Our name is our aim

A Voice for all

by Mark Mullen

Upon glancing at the front page of this paper, you might have noticed something out of the ordinary. What you've noticed is the lack of the usual Maroon and Gold title.

You've probably caught on by now that we've changed our name. But the real question is, "Does the change end here?" Now that's a very good question. The answer lies partly with us and partly with you.

Well, as far as we're concerned the change does not end here. The newborn Campus Voice is not only a new name on campus, but a new dimension. The shape is the same and the format has been altered very little, but the content is another story.

The content of this newly named publication is oriented toward living up to its name. The staff of the Maroon and Gold-Campus Voice wants to reflect the attitudes and opinions of the campus as a whole.

The spotlight will be on the campus's most important member, the student population. However, we will not turn our back on the rest of the campus.

The faculty and the administration are working parts of the campus, if we were to ignore them, we would have to call ourselves the Student Voice. If the students were to be recognized as the only significant member of the campus, a great deal of pertinent information would be lost. Besides, without the faculty and administration, we couldn't be students. But that's another story.

For the past several years, members of the Maroon and Gold staff have wanted to change the name of the paper. Well, the change has finally come, but the important phase of the change lies with you.

In the past, the Maroon and Gold has had its good and bad moments. Many students and administrators were, at times, rather dissatisfied with its performance. Subsequently, the paper has gotten a rather unfavorable reputation with many of the members of the campus population.

We, the staff of the Campus Voice, are making a serious attempt to improve the paper. We are going to become as involved in the campus as we can. But there is something that you can and must do to make this paper a proper representative of BSC.

The 'Letter to the Editor' column is available to you for your comments, criticisms and opinions. It is a forum that is much more valuable to you and the college community than the commons dinner table. Use it.

A newspaper is an effective tool for initiating change or reinforcing present issues in the college community. If you are concerned with your campus and your campus life, you should also be concerned with the efficient transfer of information within the campus.

The Campus Voice is an open forum for the entire campus. We, as the staff, must do our best to put across an accurate view of the college. But you must make your viewpoint available so that more than a scant few perspectives can be presented.

You've got to vocalize. Speak out on issues and non-issues. Don't sit around tables in the union and complain to each other about things going on around campus. Put it in writing and submit it to the Campus Voice.

Buckley Amendment guarantees confidentiality

Student's files are student's business; Not even parents may know for sure

The Buckley Amendment affects every student in two ways: 1.) it requires that students have the right to inspect records kept on them by College officials, and 2.) any information shall not be released from these files without the consent of the student.

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 ("Buckley Amendment") has been in effect since November 19, 1974. On December 31 President Ford signed into law amendments to that Bill.

The law also provides for the confidentiality of information such as students' names, academic achievements, activities, etc., if the individual student notifies the College he or she does not want such information released. Notification should be submitted to the office of the Vice President for Student Life by or before January 31.

The following are the guidelines to be followed in matters pertaining to the Buckley Amendment:

Students and alumni who are or have been matriculated at Bloomsburg State College now have the right to inspect and review their student records.

Students will, upon request, be given access to all records in the control of the College which in any way effects the students' college status, employment potential, or in any way may reflect upon the students' character.

There are some exceptions. Materials which are not directly accessible to students are the confidential letters and statements placed in the files prior to September 1973. (The Buckley Amendment only allows review of recommendations from January 1, 1975; however, the college policy was changed in 1973 and the earlier date stands.)

Financial records of the student's parents and personal notes of teachers and administrators will not be made available to the students.

Law enforcement records, provided they are kept separate from education records, will be kept from the students reach, as well as any physicians records or reports from psychiatrists, psychologists or other professionals or paraprofessionals used in the treatment of the student.

These reports can be reviewed by a physician or other professional of the student's choice.

Appointments to review files must be made by students at least one day in advance.

No evaluative materials may be removed from any college files by the student. However he can ask that certain information within the file not be sent out and are entitled to one copy or photostat of any material contained in their file.

Economics prof dismissed

MacMurray gets the axe

Dr. Robert R. MacMurray, associate professor of Economics at BSC, was fired from that position on January 9, 1975. Dr. MacMurray was informed of the dismissal by a letter from BSC's President, Dr. James McCormick. His termination was made upon the advice of the office of the Attorney General of Pennsylvania.

An explanation of the dismissal was given by William G. Williams, special assistant to President McCormick. He said that last spring, Dr. MacMurray was checked by peers in his department and questions arose as to whether he has taken courses necessary Costs, if necessary, shall be the responsibility of the student.

The college official in charge of a particular student file may catalog materials as inactive. At the discretion of the college official in charge, inactive records remain in the file but need not be circulated. Their inactive records may be viewed by the student. (cont'd on pg. 4) to be adequate to serve the BSC Department of Economics. An agreement was reached whereby MacMurray would return to classes in the fall of 1974 to take certain college courses. Williams said that the college fulfilled its part of the agreement and that MacMurray refused by notifying the college in August that he would not attend classes for the credits.

Dr. MacMurray had been placed on leave of absence without pay since last September. During these sessions, Williams said, several changes were made in a written agreement at the request of MacMurray and his attorney, but Dr. MacMurray refused to sign the agreement after changes were made.

Williams explained that during the educational leave granted to Dr. MacMurray, he would have received approximately 90 per cent of his pay, plus tuition and certain other expenses.

"I want the best solution of academic freedom to come out of this case... a quick and proper solution," was all that MacMurray could release as of Wednesday.

MacMurray has been advised by his attorney to keep a "low profile" by not discussing the case with the media. The Campus Voice will print more information about the case as MacMurray is able to release it.

EDITORIAL

Saga takes over

Saga Food Service has arrived at the Commons, seemingly eager to please, with a lot of surprising changes and improvements. It seems as though A.R.A. Slater is quickly becoming just a memory vaguely revived now and then by some of the old Slater favorites like "Tony the Baker" and "Harriet" who remained behind.

