It hardly seems possible, but we've reached the end of another home campaign. The 2005 season has definitely been a good one, but Edinboro hopes there are still several more weeks of action remaining.

The Fighting Scots can achieve one of their goals next week at Lock Haven. A win over the Bald Eagles would give Edinboro no third straight trip to the NCAA Playoffs, victories the next two weeks are a must.

Finally, prior to today's game we recognize our 15 seniors making their final regular season home appearance at Sox Harrison Stadium.

The Coaches

Edinboro head coach Lou Tepper (Rutgers '67) is in his sixth season in charge of the Fighting Scots. He owns a record of 38-26 at Edinboro, and including five seasons as the head coach at the University of Illinois, has an overall record of 63-57-2. Tepper was named the 2003 PSAC West Coach of the Year and was also recognized as Edinboro's Coach of the Year. Renowned as a defensive genius, Tepper has worked on the staffs of some of the top programs in the country, including Virginia Tech, Colorado and LSU. But his greatest notoriety came at Illinois, where he coached from 1989-96. The defensive coordinator and later assistant head coach from 1988-91, Tepper was appointed the Fighting Illini head coach on December 13, 1991, just prior to the team's appearance in the John Hancock Sun Bowl. He would go on to guide the Illini to two more bowl games while posting a 25-31-2 ledger. (For more on Lou Tepper, see pages 6-7.)

Dave Keeny (Kutztown '83) is in his eighth season as the head coach at his alma mater, and has a record of 37-45 during that period.

The Edinboro-Kutztown Series

Edinboro leads 3-2

With two wins in the last three meetings, Edinboro has taken a 3-2 lead in the all-time series. The last time Kutztown visited Sox Harrison Stadium, it was the Golden Bears coming away with a win, taking advantage of a pair of bad punt snaps for a 14-10 win in 2002.

Last Year's Game

Edinboro 23, Kutztown 14

Playing for the second year in a row at Kutztown, the Fighting Scots struggled somewhat before finally subduing the Golden Bears in what was Edinboro's fifth Homecoming game of the year. Kutztown jumped out to a 7-0 lead just three plays into the game on a 57-yard pass from Jeremy Copeland to Jeremy Wesley. Chris Avery tied the score with a 31-yard interception return for a touchdown, but the Golden Bears came right back on the ensuing kickoff, as James Brooks returned it 93 yards for a touchdown. The high-scoring first quarter ended with Kody Robertson kicking a 23-yard field goal. Robertson added a 29-yard field goal in the second quarter, as the Fighting Scots trailed 14-13 at intermission. The Edinboro placekicker added his third three-pointer in the third quarter, a 25-yarder, and Andre Burke iced the win with a two-yard TD run with just over four minutes to play. Edinboro ended the day with 401 total yards, as Burke ran for 159 yards on 33 carries and Justin Bouch threw for 191 yards. Kutztown totaled 232 yards.

This Past Week's Results

Thanks to a strong defensive showing, Edinboro kept alive its hopes for a third straight PSAC West crown with a 24-7 victory over Slippery Rock. The Fighting Scots dodged a bullet when The Rock missed a potential game-tying 40-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter. Greg MacAnn gave Edinboro a little cushion with a fumble recovery in the end zone, courtesy of a sack by Jim Soltis that led to a Nate Crookshank fumble. That score came with 5:38 remaining in the game, and less than three minutes later A.J. Cousins stormed in and blocked a punt, then recovered it in the end zone for the final score. Kelvin Collins paced the offense with 133 yards on 25 carries in his first start at tailback, and Justin Bouch threw a six-yard TD pass to Ryan Valasek. The defense came up with 9 sacks, forced 5 turnovers, including a pair of Tom Davidson interceptions, and held SRU to 240 yards. Chris Amico finished with a career-high 12 tackles, including a pair of sacks. Kutztown dropped a 23-20 decision to Millersville as the Golden Bear offense managed just 71 yards, including 12 on the ground. The defense also took care of the scoring, with a pair of fumble returns for touchdowns. Matt Scartozzi added field goals of 29 and 31 yards.

