OVERCOMING OBSTACLES

2011 NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship

Ann Walker, an associate athletics director and member of the Division II Women's Basketball Committee, stepped in as head coach of the Nova Southeastern women's basketball team just days before the start of the season.

Challenge vs. reward

Nova Southeastern's Ann Walker doing the best she can as an administrator, coach and daughter

By Sean Cartell

Ann Walker is a firm believer in making the best of what life throws your way. But perhaps even she couldn't have been prepared for the events of October 2010.

A fifth-year member of the NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Committee and the associate athletics director for compliance/senior woman administrator at Nova Southeastern University, Walker served a two-year term as the national chair of that committee from 2008-10.

In less than a one-week span, Walker added the duties of interim head women's basketball coach and had to come to terms with her mother fighting terminal cancer, in addition to fulfilling all of her other responsibilities.

"I think it's just a reflection of life," Walker said. "Things are constantly thrown at us, whether they are a challenge or whether they are rewarding. There's a reason why these things have been thrown in my lap at this point in my life. I have to do the best job I can. It's how we respond to things that make us better."

The journey

The path in collegiate athletics was always a natural one for Walker. She had been a four-year letterwinner at Northwestern College in Orange City, Iowa, where she also competed in softball, earning All-America honors on the hardwood her senior season.

Following graduation, she looked to transfer her knowledge of the game from the court to the bench, becoming the head women's basketball coach at Teikyo Marycrest University in Davenport, Iowa, for four seasons. She then was an assistant coach at Creighton for three years before becoming the head coach at Minnesota State University, Mankato from 1998-2005.

Walker, who had dabbled in administration during her time at Marycrest, gave up coaching full-time after the 2005 season to join the Sunshine State Conference as an assistant commissioner. It was there that the first twist of fate to Walker's career led her to the NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Committee.

OVERCOMING OBSTACLES

"I actually got on the committee by default working in the Sunshine State Conference office," Walker said. "An administrator from our region ended up leaving college athletics and our commissioner submitted my name to replace her."

A year later, Walker accepted a position at Nova Southeastern University as the school's associate athletics director for compliance and internal operations, and stayed on with the committee. She spent two years as the regional chair and then the last two seasons as the national chair of the committee.

"It has been amazing," Walker said of her work on the committee. "It was a blessing thrown in my lap. I had coached college basketball for 13 years and had been removed, so it allowed me to get back into the game that I love so much. The people who I've met and have worked with — administrators and coaches — throughout Division II have been wonderful."

According to Roberta Page, who oversees Division II Women's Basketball as a director of championships for the NCAA, Walker has been the ideal committee member.

"Ann is somebody who likes to have fun, but it became very evident that she is very serious about her work," Page said. "She has a desire to work together to make this the best possible championship experience for the student-athletes. From my position, there is nothing better."

Taking on the task of being an NCAA committee member, especially serving as the national chair of that committee, requires a lot of hard work and many long hours to accomplish its mission. But for Walker, she says it's time well-spent.

"From December through the end of March, it is very time-consuming with regional calls every Tuesday and national calls every Wednesday," Walker said. "When you're the national chair, you're not just concerned with your own region, but you really pay close attention to all eight regions. You travel to regional tournaments as a site supervisor and then there are eight days at the Elite Eight, morning until night. Then we have some follow-up meetings. In all honesty, the time and price that you have to pay are far outweighed by the benefit you get in return and how rewarding the work is."

A balancing act

On October 1, 2010, the women's basketball staff, including head coach Marilyn Rule, was relieved of its duties at Nova Southeastern, just 15 days before the official start of practice. The situation left many current players wondering just what would become of their season.

"It was kind of a shock and something we certainly didn't expect," said Jada Buckner, a junior from Loudon, Tennessee. "But we talked to each other as a team and decided that no matter what, we would all stick together. We knew the university would do what was best for us, and we just needed to stay together and work hard."

Walker and Nova Athletics Director Michael Mominey knew that it would be incredibly difficult to hire a quality coach so close to the start of the season.

"It was much too late with official practice starting in two weeks to hire someone from the outside," Walker said.

Though she had been out of college coaching for seven years, Walker was the obvious choice to take over the program on an interim basis. Sure, it would add to her already full plate as an administrator and an NCAA committee member, but she and Mominey knew that it was the right move.

"We have a great core of young women in our program," Mominey said. "We knew they were committed to making the 2010-11 season a success."

"What's so great about Ann is that she doesn't let obstacles get in the way of her vision and what she wants to accomplish. She doesn't dwell on that. Most importantly, she stays positive, and those are lessons that we can all take with us." — Nova Southeastern women's basketball assistant coach Kathrine Higier

Fortunately, the players agreed.

"We had met with our AD and actually mentioned Coach Ann, because we knew she had experience coaching collegiate basketball," Buckner said. "We were really excited and optimistic when we found out that she was going to be our coach. We knew she would get us to where we needed to be and we're blessed to have her as our coach."

Page said she had little concern about Walker adding more to her already lengthy balancing act.

"Ann told me that she had to do that job for the kids," Page said. "That's what gives me goosebumps about the people in Division II. There are so many people who take on additional jobs to make it a positive experience for the student-athletes. Ann knew she had to do a good job to give her kids a good experience."

Unfortunately for Walker, returning to the sidelines wouldn't be the most difficult obstacle she would face that week.

"It has been an interesting year because my mom was diagnosed with lung cancer about a year ago," Walker said. "That week that I was named interim head coach, we found out as a family that the cancer had spread to her bones and I went to be with her. We deal with things all the time that are challenging — and that week the phone call about my mom got thrown my way."

Holding court

Walker had to assemble a staff before the start of the season and, with the time constraints, she quickly began looking inside the Nova Southeastern athletics department.

She immediately turned to Kathrine Higier, a four-year starter who had played at New York University, who had just started as a graduate assistant in Nova's compliance office. Higier had served as a volunteer assistant for the women's basketball team the year before and had proven her abilities as a coach.