But this change is definitely a good one and I for one wouldn't want to go back to the way things were before Saga took over.

The two Saga managers, "Brian" and "Dan" can be seen wandering around visiting tables and asking students for opinions on their product, and inviting them to "come back and see us anytime you want to suggest anything."

Their attitude has helped to set the stage, but the most important test is food quality.

If they continue to give us food like they have been these opening days of the semester, we won't have to stash our meal tickets in favor of Berrigan's or Luigi's as often as we had to before.

Items like firm cottage cheese and real peanut butter so thick that it sticks to the roof of your mouth can be found on the salad table. Also, Saga has brought added extras like hot melted cheese for you to dress-up your hamburger with and baked potatoes with sour cream.

The price increase we have paid for a meal ticket will prove to be well-worth the cost if the quality of food is kept up throughout the semester.

Saga must be saving money to accomplish this with their system of one-meal-per-meal-ticket accountability. The only problem here is the meal ticket itself. Because it is made of paper, a student can mutilate the ticket too easily, but this minor problem can be easily solved by making them out of plastic or some other strong material in the future.

Saga is putting their best foot forward, and the students seem to be responding in favor of the change. The only question that comes to mind is, "why didn't we do something sooner?"

A few answers on your return

Well, a new year has begun. (Startling news, isn't it?) Actually, Guy Lombardo doesn't do a thing for BSC; here the year hasn't changed, just the semester.

And aren't you glad to be back? Back to the regulated college life. . .back to a cozy little (emphasis on "little," not "cozy") dorm rooms. . .back to "Mother Care Union's" congenial atmosphere. . .back to the Sheraton Commons and uncommon adventures in eating. . .oh!, and back to classes, too.

The best part of returning to campus is seeing friends, roommates and assorted strangers again in your life. By now, you've run across most of the people you've missed over the break. And, by now, you should be getting just a little tired of the "what's been happening" routine.

As an example of this bi-annual dialogue, I've drawn up the following "slice of life" from the BSC campus, which may still be used in greeting or answering a friend after Christmas break: "Hey, you're back!" (An astounding observation for anyone.)

a) Yeah, I am.

b) Yeah, so are you.

c) Am I really?

"How was the vacation, what'd you do?"

a) I had a good time! I didn't do anything!

b) I t was a good vacation, and I didn't do anything.

c) It was O.K., but I didn't do anything.

d) I didn't do anything.

"What'd you get for Christmas?"

a) Money.

b) Nothing much.

"What'd you do New Year's Eve?"

a) Went to a great party, got loaded.

b) Had to work, but we all got plastered.

c) Stayed in by myself and drank into oblivion.

"Glad to be back?"

a) Yeah, I missed everybody.

b) Yeah, I was getting sick of being at home.

c) Yeah, I need a good party.

d) All of the above are true.

e) None of the above, I don't want to be here.

"Glad to be back in classes again?"

"Do I really know you?"

Photography scholarship

The Carl Koch-Sinar Scholarship Award in large-format photography, consisting of a $1,000 cash grant, was announced last summer and will be given to a student demonstrating outstanding promise in view camera photography. The award is being sponsored by Ehrenreich Photo-Optical Industries.

The competition is open to students enrolled in an accredited photography curriculum at a two- or four-year college or university in the United States. It is based on the entrant's understanding and application of the theory and understanding and application of the theory and practice of view camera technique. To demonstrate a mastery of these skills, entrants must choose and carry out four of eight specified photographic assignments, two in color, two in black-and-white.

Thinking Allowed by Mark Mullen

Making the paper work

What's a student publication all about, anyway? Well, that depends a great deal on the students and the paper. If both are concerned with each other, that the product is something that both can, in turn, value.

On the college level a newspaper is, or should be, several things. First, it should be a means of communicating the general attitudes of the campus, while at the same time providing a forum for expression of individual opinions. Second, it should serve as a gauge by which to measure the tone or atmosphere of the campus. Third, it should be a link of communication between the students, faculty, and administration that gives an accurate representation of all concerned, while working toward the advantage of the most important part of the college community, i.e., the students. Last, but not least, the publication should be an exercise in contemporary journalism for those directly involved in its composition.

In the past the Maroon and Gold hasn't quite fulfilled these goals. Although some of the responsibility for this rests with the staff, much of it (perhaps most of it) lies with the college community.

Student involvement in practically all things related to campus life is essential to the success of the institution of the immediate level. Although the school will continue to exist for years to come, a group of stagnant non-involved classes can only serve to make the progress of a school come to a standstill.

But the most important and most significant reasoning behind active student involvement is student satisfaction. Many times one can hear students complaining about a myriad of subjects. The campus rhetoric is filled with cries of dissatisfaction.

If the students could seek out a vent or a forum for their feeling of malcontent, they could possibly solve many of their problems. Such a forum is the student publication.

This semester the staff of the Maroon and Gold is venturing to change the attitude of the students on campus in relation to the newspaper. That is one reason for the change of name.

As the Campus Voice, the paper may become just that, the voice of the campus.

Perhaps the new name will remind people that the paper is open to everyone on campus, not just the staff of the paper. Students and faculty alike may recognize that they have a means of expressing themselves in either a positive or a negative way.

In recent issues of the Maroon and Gold, the Letters to the Editor column has been rather vacant. The Letters column is expressly reserved for the purpose of free expression on the part of the readers. If everyone on campus is going to continue to complain about campus issues among themselves, then they can have no hope of ever reaching a mass of people with their opinions.

The paper is here for the campus. Not for any particular group of people. It doesn't exclude any group and is under no strict control.

The student publication is supposed to represent the campus population. If the paper is empty and without any concrete substance, then perhaps the campus is the same way. At least that's what off-campus readers could assume.

So try taking an interest in yourself at least, if not in your campus, and offer your criticisms, complaints and compliments. You needn't have your name printed along with it, but the editor has to have it in order to print your letter.

But keep this in mind; without you and your opinions, we can't be The Campus Voice.

