An Increase in Equal Opportunity Interest

By JOSEPH ALLISON
Staff Reporter

Bloomsburg University is pushing equal opportunity now more than ever. You may wonder why this interest area has suddenly sparked intensive enthusiasm and widespread administrative concern. Though the interest was always there, the courts were not.

This year a law was passed by the Washington, D.C., Circuit Court of Appeals, demanding specific guidelines or plans be drawn up by institutions of higher education which coincide with the 1964 Civil Rights Act. This Act prohibits discrimination of an individual or group of individuals on the basis of race, color, or national origin.

Specifically, all of the 14 schools of the State System of Higher Education have been instructed to submit plans of action to the Office for Civil Rights in Philadelphia. Of those 14 institutions, Bloomsburg, Edinboro, and Indiana had the only plans that were initially accepted. The other schools must now resubmit newly revised plans.

According to BU Affirmative Action Director, Dr. Leinwand-Jones, "We followed the directions given us by the Pennsylvania Department of Education as to the development of appropriate plans." The existence of these plans does not reveal even the slightest possibility that the university was ever discriminatory. On the contrary, they are simply a sign that the university is interested in maintaining a concern for equal opportunity for all walks of life.

More specifically, the doors of equal opportunity have always been open to minorities; it is only recently that a beacon in the night has been installed to attract them like flies and ensure them of the university's utmost sincerity.

A special focus is on the black population at BU since it is the most predominant minority group on campus. Obvious plans to increase the influx of black here is by recruitment. This has been modified from past recruitment policies in that this year the university is seeking out minority students rather than simply hoping more minority candidates will take a closer look at Bloomsburg.

Other objectives — turned — attractions are the planning of programs in town for better interracial interaction, the hope for increased minority involvement in university group associations, and a push for more black, hispanic, and white roommate integration in the dormitories.

Minority and general student population ratios were assessed and goals were devised to begin the steady march towards a more balanced student population. Hopeful figures for the 1984 freshman class are 4.487 percent black students and an overall student body of 3.12 percent black persuasion. These figures may appear miniscule at present, but in time, with a steady upward rise in minority admissions, minorities may hopefully occupy a healthy percentage of the university's students.

On her view of the overall campus attitude concerning this issue Leinwand-Jones remarked, "The administration and minorities themselves are concerned, but everyone else has other things to think about."

Certainly everyone at one time or another has been concerned with this issue, whether directly or indirectly. Consider the purpose of the university. It prepares individuals for life on the outside. This preparation does not limit itself to the processing of learned academic principles, but makes the social aspect of life part of the endeavor as well. People on the outside have highly varied backgrounds. These people, in turn, make up an intensely diverse society that must interact every minute of every day.

Association of Resident Students

General Meeting Scheduled

By JACQUELYN PAGE
Staff Writer

The executive officers of the Association of Resident Students (A.R.S.), recently met to organize its first general meeting. The meeting will be held Tuesday, Oct. 4, at 9:30 p.m. in Montour Hall. All on-campus and off-campus students are encouraged to attend.

A.R.S. provides various activities for the college community, including Toys For Tots, an Easter Egg Hunt, movies, concerts, and bus trips.

Acting under Presidents Kim Kuronya and Mark Davis, A.R.S. is open to any suggestions concerning its programming.

Women's Seminar Schedules Film

The Women Student's Seminar series will begin Monday, Oct. 3, with the film "Bill Cosby: On Prejudice" at 7:30 p.m. in the Kehr Union, Coffeehouse.

The film is "serious and humorous at the same time," according to Dr. Adrienne Leinwand-Jones, head of Affirmative Action on campus, which sponsors the series. In his own unique way, Cosby shows the effects of stereotyping on various cultural, racial, ethnic, and religious groups.

Although many of the topics presented in the series are of interest to women, Dr. Jones emphasizes that the series is "for everyone and not just women students." Male students, campus personnel, and community members are invited and encouraged to attend.

