SUMMER SCHOOL

The summer school was a success. The enrollment was three hundred thirty-three. The school never had a more earnest, enthusiastic group of students. The student body was composed of those just entering the profession who had the confidence which goes with inexperience, those who had served the Commonwealth for years as teachers and came with that stolid determination to win, others who had graduated from normal schools and colleges who came to get the vision of modern education as it appears from a new horizon. All left with us something of their inspiration and the consciousness that the work is really worth while.

NEW FACULTY MEMBERSThomas A. Hillyer, A. M.

We are glad to announce to our students and alumni that Thomas A. Hillyer, who was a member of the summer school faculty, will be with us as head of the Department of Education when school opens in September. Mr. Hillyer has had exceptional training for the work, having graduated from Illinois State Normal University, has his bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago, his master's degree from

THOMAS A. HILLYER

Harvard University, and has completed all work, except his thesis, for a doctor's degree at Teachers College, Columbia University. Mr. Hillyer has also served his apprenticeship in normal school work, having been superintendent of the training department of the state normal school, Moorehead, Minnesota, for six years; and for twelve years president of the state normal school at Mayville, North Dakota.

L. H. Van Houten, A. M.

Mr. Van Houten who will have charge of the Erie Branch of the Edinboro State Normal School, received his bachelor's degree from Central College, Iowa; his master's degree from the University of Iowa, and has done graduate work in the University of Chicago. He has had experience in every phase of school administration, having served successfully as teacher, principal, superintendent, supervisor of teachers' training, and director of extension for colleges. Captain Van Houten succeeded Chief Educational Officer, Major Arthur G. Crane, and as such was given entire administrative charge of the vocational and curative work among the wounded men.

Miss Celestia J. Hershey

Students who do training in the Erie city schools will be glad to hear that Miss Celestia J. Hershey has been secured as supervisor of student training. Miss Hershey has been connected with the Erie city normal school since its organization in 1905. The success of her work and the esteem of her students are the highest tributes that can be paid a teacher.

THE ARTS AND CRAFTS DEPARTMENT OF THE NORMAL SCHOOL

Edinboro is the Normal School of Western Pennsylvania chosen to train teachers for the special field of Arts and Crafts. In September, 1920, there was instituted in the school a three-year course for the training of art supervisors and teachers of arts and crafts.

Under the present ruling of the State Department of Public Instruction, art is a required subject in all the elementary public schools of the state. The call for competent art instructors is and always will be far greater than the supply. The salaries paid supervisors and special teachers of art are higher than those ordinarily paid grade teachers. Applicants for admission to the course must show some proficiency in drawing in addition to a first class high school education and such other regular requirements as are necessary for entrance to a Normal School. The field for graduates of the Arts and Crafts Department of the Edinboro State Normal School is the state.

Students of the Arts and Crafts Department will live in Reeder or Haven Hall and enjoy all the privileges of the regular Normal students.

The new studios, which occupy an entire floor of Normal Hall and which will be completed for the opening of the Fall semester, 1921, are to be the finest in the state. They consist of two freehand drawing studios, a mechanical drawing studio, a modern, well-equipped shop for the various crafts, an instructor's studio, and two stock rooms. Each studio is furnished with running water. Eight large skylights give the best lighting possible for studio work.

WALDO F. BATES, JR.

The crafts shop will be equipped for work in cardboard construction, bookbinding, woodwork, metalry, weaving, and all other forms of handwork which may find a place in public schools. A master-knowledge of a craft will include practical problems that can be carried out in city or rural schools with minimum equipment.

A thorough ground work in drawing and the crafts, opportunity for practice supervising and teaching in the Grades, Junior and Senior High Schools, the preparation of outlines, and instruction in the business of supervising will make the graduate of the Arts and Crafts

Department of the Edinboro Normal School the type of trained specialist that will always be in demand for big positions.

Mr. Bates, head of the Arts and Crafts Department, has supervised Art in Turner's Falls and Leominster, Massachusetts, and in Oil City, Pennsylvania, and is a former director of the School of Arts and Crafts of Chautauqua, New York. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Normal Art School and is prepared to give the best in modern Art Education.

Miss Anna J. Lamphier, instructor in Handwork for the Summer Session of 1921, is instructor in Crafts in the State Normal School at North Adams, Massachusetts. She comes to Edinboro after teaching ten summers at the School of Arts and Crafts of Chautauqua, New York.