The Campus Voice is a publication of the Maroon and Gold. It is distributed on campus by ALPHA PHI OMEGA, National Service Fraternity, as a service project for the 1974-75 year.

The Campus Voice is the official student publication of Bloomsburg State College and is printed on a weekly during the academic year except during vacations and final exam week.

The Campus Voice offices are located on the second floor of the Kehr Union. The phone number is 389-3101. All copy and advertising should be submitted by 6pm on Sunday nights for Thursday's edition. News releases must be typed, double spaced, and with a 60 character line.

The Campus Voice is governed by the Editorial Board, with final responsibility for all material resting with the Editor-in-Chief, as stated in the Joint Statement on Rights, Freedoms, and Responsibilities of Students of Bloomsburg State College.

The Campus Voice reserves the right to edit all letters and copy submitted. A maximum of 400 words will be placed on all letters to the Editor, with an allowance for special exceptions. All letters to the Editor must be signed and have a telephone number and address attached. Names will be withheld upon request.

NOTE: The opinions voiced in the columns, feature articles and editorials of the Campus Voice are not necessarily shared by the entire staff.

New outlook on food service; SAGA dons commons apron

by Valery O'Connell

The student is the word this semester for Bloomsburg's new food service company, and according to Brian Sarris, B-SC's director of SAGA Food Enterprises, "We will try to please him."

"We want to stress that this is the student's food service," commented Sarris, who comes to the Scranton Commons from Ithaca College in New York. If he has a problem, no matter how small, the new director urges the student to "come to us. We will try to correct any minor problem immediately before it grows any bigger," he promised.

Along with the new managers, who officially donned their aprons at BSC on December 27, there will be a few more additions to the dining rooms. A "beefboard" will be posted in a strategic situation in the cafeteria, allowing students to comment on the service and its edibles. Via written notes, thumbtacked to this board, students can express their feelings about SAGA's service. The new innovation will go into effect "as soon as possible," said Sarris.

Following along the line of a Dear Abby column, the "beefboard" is open for more than just comments. "We welcome any new suggestions concerning our service and especially welcome all compliments," he jokingly added.

SAGA has also initiated a new system of checking meal tickets. The student's purchable meal ticket plus his ID card must be presented to the checker; if he does not have either one with him, he must pay for the meal, obtain a receipt and present it later, along with his cards, for a refund. Three dollars will be charged for a lost meal ticket. "The new system will hopefully reduce falsifications of meal tickets," said Sarris.

SAGA Enterprises, operating out of its branch office in Washington Crossing, Pa., serves 368 colleges nationwide, including the University of Vermont, Arizona State and Eastern Tennessee State. cont'd on pg: 5

Dance Marathon

by Diane Gaskins

If you're thinking of a fantastic way to present a donation to the American Cancer Society and of getting Bloomsburg State College in the Guinness Book of World Records, then your mind should rest on the Dance Marathon to be held in the Kehr Union on January 24, 25 and 26.

The first prize is $300 for the longest dancing couple. A minimum of 48 hours is required yet each couple is urged to break the standing record of 84½ hours of dancing. A second prize of $150 will be awarded to the couple obtaining the largest amount of pledge money.

The Marathon will be spotlighted by various bands featuring all types of music; fast, slow or you name it.

Participating couples must sponsor a minimum of $4 an hour which only pertains to the first 20 hours of dancing. Registration will be held January 15 to 20 in the Kehr Union. Couples must present their pledge sheets and nonrefundable $5 fee, which counts towards their pledges. By Monday of this week 23 couples had signed up at the Kehr Union Information Desk and more were expected to put their John Hancocks on rosters in each

The Marathon's sign-in will be held January 24 between 5:30 and 7:30 p.m. Medical releases and couple plaques with assigned numbers will be distributed at this time.

These three days of great excitement will very powerfully show that pleasure can be turned into a beautiful way of lending a hand to a very worthy cause.

Even the lines on Monday were shorter than those at last semester's registration, many students found a bottleneck at the point where they picked up their meal ticket. (photo by Mason)