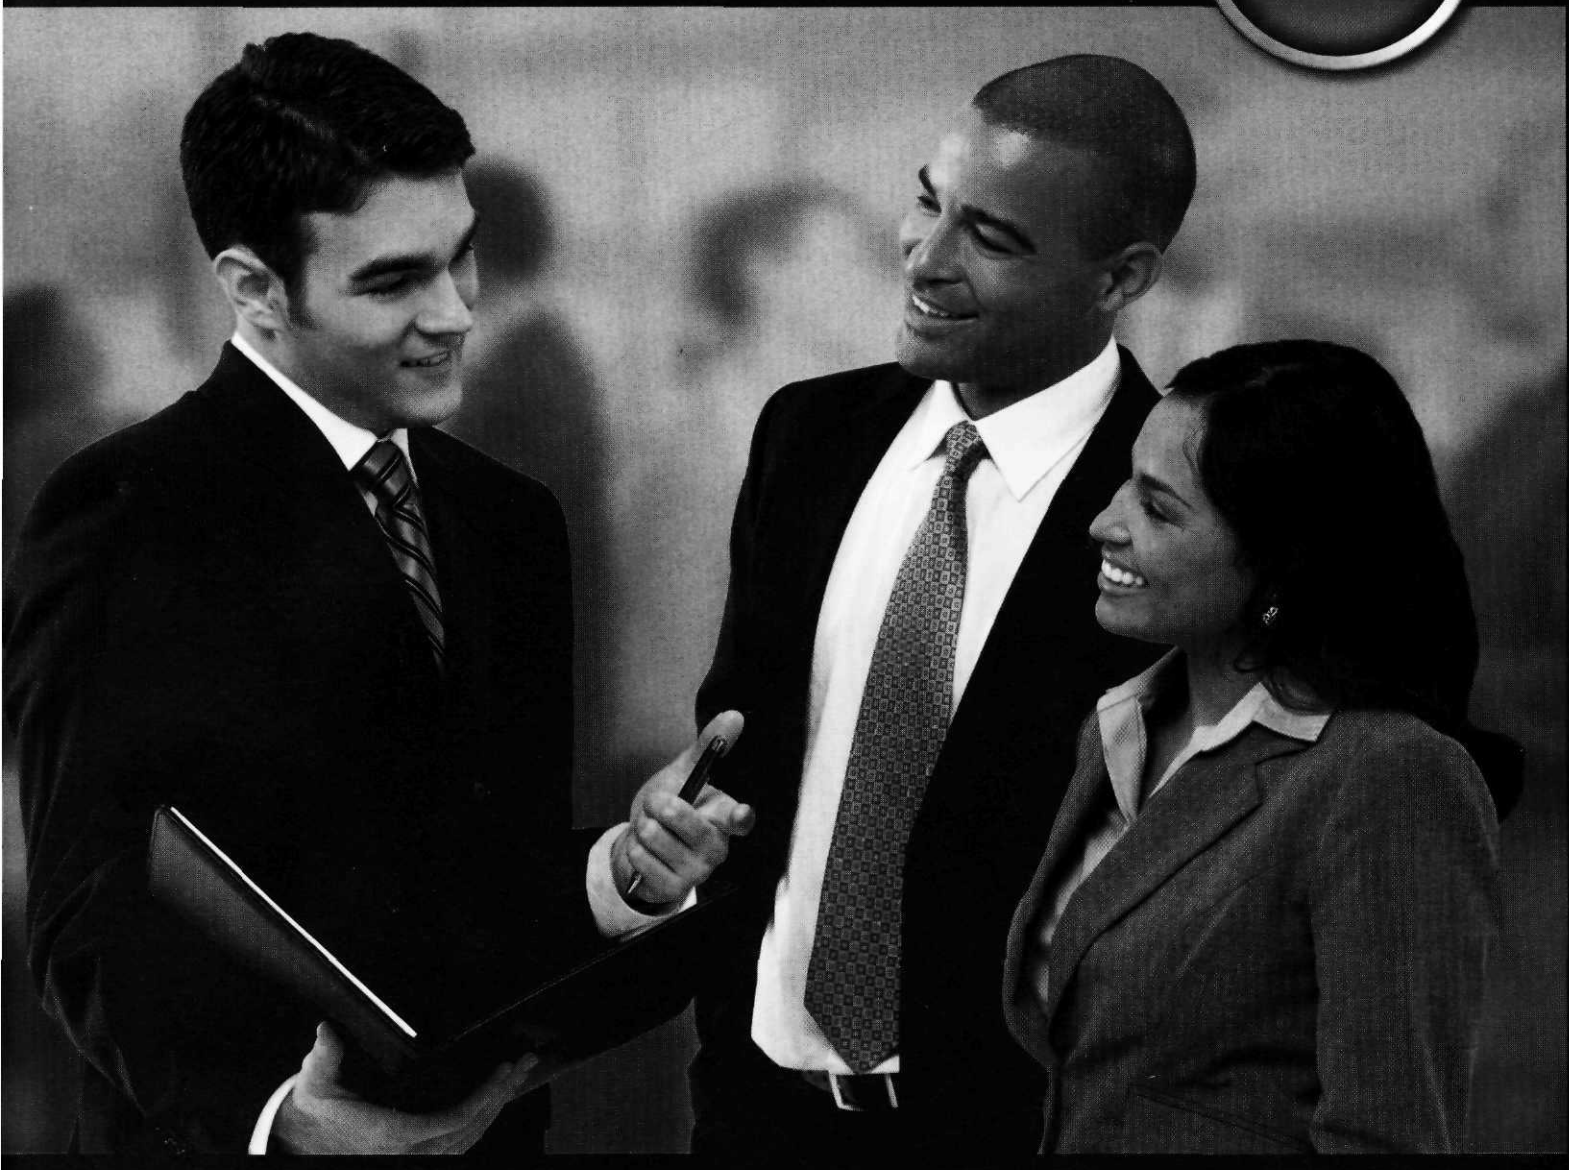

"I had been a volunteer assistant last year and knew Ann through that," Higier said. "When she took on the duties of head coach, she was nice enough to offer me the opportunity to be her assistant coach."

Walker entered the basketball court on Oct. 15 ready to hold her first practice in nearly seven years. While many coaches would begin questioning whether they still had their fire and their abilities to coach, Walker said she quickly felt right at home.

"After that first practice, I felt as though I hadn't missed a day," Walker said. "I have always had an extreme passion for coaching, and that has definitely been reignited. I had been here five years and gotten to know the student-athletes and the commitment that they make. I attended all of the women's basketball games, and I knew that coaching was something that I needed to do for the student-athletes. I can't begin to express how rewarding it has been to me."

Striking the balance of coaching, serving as an administrator, working on the national committee and helping a sick parent would be a task that would be practically overwhelming to almost anyone, but according to Walker's players, she has mastered that challenge.

"I have never heard her complain," Buckner said. "She is just always smiling. Coach has so much on her plate, especially with some personal things, and she is just such a fighter. She tells us to put the bad things behind us as they happen, and I have so much respect for that.

"I don't know how she balances it all, but she just makes it happen," Buckner continued. "It really is incredible."