The Arts and Crafts Department of the Edinboro State Normal School has the fullest support and sanction of the State Department of Public Instruction. Come to Edinboro and prepare to teach this, one of the most enjoyable branches of education and one that will become increasingly important in the development of our Pennsylvania schools.

VEGETABLE GARDENING

Edinboro was one of the first normals in the state to introduce a course in gardening. The work, ever since it was begun ten years ago, has been done after school hours and in the students' recreation time. The State Department has recently recognized these pioneer efforts and appointed Edinboro as one of the three normals in the state to offer a special course in vegetable gardening.

It is the purpose of the school to make this course complete in every detail so that those completing the work will be qualified to carry on commercial gardening or teach the work in any state.

The course will continue throughout the year. The indoor work will include greenhouse practice, as soon as one is erected; cement work in constructing bird houses and baths, garden seats and ornamental flower pots; shop work in constructing tool racks, flats, seed carriers, marking devices, stakes and all other equipment; preparation of contact and poison sprays and insecticides; preparation and sterilization of soils for plant propagation; preparation of plans for companion and succession cropping; detailed planting plan for a combined flower and vegetable garden one rod square; making of nets and traps for capturing insects; a careful study of all garden insects and pests and their control. The outdoor work will consist of actual practice in hotbed and cold frame operation and the planting and cultivation of a unit garden one rod square; field practice will include the use of seed drills and cultivators and other labor saving devices. The study and actual use of a Skinner system of overhead irrigation will greatly add to the production of crops.

MISS ANNIE L. WILSON ACCEPTS POSITION IN CALIFORNIA

Students of the Edinboro State Normal of recent years, will miss the face of Miss Annie L. Wilson from her familiar place at the Librarian's desk. Her decision to locate on the Pacific coast removes another of the old friends whom visiting alumni have for years been glad to greet again.

In February of the present year, Miss Wilson was granted leave of absence for the latter half of the school year to complete her study of the librarians' course at Western Reserve University. On securing her degree there, she went to California to take up her work.

There is a technical side to the work of a librarian and there is a social side. The technical side requires a wide knowledge of books and skill in classifying and handling them. In this feature of the work, Miss Wilson gave good service to all who visited the Library. The social side manifests itself in part in a gracious atmosphere of helpfulness and sympathy, which pervades the reading room. This phase of Miss Wilson's work will be especially remembered by the many hundreds of students whom she aided, when their duties took them to the Library.

The hearty good wishes of the wide circle of friends whom Miss Wilson made at the Edinboro State Normal, will follow her to her new location. And many a wandering Edinboroite, on reaching California, will seek her out, to pay again a personal tribute of appreciation.

TRANSFER OF TRAINING

The mind has been considered by many to consist of sharply distinct functions—perception, memory, reasoning, imagination, etc.

Along with this so-called "faculty" conception of the mind has gone the belief that training any one of these functions for any kind of material trained it at the same time for any other kind of material. For example, that training the memory for dates trained it at the same time for vocabularies, that training it for the location of cities trained it at the same time for the outline of countries, that training it for combinations of chemical elements trained it at the same time for the distinguishing features of plant and animal forms, etc.

Moreover, such transfer of training, according to this belief, has been supposed to take place to a very great extent. That is, it has been held that training any one of these functions for any kind of material trained it at the same time in almost, if not quite, the same degree for any other kind of material.

It has been this belief which has held certain subjects, especially the classical languages and mathematics, in such a prominent place—such subjects being regarded as providing the most valuable materials for “formal” and “disciplinary” training of the different functions of the mind.

The opposite belief has been held, although by no means so commonly, that the training of mental functions is very highly specialized and that training a function for one kind of material trains it in only a slight degree, if at all, for any other kind of material.

These two conflicting beliefs have grown out of ordinary observation and have not been based upon the results of scientific investigation. Such investigation, which has been carried to considerable extent within recent years, shows beyond question that transfer of training is a fact but that its extent is limited by the amount of likeness to each other of the situations involved. That is, the training of the memory for dates trains it for vocabularies only in so far as dates and vocabularies are alike, training it for the location of cities trains it at the same time for outlines of countries only in so far as the two things are alike, etc.

A distinction should be made between the transfer of habit, and that of ideals and attitudes. It is easily conceivable that when habits acquired in one situation are not carried over to another, ideals or attitudes may be. For example, acquiring the habit of detailed scrutiny of a printed page, as in proof-reading, is not likely to mean acquiring at the same time the habit of detailed scrutiny of a pebbly sea-shore, because the materials of the two situations are so unlike; but the ideal of careful observation or the carefully observant attitude which is cultivated in the first situation may persist in the second situation with the good result of making the desired habit more easily formed in it.