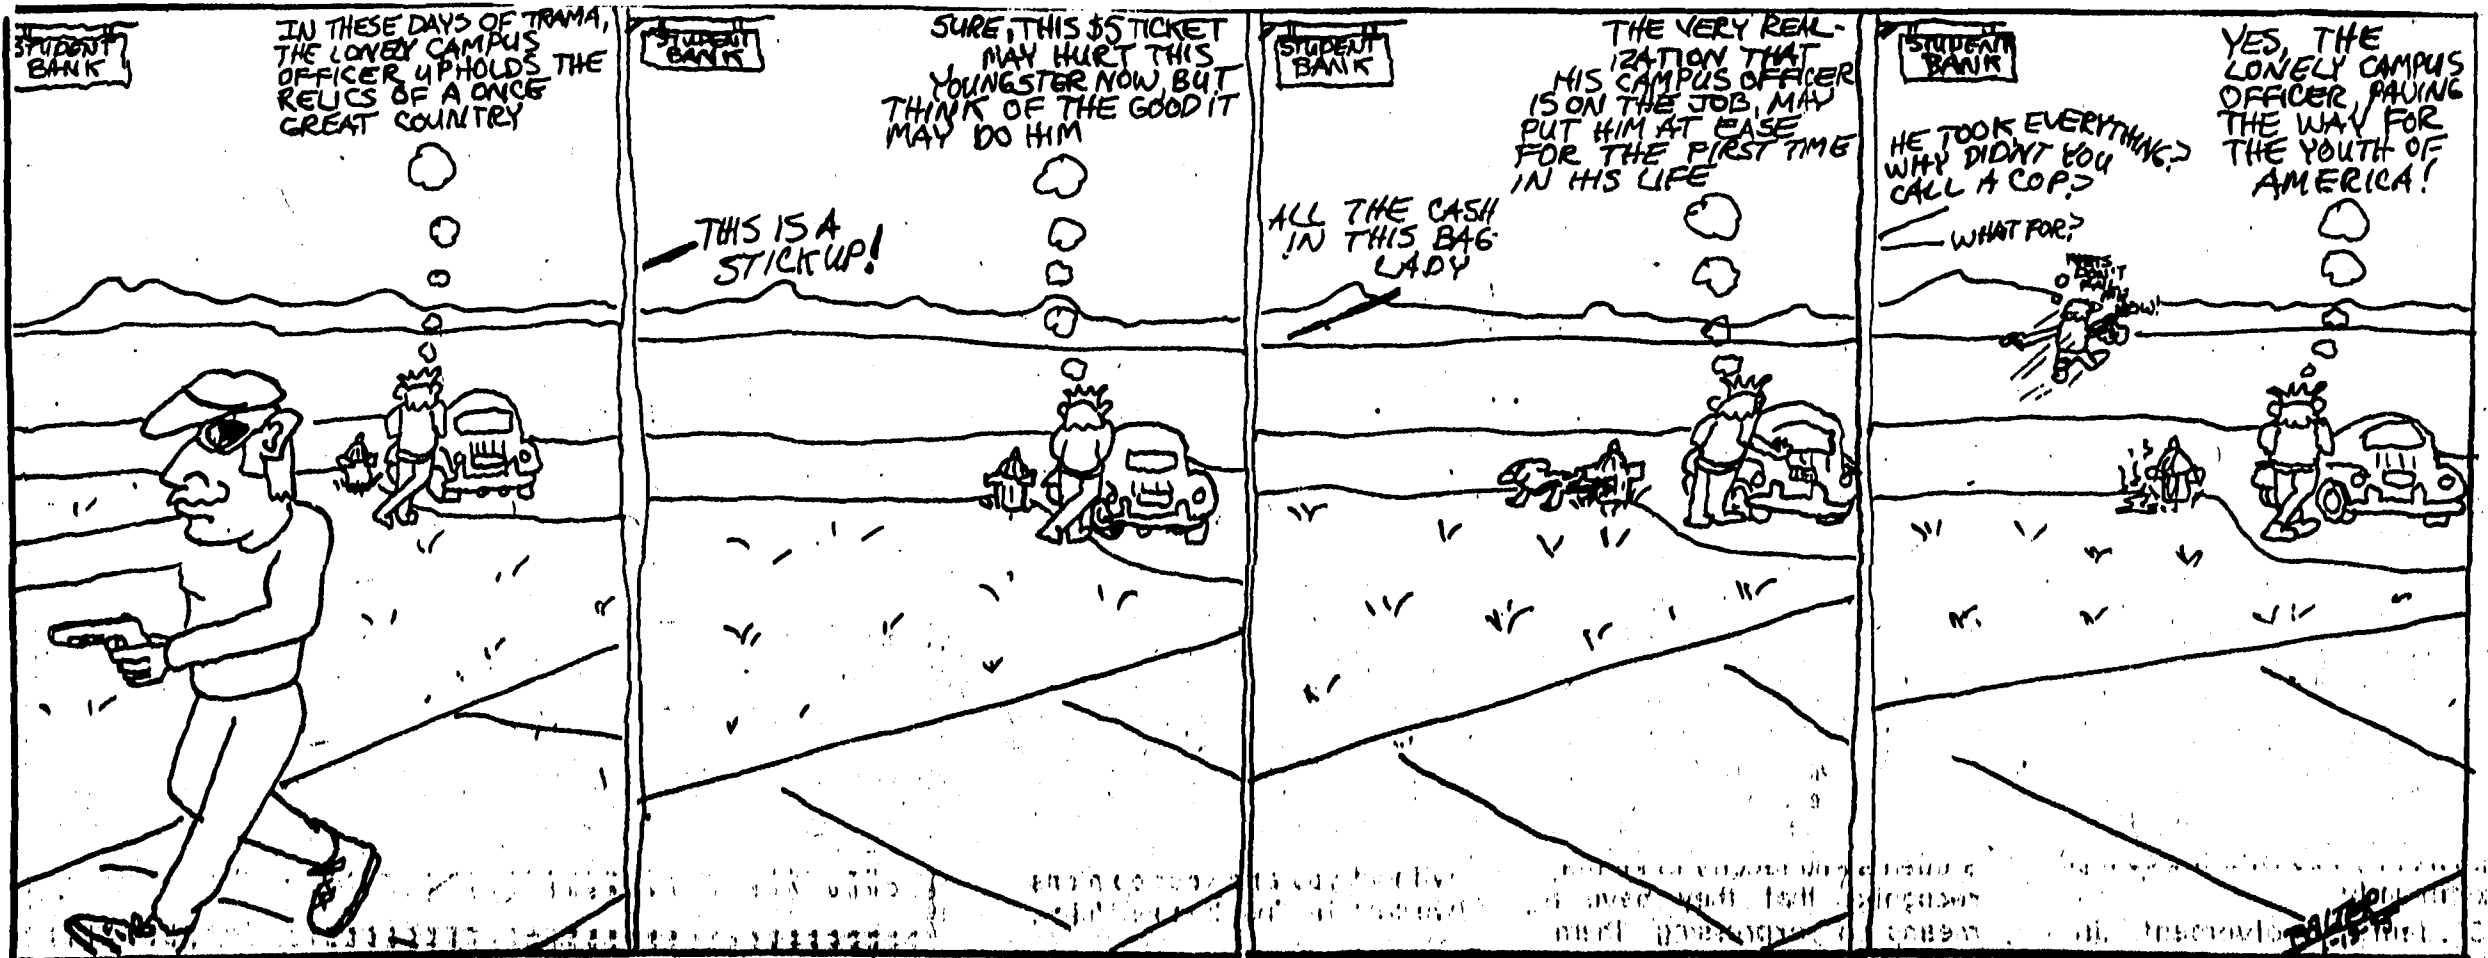

"Vehicular Sculpture," a unique form of aesthetic expression by artist Nick Snook, is appearing on campus from now until February 10. The exhibit features the "wedding of art with technology," and, according to the artist, deals "primarily with the theme of Man's identity crisis with the machines that serve him."

