MISTER ROGERS TO RECEIVE HONORARY DEGREE AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY COMMENCEMENT

Fred Rogers, the creator, writer and host of Mister Rogers' Neighborhood on PBS, will receive an honorary doctorate at commencement ceremonies at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania on Saturday, May 9. For the past 30 years, Rogers has been bringing his 30-minute "visits" to children of all ages from his studio at Family Communications, Inc., located in the Oakland section of Pittsburgh.

Earlier this year, Pittsburgh magazine named Rogers "Pittsburgher of the Year," citing him for his program which is still seen regularly by millions of people: "It is a favorite now of three generations, with parents, even grandparents, humming along with its trademark song 'It's a Beautiful Day in the Neighborhood.'

"In a career spanning five decades, Fred Rogers has taught and unleashed the imaginations of his country's youth by bringing them to the safe haven that is his neighborhood... To Fred Rogers, every person is special. No matter who you are, there is something that you have to offer to the world. It's a message he received in his youth and that is at the basis of everything he has worked a lifetime to achieve."

Within the past year TV Guide named him one of television's 50 all-time most important persons, and the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences presented Rogers with a Lifetime Achievement Award at the Daytime Emmys, which was held at Radio City Music Hall.

The 70-year-old Rogers was born in Latrobe, Pa. As a child, his somewhat over-protective mother seldom let him play outside. His world became his room where he played with puppets and created music – two things he is still doing decades later.

After graduating from Latrobe High School, Rogers attended Dartmouth College two years before going to Rollins College in Florida where he graduated in 1951 with a degree in music composition. His intention was to enter the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary until he saw his first television. He decided his religious career would have to wait – instead he answered the call of television.

He went to New York and landed a job with NBC where he worked on The Voice of Firestone, the Lucky Strike Hit Parade, The Kate Smith Hour, and the NBC Opera Theatre. A year later he married Joanne Byrd, a talented concert pianist and fellow Rollins graduate. In 1953 he returned to Pittsburgh at the request of WQED to work as producer, musician and puppeteer with host Josie Carey on a live daily program called The Children's Corner.

He eventually enrolled in the seminary and was ordained a Presbyterian minister in 1962. He studied child development at the University of Pittsburgh, then went to Toronto for one year where he created a 15-minute children's series called Misterogers for the CBC. He returned to Pittsburgh and WQED in 1966 to develop Mister Rogers' Neighborhood. In February of 1968, his show aired nationally on PBS and is the longest-running program on the network.

Rogers has received virtually every major award in television, and dozens of others from special-interest groups in education, communications and early childhood. He has two George Foster Peabody Awards and a lifetime achievement award from the TV Critics Association. One of his famous cardigan sweaters is on display in the Smithsonian and in 1994 the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania bestowed on him its History Maker Award.

A member of the State System of Higher Education, Edinboro University will award the honorary degree Doctor of Public Service to Mr. Rogers in recognition of his pioneering efforts to create television programming that addresses the concerns of early childhood through the eyes of the children themselves; for his focus on family and human relationships which nourish the healthy emotional growth of children; for his contributions over more than 40 years to the theory and practice of child development which have had positive and profound effects on three generations of American children and their parents; for his legacy of self-affirmation and individual worth; and for the hundreds of visits he has made to our neighborhoods.

Fred and Joanne have two sons – John, 35, and James, 38 – and two grandchildren.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

TIM FLYNN NAMED HEAD WRESTLING COACH AT EDINBORO

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania President Dr. Frank G. Pogue today announced the appointment of Tim Flynn to the permanent post of head wrestling coach. Flynn has been acting head coach since last August when Pogue appointed former head coach Bruce Baumgartner acting athletic director. Pogue made Baumgartner the University's permanent athletic director in February.

"Tim is an excellent role model for our student-athletes. He has a sincere commitment to the caring, learning community that we have created at Edinboro University," said Pogue.

Flynn served as an assistant coach under Baumgartner for five years before acting in the head coach role. In his first year at the helm, Flynn led Edinboro to the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference tournament championship and the program's first Eastern Wrestling League tournament title. The Fighting Scots qualified a school-record nine wrestlers to the NCAA Division I National Championships, where Edinboro placed 15th in the final team standings.

During Flynn's tenure at the Boro, the Scots have enjoyed some of the finest mat seasons in school history, including last year's perfect 14-0 dual meet campaign and sixth-place finish at the NCAA Division I national tournament. Edinboro also compiled a 15-2 dual mark in 1993-94, and a 16-2 overall record in 1994-95, winning the EWL dual meet title all three years. The Scots are 63-28 overall in dual matches since Flynn joined the Boro program as an assistant coach prior to the start of the 1992-93 season.

"I'm very honored to be appointed head coach, and really looking forward to building upon the great tradition we have established here at Edinboro," said Flynn. "Our goal is to recruit quality student-athletes who are committed to working hard to get the best possible education and hopefully challenge for national titles."