The seminar will last approximately one hour, which includes the presentation followed by a discussion.

Editorial

Never let it be said that Bloomsburg has nothing to offer the students at this university: what they have in their annual Bloomsburg Fair is nothing to blink an eye at.

One visit to this array of sights, sounds, and smells, is enough to make one sigh, savor, and spend.

The rides at the fair, which are relatively few compared to the number of other things there, are eyeopening to say the least, and the people who ride them must be one step short of crazy! Mechanical rides are not the only kind offered. There is a pony ride for younger children, helicopter rides for the daring, and for those just wishing to tour the grounds, there is a tractor ride which pulls benched platforms around the fair.

The food stands are a story in themselves. One can purchase just about anything to please the palate from fried ice cream, to gyros, to what seems to be the big seller, italian sausage sandwiches with onions and peppers. For the younger crowd (or the young at heart), there is an assortment of cotton candy, fudge, candy apples covered with peanuts, and the list goes on. It goes without saying that the price of these little goodies reflects the large number of patrons that they serve. It is usually difficult to buy a can of soda for under 60 cents (although it is possible), or a funnel cake for anything under $1.25.

"Odds and ends" is the only way to describe the remaining stands. One can purchase anything from a tractor, to a pair of leather moccasins, to a turquoise ring. One can survey the multitudes of art and crafts that were submitted to the show and have been awarded various prizes. One can find out what his name derives from, according to the Bible, and one can see "the biggest horse in the world" for a mere 50 cents. One can see the horses and the goats, and the redwood tree that was made into a house. One can see a demonstration of the ting that slices, dices, chops, and mutilates, and a fishing device that allows one to move their bait anywhere in the water without recasting. The list goes on and on.

The "event of the year" is covered by Channel 16 from Wilkes-Barre, along with PM magazine, who made a showing on Tuesday.

With all the publicity that this event produces, it would follow that if one had some free time, or could make some free time, he would go and check it out. With two days that are free of charge to students, it would be silly, if not downright stupid, to not take advantage of something as unusual or exciting as this. How many times do we hear complaints from students who party all the time because there is nothing better to do? Here is an opportunity to get out and do something different. There are approximately eight months of school in a year, and taking a few hours out of a day or two to go to the fair doesn't seem like such a sacrifice.

This show must be the biggest in the state, and can only be seen to be believed. This is Friday. Head down there today after classes, or maybe tomorrow, the last day of this annual event.

If you don't see it, you'll be missing out on an experience of a lifetime. But, there's always next year!

'In the Dark...'

Dear Editor,

I'm sitting in the library right now, wondering what time they will close tonight. Will it be 5:00 or maybe 10:00? If I'm really lucky, it will be open tonight until 11:00. Of course, if it closes early, I'll get lost again in the darkness, trying to remember which exit is open later, and which one has already been locked.

Maybe it's me, but I just don't understand. I'm a senior now, and I guess I should know how to get the maximum amount of study time in during the minimum number of hours that the library is actually open. Can someone tell me who set the time for library hours?? Was it the administration who thinks that all the college kid do on weekends is party? Or maybe it was the party people who start Thursday night and party straight through until Sunday. No one asked me, or the rest of the college community, when WE would like the library to be open or closed. Granted, the majority of people here at BU do party, but when do people start going out usually 9:00, 9:30, maybe even 10:00.

Don't get me wrong - I like to party too, but since my house is noisy, the best place to go is the library.

After all, BU is a place of higher education. I know that some people think college is one big party, but there are those of us who pay MEGA-bucks to go to school here for an education. Libraries play a part in that education.

I guess this little pet peeve of mine could have gone unnoticed, but since I was in the library last night when they closed earlier than the usual time for a Sunday night, I thought I'd air my opinion. Hopefully, I'll get out on time tonight. It sure is hard finding your way out when it's dark.