Snook, a Pennsylvania native who studied at Kutztown State and the University of Delaware, has worked with nationally known environmental sculptor Joe Moss. His intrigue with the subject area of technological art stems from an early interest in mechanics and vehicles, and it was developed throughout his high school and college careers as he took flying lessons and raced sports cars. "I use materials such as aircraft wings, windshields, props, auto bodies, shopping carts and articles of clothing," Snook writes, "to create vehicles which seem to take over Man's function with the vehicle."

He also tries to "physically absorb Man into the machine, or totally eliminate Man from machines that were designed to include Man."

His avant-garde approach to the daily and familiar tools of human existence promises an exciting exhibit, especially in these days of concern with the environment. An artist's reception will be held Tuesday evening, January 21 at 7:00 p.m. in the Haas Gallery of Art. It is open to the public and all environmentalists, lovers of art and interested persons are encouraged to attend.

Files and figures

The college official has the right to destroy unfavorable evaluative or opinion records in the file. The official has wide authority to make such judgments with or without the consent of the student affected or the person who submitted the unfavorable information. A qualifying exception is where a student's records have been communicated to a person outside the institution, e.g. a potential employer, the student shall be given the opportunity to view and copy the unfavorable information before it is destroyed.

Students will be permitted to submit a written or typed rebuttal which will be placed in the file concerning any material contained therein.

A student may challenge the accuracy of material contained in his or her file. Once such a challenge is made in writing, it will be the responsibility of the college official in charge of the file to determine the validity of the challenge. The college official shall make a written response to the challenge of the student, specifying the action taken. Should a factual error be found in any materials, the college official will be authorized to make the appropriate correction. If the student feels that the action taken is not satisfactory, a committee will convene to make a determination.

The college official in charge of a particular student file is the responsible person charged with the reasonable care and protection of the file. The college official is responsible for the release of a student's confidential records, only to authorized persons. An authorized person is defined to include persons as determined by the college official in charge, using the criteria that the person must present a specific request within the realm of his or her official capacity. This information may be transferred to a third party on the condition that such party will not give any other access without student permission.

However, directory information will be released unless notification to withhold it is received in the office of the Vice President for Student Life by or before January 31, 1975. (Released to places such as sports agendas, play programs and student aid. Directory information is defined as: "The student's name, address, telephone listing, date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in activities and sports, weight and height of members of officially recognized athletic teams, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received and the most recent previous educational agency or institution attended by the student.")

Except for those few specific exceptions spelled out in the law, the College official may release the student's records to an outside agency only upon the written request and approval of the student.

A record (log) will be kept of all using the file except for those using it within the institution.

Ancient college landmark eaten away by cranes

by Valery O'Connell

Cranes and heavy construction machinery once again invade Bloomsburg State College, devouring the old and digesting its substance to create something new. Down comes Waller Hall, an area landmark for over 100 years, to be replaced with a modern 250 bed dormitory, occupancy scheduled for the fall semester 1976.

Construction on the site was begun on January 6, under the auspices of the General State Authority. Ray Hedden Company from Dallas, Pa., was hired as the general contractor, and four other companies will be called in to complete the plumbing, heating, electrical and elevator work.

According to law, the general contractor has complete jurisdiction over the site; subsequently, it is off limits to all except construction personnel. "The contract limits include the sidewalk on Second Street, up to the College Bookstore, the Job Johnny by Kehr Union and the barricaded areas between the Commons and old Waller," stated Charles O'Donnell, acting inspector-in-charge for GSA.

"We will keep the street (between Luzerne Hall, the Bookstore and the Union) open as long as possible," he added, "but early next year there is a possibility that route might have to be deoured." At that time a manhole and electrical lines will block traffic in the area.

Safety precautions taken by the construction crews include wire screens between the building, the Commons and the Union, to catch falling debris. All persons are advised to steer clear of the site, as there is always a slight danger around heavy construction.

The demolition should take about eight weeks. O'Donnell mentioned that the current weather is ideal for such work, because the cold and damp weather "keeps the dust from flying." Spectators can see workers wetting down debris from time to time with powerful hoses.

Although the crew is destroying a great deal, they have been instructed by College officials to try to save a lone persimmon tree, planted near the union parking lot. Professional landscaping of the new dormitory will take place during the spring and summer of 1976.

The beginnings of Waller Hall were a dream come true for Professor Henry Carver, first principal of the Bloomsburg State Normal School. The cornerstone for the first of three wings was laid in June, 1898, and the estimated cost of that building was $36,000. That sum is quite a few bucks away from the total cost of the new dorm's contract, running close to $2.3 million.

A fire destroyed the original building in September, 1875, and the replacement section cost $48,000. It was expanded in 1890 with the addition of Long Porch, and again in 1894 when a new gym was built, which was later converted into the infamous Husky Lounge, a type of snack bar-gathering place for students and faculty in the mid-1920's.

SAGA dons Commons apron

Eleven Pennsylvania colleges host the food service, including Mansfield State and Misericordia in Dallas.

According to the company's contract at BSC, students may expect steak once a month and increased hours for breakfast, plus a six week advance menu to be followed strictly to the letter. The only deviations permissible under this contract must be in extreme cases.

"Thus, if we can't get fresh peaches in a particular season, we will be expected to substitute another similar item," said Sarris.

This semester student employees at the Commons must be eligible for the state or federal payroll. "SAGA has been allotted X number of hours of state and federal student employment financial aid and we want to use them up first," remarked Sarris. This has caused a considerable flocking of students to the Financial Aid office in Ben Franklin.

Working closely beside Sarris in the kitchen's office is Daniel Buckley, a SAGA food service manager most recently from Montclair State College in New Jersey. Besides these now faces, former ARA staff employees Lydia Rodio and Walter "Corky" Reibsome, remain at the Commons as food service manager and production manager, respectively.