"Tim has played a major role in the success of our program during the last six years, first as an assistant, then this past year as our head coach," said Baumgartner. "He is a very hard worker, a person of outstanding character who is well-respected by our student-athletes and his peers. He is very much a hands-on coach and we are fortunate to have him running our program."

Prior to joining the Boro staff, Flynn served as an assistant coach at his alma mater, Pennsylvania State University, for three years. He earned a bachelor of science degree in business management from Penn State in 1987, and a master's in business administration with a concentration in finance in 1990.

During Flynn's collegiate years with the Nittany Lions, he captained the 1986-87 wrestling squad and earned All-American honors at 134 pounds. He was a two-time Eastern Wrestling League champion, winning the 126-pound title in 1986 and the 134-pound championship in 1987. He ranks ninth on Penn State's all-time win list with 105 career victories. Flynn is a four-time Midlands Championships placewinner, a two-time Mat Town USA champion, and was an Espoir National freestyle runner-up in 1984.

Flynn is the son of Joe and Lois Flynn, who reside in Annapolis, Maryland. Tim and his wife, Tanya, have a son, Logan Lee, who was born in October.

SOUTH AFRICAN POET DENNIS BRUTUS AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY

Dennis Brutus, a South African poet and former political prisoner under apartheid, will appear at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania on Wednesday, April 8 to conduct a poetry reading and lecture on South Africa.

Born in Rhodesia in 1924, Brutus spent a year and a half in prison for his protests against racial discrimination. He lived in England after leaving South Africa in 1966 and has taught at the University of Denver and Northwestern University.

He has been hailed as the "singing voice of the South African Liberation Movement." He speaks with experience, heart and authority about inhumanity while still showing how the spirit can soar and sing. Drawing from his own life, Brutus' poems take the audience from the rigors of apartheid to the bestiality of imprisonment and from the desolation of exile to those moments of recognition and acknowledgment that made the struggle worthwhile.

Brutus has published 12 books of poetry and is the recipient of the Langston Hughes Award for Poetry and the Paul Robeson Award for Artistic Integrity.

The lecture on South Africa will take place at 2 p.m., followed by the poetry reading at 4 p.m. in the University Center multipurpose room.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY WOMEN ATTEND CONFERENCE IN CUBA

What do soap operas, modern-day Cuba, and Edinboro University of Pennsylvania have in common? The answer is Edinboro history professor Dr. Jerra Jenrette, art professor Suzanne Winterberger, and alumnus Sherri McIntosh who is a graduate student in history and women's studies at West Virginia University. They attended the Second International Women's Studies Conference at the University of Havana where they presented a paper on the depiction of Hispanic women in American soap operas. "Carlotta: Changing Images of Hispanic-American Women on U.S. Daytime Soap Operas," examined the role of a long-running character on ABC's One Life to Live.

Jenrette, who teaches Latin American history at Edinboro, said the three decided on a soap opera topic because it was something all of them had grown up with, and soap operas are very popular in Latin America.

Their presentation was more than just a nostalgic look at a favorite soap opera. It was an insightful report on how minority women have been portrayed on major television networks. "The thing we found interesting in our research," said McIntosh, "which we relayed to the conference, was the marginalization of Hispanic-American women in U.S. daytime soaps. There are Hispanic U.S.-based soaps that deal only with Latin-American women, but we were focusing on major networks and how they marginalized Latin-American women."

The topic was a big hit with women and men attending the conference as it attracted one of the largest audiences of any of the presentations. "We had a good time with it," said Winterberger. "It was a nice way to talk about a serious subject in a light-hearted manner."

The conference came just before the Pope's historic visit to Cuba, and the three Americans were able to observe not only the daily life of the Cuban people, but also the forces of change already at work on the island nation. They were also aware of American media coverage which they felt was not always accurate and sometimes heavily filtered.

"Some of the preliminary media reports I found disturbing at times," said McIntosh. "One of the opportunities for Cuban women is in-home restaurants called 'paladares,' which seat no more than 12 and are sanctioned by the government. It's a $5 fare, and it gave us the best food we had in Cuba. Over 90 percent are owned by women, many of whom have had a career and are retired. They have a lot of freedom with the restaurants and their whole family works with them. But they work exhausting 16-hour days. That was one of the concerns of the women at the conference. I was really excited that Martha Stewart had done a story on a paladar until I realized the one she reported on was run by a man."

Women have made strides in other ways in Cuba. Jenrette reported that 70 percent of the country's professional/technical positions, which includes doctors and scientists, are held by women. Many of them have been trained in Russia as well as in Cuba. The emphasis on health care by the Cuban government is reflected in the mandatory distribution of physicians. "For every 100 families," said McIntosh, "it is required there be a doctor within that block. Each apartment complex has a doctor within it, and there is a clinic in each community."

