EDINBORO UNIVERSITY AWARDS SCHOLARSHIP TO TOP HIGH SCHOOL SENIOR

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania has awarded an Alumni Association Admissions Grant scholarship to Karen Pekelnicky of McKean. Based on high school curriculum, grades, overall grade point average, class rank, college board scores, extra-curricular activities, and leadership qualities, the annual scholarship is renewable for up to four years.

Pekelnicky, a graduate of General McLane High School, is the daughter of Stanley and Rosemary Pekelnicky. An elementary education major at Edinboro, she participated in National Honor Society, Future Business Leaders of America, and Youth and Government Students for Academic Excellence in high school.

The scholarship program was created by Edinboro University's Alumni Association Board of Directors as part of a three-year plan to augment the student scholarship program. Funded with alumni gifts, the program is designed to attract the brightest high school students. Recipients must maintain a minimum 3.0 grade point average while enrolled at Edinboro to be eligible to have their scholarship renewed each year.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

CAMPUS BUILDING AT EDINBORO TO BE NAMED FOR DIEBOLD

The third oldest building still standing on the Edinboro University of Pennsylvania campus, known since 1987 as the Center for the Performing Arts and to generations of Edinboro alumni as the Old College Union, will be rededicated as the Diebold Center for the Performing Arts in a special ceremony and community reception, 4:00 to 5:30 p.m., Friday, June 14.

The rededication, hosted by the Edinboro University Council of Trustees in cooperation with the Edinboro University Alumni Association, honors outgoing University President Foster F. Diebold, who retires from office on June 30 after 17 years as Edinboro president.

Built in 1906 at a cost of $16,980, the building initially served as the second gymnasium for the Edinboro State Normal School, and until construction of Crawford Gymnasium in 1940, it was the sole gymnasium facility serving the campus.

During World War II, the building served as a barracks for marshalling troops, and in the years immediately after the war, a temporary quartering facility for returning servicemen. During the post-war enrollment boom, it was a dormitory and office complex.

From 1952 to 1971, it was designated as the Student Union, and is still known to thousands of Edinboro alumni as the "Old Union," the "Old College Union" or similar variations. By 1971, the building was the home of the College Union Theatre until it was closed for repairs in 1982.

In 1985, Diebold began a $3.6 million, joint state-private fund-raising campaign to restore the Old Union and the adjacent Reeder Hall facility which was built in 1908 and in such a state of disrepair that it was scheduled to be razed.

Diebold's fund-raising efforts spared both buildings from destruction. While the Commonwealth committed $2.1 million to the restoration project, he personally raised the needed $1.5 million from private sources to undertake the effort.

Renovations to the Old Union were completed in 1986 and the Center for the Performing Arts dedicated at an October 1987 reception for University employees who donated to the campaign.

Since its formal opening in the spring of 1988, the Center has added an enhanced cultural, social and community service dimension to the campus. In addition to staging local theatre productions and hosting visiting theatrical companies, it has accommodated guest lecturers, served as a classroom laboratory and recital hall for the music and English and theatre arts departments. It has also served as a site for special seminars, workshops and continuing education programs, and it houses the Intergenerational Center for senior citizens in the region.

The ceremony and reception to rededicate the Diebold Center for the Performing Arts are open to the public and will be held on the lawn area in front of the building.

Dr. Ulf Sorhannus and Dr. Robert Tammariello, faculty members in the biology and health services department at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, were speakers at the Third Annual Conference on the Use of Computers and Computer-Based Technology Across the Curriculum. The conference was sponsored by Bloomsburg University and the State System of Higher Education Academic Computing Users Council.

Sorhannus spoke on the analysis of gene bank data in the construction of evolutionary trees. Tammariello used information from protein banks and internet biological programs to show how certain proteins react with other biomolecules. A presentation on internet biology showed how programs and information on the World Wide Web can be used in research and for incorporation into biology curricula.

EDINBORO SUMMER ACADEMY MARKS 20TH SEASON

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will celebrate its 20th Edinboro Summer Academy for gifted, talented and creative youth, July 7-20. The first one-week session is for children ages 9-12. The second session will run from July 14 to 20 for youth ages 12-16.

The purpose of the Academy is to provide the relaxed summer atmosphere of a campus environment for gifted young people to pursue their interests and experience university life.

Academy Director Ted Atkinson said because of the popularity of the program the second session is already full and there are only a few openings left in the session for 9-12 year-olds. The Academy expects to host nearly 400 young people during the two sessions.