Higier agrees, saying that Walker's ability to take one thing at a time without getting overwhelmed has made her the perfect fit for all of her various tasks, and has allowed her to excel at each of them.

"I'm not really sure how she does it, but she does it well," Higier said. "She's not really the type to get overwhelmed. She juggles things well. A lot of other people would have had a hard time, but she just keeps her head on her shoulders and takes things one step at a time."

Walker says her work environment and her co-workers have made the situation absolutely manageable.

"The NCAA talks a lot about life and balance, and I have been really blessed with having been thrown in this environment," Walker said. "There's a lot of late nights and early mornings, but it all comes down to this — I work with great people, and I love what I do. The players have responded very well, and I can't ask for much more."

Despite her busy schedule, Walker seemingly finds a way to make time for everyone.

"Even with everything that's on her plate, her office is always open," Buckner said. "If I feel like there is something I want to talk about or need to talk about, she is always there as a mentor. I have a lot of respect for her as a person."

If anything, the return to coaching served as an escape for Walker's mother, when battling through her illness.

"It has been a good distraction for her," Walker said. "My brother has been taking a computer over to my mother so she can watch the games online. My mom loves the fact that I'm doing this again. All she talks about is how the team is doing."

Prior to taking over at Nova Southeastern, Walker coached at Teikyo Marycrest University in Davenport, Iowa, for four seasons and was an assistant coach at Creighton for three years before becoming the head coach at Minnesota State University, Mankato from 1998-2005.

The teacher learns new lessons

Early in her coaching career, Walker was noted for being a disciplinarian, emphasizing a rock-solid work ethic. While she says that hard work is still a staple of her philosophy, she has approached her latest job with a different mindset.

"It was different going in because I've been out of coaching for seven years, and I didn't recruit any of these players," Walker said. "I was used to being in the administrative role and being a mentor for coaches instead of a mentor for student-athletes. I have been able to witness different coaching styles, how things work and how players respond.

"This year, I only ask a couple of things — that my players work very hard, they exude a love for what they do, and that they have fun. Off the court, the players and I are more like friends now — we have a mutual respect for one another."

Walker isn't the only one learning from the occurrence. Her players and her assistant coach say they have been transformed by their experience this season.

"What's so great about Ann is that she doesn't let obstacles get in the way of her vision and what she wants to accomplish," Higier said. "She doesn't dwell on that. Most importantly, she stays positive, and those are lessons that we can all take with us. I now know that if I want to go that route to be an AD and a coach, it is absolutely possible. It has been really important for me to see that first-hand."

Buckner said that working with Walker has taught her to push harder to achieve her goals.

"Everything's not going to go the way you want it to go, but you've got to make it work," Buckner said. "With her, we've found that we are capable of working a lot harder than we ever thought we could. She has shown us that there is always more in you than you think there is."

Always looking ahead

Walker's mother passed away the weekend of Feb. 4, as Walker was planning a trip home to visit her the following week. In her absence, Walker's team defeated St. Leo, 66-52, in a game dedicated to its head coach.

"Ann has needed to be a strong person for a lot of different people this season," Page said. "If it all does overwhelm her or faze her, you would never know. You never know when Ann is having a rough day. At the same time, she has known when it was time to do things for herself, with visiting or talking to her mom. There's a lot of merit to know that you can have success and not be involved with the sport 24/7. She has a very positive outlook, and it's a great thing for others to try to emulate."

Walker has spent the whole season proving there is more within her than most could ever tackle — and she encounters those obstacles with a smile.

"It's up to you what you do with what has been thrown at you," Walker said. "Every day is a new challenge, and you have to be in the now. I have a lot on my plate, but I think it's been a really wonderful opportunity. I love waking up every day and looking forward to what lies ahead."

2011 NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship

A win for the family

Bentley's Barbara Stevens is the fifth head coach in NCAA women's basketball history to 800 wins

By Scott Souza

They call it the family. It's the connection that binds three decades of Bentley University women's basketball players, and it's always there.

Sometimes, it brings former Falcons back together in the good times of a child's birth or wedding. Other times, it provides the support system to get through heartache and tragedy. But it's one thing Bentley players can count on long after their days of winning games with the NCAA Division II powerhouse are done.

It was a happy occasion that brought generations of Bentley players back to the Waltham, Massachusetts, campus on December 19, 2010. It was to celebrate the achievement of Barbara Stevens, who that day became the fifth coach in NCAA women's basketball history to win 800 games.

She was the second-fastest coach to reach the mark all-time, taking 1,036 games to do it. The Bridgewater State College (Massachusetts) alumna began her head coaching career at Division III Clark University in Worcester, Massachusetts, 35 years ago before moving to the University of Massachusetts for three seasons.

But it was at Bentley where she found a true home and built a dynasty. That's where she's earned more than 650 of her victories. That's where she'd earned 12 Northeast-10 coach of the year honors and 23 NCAA tournament berths entering this season.

That's where she formed the family. On this day, dozens of its members came home to pay homage to the coach who made them better players and better people.

"It's her demeanor, her patience, her demand for excellence," said 1998 Bentley graduate Stacey Connors, a Waltham native who went on to coach as an assistant under Kathy Delaney-Smith at Harvard University for 11 seasons. "It's interesting when you go into coaching because you see you can know all the X's and O's in the world, but if you don't have the consistency as a coach and person day-in and day-out you are not successful.

"She has always found a way to work harder than her opponent and bring all the personalities of a team together. Her players were always the best in their towns, best in their high schools, and she got them to buy into the team concept. That helped me as a coach and inspired me to get in the profession."

As Stevens was feted at a postgame banquet following Bentley's 93-60 victory against C.W. Post to clinch the 800th victory, her devotion to the team concept did not waver.

"This day belongs to the former players who worked their tails off just as hard as the current ones," Stevens said. "It's always been a group effort here. We've never built up individual accomplishments. Everything is the result of the team and the people you are with. Today is no different."

A tradition of excellence

The Southbridge, Massachusetts, native went 123-42 in six seasons at Clark (Massachusetts) after being promoted to head coach following one season as an assistant there. She then made the jump to Division I Massachusetts for three seasons, where she was 34-49 before moving to Bentley in 1986.

Nine times since then she's won more than 30 games in a season and entered this winter having coached 10 East region champions.

In 2006, she was elected to the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame in Knoxville, Tennessee.

"She's the hardest-working woman I've ever met," said 2007 Bentley graduate Lauren Moore, who recently completed her first year as an assistant coach at the University of New Haven. "Coaching is her passion. When we took the court, there wasn't anything we saw that surprised her, because she had done her homework."