The Edinboro group also reported that in the wake of the Chernobyl disaster, Cuba treated more than 40,000 Ukrainian children who were victims of the fallout. Many of them were treated in Cuba for six months before being flown back to Ukraine.

With the end of Moscow's support for the Castro government, the country has turned to more market-oriented enterprises, most noticeably tourism. While the U.S. embargo remains intact, most of the tourists are European. That has been a mixed blessing for the Cuban people as it has brought with it much-needed hard currency, but also prostitution, especially among very young women. Cuban scholars worry that the strides women have made since the revolution will be threatened. Prior to the revolution, crime and vices were rampant.

The Edinboro women got a first-hand look at this underside of the Cuban economy when they visited a beach near Havana. "We saw 12- and 13-year old girls with male tourists, primarily from Europe," said McIntosh. "There were 50 to 100 girls and the rest were men. We were the only adult women on the beach. These girls are not prostitutes but 'jineteras' or jockeys - as in striving to get ahead. In their minds what they are doing is not considered prostitution. They are not necessarily performing sexual favors. Sometimes they are more like companions, accompanying the men to discos and parading, scantily clad, with them on the beaches. They are not permitted into the men's hotel rooms. The girls claim they do it to get 'things' rather than cash. They want nice dinners, nice clothing and to go to discos they couldn't otherwise frequent."

In part, the Cubans blame this desire for material goods on American culture, which they refer to as a "to have society." They think this materialism is what is calling the young women. But these girls pay a high social cost for their activity. If they are at the beach then they are not at school which is looked down upon, especially in Cuban society where education is so important. They are even ostracized by their families and community.

"If there were a community social gathering," said McIntosh, "they would be ostracized from it because of the unpopular choices they have made."

Despite the hardships of the Cuban economy, the Edinboro group was impressed by the resilience of the people. "The Cuban people are not depressed," said Winterberger. "This is a people whose spirit has overwhelmed everything. The communal spirit – the belief that they are all in it together – is pervasive. People are making sacrifices, having fewer material goods, so that other people can have more. There is that spirit of togetherness, that 'we are all in it together.' Nothing, not the collapse of the Soviet Union or the hardships imposed by the 35-year U.S. embargo, can take that spirit away."

Professor Heasley is known by his students and colleagues as a dedicated, student-centered professional. He and his wife, Patricia, a 1962 Edinboro graduate and a member of the University's Council of Trustees, are the parents of two children, Richard II and Andrea Loeffler, both Edinboro graduates.

Serving as featured speaker and receiving an honorary doctorate will be Fred Rogers, the creator, writer, and host of Mister Rogers' Neighborhood on PBS. The 70-year old Rogers was born in Latrobe, Pa. After graduating from high school there, he attended Dartmouth College two years before going to Rollins College in Florida where he graduated in 1951 with a degree in music composition.

He went to New York and landed a job with NBC, and a year later he married Joanne Byrd, a talented concert pianist and fellow Rollins graduate. In 1953 he returned to Pittsburgh at the request of WQED to work as producer, musician and puppeteer. In February of 1968, Mister Rogers' Neighborhood aired nationally on PBS and is now the longest-running program on the network.

Rogers has received virtually every major award in television and dozens of others from special-interest groups in education, communications and early childhood.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO CELEBRATES MATH IMAGINATION DAY

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will help celebrate Math Imagination Day on Thursday, April 30, from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Miller School gym. Students from the Miller School will be joined by students from Cambridge Springs Elementary School in what is called the world's largest math event.

The hands-on program will be staged by 85 students from math methods classes in Edinboro's elementary education department. A variety of teaching/learning materials, math learning centers and ideas for the K-5 math curriculum will be displayed.

Edinboro faculty members Dr. Mary Jo Melvin and Dr. Kathy Dailey said the experience provides the University students with the opportunity to share with elementary children a variety of teaching aids and math manipulatives they created in their courses. It will also encourage the elementary children to have fun with math with the materials and provide valuable feedback to the Edinboro students.

For more information, contact Mary Jo Melvin in the elementary education department at 732-2750.

NEWS ADVISORY:

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will hold its Spring Convocation on Thursday, April 30, at 8 a.m. in Memorial Auditorium. The University-wide event, which is open to the public, will review the University's progress since the Fall Convocation.

Edinboro President Dr. Frank G. Pogue will address the University's success in meeting its priorities and will honor faculty and staff members who are retiring this year, as well as more than 70 others who are being recognized for 10 to 35 years of service. For the first time, Edinboro will name an Educator of the Year and a Staff Member of the Year.

President Pogue views the Spring Convocation as an integral part of the cyclical budget, planning and continuous improvement process as it allows for employee recognition while providing the community with a status report.

Following the Convocation, the community will gather at the Diebold Center for the Performing Arts for an Employee Recognition Reception which will feature a display of faculty and staff accomplishments.