The Block Party is Back On

One of the trademarks of Edinboro's special teams during the Tepper

Today's Game

Era has been blocking kicks. The Fighting Scots have blocked four kicks this year, with two coming in the last two weeks. Oddly enough, both were blocked punts when the return was on. Two weeks ago Chris Avery blocked a punt against Indiana(Pa.) and recovered it in the end zone for a touchdown. A week later it was A.J. Cousins blocking a Slippery Rock punt and recovering for six points.

A Look Ahead to 2006

As has been our custom, in the last home program for 2005 we list the 2006 schedule. Please remember this is tentative, and subject to change:

Sept. 2	at West Chester	Oct. 14	EAST STROUDSBURG
Sept. 9	ST. ANSELM	Oct. 21	at Clarion
Sept. 16	BLOOMSBURG	Oct. 28	at Slippery Rock
Sept. 23	at Cheyney	Nov. 4	SHIPPENSBURG
Sept. 30	INDIANA(PA)	Nov. 11	at Lock Haven
Oct. 7	CALIFORNIA(PA)

Edinboro Ranked 7th in Northeast Region

With two weeks left in the regular season, the NCAA Division II Playoff picture is beginning to take shape. But as the wise man (or coach) would say, there's still plenty of football to be played. The Fighting Scots are ranked seventh in the Northeast Region. The top six teams in the region are chosen for postseason action.

Chris Amico Honored by PSAC

Last week's performance by the defense in the 24-7 win over Slippery Rock made it difficult to select one nominee for PSAC West Defensive Player of the Week. The PSAC wisely recognized that nominee - Chris Amico. The sophomore defensive tackle spearheaded the defensive showing with a career-high 12 tackles. That included 3.5 tackles for losses totaling 18 yards, with a pair of sacks.

Kelvin Collins Makes the Most of First Start

With the weather deteriorating, not to mention the Sox Harrison Stadium playing surface, it was the perfect time to give Kelvin Collins his first start at tailback. The 6'0", 230 lb. senior responded with a season-high 133 yards on 25 carries, bulling his way between the tackles on numerous runs. Collins is in his first season as a Fighting Scot after playing three seasons at Bowie State. His north-south running style proved perfect for the conditions.

Kutztown Game Captains

Special Teams - Kody Robertson; Offense - Justin Bouch, QB; Defense - Seth Fragale, OLB

Let's Give Dave a Hand

The steady rain for the Slippery Rock game could have left Sox Harrison Stadium a mess if not for the efforts of Dave Higham and his staff. Along with a group of players, Higham covered the field on Friday. The end result was a very playable surface. A former starting offensive lineman for the Scots, Dave still finds a way to help Edinboro win.

Don't Mind Kody's Average

At first glance, maybe it's time that Lou Tepper found himself a new punter. Kody Robertson averaged just 29.8 yards on six punts against Slippery Rock. But closer inspection tells us that Robertson dropped four inside the twenty, constantly pinning The Rock in poor field position. SRU had drives start at the 7, 4, 10 and 14 thanks to Robertson kicks. And Josh Kniess, one of the top punt returners in the country, was held to one return for seven yards.

Oh So Close

Ryan Rybicki fell one yard short of his first career touchdown reception. The redshirt freshman wide receiver caught a short pass from Justin Bouch and turned it into a 49-yard gain. Unfortunately, he was stripped of the ball at the one yard line, and it rolled through the end zone for a touchback.

Welcome to Edinboro

Dear Family, Friends and Fans of the Fighting Scots:

As we engage upon the 2005-2006 academic year at Edinboro University, we look back with deep pride at one of the most successful years in the history of Edinboro athletics. Much of the success of our men's and women's athletic teams is due to your loyal support of our scholar-athletes in basketball, cross country, football, soccer, softball, swimming, track, volleyball, and wrestling, as well as wheelchair basketball and other adaptive sports.

