University Family Day 1992 CU Hosts Windt Lecture

MARK SCHMALING

California University and the Student Association, Inc. will hold Family Day 1992 tomorrow. This event will give the families of CU students the opportunity to visit the university community, meet with faculty and staff, and tour the facilities.

There will be events scheduled throughout the day. Morning events will include an academic/organizational fair in the amphitheater of the Natali Student Center. This fair will feature academic, service and organizational displays along with guided tours of academic facilities. All of the academic departments, clubs and organizations will have displays and representatives to answer questions.

In addition, a variety of children's activities—including a roving magician and children's films—will be offered and entertainment and refreshments will be available.

Mark Eddie and the Itch will perform between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Eddie is featured on WDVE's Paulsen and Krenn show and is a CU favorite. His choice of music and humor make his shows enjoyable.

Administrative offices such as Student Development, Placement and Career Services, Admissions, Financial Aid and Revenue will be open to address any questions the families may have.

There will be a brunch from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. at Gallagher Hall. The cost will be $3.55 per person excluding those students with meal plans. After brunch, a free shuttle bus will be available to transport families to Adamson Stadium to watch the Vulcan football team take on Kutztown University and the men's soccer team battle Slippery Rock.

The CU marching band will perform before the game and during halftime.

After the game, families are invited to join CU's new President, Dr. Angelo Armenti, at the university park for a barbecue. The barbecue will cost $6.60 for adults and $4 for children under ten. Students with meal plans will not be charged.

For more information about Family Day 1992, call 938-4308.

California University's Entertaining Arts Committee and the Student Association, Inc. will host Dr. Ted Windt, professor of political rhetoric at the University of Pittsburgh, on Monday, Sept. 28, at 8 p.m. in the Performance Center of the Natali Student Center.

Windt will help listeners separate fact from good public relations and to recognize the difference between intelligent proposals and simple campaign doubletalk, when he presents views on such topics as public presentation and perception of presidential candidates since 1960; the beginnings of the television presidency; political strategies in primary and general elections; and the tight spots in which presidents have found themselves when having to address the American public.

Author of Essays in Presidential Rhetoric, the prize-winning

Presidents and Protesters: Political Rhetoric in the 1960's, The Cold War Rhetoric: The Beginnings 1945-1950, and editor of Presidential Rhetoric: 1961-Present, Windt has been honored as one of the Chancellor's Distinguished Teachers at Pitt, where he has developed and instructed numerous courses in U.S. presidential rhetoric.

As a long-time television political analyst, speech writer and political consultant, Windt has gained much insight into the field of American politics.

While he will not recommend a particular candidate, he will discuss the campaign practices of both presidential contenders and attempt to provide a better understanding of the issues.

The lecture is free and open to the public. For information call 938-4308.

Just Whose Union Is It, Anyway?

Okay, check this out. On any given day of the week, my earliest class starts at 11. I roll into campus around 10:45, and guess what? I can't find a parking space! I search and I search, I drive and I drive, and I can't find one, lousy parking space. And do you know why I can't find a parking space? Because everywhere I look, there are all these cars with these . . . these . . . faculty stickers! There are faculty stickers to the right of me; faculty stickers to the left of me; faculty stickers all around me!

Let me ask you this. Why is it we have a new parking lot behind the new student union, and there are less parking spaces this year than there were last year?

I'll tell you why. Because for some stupid reason, the faculty is permitted to park directly in front of and behind the union, while we are forced to park somewhere back in the woods and hike a few miles to the union. Is this not the Elmo Natali Student Center? This is not the Elmo Natali Faculty Center. It was not built for them; it was built for us. That is why it is called a student center.

So why in the hell should they be allowed to park nearest to the building? When was the last time you saw a member of the faculty shooting pool, playing video games, or watching a movie in the center? When was the last time you saw a bunch of faculty members hanging around the lobby just shooting the breeze? Can't remember? That's because you've never seen it!

And God forbid one of us park in one of their hallowed reserved lots, because if we do, we're looking at a parking ticket. But if they, for some stupid reason or another, take one of our spots, they get absolutely nothing.

The faculty spends most of their time in the classrooms and their offices, so give them their own lots near the damn buildings, and leave the spaces near the center for us.

Here's a thought. How about we get rid of all the reserved parking on campus, just for a week, and let the students and faculty fight it out for parking spaces. Then maybe they will see just what kind of ludicrous hell we have to go through to get a space.