Stevens' success has spawned the family atmosphere among her former players, as well as a coaching tree that extends throughout the East Coast. Moore said she came to Bentley as much to learn coaching from Stevens as she did to play for her. C. White came to Bentley from nearby Westwood High School in 1998 and never really left.

The 2001 graduate had opportunities to play overseas, or make good money right out of college with a degree from the renowned business school, but instead took a job as a volunteer assistant by Stevens' side.

After a year at Harvard, White returned to Bentley and has been there ever since. She now serves as Stevens' top assistant.

"It was because of her coaching that I not only wanted to get into coaching, but I volunteered here," White said. "Instead of doing all the things we dreamed about doing, I stayed on to coach with her just to give a little back after all she gave us."

"It was not my goal to coach. After playing four years for her, it became a passion. You realized this was awesome, what she gave us. Not just on the basketball court, but preparing us to be career women, and it was something I hoped and prayed one day I could do for another kid."

The big day

Stevens did her best to duck the attention of impending history early in the season and mastered the art of self-deprecation during many interviews leading up to the 800th triumph. She said she never wanted to minimize the accomplishment, but also wanted to keep the focus on her team and its rise back to the national rankings this winter after a comparably modest 19 wins the previous season.

But as she sat on No. 799, she sensed her players had become as wrapped up in the gravity of the next game as the school and local media. So she stopped in the middle of game-planning at a practice before the C.W. Post contest and addressed “the elephant in the room.”

“They wanted to win so badly,” Stevens said. “I just kept focusing on ‘Let’s keep doing what we’ve been doing. Let’s be the team we’ve been. We don’t have to do anything else.’ I tried to take the pressure off of them. But that’s hard to do when all this is surrounding them.”

“She’s very modest and humble,” four-year starting point guard Kim Brennan said. “She never lets anything like this get in the way of our team success. She never thinks about herself. She thinks about us first.”

Her players responded to the message, and did that Sunday afternoon at the school’s Dana Center what they did 12 times in a row at one point early in the year — they won. And they won convincingly. It allowed Stevens a few seconds before the final horn to reflect on the moment.

“When we’re forced to stop, and step back and look at it all,” she said, “you do say, ‘OK, that was fun. Those were fun years. Those were fun teams. Those were fun people.’ Thankfully, most of them are still in my life.”

Senior forward Elise Cairra had 20 points and nine rebounds to lead the Falcons that day before suffering a season-ending knee injury in a tournament in Manchester, New Hampshire, two weeks later. She immediately determined she would return to Stevens and the team as a graduate student to fulfill her fifth year of eligibility next winter.

“Overall, being part of it and having the alumni all here for her,” Cairra said after that game, “it was probably one of the best experiences of my life. I’m definitely going to remember this one forever.”

Living history

Stevens joked after the 800th victory that school administrators told her that her bonus kicks in at 900. While she wasn’t ready to look that far ahead that day, or even this season, she said she doesn’t plan to go anywhere anytime soon.

Over the years, she’s been courted for other jobs, tempted to maybe complete some unfinished business at a Division I school. But she said earlier this year that if she were going to leave Bentley for another coaching job she would have done it by now, and that Waltham was her home for as long as the school would have her.

“My heart bleeds Bentley blue,” she said when forced into making a speech at the December 19 postgame reception. “It always will.”

She said later in the season that one of the great things about the 800th victory was that it brought so many of her players — that Bentley family — back together. Teammates had always stayed close, but seeing generations of students mingling and sharing old war stories was most satisfying.

“The thing that continues to make me smile is that every now and then I’ll still be getting notes (of congratulations) from someone where it surprises me that they’d think to write,” she said. “A lot of times it’s been someone that I haven’t seen in a long time, and they thought to get back in touch because of this.”

In the process of reconnecting with their coach, many also reconnected with a program that enjoyed one of its best seasons in years. The Falcons spent most of the winter atop the Northeast-10 and East region rankings. They did so despite a slew of injuries that decimated what was once an 11-player rotation, on the strength of veteran backcourt starters Katherine Goodwin and Brennan, and outstanding contributions from freshman starting forwards Lauren Battista and Jacqui Brugliera.

More than a decade removed from a run of five straight 30-win seasons, Stevens and her staff have had to react to an increasingly competitive — and better-funded — Northeast-10 women’s basketball landscape top to bottom.

Stevens is presented with a gift after her 800th win.

Though her teams always remained in the upper tier of the league, this season’s squad reemerged as a national power.

“It’s back like the good old days, they say,” said Stevens of her former players’ take on this year’s squad. “That’s no disrespect to any of the teams that haven’t done this. We’ve been very competitive every year. But if we don’t win 20 games, they feel like they’re branded for life.”

“That’s not fair. But they feel like that because the standards are so high here. That’s what I try to tell the kids. All these alums are coming back to see this year’s edition and how you guys are holding up the tradition.”

This year’s Falcons noticed and did their best not to disappoint. Most of them came to Bentley because of Stevens’ reputation as a coach and a caring mentor. They were all anxious to help her clear win No. 800 and put her well on the path to 900 and beyond.

As the youngest members of the family, they couldn’t wait to take their seats at the table.

“It’s really cool,” Brugliera said. “You heard about the 800th win coming up. But until it happens, and you see the outpouring of all the people coming back, you didn’t realize what a big deal it really was and how many people she’s touched over the years.”

“It is like the Bentley family. It’s so cool seeing all these people and know you’re a part of it now. She coached all these people. She’s been so instrumental in all these people’s lives. It’s amazing to think about it.”

NCAA's elite elicit academic accolades

By Michelle Brutlag Hosick
Reprinted from Champion Magazine

Jessica Ubanyionwu is nothing like the caricature of a single-minded, focused-on-athletics Division I student-athlete. Invited to the Division I 2010 Indoor Track and Field Championships (where she placed 16th in the triple jump), Ubanyionwu views her athletics participation as simply a vehicle to get her where she really wants to go: medical school.

"I'm so into my academics, I try to deal with the fact that I'm in sports, too," said the Baylor student-athlete. "My academics are a big focus in my life. I'm not going to go pro in sports. Academics is my 'Plan A,' not sports."

Ubanyionwu's dedication to her schoolwork and talent in the triple jump combined to earn her one of the first NCAA Elite 88 Awards. Created to recognize student-athletes who reach the national championship in their sport while also achieving the highest academic standard among their peers, the awards honored 88 individuals — one at every NCAA championship — for the first time in 2009-10.

"These exceptional young men and women come from diverse backgrounds, but they all have one thing in common: a commitment to excellence in the classroom and in competition," said Joni Comstock, NCAA senior vice president for championships.