This year's program will include learning experiences in photography, drawing, sculpture, computers, archaeology, writing, acting, television production, fencing, sailing, tennis and many more.

Founded in 1977, the Academy was the first university campus program in Pennsylvania for bright youth. Many similar programs have since used the Edinboro Summer Academy as their program model. It has been recognized by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities as an innovative program, and has also been featured in many media and news publications.

Since its beginning, nearly 9,300 young people have attended the Edinboro Summer Academy. Each year some 60 percent of the previous year's participants return to the Academy.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY AGAIN HOSTS
WESTINGHOUSE SCIENCE AND MATH PROGRAM

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania for the third year will host a week-long summer science experience for 11th graders enrolled in the innovative Westinghouse Science and Math (SAM) Program at George Westinghouse High School in Pittsburgh.

Up to 20 students from Pittsburgh high schools will spend the week of June 24-28 on the Edinboro University campus learning firsthand about careers in science and mathematics. SAM – a unique partnership program among Westinghouse High School, the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, Carnegie Mellon University, Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, and others – encourages minority and women students to pursue professions in science-related fields. SAM also provides an opportunity for the participating institutions of higher learning to address instructional needs in the fields of science and technology.

The Westinghouse Electric Corporation provides grant-funded program incentives ranging from scholarship assistance to year-round learning and developmental opportunities for both students and faculty. Edinboro and Carnegie Mellon universities provide a series of summer science enrichment experiences to give laboratory-centered instruction and monitored research opportunities that emphasize scientific process skills. The Pittsburgh Public Schools created SAM in 1986 to give focus to the experiential opportunities.

The five days the students spend on the Edinboro campus will emphasize practical experiences in physics and engineering and will include laboratory sessions in Hendricks Hall, a "Physics Olympics" in McComb Fieldhouse, a planetarium show, and other experiments and activities. An awards luncheon at noon on Friday, June 28, in Van Houten Dining Hall will cap the week's events.

Dr. Richard Arnold, Edinboro University's assistant dean of education, is the University's SAM program director. For more information, call Dr. Arnold at 814-732-2752.

EDINBORO GRADUATES FIND SUCCESS IN SPECIALTY TOYS

Becky and Randy Bookhamer of Edinboro are proof that the best part of life is quality – not quantity. They are the owners of Hidden Treasures toy store in Erie. The graduates of Edinboro University of Pennsylvania started the business 10 years ago because of their disappointment at shopping in traditional toy stores.

“There was nothing there we wanted to spend our money on,” said Becky. “We wanted something that had real quality and would last a long time.” Their four children now range from 12 to college age.

So, in a leap of faith, the Bookhamers quit their jobs and opened Hidden Treasures. From the beginning their philosophy was to search the world over to find alternative toys not available in big toy store chains – things like wooden trains from Sweden and Playmobils from Germany. They emphasize that their toys are age appropriate, ranging from developmental toys for infants to brain teasers and arts and crafts for older children.

They find toys by attending the New York Toy Fair every year, and this year they made a trip to the Nuremberg Toy Fair, the largest such show in the world.

Not only is it important to provide quality toys, the Bookhamers believe it is important to know the people who make and market the toys and support those businesses which keep the consumer in mind. Among their suppliers is Holgate Toys of Kane, Pa., which is owned by another Edinboro graduate, Richard Bly ('77). Holgate makes wooden toys and is perhaps best known for its trolley from public television's Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood.

The store also features specialty dolls and stuffed bears like the Madam Alexander Dolls and the Steiff Bears from Germany. They have bears and dolls from as many as 60-70 artists, and gift cards and gift bags so customers can come in, buy a present, have it packaged attractively and go straight to the party.

"We provide a lot of special services," said Becky, "service you won't find anywhere else." Perhaps that's why their customers have included Governor Tom Ridge and his family.

Another factor in the success of the business has been the environment they created within the store itself. After several years in a traditional retail space, they bought one of the oldest houses on West 26th Street and renovated it extensively, creating an ambiance that invites people to linger as long as they like. "The renovations were done with a lot of thought. It's a very pleasant, upbeat store," she said. "I like the retail business because I'm able to meet a lot of people and bring some joy into their lives."

In recognition of the Bookhamer's conversion of a residence into an inviting retail location, the Millcreek Township Planning Commission presented them with its 1995 design award for renovations.

Dr. Thomas A. Walkiewicz, a professor of physics at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, recently presented a seminar, "Natural Background Radiation – Cosmic and Terrestrial (Including Radon)", to the Xavier University department of physics in Cincinnati.

