Dr. Tebbitt travels to Bolivia in search of begonias

By LISA PFAFF Staff Writer

California University professor, Dr. Mark Tebbitt, spent the majority of his winter break doing something rather unique... researching and studying plants in the country of Bolivia.

Dr. Tebbitt visited two major regions in Bolivia - the Ambora National Park and Vallegrande, which are about one-hundred miles apart.

"I looked at plants 24/7 for not quite three weeks," Dr. Tebbitt said.

Even though much of his time was spent searching for begonias, Dr. Tebbitt was able to enjoy the beautiful landscape of the Andes Mountains and its other wildlife. In Amboro National park alone, there are more than 800 species of birds and over 125 species of mammals. Some of these mammals include jaguars, pumas, anteaters, and seven species of primates. The park is also thought to have more butterfly species than anywhere on the planet.

"If you like toads, this is the place for you. There are over 50 species of toads in this park alone," Dr. Tebbitt said during his recent presentation to University students.

Throughout his travels, Dr. Tebbit encountered 20 different kinds of begonias.

"I was surprised at how poorly known the begonias of Bolivia were. I expected to find some new species, but not as many as I did," Dr. Tebbitt said.

During his venture, he discovered five species that were new to science. He also discovered three new hybrid begonia species. These hybrids are the natural offspring of two different begonia species that have got together in the wild.

Throughout his trip, Dr. Tebbitt took around 1,500 photographs, most of which recorded new scientific data. He also collected several begonia specimens so that other scientists can study them. In some instances throughout his travels, Dr. Tebbitt was able to interact with local people in Bolivia.

"I really enjoyed talking to the local people, they were very friendly and knowledgeable of the local plants," Dr. Tebbitt said.

His travel expenses were covered by a research grant from the American Begonia Society, who plans to help him fund similar projects in the future. He is currently planning to conduct a similar trip to Peru in May of 2013.

When I asked Dr. Tebbit what his most memorable part of the trip was, he replied:

"Towards the end of my trip I looked over a new mountain chain that we had yet to travel through, these mountains seemingly rolled on forever, and I knew there are many new species still waiting there to be discovered...Bolivia was fascinating and it was definitely somewhere I would love to return to," Dr. Tebbitt said.

Mr. Boyer goes to Washington

By Lucie Fremeau For The Cal Times

Joshua Boyer lived and breathed political science during his internship with mCapitol, a lobbying firm that is located only one block from the White House in Washington, D.C. Boyer is a political science major with a pre-law concentration who obtained his internship through The Washington Center.

"I loved everything about the program," Boyer said. "My internship afforded me the opportunity to meet with many officials and see how my political science degree is actually used. I learned a lot about the political system from Cal U, and it was great to be able to apply that knowledge."

Boyer's main duties at mCapitol included calling federal agencies and political contacts to set up meetings for clients, accommodating clients upon arrival to the office, daily news briefs, and attending meetings between clients and federal officials.

In addition to interning at mCapitol, Boyer attended political science classes through The Washington Center that were relevant to his major. Boyer's class was partnered with C-Span and was even broadcasted on-air.

"My class was based around the road to the White House," Boyer said. "We were able to interview officials ranging from Trent Lott to President Carter." Boyer learned about The Washington Center's internship program through Dr. Blumberg, who recommended that he apply. Once he applied to The Washington Center, they helped find an internship that fit Boyer's major and career goals.

"This internship has profoundly changed my life," Boyer said. "It has given me the confidence to converse with public officials. It also taught me how to operate in the business world, which is an opportunity that is not often afforded to college students. The experiences that I had during my time in Washington will stay with me for the rest of my life and shape who I am."

Boyer encourages students to take advantage of opportunities like his and enjoy every experience that is offered.

"The Vow" leaves viewers unsatisfied

By Tyler Kimmel For the Cal Times

It was 12:45 p.m. I wanted to leave by 12:30 p.m. at the latest to ensure that we'd get there on time and get good seats. However my girlfriend, Connie, took longer than expected to get ready. I really didn't think we could get to Greensburg for the 1:25 p.m. showing of "The Vow".

I'm sure there were many guys in my situation on Valentine's Day weekend. Their girlfriends wanted their significant others to take them to see the new romance movie, "The Vow," that was in theaters for the Valentine's holiday.

However, I didn't put up a fight about going to see the film like many guys probably did. I actually wanted to see the movie. It starred Rachel McAdams who was in one of my top 20 movies ever, "The Notebook," and Channing Tatum, who was in "Dear John," another decent romance movie, as her co-star. To top it all off, the song that's in the trailer for the movie is by Taylor Swift (my favorite artist).

So for me, the movie showed a lot of promise: a strong cast, and an entertaining trailer that had us sold. We planned to go see the movie about a month before, so we were excited and had high expectations.

We got to the theater on time and were in our seats when the previews began rolling. The theater was pretty crowded for 1:00 p.m. on a Friday afternoon, mainly with elderly couples. The previews finished, and the feature presentation was under way.