After all, we are the ones paying for this center and the parking facilities, and, not to mention, the faculty's salaries. We are not here for them; they are here for us.

We outnumber the faculty by a great deal, so there should be just one lot for the faculty, not all of these little lots placed around campus for their convenience. And I don't want to hear this bull about them having to walk—we have to, so they should have to.

Hell, we didn't even need a new union—we needed a new parking garage.

But that's too little too late, and now, we have to suffer.

THANK YOU

I would like to thank California University's faculty and staff for all the help after our recent loss.

On September 1, my family were victims of a fire. Our apartment was a total loss. The University traced my whereabouts through the Brownsville Police Department to tell me they were there to help any way they could.

When I returned to campus two days after the fire, I didn't know how I could remain in school and still take care of the business of finding a home, furniture and all the rest of the items we needed.

The university helped immediately by having Off Campus Housing begin phoning for rentals. After two days of exhaustive phone calls I had a place to live. Besides making phone calls in my behalf for permanent housing they also made arrangements for temporary housing until we could move in.

They also contacted the Red Cross to replace books and drafting equipment. They also made eating arrangements at the dining hall.

I also want to thank all the faculty and staff who donated clothing, money, time, a refrigerator, vehicles to move furniture and large shoulders to lean on.

Peggy O'Leary and Family

Voter Drive Begins Student Government Votes for King

by Jeremy Workman

The California University Women's Center, in conjunction with other organizations, will hold a voter registration drive beginning tomorrow during Family Day and ending on Wednesday, Sept. 30.

Alberta Graham, director of the Women's Center, said the main event of the registration will be a rally held in the performance center of the Natali Student Center on Tuesday at 1 p.m.

The guest speaker at the rally, Deputy Secretary for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Vincent Guest, will talk about the importance of voting. Refreshments will be offered at the rally.

"We do want to encourage everyone to come out Tuesday to the rally," Graham said. "This is a very important election year, first of all, and I think it is our responsibility as adults to vote."

Voter registration will be held after the rally. In addition, registration will be held at the Women's Center booth tomorrow at Family Day; in the Women's Center Monday through Wednesday; outside of Herron Patio, Monday and Wednesday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.; and in the World Culture building Monday night from 5 to 7. Student Earth Action League will also hold registration in the student center Monday and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Other organizations helping to register voters are Women for Progressive Politics, Student Congress, Black Student Union, Alpha Phi Alpha, and Alpha Phi Omega.

According to Graham, "We're trying to involve everyone."

Graham said that any resident of Pennsylvania can register to vote at the registration stations.

"We're looking for everybody. Anybody who's not registered to vote, we want them registered," she said.

The registration process involves filling out a registration form and mailing it, or they can be kept and given to Vincent Guest after the rally. No identification is needed according to Graham.

Again, Graham can't stress enough the importance of voting. She says voting helps people to achieve things they want and shows how people feel about things in their lives.

"Politics is a part of our lives, no matter what you do, especially in education," Graham said.

For more information about voter registration, call the Women's Center at 938-5857. It is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Not since 1976 has a male California University Student had hopes of reigning on the Homecoming Court.

Sixteen years ago, Dave Zeama ran for and won the homecoming queen contest. However, since that time no male has expressed a desire to run for queen until this year.

The rules stating that only females could run for homecoming queen were established after Zeama's reign.

Rules are subject to change each year with the approval of the homecoming committee, a subcommittee of Student Government. The rules, with the female candidate stipulation, were re-approved in the spring semester, 1991.

A motion by the homecoming committee to override the 16 year old rules was shot down by a vote of 16-10.

After turning in a completed packet, Ed McElhanev appealed to the Student Government, Monday, asking that his nomination be accepted. After much debate, Student Government voted to add an election for homecoming king.

"I'm very sincere. I mean, you're not going to see me out there in a dress," McElhanev said at the meeting.

McElhanev, a member of the Acacia fraternity, said running for homecoming court is something he's talked about since his freshman year.

He defends his position: "Foremost, it's for the fun of it. Second, I'm not a political activist, but I believe in equal rights. I feel California is behind as far as political issues [goes], and this is one way to open up the students' eyes."

The change in homecoming court procedures aroused controversy on campus.

Samuel Shurgott, chairman of Student Entertainment and Homecoming committees supports the decision to accept applications for both king and queen.

"We spend over $20 thousand on homecoming every fall between floats, speakers, parade marshals, prizes and special events," Shurgott said.