The Elite 88 Award program worked just as Erin O'Connell, athletics director at Seattle Pacific and a member of the committee that helped create the award, planned — especially since Seattle Pacific's Suzie Strickler won the award at the Division II Women's Cross Country Championships.

"She's a great depiction of somebody who should be winning the award," O'Connell said of Strickler. "She's a very intelligent, driven individual. It's prestigious for any institution and individual to win."

Strickler said her secret to being successful in academics and athletics is to enjoy what she's doing while she's doing it.

An exercise science major with a 4.0 grade-point average, Strickler isn't sure what she's going to do after graduation, though the medical field appeals to her.

Igor Martinez, a civil engineering major with a 4.0 GPA at Norwich, isn't sure what he's going to do when he graduates, either. Martinez won the Elite 88 Award at the Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

"I was more shocked than anything else," he said. "I didn't think it would be me."

Martinez's secret?

"You can always work hard and be serious," he said. "But you've got to take time to have fun with your teammates."

Getting to the championship was an enormous accomplishment, but sharing it with his teammates was what made it special.

The Elite 88 was a bonus, as it was for most of the recipients in the award's inaugural year who happen to be going pro in something other than sports.

WELCOME TO ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI

Where the West officially started getting Wild!

ST. JO CVB: 800-785-0360 | WWW.STJOSPORTS.COM

Located on the river bluffs of the vast "Mighty-MO", St. Joseph is an All-American city born of the fur trade, and brimming with a spirit of adventure as the starting place of the Pony Express. Named America's "Top Ten Western City" by True West Magazine in 2008, we're a city abounding in 19th century charm and timeless beauty, with all the elements you would expect in a modern city.

St. Joseph has a history spanning 175 years, and our 13 area museums include the Pony Express Museum, dedicated to the 1860 mail service, The Patee House Museum, a glorious hotel turned 19th century museum, and next door you'll find Jesse James Home, where Jesse was shot in the by Bob Ford in 1882. You can learn about the town's military history at the National Military Heritage Museum, and view extraordinary art at the Albrecht-Kemper Museum. The history of mental health treatment is at the Glore Psychiatric Museum, one of three museums on the grounds of the St. Joseph Museums complex.