About halfway through the movie, Connie turned to me and said she didn't like it so far. I was thinking the same thing. I found myself being bored, and day dreaming about the Primanti Bros food I would soon eat. I wasn't ready to throw in the towel on the movie, hoping the story line would soon pick up.

It never did. I was uninterested the entire 104 minutes the film was on the screen. Nothing happened. There was nothing that shocked me, wowed me, or excited me a little bit. The movie just puttered along.

In the film, the couple (Mc-Adams and Tatum) is married for four years. They are in a car accident and Paige (McAdams) loses the last five years of her memory. Leo (Tatum) has to try to get his wife to fall back in love with him. I liked the plot, but I felt like they told the wrong part of their story. The ending also seemed abrupt and left me with many unanswered questions.

If I had to give "The Vow" a rating, I'd give it a four out of ten. That may sound harsh, but rottentomatoes.com gives the film a 28 percent. Clearly I was not the only unsatisfied viewer.

Here is my advice to guys for next Valentine's Day, skip out on the romantic movie that is sure to come out that weekend. It will probably bore the both of you, and be a waste of your money. Instead, (try to) make your girlfriend dinner at home and sit down and watch a classic love story with her, "The Notebook."

Vulcan Theater Weekend Show: Immortals

Now showing Friday and Saturday at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.

By JUSTIN CARLO Cal Times Film Critic

Justin's Rating: 2.5 stars

"Immortals" is a computergenerated imagery film (CGI), packed mess of a movie, with a pretty interesting story line. It is a visually beautiful film from costumes and the landscape, to the buildings and even the characters themselves are all something to look at. However, most of the movie is confusing and inaccurate.

"Immortals" tells the story of Theseus (Henry Cavill), a peasant who has been secretly chosen by the god Zeus (Luke Evans) to protect Greece from the evil King Hyperion (Mickey Rourke). Hyperion has been destroying and killing everything in his path to find the Epirus Bow, a remarkable weapon that holds the power to release the imprisoned Titans that have been held captive under Mount Tartaros for eons since losing the mythic battle against the gods. The virgin oracle Phaedra (Frieda Pinto) is Hyperion's key to finding the Epirus Bow, although she joins in the fight with Theseus to conquer this tyrant.

The movie has almost as much CGI as "Avatar," which not only causes for some amazing imagery, but also some very confusing scenes. Battles are fought almost entirely on the edge of towering cliffs and mountains in where...Greece? These battle scenes have so many characters and deaths involved it's hard to keep up with who's fighting whom and who is dying or not.

From the makers of 300 comes this movie about a peasant who was chosen by Zeus to protect Greece.

Major characters come in and out of the story without any relevance and many die without any real acknowledgment.

The inaccuracies that I mentioned are hardly even noticeable, such as multiple imprisoned characters biting down on what looks to be rebar, which I'm sure was not invented at the time back then. Little things like that add to the confusion. Even though you are probably not going to be completely sure of what is happening throughout most of this movie, you have to take it for what it is.

The fight sequences are intense and very well performed on the cast's part. Frieda Pinto and Isabel Lucas, who plays Athena, are gorgeous. John Hurt plays the "Old Man", very wise and very much like someone John Hurt would play, which isn't a bad thing. The same goes for Mickey Rourke, the evil bad guy role that just as much as you hate him, he's still kind of awesome. And Henry Cavill, it's great to see him in this intense action role as we prepare to see him as the newest Superman in the highly anticipated "Man of Steel".

Directed by Tarsem Singh, who is known for being very visual, this movie is basically "Percy Jackson" on steroids. Greek mythology movies are always interesting to me, so if you are a fan, I suggest seeing this one. The movie wasn't all that bad. If you can get past the confusion, and don't see it in 3D, you will enjoy it.

Resources to help you find your dream internship!

It's time for you to start looking for an internship, but where do you start? There are plenty of resources available to you right at your fingertips and on campus that will help you find the perfect internship for your future career goals.

First, visit the Internship Center, which is located on the second floor of Eberly. The Internship Center will schedule an appointment for you to meet with Karen Primm, director of the Internship Center, in order to discuss goals, possible opportunities, and the internship process.

Then, you will make a profile on InternLink, an on-line database with plenty of current internships. You may search internships by location, major, keyword, organization, and more. There is something for everyone on InternLink, so create your profile today at www.myinterfase.com/cup/student.

If you're interested in a company or position but can't find it on InternLink, visit the Regional Internship Center's website at www. TheRegionalInternshipCenter.org. The Regional Internship Center works with organizations in southwestern Pennsylvania to create opportunities for students and has a large database of internships. The website also has cover letter, resume, and interview tips.

If social media is more your thing, follow the Internship Center on Twitter (@InternCtr_CalU) and "like" Cal U's Internship Center on Facebook! Gates named MVP, Cal U finishes third

By Sports Information For the Cal Times

Senior Melissa Gates (Leola, Pa./Conestoga Valley) was named the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) Championships MVP on Sunday evening after winning a combined five titles (three individual, two relay) over four days and helping the California University of Pennsylvania swimming team equal its program-best by finishing third in the team standings.