Just sign me—

Agreement Enhances Degree Programs

The opportunity to obtain a baccalaureate degree in Physical Therapy, Occupational Therapy, Cytotechnology or Dental Hygiene has been greatly enhanced, as a result of a recent affiliation agreement between Bloomsburg University and Thomas Jefferson University's College of Allied Health Sciences. This affiliation facilitates transfer to upper-division baccalaureate degree programs at Thomas Jefferson University, for students who have completed a minimum of two years preparatory education at Bloomsburg University. This "2 + 2" arrangement provides the advantage of offering a quality, reasonably-priced education at a rural university combined with training in an attractive urban setting in Philadelphia at a major medical center which has been described as one of the world's foremost centers of medical excellence.

According to Dr. James E. Cole, Chairperson of the Department of Biological & Allied Health Sciences and Dr. Tom Cooper, Dean of Admissions at Bloomsburg University

"This affiliation will provide a major opportunity for currently enrolled and prospective students in pre-allied health programs where we do not offer degrees, such as physical therapy, occupational therapy, and cytotechnology, to obtain a baccalaureate degree in a four year period and to enter very attractive health professions." Of the approximately 500 majors in the Department of Biological & Allied Health Sciences at Bloomsburg, about 300 have chosen allied health careers. Bloomsburg University offers baccalaureate degrees in medical technology, radiologic technology, and public school dental hygiene.

Representatives from Thomas Jefferson University's College of Allied Health Sciences will be on campus to present a seminar on October 5, 1983, in Hartline Science Center, Room 134 from 2:00-4:00 p.m. Topics will be careers and educational opportunities in Physical Therapy, Occupational Therapy, Cytotechnology and Dental Hygiene.

All members of the university community are invited to attend.

Sobering Studies

Alcohol abuse is not just a subject for public service television commercials. It is a real problem at colleges and universities across the country.

An increasing number of alcohol-related accidents have alerted school officials to the problem. A Vermont student broke her back in a fall recently at a party. Auto accidents involving college students are often episodes of drunken driving, sometimes with tragic results.

Students drink for a variety of reasons. Peer pressure has a big influence on many students. Social drinking is often carried to excess at parties both on and off-campus. Many students drink as a result of academic stress or fear of flunking out. And worrying about competition in the job market is a reason many students give for their drinking.

Whatever the cause, campus officials are trying to crack down on drinking by enforcing campus alcohol rules.

Not only do they hope to stem alcohol-related accidents, but also to help curb campus vandalism, a great deal of which is believed to be caused by drunk students.

Many schools are now offering alcohol programs. BAC-CHUS (Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students) has 75 campus charters in 33 states. But not all students are willing to listen to dire warnings of the effects of alcoholism. They consider drinking fun and a harmless way to vent collegiate frustrations. It's this attitude that college officials are having trouble fighting against.

Teacher Shortages

There is a serious shortage of math and science teachers across the country as potential teachers choose the private employment field instead of the classroom. Higher salaries and more advancement potential are the main reasons.

Another reason is found with the students themselves. Teachers have difficulty maintaining classroom behavior and many teachers are afraid to teach in certain school districts. Some teachers say that parents are not strict enough with their kids at home, and the rowdy behavior continues in the classroom.

So with increasing problems of finding teachers, the city of Huston came up with a good (and simple) way to attract math and science teachers—offer them more money. They decided to implement a bonus system to lure applicants. Math and science teachers receive a $2,000 bonus if they teach in one of the poorer neighborhoods. If their school's test scores rise, they are eligible for an additional bonus of $1,300. The bonus plan has two objectives: fill the critical shortages, and improve the students proficiency.

But the math and science teachers shortage will probably get much worse, regardless of bonus plans. That's because of how few of today's college students are majoring in math and science education. Business is a much more popular field. And, as the economy improves, more current teachers may be attracted to other, more lucrative fields.