The long legacy of Edinboro athletics will be one of the highlights celebrated during the University's Sesquicentennial in 2006-2007. As we prepare to celebrate the University's 150th anniversary, we are guided by the vision of "Building a prosperous future through academic excellence and civility." Our athletes' dedication to education, discipline, and sportsmanship that are at the heart of Edinboro athletics will serve them well as they pursue their dreams beyond the playing fields of their alma mater. Their success in competitive endeavors will contribute to the quality of life on our campus and throughout the communities of northwestern Pennsylvania.

Head Coach Lou Tepper

Veteran Division I mentor Lou Tepper was appointed the 12th head football coach at Edinboro University, officially taking charge of the Fighting Scot program on January 5, 2000. He promised a tough and classy program, and in four short years delivered a championship team that fans and alumni enthusiastically endorse.

Tepper inherited an Edinboro program which had won just eleven games in the previous three seasons. The Scots have shown consistent improvement in "Coach Tep's" five years, culminated by consecutive PSAC championships for the first time in Edinboro history, the best two-year record in

"We had an outstanding pool of candidates to choose from, but Lou's integrity, coaching background and national notoriety stood out above the rest. We feel Edinboro provides the opportunity to be one of the top programs in the PSAC, and look at Lou Tepper as the coach to restore our program to that level."

Dr. Frank Pogue Jr.
President, Edinboro University

Edinboro history, and the only PSAC team chosen for the NCAA Division II playoffs each of the past two seasons.

Each phase of Edinboro football has made a dramatic turn upward. The offense has averaged over 30 points and nearly 400 yards each the past two seasons, with tremendous balance and passing. The defense led the nation with 42 turnovers and 30 interceptions while playing stingy run defense in 2004. Truth be known, Tepper's real passion is for special teams, despite his national reputation on defense. Edinboro has not had a kick blocked the last two years, while blocking four kicks a year ago, with two blocked punts returned for touchdowns.

While winning is important, it isn't the only emphasis at Edinboro with Tepper at the controls. The participation numbers have significantly increased and academic performances have soared. He has demanded recruiting equally a combination of character and talent. The Edinboro staff stresses a family concept and racial harmony. The improvement academically has been so drastic that out of 80 players on the team following spring practice, just three were faced with academic probation.

The 2000 season brought a 5-6 record, matching the Edinboro record for wins by a first-year head coach, and a fifth place PSAC finish. In 2001 and 2002, the Fighting Scots were very competitive, setting the stage for back-to-back championship seasons.

Edinboro made its first postseason appearance in 2003, claiming a share of the PSAC West championship. The Fighting Scots survived a brutal three-game stretch early in the season, defeating 16th-ranked East Stroudsburg, 30-21, dropping a 40-34 decision to 22nd-ranked Shippensburg, and upsetting fourth-ranked Indiana(Pa.) on the Indians' home turf, 28-20. The Scots ended the regular season with a six-game winning streak. During that stretch Edinboro held opponents without a touchdown for 20 consecutive quarters. Tepper was recognized as the PSAC West Coach of the Year in 2004, as Edinboro finished with a 9-3 record and an 18th place ranking in the AFCA poll.

The Fighting Scots once again finished 9-3 and tied for the PSAC West crown a year ago, while duplicating the 2003 AFCA ranking of 18th. Edinboro picked up its second-ever NCAA postseason win with a 47-44 win at 20th-ranked Bentley.

BACKGROUND

Tepper, a native of Keystone, PA, returned to the Division II level after coaching at Division I institutions for almost thirty years. He is renowned as a defensive coaching genius, with a resume that includes three Butkus Award honorees and an Outland Trophy winner. Tepper's list of standouts include Bruce Smith, John Holecsek, Simeon Rice, Kevin Hardy, Brad Hopkins, Booger MacFarland, and Ken Dilger, all current or former NFL standouts. In addition, he has worked with some of the top head coaches in the country, including Bill Dooley at Virginia Tech, Bill McCartney at Colorado, John Mackovic at Illinois and Gerry DiNardo at LSU.