"There's no reason we shouldn't have a king. There's no extra work. It's only logical if you have a queen, you should have a king."

The subject of alumni donations to the university was also mentioned during Student Government's discussion. According to Pauline Tonsetic, Director of Alumni Affairs, some alumni might not accept the possibility of a contest of queen vs. king. However, Tonsetic supports the decision to have both a king and a queen.

"I think it was wrong that he was going to take away the dreams of girls to be homecoming queen," said Brian English, Inter-Fraternity Council Public Relations chairman.

"If he wanted to prove a political statement, he could have went about it in a more suitable way. He jeopardized the relationship of the fraternities with the school for his personal discrimination," he said.

As for the effect on the Greek community, McElhanev said, "Homecoming is open to the school, not just Greeks. Racism, sexism and bigotry itself should be eliminated. I didn't want to just fluff the girls off and run for queen because I didn't think it would be fair. I'm not here to make a mockery out of homecoming or to make a mockery out of the women running."

McElhanev feels confident that his controversy will make homecoming king a tradition, not an issue.

As for the negative criticism he's received, McElhanev shrugs off the remarks. "In a way, I'm reveling in it [the criticism]. All they're doing is proving my point."

"Out of all this I hope I can make people think about equality and their ideas of their fellow students at this school. Whether African American, Native American, male, female, everyone should have equal rights."

To qualify for king, the student must be a current full-time, undergraduate, male CU student and must be a member in good standing of the Student Association, Inc.

He must have completed at least 50 credits and must have an accumulative 2.0 GPA.

Applicants must also submit a petition with 50 signatures and a copy of their transcripts.

The applications are available at the information desk and must be submitted by Monday to the Program Office in the Student Center.

ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT

CU Sponsors Communities Night for 'Streets of Gold'

California University is sponsoring a communities night for the presentation of Streets of Gold, an original historical drama by Tom DeTitta, at the State Theatre in Uniontown on Sunday, Oct. 11.

Set in the coal fields of Southwestern Pennsylvania, Streets of Gold is a love story that centers on a family of immigrants struggling to find a better life for themselves and for their children.

Streets of Gold highlights the courage and passion that allowed the millions of immigrants who passed through Ellis Island more than 100 years ago to fulfill their dreams and to power a new industrial nation.

Language barriers and unfamiliar customs isolated the many families who settled into the mill and coal patches to find a new life. Optimism and will allowed the families to overcome the realities that faced them and to prosper in spite of them.

Written by DeTitta, with music by Frank Lewin and produced by Ron Iannone, the show opens at 7:30 p.m. on October 10 and runs through the 17th. California University has tickets available for the October 11 production of the show.

The cost of the tickets is $9 for adults and $5 for students. Bus transportation, at a cost of $6, is available through the university.

Order tickets by calling Rene Brooks at 938-5957.

CU Players Present 'Twelfth Night'

If you threw a party, would you invite Sir Toby Belch, Feste, Sir Andrew and Maria?

Of course you would, because they are the life of the party in Twelfth Night, William Shakespeare's spirited comedy of love, which the California University Players will present during Homecoming Week, Wednesday, Oct. 7 through Saturday, Oct. 10, at 8 p.m. in Steele Auditorium.

The production is directed by Michael Slavin, with set design by Malcolm Callery.

The merrymaking in Twelfth Night centers on the Lady Olivia's household in Ilyria, where her uncle, Sir Toby Belch, tricks gawky Sir Andrew Aguecheek into wooing the lady.

At the same time Duke Orsino dotes on Olivia, but she rejects his advances. Rounding out the festivities are Feste, the local clown, and Maria, a quick-witted and sharp-tongued servant.

The only party pooper is Malvolio, a humorless, self-important popinjay.

A sea storm tosses Viola onto this land of romance and revelry; likewise her twin brother Sebastian, but they have been separated by the shipwreck, and each believes the other dead.

Dressed in (of course) identical disguises, the twins sow further confusion in an atmosphere already rife with misunderstanding.

Will these twists and turns ever be untangled?

The madcap merriment in Twelfth Night is summed up in Feste's song, "What is love? 'Tis not hereafter/ Present mirth hath present laughter./ What's to come is still unsure./ In delay there lies no plenty./ So, come kiss me, sweet and twenty./ Youth's a stuff will not endure."

Queen Elizabeth I threw the first twelfth night party in 1601 to celebrate the end of the Christmas holidays with her court. Shakespeare and his acting company provided the entertainment.