Why is a secondary education major portraying a lead character in the Bloomsburg Players' first production of the season, DARK OF THE MOON? Scott R. Schreckengast (above), who is playing the role of John, the witch-boy, stated he is doing it for fun. He enjoys being in plays and meeting people. Although Schreckengast is a freshman, he has had previous acting experience in high school. He began acting at the age of 14, and he has held supporting roles in such plays as HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS, GEORGE M. COHAN, and FIDDLER ON THE ROOF. "I love auditioning," says Schreckengast. Also, he likes to express himself in front of people and rarely gets stage fright. DARK OF THE MOON will be presented in Haas Auditorium on Oct. 5-7 at 8:00 p.m.

New Co-Ed Dorm Policy

By TROY SELLERS

I was just ambling along one day with a little free time on my hands, and I decided to take a walk down and visit a few friends in my old dwelling place, Schuylkill Hall. I was on my way in when I was confronted by a receptionist, requesting my I.D. card.

I couldn't imagine why she wanted my I.D. and why she wanted to know who I was going to visit. I asked her about it and she told me that it was part of a new policy in the co-ed dorms, to recognize the guests and those people, who in the past, were not going to visit anyone. My cordial receptionist told me, "Well, it's sort of for protection of the residents and the building." Suddenly I recalled the damaged elevator from a year ago, and all the other destruction that everyone wanted to blame on outsiders.

The receptionist continued, "It's also a good way to cut down on illegal trafficking. People can no longer just walk right by the front desk and take illegal substances to their friends." She recorded my destination, and the time and I was on my way. After my visit, however, I found my curiosity getting the better of me. I decided a talk with Montour's Resident Dean, Don Young, might help to satisfy my curiosity.

Young also told me that the new policy was basically for the protection of the students and the building. He said, "Before, we had no way of regulating who was in the building and when. This gives us a chance to know who's around if trouble ever arises." Young also mentioned the social aspect of the new policy. He said, "It's easier for the receptionist to get to know the residents now, since they have to know who's visiting and who lives here."

As my conversation with the dean continued, we also discussed the standing policy on the co-ed dorms laundry rooms use. The dorms request use by off-campus students only on Wednesdays. However, Young mentioned, we aren't going to kick some poor student out after she walked two blocks with a heavy load of wash. But we do request use only on Wednesdays. It's just another way of regulating the dorm."

Young was positive about the new policy of the guests signing in, and emphasized that it is working.

I then found the receptionist again, who told me, "It is an improvement, and it is working. Originally, it was like the single sex dorms, where the resident would have to come to the desk and sign the guest in. But this is a much better way for a co-ed environment."

Although the new policy does have some of the aspects of the single sex dorm policy (like the 11 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. visiting hours) it is a policy that allows for the freedom expected in a co-ed dorm. And most importantly, to those involved, it is working. So when you go to visit someone in a co-ed dorm, don't be surprised when you're confronted by that receptionist asking where you're going!

Sorry!

There were two mistakes in the Sept. 21, Voice story on the Campus Child Centers efforts to get a playground built. In the first a line should have read "... by a fence or natural barrier," not "... by a fence as a natural barrier." The second concerned the assertion children had been playing at the proposed site since 1977 when in actuality they did not start playing there until 1981.

Family Planning Provides Services

By ANDY HEINTZELMAN

The Columbia-Montour Family Planning Center in Bloomsburg is meeting student needs not currently provided by the university, and has Bloomsburg University students representing nearly two-thirds of its clients.

"We utilized in the community for a lot of different things," explained Swanee Marcus, director for the center, "and were glad we can provide services for students at the university as well."

Family Planning is a broad service in itself, dealing with birth control counseling and supplies, gynecological exams and pregnancy testing. These common services along with diet counseling, blood tests and free venereal disease testing are, said Marcus services that BU students can get from the center which are not provided by the university.

When the center was founded in Bloomsburg in 1977, the college was definitely in mind, according to Marcus. And, besides providing the services previously mentioned, the center began working closely with the college in other aspects of family planning.

The center has also participated in BU's annual health fair and on occasion has sent representative staff members to speak in classes on current family planning related issues.