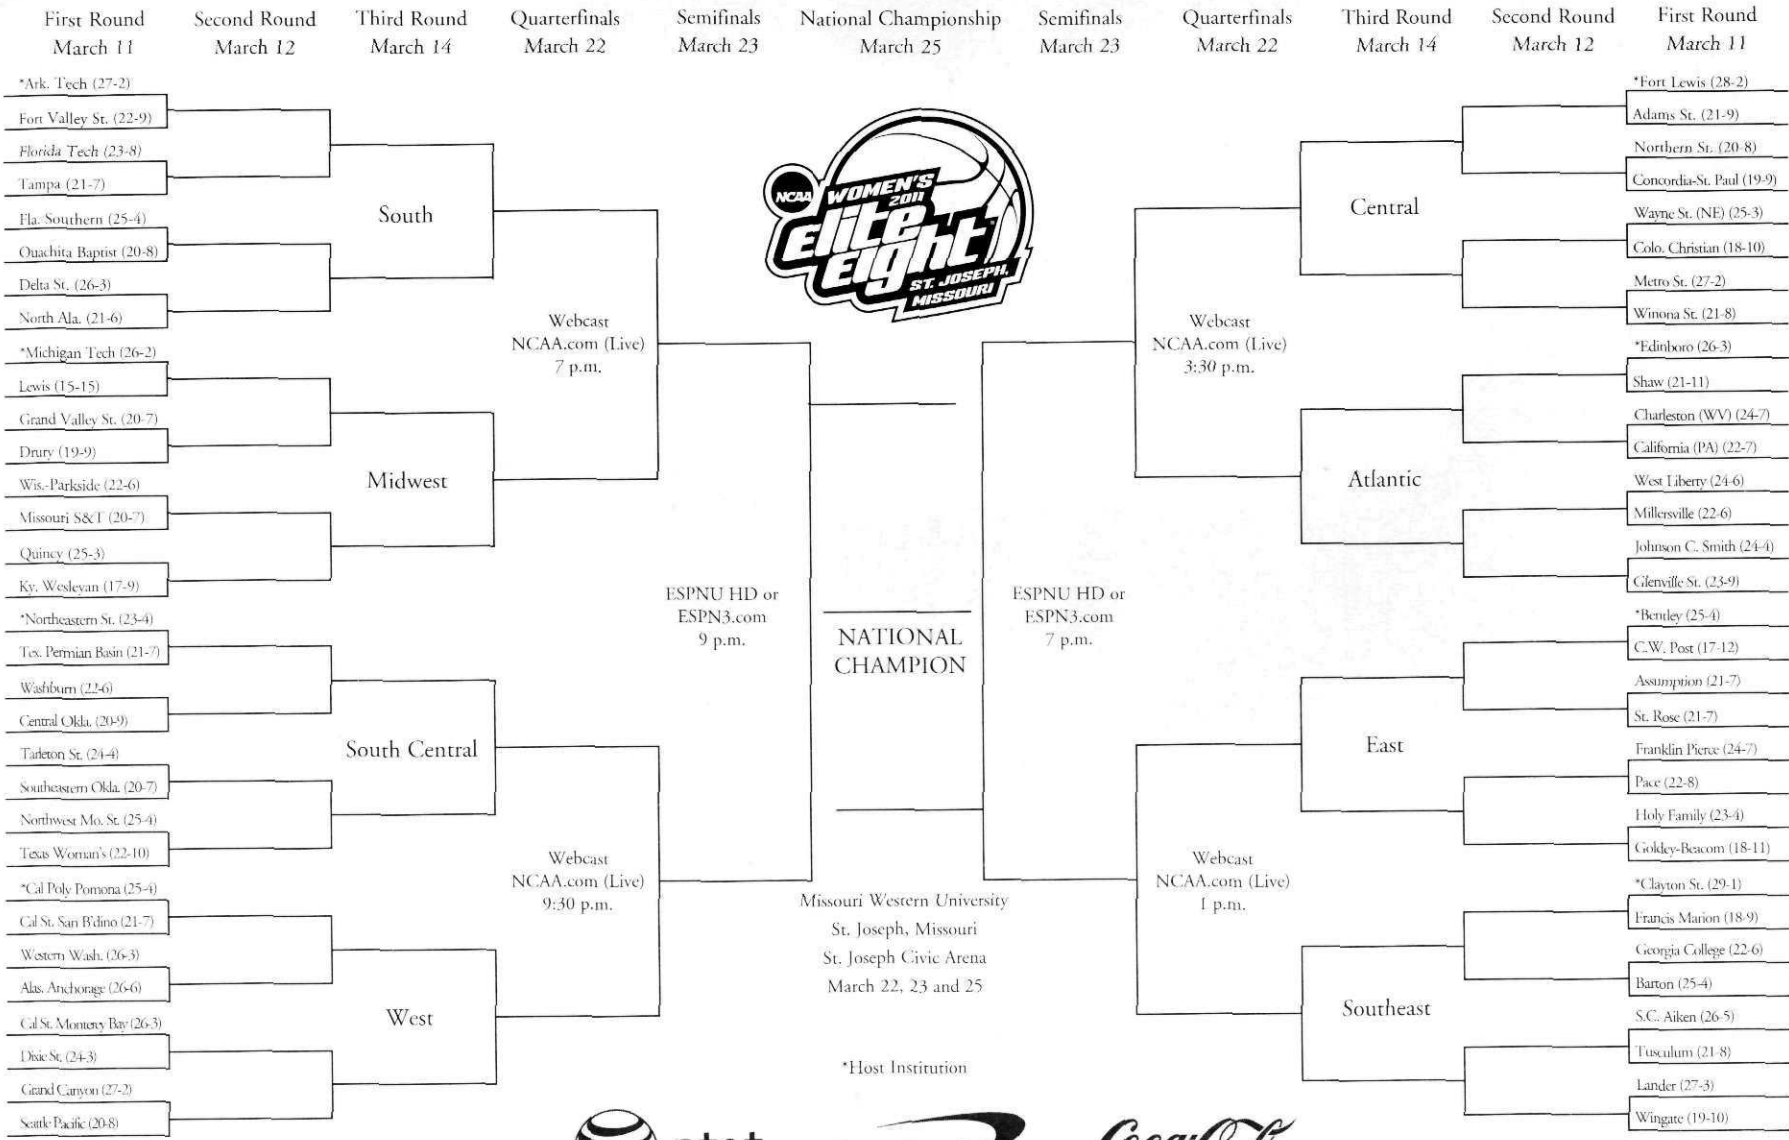

The Pony Express, which will be celebrating its sesquicentennial on April 3, 2010, has continued to fascinate Americans since Johnny Fry left St. Joseph April 3, 1860, heading west to Sacramento, CA. The Central Overland and California Pikes Peak Express Company carried letters and telegrams for 18 months, over 1,966 miles in 10-14 days. No event in American History has captured the imagination of young and old alike, and St. Joseph will re-capture that excitement with various events throughout the year in 2010.

In St. Joseph, you'll also find a rich cultural life of the community through the St. Joseph Symphony, Performing Arts Association, and Robidoux Resident Theater. Nightlife includes Broadway caliber performances at the historic Missouri Theatre and original comedic skits at the Robidoux Landing Playhouse. Exciting nightlife can be found Downtown at the Felix Street Experience, a series of pubs, bars and nightclubs that line beautiful Felix Street.

For more information about all there is to see and do check out www.stjomo.com, call 800-785-0360 or stop by the St. Joseph Visitors Bureau offices downtown at 109 S 4th Street or the Visitors Center at 502 N Woodbine for assistance.

Get to know NCAA President Mark Emmert

Mark A. Emmert

NCAA President Mark A. Emmert assumed his new duties October 1. Before that, he most recently served as the president of the University of Washington. A career educator, the NCAA's fifth chief executive said protecting the collegiate model of athletics in financially challenging times and making sure the NCAA is student-centered will be among his immediate areas of focus. He also plans to rely heavily on campus presidential leadership to help him achieve his goals.

Q. As the NCAA's new president, what are your priorities for the organization?

A. Collegiate athletics must remain an integral part of higher education. We shouldn't talk about athletics and academics as separate entities but rather as part of the whole academic experience. This means focusing on the holistic development of our student-athletes and making their well-being a top priority. From a revenue perspective, we need to find the right balance of generating the necessary dollars and being diligent about the role commercialism plays. We also must make sure we spend the dollars for the benefit of the student-athlete. Finally, we have to reinforce that fairness and integrity form the bedrock of the enterprise.

Q. How are student-athletes doing in the classroom?

A. First, let me say everything we do in intercollegiate athletics must be driven by an overriding commitment to the academic success of our student-athletes. In the end, everyone wins if we educate student-athletes to the point that they are successful in life. With that, I am happy to report student-athletes do an outstanding job in the classroom. For example, the 2010 Division I multiyear Academic Performance Rate of 967 is three points higher than the 2009 figures. Statistically, that is an amazing jump and took a lot of hard work by everyone involved, especially our student-athletes. It proves how seriously our members take their commitment to academics. And it is a tribute to my predecessor, Myles Brand, who did so much to change the culture surrounding the educational aspects of college sports.

Q. Can you elaborate a little more on the concept of student-athlete well-being?

A. Student-athlete well-being is at the core of our mission. We are charged to ensure intercollegiate athletics is conducted in ways that protect and enhance the physical, educational and social characteristics of our student-athletes. We need to develop student-athletes for success. We do that by helping them earn a worthwhile education, compete safely, and grow holistically while on campus.

Q. What are your thoughts on the rising costs of college sports and the role of commercialism?

A. College sports cannot operate without commercial support. The NCAA has 25 years of data proving athletics self-sustainability is virtually impossible for the vast majority of its schools. In fact, only about a dozen or so Division I athletics programs are self-sustaining. The truth is it is a good thing to have more resources, if you are using them correctly. Most athletics business plans closely mirror the business model of the university. Every university seeks to maximize revenue before redistributing it to support its educational mission. Putting it all together, we have multiple challenges. First, we have to make sure enough is generated. Next, we have to make sure it is used to complement the overall educational mission of intercollegiate athletics. Finally, we need to be mindful of the impact that revenue generation can have on competitive equity.

Q. What does the NCAA do with the money it generates?

A. Approximately 96 percent of our generated revenue supports student-athletes through distributions, programs or championships. Since signing our new media rights contract with Turner Broadcasting and CBS, we have established a committee to review the current model and make recommended changes.

MEET MARK EMMERT

Dr. Mark A. Emmert became the NCAA's fifth CEO when he took office on October 1, 2010. Mark and his wife of more than 30 years, DeLaine, were high school sweethearts. DeLaine is a former public school teacher and is now an active community leader. They have two grown children, Steve and Jennifer.

