioli, Steve Doljac, and Lee Myers (in the background) were three of the 35 students who attended the assembly at which Merzlikin spoke about his experiences in the Soviet Army.

by Tone Cimaglia

Former Russian soldier Max Merzlikin spoke about life in the Soviet Union to the California University ROTC on Wednesday, Oct. 9, in the ROTC building.

Merzlikin, a 24-year-old who came to the United States on April 10, 1991, is a graduate student at CU who is majoring in business management.

He spoke to the members about life in Russia and the people's attitudes toward the Soviet army.

"Their general attitude is that the army is dumb," said Merzlikin. "They have a very negative outlook toward the military. But, in spite of what they think about us, we are still proud to wear the Soviet army uniform," he said.

Merzlikin talked about the differences between Russian colleges and American colleges.

"Things in Russia are not like over here. Over there, you have to take what they give you. There is a military class that everybody must take. It is very difficult and takes a lot of time, especially for those who don't have military experience. It is not like that over here," he said.

Merzlikin also talked about Soviet attitudes toward American soldiers and life in the Soviet army.

"The main point in the Soviet army is that the soldier is not supposed to think for himself, but to think what his superior is thinking," Merzlikin said.

"We are taught not to think, but just listen. As far as the American soldiers go, we don't think about them. We just work, eat and rest. Nobody is afraid of the American army. They just don't think about it because of the other problems within the Soviet army," he said.

Merzlikin could not answer whether or not he would return to the Soviet Union.

"I can't answer that question right now. I really don't know. I spent 23 years of my life in the Soviet Union, and it wasn't getting any different. I just decided to leave. As far as going back is concerned, I can't say. Maybe if the situation gets better over there, but until it does, I just can't answer that," he said.

Merzlikin was, however, rather hopeful that one day the current state in Russia will change.

"I think that Russia is going to improve," Merzlikin said. "Once the old generation dies off, and the younger, free-thinking generation takes over, I think that Russia will eventually change into another America. Until that happens, we will have to accept what is going on right now, until something changes."

Associated Artists Tour Southside

by Tracy Matula & Deborah Lee
The Associated Artists of California University visited a number of galleries, craft shops, and antique shops on Carson Street in the Southside of Pittsburgh on September 28,

The students arrived at 11:30 a.m. and spent their day touring the shops until 5 p.m.

The Southside was originally known as Birmingham, but was annexed by the city of Pittsburgh in 1872.

The community is undergoing a restoration, and has received the National Register Historic District designation.

It is also a National Main Street Center Urban Demonstration District, one of only seven in the United States.

•The Antique Gallery had lovely old oil paintings in beautiful frames, some great, carved animal figures, and an old hand-carved corner shelf.

•Down to Earth is a shop selling pottery, including portrait mugs. It also displayed some beautiful three dimensional stained glass items of butterflies and floral designs.

•Noir Lifestyles is a black cultures shop displaying vibrantly colored oil paintings. The shop also has some remarkable sculpture.

•Studio Z is a small gallery owned by Kathleen Zimlucky which featured some gorgeous two-dimensional floral and oriental designs, among other items.

•South Bank Galleries was packed with antiques from Elvis Presley records to old liquor bottles. Upstairs were some carved wooden masks, a Chinese, carved wooden chest, a pair of large, Chinese vases, and many interesting drawings and paintings.

•Patak Design is a jewelry store which sells crystal, quartz, amethyst, and many other stones, as well as jewelry. Several students taking jewelry courses this semester were interested in purchasing semi-precious gemstones at this shop.

So, if you're thinking of looking in on some of Pittsburgh's cultures, look to the Southside on Carson Street, and follow the flags on the shops to some old and new art styles.

Senior Center to Hold Vision Screening

California Senior Center will be holding a free vision screening at its 750 Orchard Street location from 9 a.m. to noon on Tuesday, Oct. 22.

Personnel from Dr. E. Ronald Salvitti's office, 50 E. Beau St. in Washington, Pa., will be testing for cataracts, glaucoma and visual acuity.

At the same time a representative from the Bureau of Blindness and Visual Services will be on hand with free information and consultation service.

Appointments are a must, and can be made by calling 938-3554. Van transportation is available within the California area with a 24-hour notice.

California Senior Center is funded, in part, under a contract with the Southwestern Pennsylvania Area Agency on Aging through a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Aging.

Senior Center Hosts Harvest Gathering

California Senior Center will host a "Harvest Gathering" in the Dome Room and Grand Hall of Old Main Wednesday, Nov. 13, from 3 to 5 p.m. to provide an opportunity for the university community to see the model of the new $1.2 million senior facility to be built on Route 88 south across from Roadman Park.

The gathering will feature light refreshments, welcoming remarks by California University President Dr. John Pierce Watkins, center director Mary Hart and McDonald Associates architectural representative Kenneth Kulak, Jr.

More than $800,000 of the $1.2 million goal has already been pledged in the campaign. Judy Ansell, president of the CU Council of Trustees is chairwoman.

The fundraising is expected to be completed by the end of 1991.

STUDENT CABINET AND GOVERNMENT HEADLINES

by Tami Rodman

Chairman Pete Chakos reported during the meeting of Oct. 10, the current running balance to be $18,990.68. The Council of Exceptional Children, which serves to help the mentally and physically handicapped children in the area was granted monetary funding of $800.00 for an annual convention in November. The CU Pep Club received an allocation of $600.00 for additional uniforms for its members. Student cabinet officials passed a motion regarding the continuation of the U magazine on our campus. An allocation of $500.00 will be issued towards the subscription. The first copies will be available on Nov. 4. Cabinet officials reviewed the Mon Valley Dance Council's constitution and tabled the issue until further investigation takes place. The group is a newly formed organization that is requesting official recognition at CU. Congratulations are in order to senators Bill Brotz and Ed Eagle, who were recently elected as cabinet officials.