Join the University Players this Homecoming as they celebrate the event with the university's first home-grown Shakespeare production in many years.

CU students are admitted free to the play. Individual and group ticket prices for non-CU playgoers are available by calling Nancy at the Theatre Department weekdays between 1 and 3 p.m. at 938-4220.

CU Petitions State Assembly

by Kerry Petrichek and Jami F. Marlowe

California University students and faculty have united in a letter writing campaign to protest budget cuts and tuition increases.

Beginning at registration and orientation, Student Government and Student Association, Inc., circulated petitions to "request that the General Assembly consider a supplemental budget when it reconvenes."

According to Darren Danko, president of SAI, the drive collected 2,146 signatures from both students and faculty. The petition was sent Monday, Sept. 21, the first day the assembly was in session.

In a letter accompanying the petitions, Dr. Paul E. Burd, vice-president for student development and services, urged representatives to restore funding to the State System of Higher Education and four items blue-lined by Governor Robert P. Casey.

President Angelo Armenti, Jr., in a letter printed in the Times September 18, listed the deferred maintenance monies, the Pennsylvania Academy for the Profession of Teaching, post-secondary learning and the McKeever Environmental Learning Center as also deserving of funding.

Furthermore, he urged everyone in the university community (faculty, staff, students and parents) to write representatives, the secretary for budget, and the governor.

"The students can help and already have. At the stadium on Labor Day we had [petition] tables set up and at the first day of orientation to ask parents to write letters asking them to restore the 3.5 percent cut," said Armenti.

"It would help for parents and students to let legislators know that they are concerned," he said.

"I think legislators react to individual letters. If there are enough, they might look at them. People will have to tell how they feel," said Norman G. Hasbrouck, dean for enrollment management and academic services.

Dr. Allen Golden, vice president of administration and finance, agrees the campaign has the potential for success. "I think that there is a possibility. In the past there hasn't, but this time they [legislators] will see there is a great concern that they haven't seen before."

The campaign is not over with the mailing of these letters. Danko said more petitions will be circulating at Family Day tomorrow.

"We can let it die and not do anything or we can fight it and maybe make a difference," said Burd.

Statistically, the university was budgeted $23,433,133 in 92-93, down $858,746 from 91-92.

While Golden says educational programs will not suffer, supply budgets and maintenance projects will be deferred.

Homecoming Activities Set

California University Homecoming week is set for October 5 through 10, with a full schedule of events and entertainment.

The week starts off Monday with the Saturn Laser Light Concert at 8 and 10 p.m. in the Natali Student Center. Music from Pink Floyd, the Cure, Led Zeppelin, U2, Def Leppard and Genesis will be featured in a fantastic odyssey of futuristic sight and sound.

The laser system features the most innovative laser-graphic computer available. The results of the 1992 Homecoming queen election will be announced sometime during the concert.

On Tuesday, dance across the moonlit Mon on the Gateway Clipper Partyliner. The cruise is open to CU students and their guests ($5 per person). Tickets are available at the Student Union Information Center.

Wednesday will feature Denny Dent and His Two-Fisted Art Attack at 9 p.m., also in the Natali Student Center.

Armed with three brushes in each hand and appearing center stage with a blank canvas, Dent will create masterpieces before the audience's eyes in mere moments, as they hear music from a selection of superstars.

Dent has appeared in concert with famous musicians, including Neil Young, David Bowie, Miles Davis, Stevie Wonder and Stevie Nicks.

Dance the night away at a Wild Video Dance Party in the Natali Student Center Thursday night beginning at 8.

This largest touring video dance party, which continuously tours nationwide with 12 video systems, will feature a huge movie-like screen that projects all of the latest hit videos. Special effects include strobe lights, moon flowers, sound mars and more.

June Foray, the "voice that launched a thousand characters," will entertain students, faculty and the public on Friday at 8 p.m. in the Natali Student Center.

Foray has worked with Walt Disney, Chuck Jones, Fris Freleng, Bob McKimson and Jay Wark.

She is the voice of Jockey Snurf in Hanna-Barbera's long-running hit cartoon, the Smurfs, Grammi Gummi in Disney's Gummi Bears, Magica De Spell and Ma Beagle in Disney's Ducktales, and Granny in Warner-Spielberg's Tiny Toons.

Most people identify Foray with the voice of Rocky, the flying squirrel.

In fact her collaboration with Ward on the Rocky and Bullwinkle and George of the Jungle shows continues to bring her recognition.