According to Marcus, family planning and the people throughout the nation who use the service, have benefited from the public health bill in 1970, which provides some federal funding for centers such as Columbia-Montour. However, the centers cannot rely entirely on federal dollars and therefore must obtain some local funding.

Here again, BU and Columbia-Montour Family Planning interact. In this situation the University, through CGA, can aid the center by providing it with money which helps the center to operating.

Marcus said that last year CGA allocated $3000 to the center, and she hopes to receive the same amount this year, "the money could pay the oil bill for the center for a year and that helps," said Marcus.

Marcus is pleased with the relationship between the family planning center and Bloomsburg University. And, she hopes the center can remain "important as an adjunct of the universities capabilities."

Experience seems to be paying off for the Women's Tennis Team. With no freshmen and only one sophomore playing the top six spots the Lady Huskies have lost one match so far this year. They added yet another two impressive string of victories on Saturday.

The Huskies swept the Tri-Meet Saturday beating Slippery Rock 7-2 and West Chester University 5-1. The doubles matches were cancelled against West Chester on account of darkness.

BU started the long day out right. The Huskies only gave up two games to Slippery Rock. The losses were at the number four singles spot and the number two doubles.

Coach Herbert was pleased with his team's overall performance. He was especially pleased with the number five and number six singles players, Marilou Donaker (3-2) and Judy Pahls (4-1) respectively. Their wins took the pressure off the doubles teams by securing the match for BU.

Captain, Linda Becker (5-0), won her match, winning the second set in a tie breaker 7-2. Justine Landis also undefeated this year at the number one spot 5-0, rolled over her opponent 6-1, 6-3.

West Chester proved to go the way of Slippery Rock as it fell to the unyielding racquets of Bloomsburg. The Huskies only loss was again at the number four singles spot. Junior Marge Gillespie (2-3) lost in straight sets to both of her opponents. Kathy Masch (3-2) was the only other BU player who had a difficult time, but she over came a split set 6-3, 3-6 to take the match 6-2 in the third. Everyone else won in straight sets.

With the finish of the singles it was deemed unnecessary to play the doubles because Bloomsburg had the match won already. The decision was made due to darkness.

Lady Huskies Win Two

By MIKE ALBRIGHT

The Bloomsburg University women's cross country team came away with two victories Saturday in a tri-meet with East Stroudsburg and Lock Haven. The Lady Huskies upped their record to 3-0.

The Huskies placed runners in three of the top five places as well as copping tenth and eleventh places. Lori Pingitore, Vicky Amici, and Karen Henselar ran fine races to take third, fourth and fifth places respectively., Pingitore ran the East Stroudsburg course in 19:32, edging Amici by a scant second. Henselar finished only five seconds behind Amici. Sabrina McChesney and Barb Docherty also placed for BU with McChesney taking tenth and Docherty finishing eleventh.

East Stroudsburg's Laura Mason ran an outstanding race and set an ESU course record of 18:21 as well as defeating the field by 61 seconds. Her effort was not enough, however, as BU defeated ES 22-35. BU also knocked off Lock Haven 26-

29. Lock Haven's Dawn Eid finished second in 19:22.

BU takes its unblemished record into the Binghamton Invitational today at 4:00 p.m.

Rochester Still Serious, Transferred to Phila.

Despite winning the first game of the 1983 season, the Husky football squad was anything but overjoyed last Saturday. The reason, of course, was the news that star tailback Vernon Rochester had suffered a spinal injury on the game's play from scrimmage, which would require surgery.

After surgery on Sunday at Geisinger Medical Center in Danville, Rochester's condition was considered serious but is in more or less of a wait and see pattern. The sophomore from Haddon Heights, New Jersey has improved since the operation, regaining feeling in most of his upper body including movement in his fingers and hands.

Rochester was moved yesterday for rehabilitation and possibly more surgery to Thomas Jefferson Memorial Hospital in Philadelphia.