What students do ought to be determined upon other grounds than the purely disciplinary; but when things which they are to do are determined, these things should be examined for their likenesses and those things held of most disciplinary value which are found most often, in whole or in part, in other things that they do both in and out of school.

Above all, important as the transfer of habits may be, that of ideals and attitudes is much more so, because of their more nearly universal nature and their great influence in determining the direction of habit formation.

THOMAS A. HILLYER.

HEALTH EDUCATION AND ATHLETICS

The Health Education program promises many attractions for the coming year. The fall activities will center around outdoor sports—field hockey, tennis, hiking and swimming for the girls. For the boys, tennis, swimming and football.

Greater interest in sports is expected this year, due to the new system of awarding school letters. E's will be given to all persons earning a stated number of points according to an adopted schedule for participation in specified activities.

During indoor season, regular gymnasium work will include marching, tactics, free exercises, folk dancing, games, volley ball, indoor baseball, etc. Class teams will be formed in basket ball and match games played in order to pick material for varsity squads. Interschool contests will be held with the five normal schools in western Pennsylvania.

The Bathing Beach Has Its Charms

The work given in the required Health Education course, during the summer term, was a practical presentation of public school physical training, including marching, free exercises, games and folk dancing. Great interest was shown in elective courses, swimming, tennis, and athletic coaching. A water carnival featured the close of the swimming course.

NEW TRAINING FACILITIES

Training school facilities at the Edinboro State Normal School will be undoubtedly improved under the new agreements with the Borough of Edinboro and the City of Erie. Under the agreement with the Borough of Edinboro, the Normal School abandons its secondary department and the entire twelve grades of the Borough schools are organized as a training school, with Miss Ada Evelyn Jones, supervisor of training in the Normal School, as the Superintendent. The 6-3-3 plan of organization will be adopted, housing the junior and senior high schools in the normal school buildings. This will leave ample room in the borough building for expansion of the elementary grades. It will also give the elementary school an auditorium and ample room for recitation and modern methods in instruction.

The junior high school organization will give first hand experience to prospective teachers in this new and fast developing department of our public schools. The junior high school will have its separate assembly room, under its own principal, and its organization and preparation will conform to modern practice. As our training school is to be the size of the schools to which most of our graduates go as teachers, this apprentice teaching at Edinboro will be extremely valuable.

The final apprentice teaching of our seniors will probably be given in the city school of Erie. The new agreement of the School District of the City of Erie provides for the state maintaining an Extension Branch of the Edinboro State Normal School in Erie, and also offers the privilege of apprentice teaching throughout the city. As there are over 400 teachers in the Erie school, this will afford ample opportunities to give each senior a final experience under full responsibility for a school department. Graduates of Edinboro who have received this final apprenticeship in the Erie schools will find it is a decided recommendation to them in seeking positions.

IMPROVEMENT IN PLANT AND EQUIPMENT

Money appropriated by the state legislature will be sufficient to make some much needed improvements in our buildings and equipment. New boilers and machinery will be installed in the heating plant which will give better service and increased efficiency. The Arts and Crafts studios in the third floor of Normal Hall will be ready for occupancy in September. These are large, beautifully lighted rooms, finished in artistic manner, and to be equipped with furniture and apparatus of modern and approved design. With these rooms, Mr. Bates and his assistants will be given fine opportunity to promote the teaching of Arts and Crafts throughout western Pennsylvania.

The junior high school is to be provided with assembly room on the first floor of Normal Hall. Additional windows are being installed and a fine room will result. In the basement, new toilet rooms are being provided. These will have outside lighting and ventilation and the best of sanitary conveniences. Fire escapes have been remodeled on the dormitories and their exits improved. Rooms in Haven Hall have been arranged as an infirmary. These rooms are pleasantly located and will be a boon to any students during illness.