The University Players' annual Homecoming play, Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, will run October 7-10 at 8 p.m. in Steele Auditorium. General public tickets are on sale for $8 ($6 for groups of ten or more). CU students will be admitted free with valid ID.

Homecoming Day on Saturday, Oct. 10, begins at 9 a.m. with the Queen's Brunch and the Black Alumni Chapter meeting/brunch in the Natali Student Center, followed by the annual parade at 11 a.m.

The parade will feature Foray as the grand marshal as well as the 1992 Homecoming Queen and her court, dignitaries, marching units, bands, floats, Syria Shriners and horses.

PETITIONS...

Enrollment for the fall 92 semester is 4,922 full-time, 816 part-time undergraduate students, as opposed to 5,966 and 849 full-time and part-time student in 91. Of the 5,738 students enrolled this semester, 5,406 are from Pennsylvania and 332 are out of state students.

With a drop in enrollment and decrease in SSHE appropriation, tuition has increased. Cost for attending CU one year ago broke down to: tuition at $1,314; activities fees at $250; and room and board at $1,600 for in-state students.

For out of state students, the amount was slightly more: tuition at $2,446; fees at $250; and room and board at $1,600.

As of this semester, for in-state students, tuition is $1,314; fees are $328; and room and board is $1,730.

Homecoming 1992 is sponsored by the Student Entertainment Committee, Entertaining Arts Committee, Alumni Association, and the Student Association, Inc.

Although most Homecoming activities are open to the public, some do require an admission fee.

$3,061 for tuition; $328 for fees; and $1,730 for room and board. However, in July the SSHE Board of Governors approved a tuition hike effective spring 93. Tuition for in-state students will only increase to $1,414 as a result.

In 90, Pennsylvania ranked 47th in the nation in per capita spending for higher education. Yet, 99,800 students, of which 86 percent are state residents, attend SSHE schools.

Of these, 75 percent remain in the state after graduation, with 63 percent of those remain in Southwestern Pennsylvania.

The SSHE is the 18th largest employer in the state with more than 11,000 employees.

Since the SSHE inception in 1983, tuition has increased from $1,480 per academic year to $2,728 in 92-93, an increase of 6.41 percent.

Far and Away: Big Budget, Low Entertainment

by Jamie Roach

Remember Richie on "Happy Days"? Well, Richie, Ron Howard, has grown up, leaving Patsie and Fonzie behind to direct big budget movies like the new arrival to the Vulcan Theater, Far and Away.

I'm sorry Ron, but I'd rather see the episode where Fonzie jumps over all those cars at Al's, than watch the lengthy (over 2 hours) and tiresome Far and Away.

The story takes place in the 1890's in three different locations: Western Ireland, Boston, and the Oklahoma territory.

Tom Cruise plays Joseph Donnelly, a poor Irish farmer who works the land that his father rents from the wealthy landlords. The conflict begins when Cruise's father dies and the landlords burn down Cruise's house for not paying the rent.

Cruise runs off to kill the landlord, whose daughter is Shannon Christie, played by Nicole Kidman, Cruise's wife in reality.

Thwarted in his attempt to kill the landlord by a backfiring rifle, Cruise is nursed back to health to stand trial.

But, before long, Shannon, a snotty fashion plate, gives him an offer he can't refuse. She longs to live in America and own her own property, but she needs a man to get on the ship to America. She asks Joseph to accompany her and he says yes.

Once in America, the movie starts to slow considerably, Cruise gets a job as a bar boxer, and boxes for what seems an eternity.

Since I enjoyed the Rocky films (I'm one of the few people to have seen Rocky V), you would think I would enjoy Cruise's fisticuffs, but the scenes just did not excite me.

One bright spot of this movie is the emergence of Nicole Kidman as a major box office star.

Maturing greatly from her early 1980's role in BMX Bandits, Kidman shines in this film. She's sexy, funny, serious, frightened and tough, clearly capable of displaying any emotion on cue.

Another bright spot of Far and Away is the cinematography. Many scenes are visually stunning, especially the climactic land rush scene, where thousands of wagons and men on horseback are lined up waiting to claim their land.

But, the excellent cinematography and superb acting of Nicole Kidman, in the end, cannot save this picture from being fairly average on my entertainment meter.

Maybe Ron Howard will get frustrated from reviews like this and try to start Happy Days, the Thirtysomething Years. I'm one guy who would watch every week.