Huskies place third at Montclair Cagers suffer rough break

It was a rough semester break for the BSC cagers as they suffered three defeats as they suffered three defeats to Monmouth, Roanoke, and Old Dominion. The Huskies placed third in the Montclair State Christmas Tree tournament where they lost to Monmouth and defeated American International College.

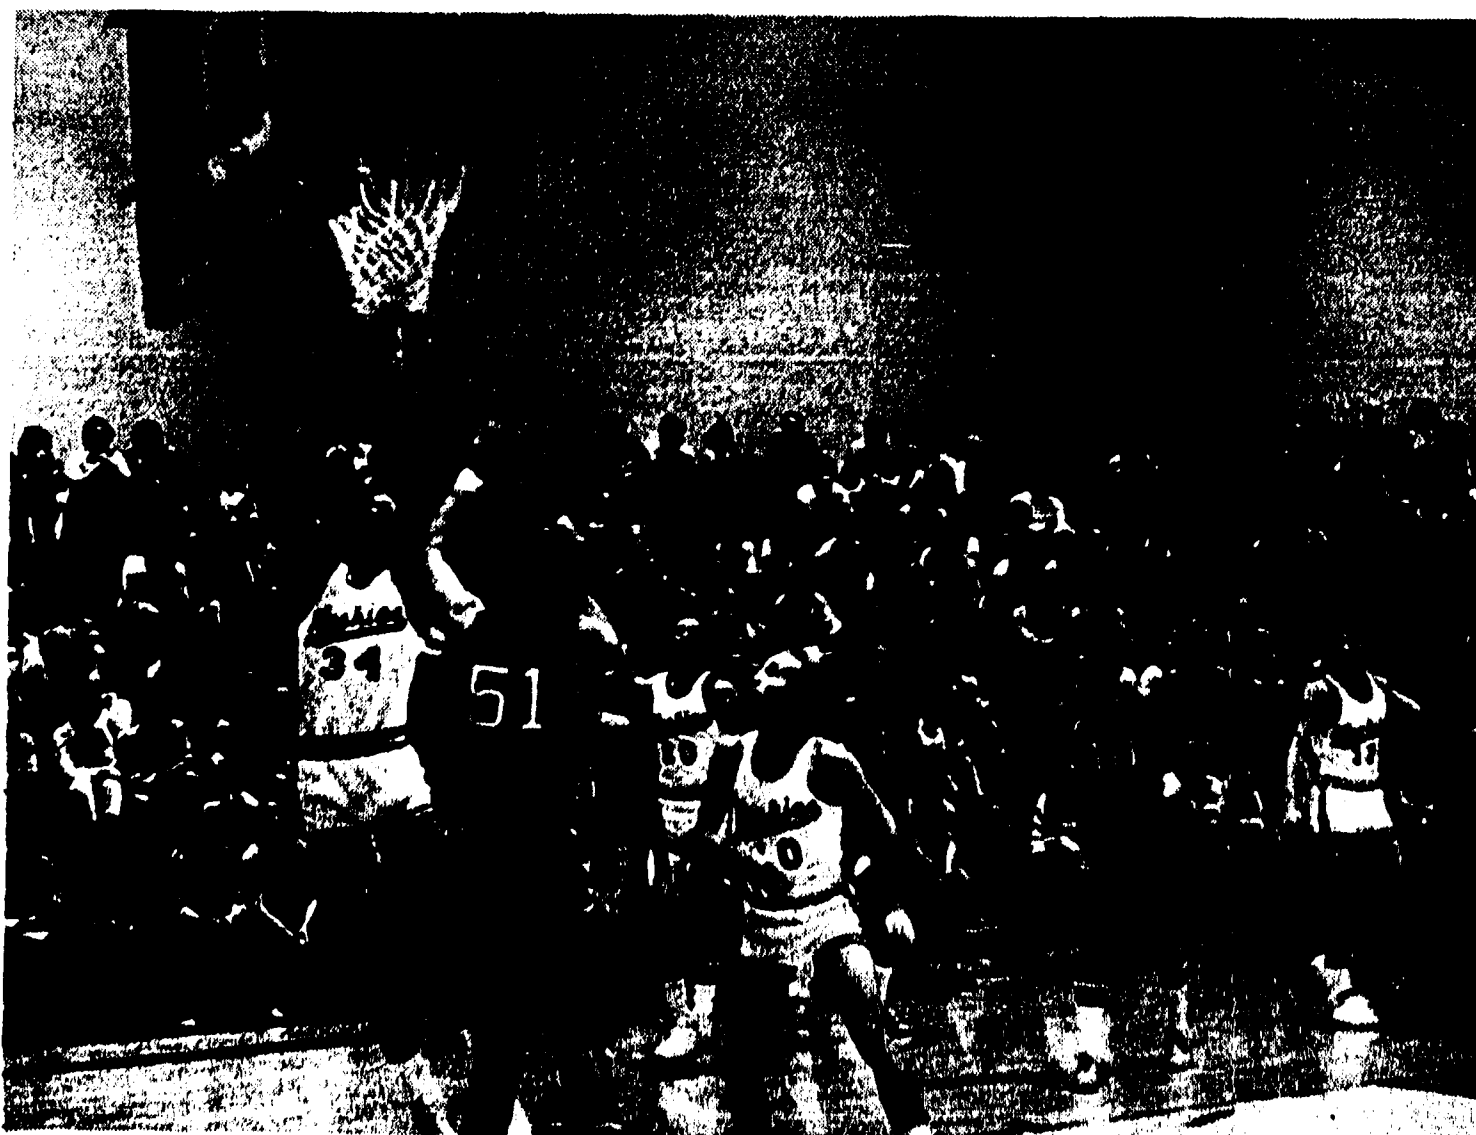

The Huskies then started on a road swing which will end when they host Cheyney on Wednesday, January 22. The Huskies dropped two games on this trip, to Roanoke and Old Dominion. Old Dominion is ranked seventh in College Division II while Roanoke has a powerful contingent back from their nationally ranked team of a year ago.