Walkiewicz, who is noted for his study of radon, presented the results of two ongoing investigations of background radiation. The first study detailed measurements of on-site natural gamma radiation and extended this to the radiation exposure an individual receives from radon. The second study explained how an experiment can be performed to demonstrate the radiation exposure an individual receives from cosmic rays.

Although not yet formally published, these two experiments are routinely performed by undergraduate students at Edinboro University.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

DIEBOLD CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS DEDICATED AT EDINBORO

The third oldest structure on the Edinboro University of Pennsylvania campus, a building known to generations of Edinboro students and alumni as the Old College Union and later the Performing Arts Center, was renamed the Diebold Center for the Performing Arts in honor of outgoing President Foster F. Diebold during a special ceremony and community reception held recently on the university campus.

Diebold retires on June 30 after 17 years as Edinboro's president.

Built in 1906 at a cost of $16,980, the building was first used as a gymnasium and later as a student union until it was closed for extensive repairs in 1982.

In 1985, Diebold began a $3.6 million, joint state-private fund-raising campaign to restore the Old College Union and the building next to it, Reeder Hall. Both were in disrepair and were scheduled to be razed by the state.

Diebold's efforts saved both buildings. The Old College Union reopened in 1986 as the Center for the Performing Arts, while Reeder Hall was returned to operation the same year to serve as the main administration building.

"I've been fortunate to receive many honors lately, but at the top of the list is the overwhelming honor of having a building named after me, especially one of my favorite buildings," Diebold said at the dedication ceremony, which was hosted by the University's Council of Trustees in cooperation with the Edinboro Alumni Association.

"But surely, to have the honor itself to have served Edinboro University has been my primary honor and good fortune for these past 17 years," said Diebold.

Several proclamations and other commendations were read and presented to Diebold during the ceremony. Letters of commendation were received from U.S. Senators Arlen Specter and Rick Santorum and from Governor Tom Ridge. A Congressional Certificate of Merit was presented on behalf of U. S. Rep. Phil English, as were proclamations from Erie Mayor Joyce Savocchio, Meadville Mayor Anthony Petruso, and Edinboro Mayor Clifford "Kip" Allen. Legislative citations from the Commonwealth General Assembly were also given by Sen. Bob Robbins and Rep. Jim Merry, and a special message from Erie County Council was read by Councilwoman Tracy Seyfert.

"This is a day I will remember always and honors I will cherish forever," Diebold said. "Edinboro University and the thousands of memories, good memories, will make my future so very meaningful. Thank you and goodbye."

EDINBORO HOSTS BALMORAL SCHOOL OF PIPING

The Balmoral School of Piping is coming to Edinboro University of Pennsylvania from July 7 to July 20, 1996. Like the legendary Brigadoon emerging from the mists, the Balmoral School will bring a part of Scotland to the region when some of the world's top pipers and drummers converge to teach and perform during the two-week session.

More than 20 students from the United States and Canada have enrolled to study with James McIntosh, M.B.E., of Pittsburgh; Jacky Pincet of Brittany, France; Scot Walker of Emmaus; and Maureen Connor of Schenectady, N.Y.

The piping and drumming instructors will be presenting a free concert at Edinboro's University Center on Thursday, July 11, beginning at 8 p.m.

James McIntosh is a Scottish gold medalist and director of the Carnegie Mellon University bagpipe degree program. Jacky Pincet, at the forefront of a revival of Scottish bagpipe music in Brittany, France, has trained more than 400 Breton pipers. Scot Walker is an eight-time eastern U.S. solo piping champion. Maureen Connor, a Grade One competitor, is the director for the Edinboro Balmoral School. Students will also be featured.

For information about the concert, call Edinboro University's Public Relations Office, 814-732-2745. For information about the Balmoral School, contact George Balderose, The Balmoral Schools, 1414 Pennsylvania Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15233; 412-323-2707; Fax: 412-323-1817; email: Bagpiping@aol.com.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

DONALD DILMORE AUTHORS STUDY OF LIBRARIAN/FACULTY INTERACTION

Dr. Donald H. Dilmore, assistant vice president for libraries at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, authored an article for the May, 1996, issue of College and Research Libraries. The article, "Librarian/Faculty Interaction at Nine New England Colleges," is a study of what methods college librarians use to build bridges to classroom faculty members. Dilmore's study also surveyed faculty members' perceptions of library efforts to provide service.

Dilmore said he wanted to discover how faculty and librarians were communicating with each other because faculty perception of library service may be a key factor in the way the campus library is used and supported.