The injury is Rochester's second in his two year Bloomsburg career, as he was operated on over the winter to correct a knee injury. But after an intensive off season rehabilitation program that caused him to miss spring practice, Rochester was being counted on by Coach George Landis to be a key element in Landis' rebuilding of the Husky football program.

After a slow start by the team and in particular the offensive ground game, the Husky rushing attack seemed to get untracked against led by 151 yards by Rochester.

At the time of his injury, the Husky sophomore was leading the team in rushing with 195 yards on 45 carries for a 4.3 average. He was also the Huskies' second leading receiver with nine catches.

Netters 7th at Navy

After sweeping to four straight dual meet wins, the BU netmen invaded Annapolis to take on the Midshipmen of Navy and seven other top teams in the Navy Tennis Tournament. The Huskies, who placed fourth a year ago, did not fare quite as well this time around, tying Swarthmore College for seventh place.

Maryland claimed top honors for the second straight year with 20 team points, while the host Navy squad totalled 17 1/2, good for the runnerup spot. The rest of the field finished well behind the top two teams. William and Mary headed the second group with 9 points, followed by Penn St. 7, Old Dominion and Columbia 6, and Bloomsburg and Swarthmore 4.

Husky mentor Burt Reese, although satisfied with his young squad's performance, was not overly pleased. According to Reese, the Huskies dropped a few key matches that the team will have to start winning in order to prove that they can compete with the Eastern powers as they have in years past.

BU did manage to put two players in the semifinals in two of tourney's four flights. Scott Gibbs posted singles victories over Shep Davidson (Swarthmore) and Rod Machlin of W&M before dropping disappointing 6-0, 6-0 match to eventual C flight champ Scott Wlodychak of Maryland.

Fellow freshman Steve Augustine played impressively in his collegiate singles debut, downing Mike Griswold (ODU) and Jim Harvie (W&M) in tight matches. Augustine's undefeated ended when Brad Rush (PSU) outlasted the BU righthander 6-4, 6-7, 6-2.

Only two other Huskies posted first round triumphs, Rob Lario and Mike Penney. Lario, playing in the A bracket, escaped with a 6-2, 6-7, 6-3 win over late entry Scott Orren of Navy. The Husky junior then lost in his next round match to W&M's Gordon Diamont 6-4, 6-2. Penney struggled by Al Levnstein (ODU) 7-5, 7-5 only face eventual C flight tittlest Jim Schnoor (Maryland). The Huskies number five player gave Schnoor all he could handle before dropping a 6-3, 6-4 loss.

The doubles competition continued to pose problems for Reese, as all four BU duos were eliminated in straight set matches.

After facing a tough Engineer squad from Lehigh last Tuesday the Huskies travel to Princeton to compete in the ECAC Division I tourney this weekend. The tourney is by invitation only and it is the fourth straight year that the Huskies have made an appearance. In their previous appearances Bloomsburg has placed 10th out of sixteen all three times.

BU Men Drop Three

The Bloomsburg University men's cross country team fell to 0-4 Saturday as they dropped three decisions in a quad-meet versus Millersville, Shippensburg, and Kutztown.

Millersville downed BU 15-48, Shippensburg topped the Huskies 24-37, and Kutztown won 22-35.

Although the Huskies are winless, Coach Carl Hinkle is feeling optimistic about his team's ability. "Our young people are coming along and we're competitive, that gives us a better feel about our program."

Two Husky runners broke the 27-minute barrier, unlike last year when no BU competitors ran under 27 minutes. Freshman Dean Feinhauer was the first Husky runner to finish placing eighth with a time of 26:15. John Homan, the next BU runner to finish, had a time of 26:57.

Other BU runners who placed: Brett Sarge, 28:12; Darryl Atherholt, 28:47; Mike Greene, 29:01; Mike Williams, 29:38; and Mike Weber, 29:45.

Notes: The team travels to Lock Haven tomorrow for a 1:00 p.m. meet. Millersville's star runner, Bill King, finished first for the second straight week. He took the top spot in the Lafayette Invitational on 917 as well as the quad-meet last Saturday.