The Huskies have been having to make due without Rich Evans who was lost for the season after seeing action in the first five contests for BSC. The slack has been taken up by three of the team members, Rick Joseph, Gary Tyler, and Steve Bright. The Huskies have also been getting much of their scoring punch from Jerry Radocha who is their leading scorer and one of their top rebounders.

The Huskies are now 6-5 and played York College at York after this paper went to press. They travel to Shippensburg to take on the Red Raiders this weekend in a conference struggle. The Huskies will be hoping to take out some of their frustrations on the Shippensburg squad and to get back on the winning path as far as conference play is concerned. The Huskies have dropped their last two conference games to East Stroudsburg and Mansfield.

The cagers had one of the worst breaks in recent history as they dropped three out of four contests over last semester break. The Huskies faced stiff opposition in the form of Roanoke and Old Dominion, two small college powerhouses. The Huskies hope to get back on the winning track this weekend against Shippensburg. # Grapplers lose two to Navy and Montclair

The matmen of BSC suffered two setbacks over the vacation as they bowed to a powerful Navy squad at the fieldhouse and dropped a decision to Montclair State College. The Huskies hosted West Shester Wednesday night after this paper went to press and were hoping to snap their tailspin.

The Huskies could take only two bouts against a powerful Navy Squad. Randy Watts scored a 4-3 decision over Jeff Steiner for the squad's first points and Danny Burkholder scored another decision over Greg Copper in a 6-3 win. The Huskies lost three bouts by a total of five points as Dexter Derr fell 8-7, Matt Tydor came up on the short end of an 8-5 verdict, and Steve Scheib dropped a 7-5 decision.