CALENDAR OF OPENING DATES

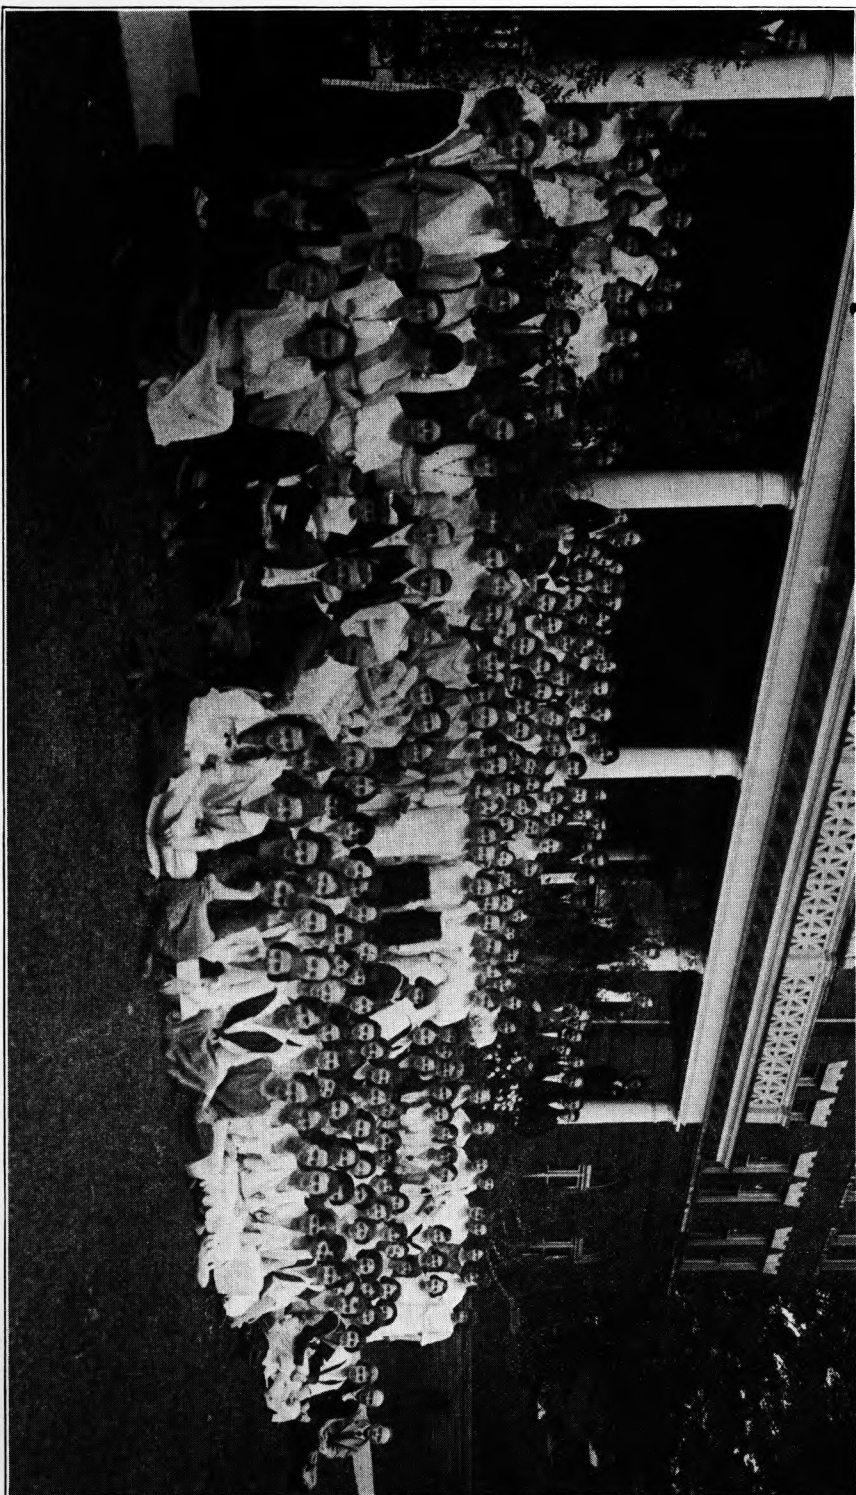

First Semester begins, Monday, September 19.

Second Semester begins, Monday, January 30.

Summer Term begins, Monday, June 19.

IN APPRECIATION

We are indebted to Edinboro's distinguished artist for the pictures of school activities in this number. These were made possible through the generosity, the untiring efforts and the selective art of Mr. Lawrence V. Kupper.

EDINBORO'S CREED

¶ We believe in our community, in youth, in the nobility of labor, in every enterprise that makes life more worth while or adds to civic pride.

¶ We believe in fields and brooks, in birds and song, in schools that fit for life, in all that helps us work and live and laugh, and love both God and man.

¶ We believe in training for our work ; that he who trains has double chance to win.

¶ We believe that teaching is a work worth while ; that he who trains and does his best, may stand unblushing with the host that have made the world worth while.