"Being a native of western Pennsylvania, it has been neat to be a head coach again and to be a head coach in this environment," Tepper related following his first season at Edinboro. "I've recruited western Pennsylvania for half of my career. It's a joy to be back home."

Tepper completed his second full season as the defensive coordinator at Louisiana State University in 1999. He began his tenure with the Tigers on December 15, 1997, helping LSU to a 27-9 Independence Bowl win over Notre Dame. All told, he has served as a defensive coordinator for 19 years in his coaching profession.

BIG TEN HEAD COACH

Lou Tepper was appointed the head coach at the University of Illinois on December 13, 1991, just prior to the team's appearance in the John Hancock Sun Bowl. He replaced Mackovic, who left for the head coaching position at the University of Texas. During his five-year stint as the Fighting Illini head coach, Tepper compiled a record of 25-31-2, including two more bowl appearances. He guided Illinois to a pair of wins over Ohio State, including one at Columbus; the school's first victory in Ann Arbor against Michigan in 27 years; and three consecutive wins over rival Iowa by a combined score of 122-17. Just as impressive, Tepper graduated a very high percentage of his Big Ten seniors.

Tepper joined the Illinois program in 1988, serving as the defensive coordinator for four seasons and assistant head coach for two years. In his nine seasons at Illinois, he helped the program to six bowl invitations, one Big Ten title and top ten rankings in the AP and UPI polls. He was honored as the Big Ten's top defensive assistant coach in 1990 by The Sporting News. His defensive units annually ranked among the best in the country, finishing 10th in 1989, 14th in 1993, ninth in 1994, and 21st in 1995.

Tepper's 1992 Illini squad finished 6-5-1, suffering a 27-17 defeat to Hawaii in the Holiday Bowl. Illinois went in to Columbus and upset Ohio State, 18-16, and posted a 22-22 tie against Michigan in Ann Arbor.

While his '93 edition finished 5-6, that included a 24-21 win in Ann Arbor against the Wolverines. The Illini made it back to postseason play in 1994, handing East Carolina a 30-0 whitewashing in the Liberty Bowl. The '94 squad finished 7-5, again upsetting one of the elite in the Big Ten. And once again it was on the road, as Illinois shocked Ohio State, 24-10, in Columbus behind Butkus Award winner Dana Howard.

LINEBACKERS

Through the years Penn State had gained the reputation as "Linebacker U", but Illinois could have made a good case for that designation as well during Tepper's tenure. He produced consecutive Butkus Award winners in Dana Howard (1994) and Kevin Hardy (1995). Along the way, he also produced Big Ten Defensive Players of the Year in Moe Gardner and Darrick Brownlow (1990), Howard (1993 and '94) and Big Ten Defensive Lineman of the Year Simeon Rice in 1994. For the only time in Big Ten history, Tepper had four first team All-Big Ten linebackers at his disposal. In all, he has coached over 20 professional linebackers, and has published a book, "Complete Linebacking", a 312-page comprehensive book on linebacker play.

Hardy and Rice became the highest defensive draft duo in the history of the NFL draft in 1996 when Hardy went second to Jacksonville and Rice third to Arizona. That stood until the 2000 NFL Draft when Penn State's Courtney Brown and Lavar Arrington went one-two.

DIVISION I ASSISTANT COACH

In over thirty years as an assistant coach, Tepper has worked at some of the top institutions in the country. That includes the likes of Pittsburgh, Virginia Tech and Colorado, in addition to his time at Illinois and LSU.

Tepper began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at Pittsburgh in 1967, then moved on to the University of New Hampshire from 1968-71, coaching the running backs and linebackers before becoming the defensive coordinator. His next stop was the College of William & Mary, where he joined former New Hampshire head coach Jim Root as the defensive coordinator from 1972-77. The 1976 William & Mary squad posted the school's best record in thirty years. He was the assistant head coach his final year at William & Mary.