Division II

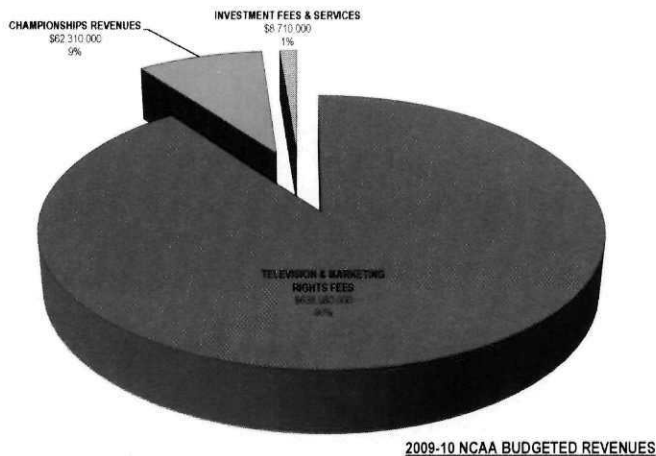

OVERVIEW OF BUDGET AND FINANCES

In April 2010, the Association announced a new long-term media contract with CBS Sports and Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., worth more than $10.8 billion to present the Division I Men's Basketball Championship beginning in 2011 and continuing through 2024. About 96 percent of Association revenue – including money from the contract – returns to the membership in the form of direct distributions and services for the membership. Each year, Division II receives 4.37 percent of all NCAA revenue, as guaranteed by the NCAA constitution. Along with the increase in NCAA operating revenue, the CBS/Turner agreement means Division II now can project its operating revenue through the 2023-24 academic year. The Division II Planning and Finance Committee works to ensure that Division II expenditures help to support the Division II Strategic Plan. The Division II enhancement fund and the conference grant program primarily support strategic initiatives outlined in the Division II Strategic Plan. (Note: The NCAA operates on a two-year budget.)

Division II

CONFERENCE GRANT PROGRAM

Division II reserves a portion of its annual budget to support a conference grant program aimed at encouraging national and conference strategic-planning efforts. Each conference is allotted a base amount of $85,000 for its first five members. A $12,000 premium is paid for a sixth member, with an additional $4,000 premium paid for members up to 18. At least 10 percent of the grant must be directed at each of the five Division II strategic positioning outcome areas (50 percent total)

- Academics and life skills
- Athletics operations and compliance
- Game day and conference and national championships
- Membership and positioning initiatives
- Diversity and inclusion

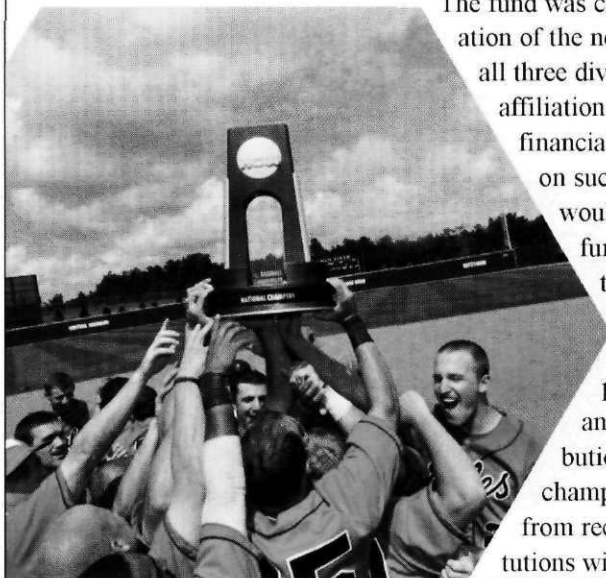

The remaining 50 percent may be spent in any of the five areas, as determined by the needs of the conference. Each year, member conferences are required to assess and rank their success and achievement in each of the five outcome areas. They may not use funds to assist with capital improvements, to increase countable grants-in-aid for member schools, to provide for an administrative fee or to supplement funds for the Division II Strategic Alliance Matching Grant Program.

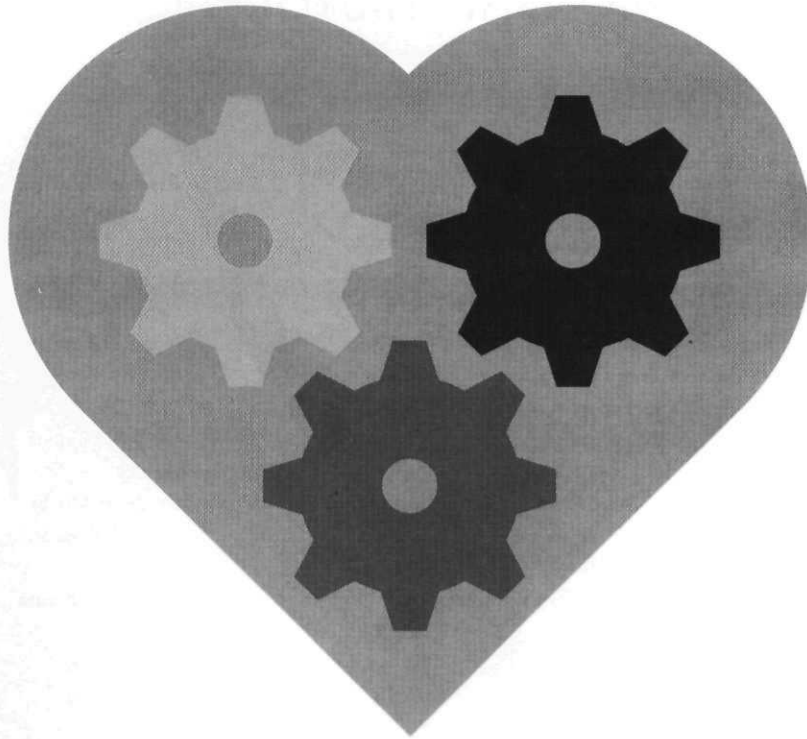

CHAMPIONSHIP EXPENSES

Spending on Division II Championships represents the largest line item in the overall Division II budget, reflecting the importance that the division places on providing the most high-quality championships experience. The NCAA Division II budget guidelines state that an institution's expenses for participating in championship rounds in an NCAA Division II championship will be adequately covered and that consistent transportation and per diem guidelines be maintained for all Division II championships. Currently, Division II provides $85.00 per diem to the official traveling party. The Championships Committee shall determine and announce to the membership the percentage of transportation expense and the per diem allowance to be paid in each championship for the next academic year.