CADETS SHOOT THE RAPIDS

Last Sunday, the cadets and students from California University and Penn State, Fayette Campus, shot the rapids at Ohio. Needless to say, everyone had a super time.

With the air temperature at about 70 degrees and the water at 65 degrees, the conditions were perfect for a day of white-water rafting.

After we were issued our equipment and received our safety briefing from the river personnel, we hit the water and it wasn't very long until the first person was dumped in the drink. Incredibly, it was our most accomplished boatman, Captain Kwortek.

The team has started the past two weeks with a competitive fire, starting faster than the ninth place overall team from the year before.

Physically, the team appears to be very strong in the early going. With the experience from the 1991 to save himself. We won't accuse Kevin personally since it was typical southern behavior.

After negotiating the first several rapids, we stopped and were treated to lunch by river guides. I'd like to tell you how it was, but unfortunately, Jim "I'll eat pressed ham anywhere, anytime" Albright got to the lunch line first. All that was left after he ate was a few slices of head cheese and a dollop or two of mayo.

After lunch, we continued down the river and continued to lose cadets along the way. However, the only major injuries we incurred were bruised egos.

So, all in all, it was a successful trip. If anyone would like to see a video of the trip, stop by the ROTC building and see it.

If you missed this year's trip, relax. We will be going again sometime in April.

RANGER CHALLENGE TEAM

This Ranger Challenge Team looks to be one of the best teams ever in CU's brief history of competition. Of the ten people from last year's team, a possible eight people are expected to return. This is not taking away from the early competition by the new potential members of the team.

After little more than a month of training, 50 Rangers were selected to accompany the British and Canadian Commandos on a raid on Dieppe, France, on August 19. Three Rangers were killed and four captured in America's first European ground action, but that didn't dampen the spirits of their comrades, who looked forward to their first taste of combat. It wasn't long in coming.

The Rangers spearheaded the American invasion of North Africa in November, with the 1st Bn. seizing shore batteries and fortifications at Arzew, Tunisia. The Rangers continued to fight throughout the North Africa Campaign, conducting raids and infiltrations, as well as conventional infantry operations. At El Guettar, the 1st Bn. earned the first of five Presidential Unit Citations awarded to the Rangers during the war.

"Darby's Rangers," as they came to be called, were so successful team and the physical strength of the possible 1992 team, this year's Ranger Challenge Team will be one to watch at Fort Indiantown Gap.

The team is currently partaking in a very grueling physical training program that most university students could not touch. It is not

THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF WORLD WAR II Birth of the Elite

World War II found the United States with few ground combat units deployed overseas and almost no combat-experienced troops.

As the Army prepared to enter the war in Europe in 1942, Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall sent Col. Lucian Truscott Jr. to London to arrange for American troops to gain that experience. To accomplish this, men would be recruited for a commando-style unit from forces stationed in Northern Ireland. The unit would be trained by British Commandos and would join them in raids against the Germans.

But the Americans didn't want to be known as "Commandos". Instead, the elite unit formed in June 1942 would be called by the distinctly American name "Ranger." The title had a proud history for the Yanks, dating back to the unit commanded by Col. Richard Rogers during the French and Indian War.

The man chosen to lead what would be called the 1st Ranger Battalion was Maj. William O. Darby, a charismatic young officer who believed in leading his men from the front.

Darby sought only fully-trained pure strength but mostly endurance.

How many people do you know who can run five miles, do push-ups and sit-ups until their muscles fail to function normally, and then perform multiple sets of pull-ups and chin-ups. Some even stay longer to play basketball.

All of this before most students wake up for class. The funny thing about it all; the training is voluntary.

After all the training is complete and California's Ranger Challenge Team brings home the trophy, all the hard work and sweat will be worth it.

Co-op Corner Securing Students' Futures

by Malissa A. Clay

For students who are still unsure where their future will lead them, they need not despair. For just around the corner, a solution may be well within their reach.

The Cooperative Education Program (Co-op) at California University offers students a unique chance to prepare themselves for their future by giving them the opportunity on-the-job experience while still enrolled in college.

The program, which exists in nearly 1,000 colleges and universities throughout the United States, has helped associate degree, undergraduate, and graduate students find a comfortable niche relative to their proposed field of study.

In addition to learning and eventually mastering job skills which will prove beneficial when the student attempts to attain employment after graduation, getting involved in Co-op also enables a person to earn money for college expenses while still enrolled in classes, sometimes as much as $7,500 a year.