In 1978, Virginia Tech head coach Bill Dooley hired Tepper as his linebackers coach. Tepper helped build the Hokies into a consistent bowl contender with a defense that annually ranked among the nation's top ten. He stayed at Virginia Tech from 1978-82, working with Outland Trophy winner and Buffalo Bills great Bruce Smith, among others. The 1980 Hokie edition played Miami(FL) in the Peach Bowl.

Tepper joined Bill McCartney's staff at Colorado in 1983, serving as the defensive coordinator and assistant head coach until departing for Illinois in 1988. Tepper helped turn around a defense which ranked No. 100 nationally in yards allowed prior to his arrival, to one which was as high as 11th in Division I in total defense. He earned the title of assistant head coach his final two seasons, and helped the Buffaloes to the 1985 Freedom Bowl and the 1986 Blue Bonnet Bowl. Balancing the academic, athletic and service demands at the United States Military Academy is never easy, but in 2004 Carlton Jones managed to still post 1,269 rushing yards and 17 touchdowns on the ground, one of the most impressive seasons in Army's gridiron history.

SERVICE TIME

THE LIFE OF A COLLEGIATE FOOTBALL PLAYER AT A SERVICE ACADEMY IS DIFFERENT THAN MOST OTHER GRIDIRON BATTLERS, AS ARMY RUNNING BACK CARLTON JONES CAN ATTEST

BY MIKE ALBRIGHT

On a game day at West Point's Michie Stadium, Carlton Jones and his Army teammates are the center of attention as nearly 40,000 fans intently watch their every move. For the players on the field, Saturday's performance, before thousands of screaming supporters, is the culmination of a hard week's worth of work that is normally completed out of sight of fans, family and media.

In today's collegiate football landscape, gridiron warriors spend countless hours preparing for that all-important 60 minutes of game action on the weekend. For cadet-athletes at West Point, the demands of building a successful football program mirror those placed upon their counterparts at schools throughout the country. However, Army players carve time for their football work from a rigorous academic and military schedule set forth for all cadets.

It takes a special person to balance the Academy's demands while also building a successful on-field résumé. Jones did just that in 2004 when, as a junior, he forged one of the finest seasons ever by an Army running back. He rushed for 1,269 yards, the second-highest single-season total in the program's 115 seasons, while establishing a new season standard with 17 rushing touchdowns.

He discusses his normal approach to game week at Army, and how he balances his academic, military and athletic responsibilities.

SUNDAY: GET AHEAD

With no practice scheduled, Jones typically uses the day to get ahead on homework and rehabilitate any injuries he may have suffered during Saturday's game.

On his only off day of the week, Jones looks to catch up—on sleep—while also getting ahead—on homework. A mid-morning wake-up normally precedes a visit to church, followed by a trip to the training room at Kimsey Athletic Center for a touch of rehabilitation.

By early afternoon, Jones is back in his barracks room for several hours of homework. An efficient Sunday afternoon can set Jones up for success throughout the week, both academically and athletically.

"As a cadet, if you can give [up] a little bit of your Sunday [for school work], it makes the rest of your week so much easier because you don't have to stay up all night studying for tests," Jones explains. "I try to do at least three or four hours of homework."

"Most times, I get treatment, even if I'm not hurt. I'll usually get in the ice bath or cold pool, just to get loose and get rid of the aches and bangs from the game before," he adds. "I usually feel real good when I get out of there."