ENHANCEMENT FUND

The fund was created by the NCAA Executive Committee in the late 1980s following negotiation of the new CBS media agreement. It was approved and implemented by leadership in all three divisions as a financial incentive for schools to maintain Division II membership affiliation. The original $3,000,000 fund was aligned with already existing Division I financial distributions, where money would go to Division II conference offices based on success in the Division II men's basketball tournament, and an equal distribution would be sent to each active Division II member. The Division II enhancement fund has steadily increased to its current amount of $5,100,000. In August 2010, the Presidents Council endorsed the decision of the Division II Planning and Finance Committee, which voted to approve a change in the enhancement fund allocation, effective May 2012. The new allocation will provide 75 percent to conference offices based on sports sponsorship and 25 percent via an equal distribution to Division II active member institutions. The new distribution model eliminates the performance in the men's and women's basketball championship as a part of the distribution and precludes independent institutions from receiving a distribution related to sports sponsorship (independent member institutions will only receive the equal distribution).

We love basketball. The 2-3 zone. The pick-and-roll. The clutch three. We especially love the fast break. Five perfectly choreographed pieces moving at high speed in full control — all to score the easy basket. That's logistics.

MISSOURI WESTERN STATE UNIVERSITY

Host of the 2011 NCAA Division II Women's Elite Eight

Missouri Western State University is a learning community focused on students as individuals and as members of society. The institution offers students at all stages of life the opportunity to achieve excellence in the classroom and beyond, as they prepare to be leaders in their work and in their communities.

Missouri Western demonstrates a strong commitment to the educational, economic, cultural and social development of the people it serves. The university sets the standard for excellence in student development and community leadership.

Founded as St. Joseph Junior College in 1915, Missouri Western transformed into a four-year institution in 1969 and became a full member of the state of Missouri system in 1977. It was designated a university in 2005. Enrollment is approximately 6,100, with more than 190 faculty members.

The student-centered, high-quality instruction focuses on experience-based learning and community service. Every classroom and public meeting room on campus is equipped with presentation technology.

The university provides a blend of traditional liberal arts and career-oriented degree programs, offering one-year certificates, two-year associate degrees, preprofessional transfer programs and four-year baccalaureate degrees and professional master's degrees.

Missouri Western's college of professional studies, college of liberal arts and sciences and Craig School of Business offer baccalaureate degrees in the fields of art, biology, business, chemistry, communication, computer science, criminal justice, economics, education, engineering technology, English, French, government, history, interdisciplinary studies, mathematics, music, nursing, philosophy, physical education, psychology, recreation, social work and Spanish, as well as master of applied science and master of applied arts degrees.

The Missouri Western Institute offers business training, applied research support and lifelong learning opportunities for the region. In addition, groups throughout the nation utilize Missouri Western's facilities for conferences and seminars.

The institution is accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Institutions of Higher Education. Program accreditations include the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology, American Bar Association, American Chemical Society, American Health Information Management Association, Commission on Accreditation in Physical Therapy Education, Commission on Missouri Western State was founded in 1915 as St. Joseph Junior College.

Collegiate Nursing Education, Council on Social Work Education, National Accrediting Agency for Clinical Laboratory Science, National Association of Schools of Music and National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

The campus, comprising more than 700 acres, contains six residence halls, a residential commons building and 12 major campus buildings, including eight academic buildings, a student union, a fitness center, a conference center and a learning resource center. The campus has a large nature study area, a nature trail and nine ponds.

Missouri Western Points of Pride

- A new Spring Sports Complex will open on campus in the spring of 2011. The complex includes baseball and softball fields, state-of-the-art dugouts, chairback stadium seats and press boxes.
- Missouri Western is the new home of the Kansas City Chiefs summer training camp. The campus now boasts a 118,000-square-foot sports complex that includes a full-size indoor football field.
- In 2010, Missouri Western purchased 13 new pianos and was designated an All-Steinway School, joining approximately 120 institutions worldwide. Additionally, the music department contains an all-new music technology lab.
- The Craig School of Business achieved accreditation from the prestigious Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business International in 2010. Fewer than five percent of schools of business worldwide earn this accreditation.

- Remington Hall, an approximately 60,000-square-foot addition to Agenstein Hall, was completed in December 2009. Agenstein Hall was completely renovated and opened in December 2010. The complex houses science, computer science and mathematics departments.
- Missouri Western offers opportunities for applied learning not always found in other colleges and universities. Missouri Western graduates participate in applied learning opportunities through internships, practicums, research projects, or study away.
- The Missouri Western Institute serves as an invaluable resource for the country, coordinating the continuing education programs and conference and meeting facilities. Last year, the Institute hosted 23,000 visitors across the community for conferences, workshops and seminars.
- Last year, more than 7,200 elementary and secondary students participated in camps, workshops and competitions on campus, and 772 area high school students enrolled in dual-credit courses.
- According to a recent economic impact report conducted by Missouri Western, the university has a financial impact of $183.5 million on the region. Missouri Western's economic impact increased $22.6 million since the last study in 2005.

ST. JOSEPH CIVIC ARENA

Host venue of the 2011 NCAA Division II Women's Elite Eight

The St. Joseph Civic Arena also hosted the NCAA Women's Elite Eight in 2003, 2004 and 2010.

St. Joseph Civic Arena is proud to be the host venue of the 2011 NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship. This is the fourth NCAA Women's Elite Eight hosted at Civic Arena, as the 2003, 2004 and 2010 championships also were contested at the venue.

Since opening its doors in 1981, Civic Arena has hosted events of all types. In addition to the Elite Eight, sporting events include the Missouri State High School Activities Association Basketball sectionals and quarterfinals, professional basketball, arena football, hundreds of professional boxing and wrestling matches and Olympic weightlifting trials.

The arena also has hosted numerous concerts, trade shows, meetings and other large gathering events that have called St. Joseph home over the past 30 years.

The dynamic, versatile design of the Civic Arena includes flexible seating capabilities that enable the arena to accommodate any type of event. Seating for up to 4,200 or as much as 19,000 square feet of unobstructed exhibit space or performing surface along with seating for 2,300, superb acoustics and lighting, plus a clear view of activities from all locations are offered.

Modular walls within the meeting room complex allow arrangements for groups of 25 or as large as 300. These spacious rooms are ideal for seminars, banquets, private meetings and receptions. Access to the building is excellent for exhibitors, performers and audiences.

The arena underwent a $500,000 renovation project in the summer of 2009. The project included a new sound system, locker room upgrades, painting, a newly refinished basketball court, seating improvements and a makeover of the office portion of the building.

Civic Arena is located near the Missouri River in downtown St. Joseph and is located within a network of major interstate thoroughfares and highways and is just minutes from Kansas City International Airport via Interstate 29, one hour from greater Kansas City, and only two hours from Omaha.