*****

Quorum was not established during Monday's meeting on Oct. 14. Therefore, student congress did not vote on official business. President Doug Skerbetz requested all senators and classmembers to produce letters to Governor Bob Casey during class, since everyone failed to do so on their own time the week before. Public Relations Officer Tami Rodman has reviewed each letter and is preparing for the CU send-off. Corresponding Secretary Stacey Yates urges classmembers to visit the government office to review newspapers from the other SSHE campuses. "There are many issues facing the young men and women students in our state, and in support, we need to be aware of each other's problems and not just of our own at CU," says Yates. Lastly, committees are working efficiently to make modifications and in creating and implementing new ideas for the betterment of our campus life.

Student Union Update

A cultural renaissance in Southwestern Pennsylvania is the goal of the newly formed Southwestern Pennsylvania Arts Network, said acting director Richard H. Grinstead, chairman of the Art department at California University.

"Performing arts groups, musicians, writers, poets, painters, educators, photographers, sculptors, weavers, and one-of-a-kind artists are urged to network through SPAN to secure better resources and support for the arts in Southwestern Pennsylvania," Grinstead said.

An initial grant from the State System of Higher Education's Faculty Professional Development Council and additional monies from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts made possible the formation of this new network in the rural areas of Beaver, Greene, Fayette, Somerset and southern Allegheny, Washington, and Westmoreland counties.

SPAN will offer workshops, both at the university and at locations in each of the seven counties, to provide practical help in grant writing, fund-raising, audience, board development, and other areas needed by artists and arts groups to start or stay in business or to successfully launch community performances or events.

Arts Alliance Formed at Cal U

"Artists and art groups from any field of art, and at any level or age, are welcome to join SPAN at no fee during the first year of the arts network," Grinstead said.

SPAN also plans to become a calendar clearing house for arts events in Southwestern Pennsylvania and plans to publish a newsletter for its members. The group is also developing a directory of artists and arts organizations in Southwestern Pennsylvania.

Grinstead has been granted a six-month sabbatical leave to coordinate the initial activities of SPAN, and funds from the grants will provide for a part-time director for the network.

In addition, faculty, professional volunteers, and trained student interns will be available to help SPAN members write grant proposals and to provide guidance in advertising and public relations efforts.

Business advice will also be available to provide guidance in setting up tax records, accounting systems, and simplified billing procedures.

SPAN will host one of its first workshops on grant writing, to be presented by the Pennsylvania Rural Arts Alliance, at the Reed Arts Center at CU on Tuesday, Nov. 19.

The topic of the workshop will be Technology Assistance and Salary Support for Local Art Organizations.

The $10 fee will include lunch. For more information on the workshop or to receive a brochure and membership form, call Grinstead at 938-4182, 938-4565, or at the Art department, 938-4182.

SPAN is a non-profit arts organization formed through the efforts of local arts groups: the departments of art, music, theatre, and English at CU, the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, and the Pennsylvania Rural Arts Alliance.

New Jersey Collegiate Career Day Scheduled

The New Jersey Collegiate Career Day, the largest college recruiting program in the state, brings together New Jersey companies with 1991 college graduates wishing to work there.

Sponsored by the Rutgers-New Brunswick Career Services office and the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, the New Jersey Collegiate Career Day will take place on Monday, Jan. 6, 1992, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Rutgers University Brower Commons and the Rutgers Student Center on College Avenue, New Brunswick campus.

If planning on attending, be prepared to interview and bring plenty of resumes.

Brochures, available in the Placement and Career Services Office, 229A LRC, include directions and a list of companies that have attended the program before.

It is the goal of the Student Union Committee to address the needs of the students at the university and provide services and space to accomplish these goals. Updates IV and V address some of these concerns.

A lounge for commuter students, including vending machines and lockers, will be included in the operation of the revitalized student union.

The Gold Rush will be remodeled this summer in anticipation of an August 10 opening. The new south plaza entrance will lead students to this new service area.

The main lobby, Fayette Mart, information center and lobby offices will be remodeled into a formal dining area.

The Student Development wing is also in line for a makeover to include expanded office space and a conference room.

The Washington Food Court will receive a new ceiling and carpeting and some expanded seating will be added when "the wall" comes down.

The major addition to the main floor will be the performing arts center. This room will seat 600 theatre style or 250 banquet style. There is a full stage in the performance center and accompanying conference/meeting rooms. This entire area will be able to support conferences, artistic performances and banquets.

The third floor of the union will be converted into an office complex. The Student Association, Inc., will occupy the Greene Room and the north wing.

The south wing will be used to provide office space for Student Government, Student Association Board of Directors, Student Entertainment Committee and Entertaining Arts Committee, Panhellenic Council and Interfraternity Council.

Both areas will have an adequate meeting space.

It is projected that the concrete slabs will be completed within the week, and a tour of the new building is tentatively scheduled for Friday, Oct. 25, at 3:30 p.m.

A confirmation will appear in next week's edition of the Times.

Information about the new building or remodeling can be obtained by calling extension 4309.

Restored Old Main Chapel to Be Blessed

An ecumenical blessing of the newly restored Old Main chapel will take place today at noon.

Phase I of the chapel restoration project is complete. Funded by private donations through the Foundation for California University, the restoration has returned the former chapel to its original glory.

Following the ecumenical blessing, a reception for the entire university community will be held in the chapel.

A wedding tomorrow is the first event scheduled in the chapel. According to an informal survey, it is the first wedding ever held on campus. For additional information, call Beth Baxter at 938-4195.