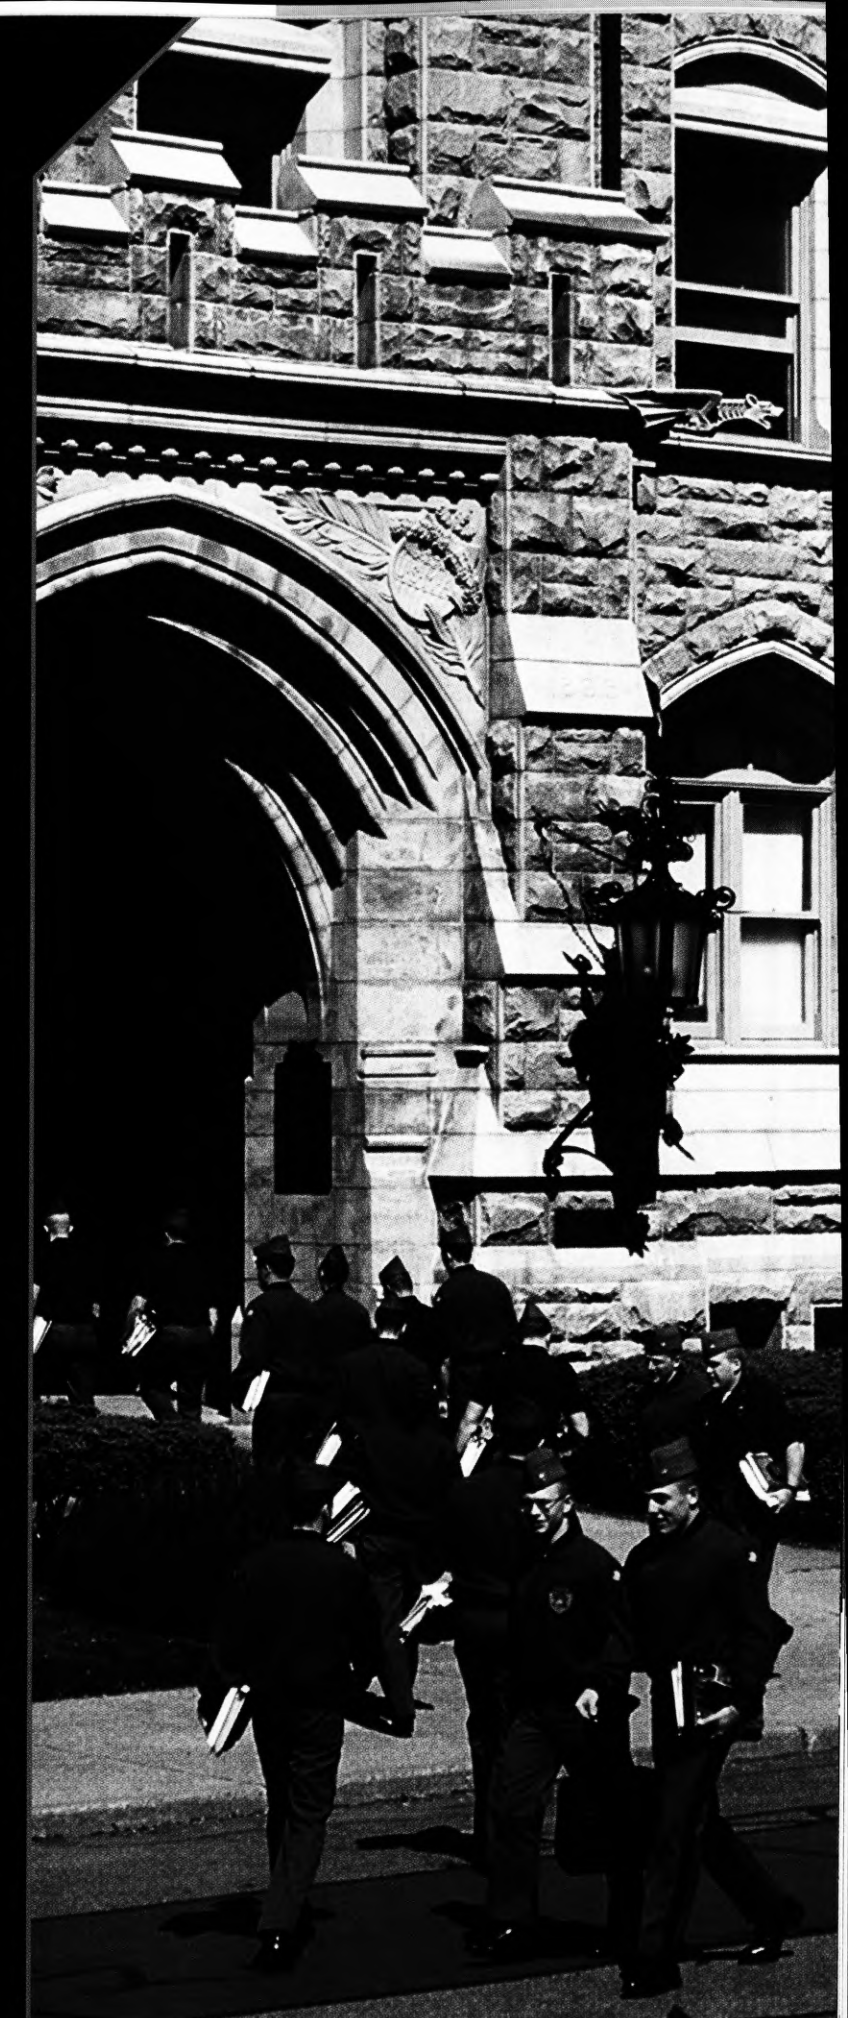

Not one to dwell much on the previous day's action, Jones' football attention Sunday includes a light dose of National Football League action, as well as a bit of web surfing to briefly investigate the upcoming opponent.

MONDAY: GET FAMILIAR

Since Army head coach Bobby Ross prefers to give his players 48 hours between a game and their next workout, Jones won't hit the practice field until 7 p.m. A full day of classes and a rare "free afternoon" occupy much of Jones' Monday.

Jones' first formal introduction to Army's next foe comes at noontime on Monday. Following a quick lunch in the Mess Hall, the players hustle to a brief meeting where Ross will review the previous game while offering a glimpse of the next opponent.

"Because we have a late practice, most of the guys try to get more homework done in the afternoon," Jones says. "We have so much time on Monday, that's when I might meet with [running backs] coach [Tyree] Foreman and go over X's and O's, what their defense might run, basic fronts, things like that. That's when I first start actually getting ready for the upcoming week."

Depending on the week's academic workload, Jones may forego his Monday film session to get ahead on a research paper or studying for an upcoming exam. With the late ending to Monday's practice, there is not much time to get school work done, so Jones may shine his shoes, clean his room for an upcoming inspection or prepare his uniform for the next day before turning in.

TUESDAY/WEDNESDAY: "ALL-OUT GO!"

In the team's only two full-pad practices of the week, the intensity picks up dramatically as the bulk of the week's game plan is installed.