Cooperative education programs are available for students in nearly every degree, including communications, psychology, early childhood, sociology, computer science, elementary education, and English.

Prospective job opportunities include local employers, both public and private. Nationwide, an estimated 50,000 employers will reach out to Co-op students this year.

In order to participate in the program, students must attend a series of informative, one-hour workshops held on campus each semester. The workshops are divided into the following categories: Resume Writing, Career Research, Job Search, Interviewing Techniques, On-The-Job Communication, and World of Work I and II.

By attending these helpful workshops, students will learn necessary skills such as how to effectively comprise a resume, how to find the right job, how to communicate with employers, and how to efficiently tackle a job interview.

A major advantage of Co-op is that it allows students to gain personal strength in making future decisions about their prospective careers, because students emerge from the program with a clearer and more well-defined direction of where they want to go in life.

Every two weeks, Co-op publishes a job vacancy bulletin referred to as Co-Opportunities. Inside this helpful bulletin, students can find out information on the types of employers looking for Co-op students in a given semester, as well as pay rates and class and QPA requirements.

Typically, undergraduate students interested in Co-op must have successfully completed 30 credits (2.0 QPA). Graduate students must have earned a minimum of six credits (3.0 QPA). Associate degree students must have completed at least 15 credits (2.0 QPA).

While students may find potential employers in the job vacancy bulletin, Co-op still has access to numerous other job opportunities not listed in the bulletin, and it would be wise for students to look into this avenue as well.

Usually, Co-op students remain involved in their job field for two semesters, sometimes attending college part-time and working part-time.

If you are interested in the Cooperative Education Program at CU, stop by at the Career Services Office in the Learning and Research Center, pick up an application, and make an appointment to meet with a Co-op staff member.

It could be the most important move you'll ever make while deciding which direction your future should go.

Channel 29 Gets New Look

California University's student funded and operated Channel 29 will have a different look this fall.

Known in the past for tape delay sports broadcasts, Channel 29 will add more in-house programming.

The addition of a brand new T.V. studio on the first floor of the union changed the programming.

The new studio will give Channel 29 more flexibility in program decisions.

A weekly news program resembling the canceled Evening Magazine, will be taped in the studio and will cover stories that are important to CU students.

In addition, Channel 29 will air its first teleconference, "Confronting Sexual Harassment on Campus," November 12, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Every Tuesday at 8 p.m., Channel 29 will air the preceding Saturday's Vulcan's football game on a tape delay basis.

CU Professor Travels to Mexico

A California University professor went south of the border this summer to perform in a classical ballet company in Saltillo, Mexico.

Dr. Richard Helldobler, an assistant director of the Mon Valley Theatre Company, was invited to perform as a guest artist with the Ballet Classico de Saltillo from July 20-25.

Due to the frail economy in Mexico, the performances, funded by Saltillo's mayor, took place in an open air theatre and were designed for people who may not otherwise have been able to afford to see a ballet.

Although this type of presentation is not uncommon in the United States, said Helldobler, the need for its frequency in Mexico is imperative to their culture.

"I think the thing that was most shocking was the standard of living," Helldobler said. "It is significantly lower than in the States; a few hundred miles away."

To illustrate his point, Helldobler said the American dollar is equal to 3,000 Mexican pesos. The average weekly salary in Mexico is 15,000 pesos. A pair of shoes that would cost $49 in America costs the average Mexican nine weeks worth of wages, about 147,000 pesos.

In a country where a can of soda goes for a little less than a day's wage, Helldobler said, very few people would even consider spending 140,000 pesos on an evening at the ballet.

Campus Book Exchange Expands

Now more than ever, the Book Exchange offers far more than books. One of the school's most important institutions, Campus Book Exchange has remodeled and expanded to accommodate life in the Natali Student Center, the heart of California University.

"We're happy to meet the needs of everybody," Book Exchange manager Linda Timko said. The new and improved book store can meet the needs of everybody. The store's commitment to service influenced the store's layout, merchandise, hours and available services.

The Book Exchange has expanded with the Student Center, adding the University Shoppe, the book store annex and a side store with different hours and merchandise than the Book Exchange.

The University Shoppe, the additional 1,800 square feet of book store space, offers several full lines of CU-related souvenirs.

Posters, calendars, plush animals, Art Carved College Rings, umbrellas, socks and apparel from Gear, Jansport, MVP, Velva Sheen, Turtle Creek, and Champion are available along with dozens of items including an expanded variety of Greek merchandise.