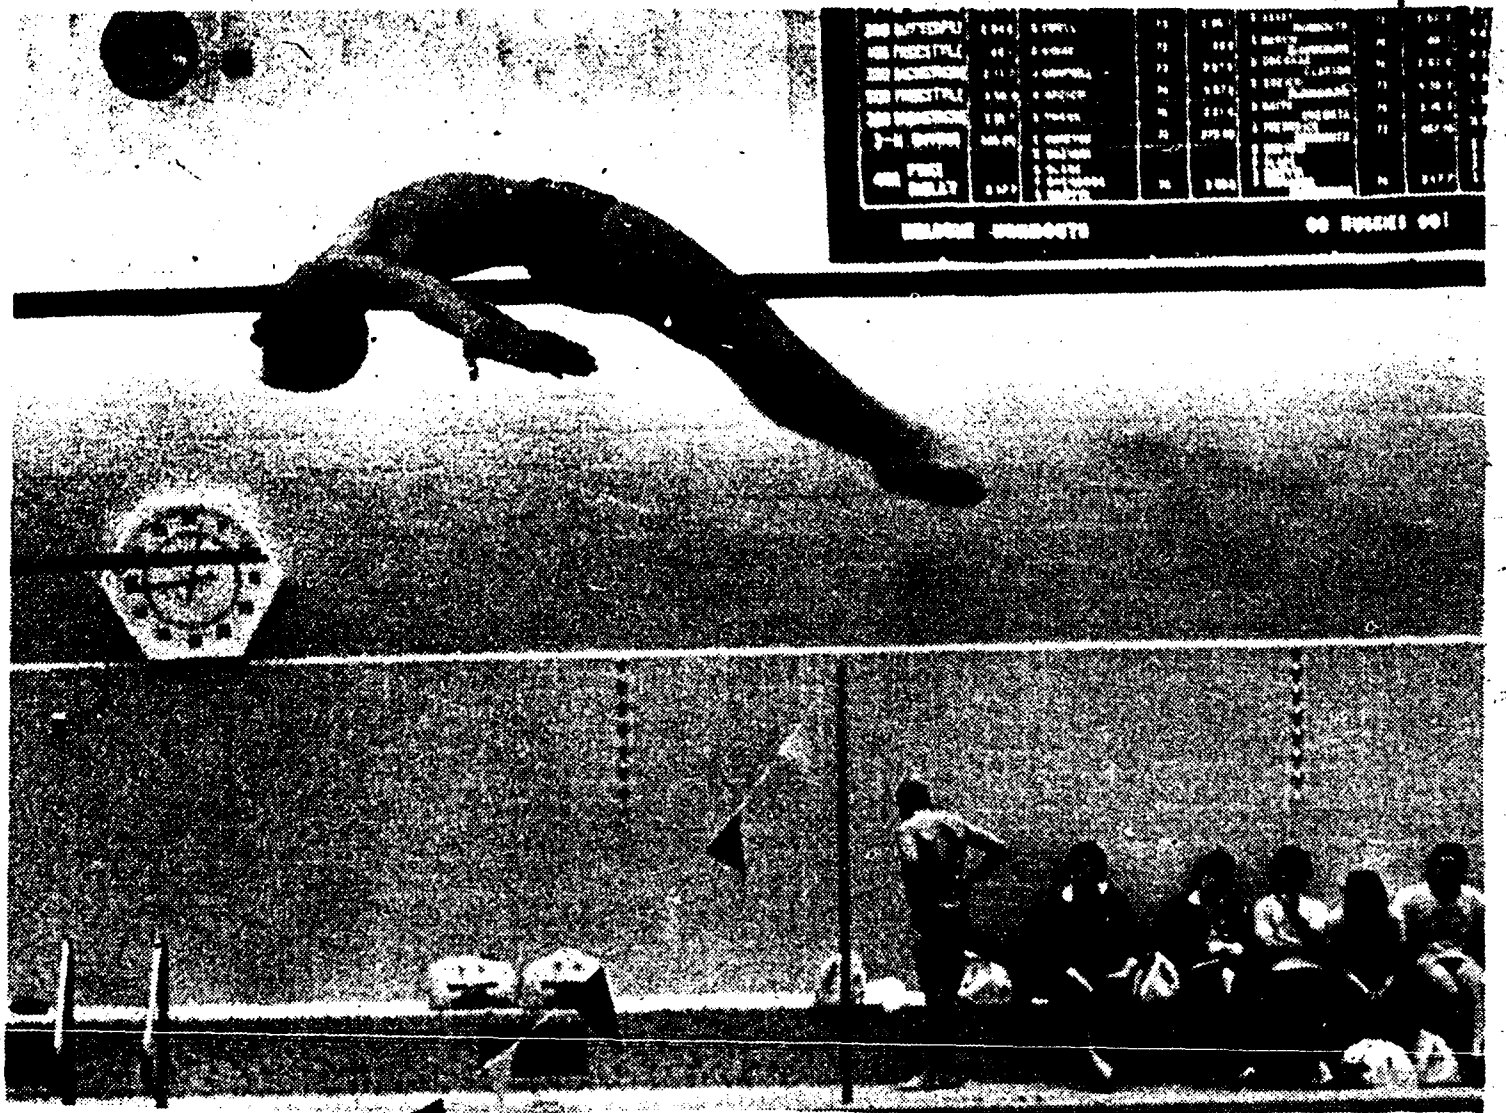

Against Montclair, the Huskies won three bouts as Dexter Derr, Randy Watts and Steve Scheib recorded wins for BSC. Mel Sharp, a newcomer to the BSC squad got tangled up in a 5-5 draw to add to the score.

Watts recorded the only fall of the contest as he flattened Digiochinox at 4:11 of their bout to even up the score at 9 all. Derr won his bout 13-8 and Scheib mauled his opponent 15-5 for the other two Husky Triumphs.

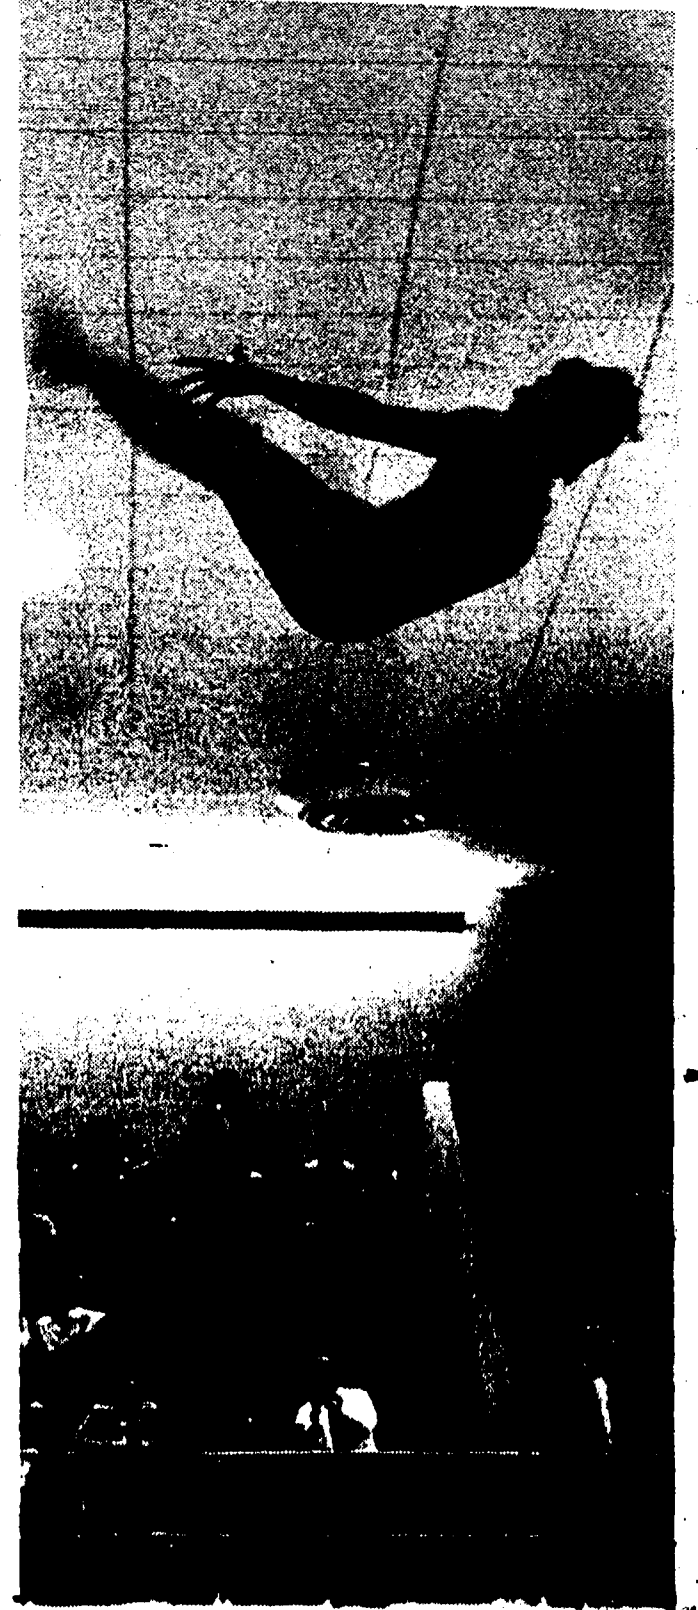

The Husky's Dave Brandt suffered a heart-breaking 1-0 loss to Vince Tundo. Tundo is a national Greco-Roman Champion and was on the American team that wrestled against the Polish team last year. The match was a heart-breaking way for Brandt to start a come-back as it was his first match since he was injured on November 22 at Millersville.

Danny Burkholder also had some misfortune as he hooked up with undefeated Dante Caprio. Burkholder came away on the short end of an 11-6 score.

The Huskies will be looking for a change in fortunes this weekend when they hook-up with conference powerhouse Clarion State.

BSC divers go through their routine during swimming matches last semester.