Gates broke the all-time PSAC Championships record in the 100 freestyle by claiming the league title with a NCAA automatic-qualifying time of 49.73, which was nine nine-hundreths of a second faster than the previous record set in 2009 (Jackie Borkowski, West Chester). The 5-9 senior also broke the overall league record set in 2010 (Borkowski) by four-hundredths of a second, while shattering her own school record set last year by over two-tenths of a second. Gates, who set the alltime PSAC Championships and overall PSAC record in the 50 freestyle on Friday, posted the fastest time in the finals of the 100 freestyle by 1.72 seconds. A five-time All-American, she is the first swimmer in school history to win three individual PSAC titles in a season.

The Vulcans also captured their second relay title in school history – both this year – on Sunday evening by winning the 400 freestyle relay with a PSAC Championships record time. Gates, freshman Alyssa Novotny (West Mifflin, Pa./ West Mifflin), sophomore Jess Machmer (Canton, Pa./Canton) and sophomore Clarissa Enslin (Dalview, South Africa/ St. Andrews School for Girls) combined to touch the wall in a NCAA automatic-qualifying time of 3 minutes, 25.52 seconds, winning the event by over four seconds. The relay eclipsed the previous PSAC Championships record set in 2009 by over fourtenths of a second, while breaking the school record set earlier this year by over two seconds.

One of four Cal U swimmers to place in the 100 freestyle, Enslin earned All-PSAC honors in the event after finishing third with a NCAA 'B' time of 51.46 seconds. Machmer placed sixth in the 100 freestyle with a time of 52.76 seconds, which also reaches the NCAA 'B' qualifying mark, and Novotny finished 16th overall after touching the wall in 54.26 seconds.

Sophomore Kate Mellon (Queensland, Australia/Mansfield State) scored in the 1650 freestyle for the second-straight year, posting a NCAA 'B' time of 17:27.68 to finish fifth. Classmate Heather Bureau (Latrobe, Pa./Greater Latrobe) placed 16th overall in the 1650 freestyle on Sunday with a time of 17:54.59.

Junior Bruna Carvalho (Belem, Brazil/Milton Campos) finished sixth in the 200 butterfly with a time of 2:09.02, which reaches the NCAA 'B' standard. Fellow junior Caitlyn Sirkoch (New Kensington, Pa./Plum) placed 15th overall in the 200 breast-

INTERVIEWED/LAYOUT BY JOSHUA LASKA Sports/Managing Editor

What was it like getting your first start as a freshman?

That moment was pretty overwhelming for me. It felt great! But at the same time, nerve wrecking because I was playing with great players, all who were older than me and I just wanted to make them proud and do well.

What was it like scoring your first bucket at the college level?

That was an amazing feeling. It was a major feeling of accomplishment and relief. You just feel like, "Ok, maybe I can do this. Let's get some more!"

Going back how hard was it to adjust to the college Level of play?

It was pretty difficult at the beginning because it is so much harder than high school ball, but the upper class men really looked out for the younger players and kept us positive so I was able to adjust well, thanks to them.

What was the hardest thing to learn at the college level?

The hardest thing for me was to learn that nothing is given, it is earned. In high school, everything was easy for me, but in college, you have to put in the extra work to succeed. The only way you are going to get something is if you work and earn it and take it!

What was it like playing in the Elite Eight of the NCAA your freshman year?

That was the best feeling in my entire basketball career. I really can't explain it. You were treated like royalty, there are cameras everywhere, private planes. It was amazing. As a freshman to play on a team that was so successful is about all one can ask for. It made me so proud to be a Vulcan. It showed me what I am really playing for, and what is expected!

What has it been like playing in the NCAA tournament all three years of your career at Cal?

It is a great feeling. There are high expectations but that only makes you better. It causes you to develop a sense of pride in just about everything you do.

How do you stay "in the game" during the offseason?

I work out....and then I work out some more lol. I have close friends who also play college ball so we work very hard to push each other and keep each other motivated.

What originally got you into basketball?

My older brother. He was always good and I always looked up to him, so if he was doing it, then I wanted to do it! HOW MANY YEARS HAVE YOU PLAYED BASKETBALL?

Um just about 16 years. I have played since I was able to bounce a ball.

What is one interesting fact that not everyone would know about you?

Рното ву: Joshua Laska

I write poetry. No one really knows that, but it like my favorite thing to do...other than play basketball lol WHERE ARE YOU FROM AND WHERE DID YOU GO TO HIGH SCHOOL?

My family and I are from Chicago, and then we moved to Maryland. I went to James Hubert Blake High School, which is in Maryland.

What do you plan on doing after college?

I'm really not sure yet. I would love a job in marketing at a big company but that will take time. I'm also considering playing over seas but I am not sure yet. WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE TV SHOW?

Hands down, The Office. The best show on television...well it vas when Steve Carrell was on it.

Who are your favorite sports teams?

The Chicago Bulls, the Chicago Bears, the Chicago White Sox and the Chicago Blackhawks! WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE FOOD?

Sweet potatoes! WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE MOVIE?

Finding Nemo Do you have a favorite quote?

"I have failed over and over in my life....and that is why I succeed." Michael Jordan