"We're trying to get on track with the things Greeks want," says Timko.

And the Book Exchange is doing more than filling California's void in available Greek paraphernalia.

The University Shoppe offers a wide selection of cups, stickers, paddles, key chains, buttons, wooden letters, crests and clothing, including T-shirts, tank tops and several styles of sweatshirts and lettering available for delivery within 14 days.

In the near future, the Book Exchange will have a representative, available from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. taking specialty orders for other Greek items such as jackets and hats with letters.

Founded in Morgantown, W.Va., the Book Exchange is a privately-owned chain with stores at West Virginia University, Indiana University of Pennsylvania, and WVU's Evansdale campus.

The WVU store has been open for 60 years. The California store opened in 1969, with two locations in downtown California. Another store opened in the Student Center in April of 1982.

The Book Exchange employs 10 full- and part-time workers through most of the school year and as many as 32 in the busy seasons at the beginning and end of each semester.

Campus Book Exchange still has every book the student will ever need, including new and used books.

As early as March, Book Exchange agents will start searching retailers across the country to track down new and used books students will need in the upcoming school year for the best available prices.

All branches of the Book Exchange also buy back books from students for as much as 50 percent of the cover price.

"We would rather buy books from students," Timko said. "That's why we would rather students don't hold on to their books... that's where we like to get our stock from."

Campus Book Exchange also offers backpacks, school supplies, magazines, calendars and candy.

Store hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Are You Aware?

The H.E.A.R.T. Nutrition Peer Education Program was founded in January 1991 as a peer education program that allows students to apply their nutrition knowledge through the sharing of information with people in the community, relating, and interacting ways.

Students who are selected to participate in the training complete a special training program under the direction of Norma Snyder, N.

Ed., and Jean Hurt, R.D.

Through the training sessions, students enhance their communication skills in order to effectively provide quality nutrition education. Our goal is to help others learn reliable nutrition information and improve their eating habits.

This program is an integral component of the total health program provided by the Office of Nurse Educator at the University Health Center.

Lisa Mauro, a Peer Educator, presented a workshop concerning health, nutrition, and exercise in Johnson Hall on September 21. Lisa is willing to provide the same workshop at the other residence halls.

She may be contacted at the University Health Center, Monday through Thursday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at 938-4508.

CU to Test Market New Mattresses

by Transfiguracion Minckler
California University is one of nine universities selected to participate in test marketing Eggshell Foam, Inc.'s new College Mattress Pad.

The two-inch thick, convoluted foam mattress pad, sold at the Book Exchange, is designed to fit dorm and twin size beds. It was first tested at the University of Maryland College Park in 1991 and 1992.

The foam is commonly used in hospitals.

Patrick Putorti, president of the company, said the campuses test marketing the product must sell a fixed number of mattresses according to university enrollment and the number of dormitory residents. If there were 500 students living in dorm housing, the campus would have to sell 10 mattresses.

"If the response [to the mattress] is anything like the [response at the] University of Maryland, we will have no problem reaching our goal," claims Putorti.

"The mattress is selling very well," according to Linda Timko, Book Exchange manager at CU. Of the 22 mattresses the company needs to sell at CU to meet the fixed number, 17 have already been sold.

"We should not have any problem reaching our goal because the other eight universities involved in the test market are selling the mattresses beyond the needed number," Putorti said. Slippery Rock University has sold about 45 mattresses and Indiana University has sold 31.

If all eight universities participating in the test sell more than the goal, the company will expand and introduce the product to universities outside of Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Library Feels Squeeze

California University's Manderino Library took a 50 percent budget reduction due to cuts in Pennsylvania's education spending.

The library's annual budget of $500,000 for operations and material was reduced to $250,000.

"The budget cuts are not the institution's fault. The cuts are from not enough funds by legislature for the state owned schools," said William L. Beck, Dean of Library Services.

As a result of this reduction, 350 periodical subscriptions were canceled. These cancellations were based on usage, according to Beck.

Periodicals have also increased subscription fees 10 percent, which may result in future cancellations.

The new budget only provides $20,000 for new material. A new book costs an average of $40, therefore 500 books can be purchased as compared to 6000 purchased on last year's budget.

According to Beck, grants the library receives are not intended for buying materials.

Collection and enhancement of materials, equipment replacement and upgrades/replacements of the automated system may have to be delayed because of the budget squeeze.

Beck said neither work study nor library hours will be affected by the cuts.