Knowing that Ross expects productivity during Army's grueling mid-week practices on Tuesday and Wednesday, Jones tries to enter with the right mindset.

"I may go [to Kimsey] a bit early on Tuesday, and maybe watch a little more film. It might not be film on the opponent, but film on our scout team defense from Monday's practice.

"On Wednesday, it is usually the same routine. I try to get [to the locker room] early and watch film. The film all depends on Tuesday's practice," the Henderson, N.C., native explains. "If we had a bad practice on Tuesday, I'll watch Tuesday's film to see where I might have been messing up or sloppy. If Tuesday was a good practice, then Wednesday I might watch the other team's film to see how they are playing."

For Jones, film study usually reveals the tendencies of the opposing defenders. While his running style relies on instinct and vision, Jones studies his opponent so that he can "trust" what he sees on the field.

PRACTICE WEEK

SUNDAY: Off day.

MONDAY (7 P.M.): Air pads, shorts and helmets ... "We usually walk through our mistakes from last week, and talk about keys to upcoming week. The staff has watched film and they let us know what they think the other team's weaknesses are."

TUESDAY/WEDNESDAY (4 P.M.): Full pads ... "We go all out. We want to practice at game speed."

THURSDAY: Air pads, shorts and helmets ... "By Thursday, you want everybody knowing what they are doing without thinking, without second-guessing themselves."

FRIDAY: Walk-through at Michie Stadium for home games, at opponent's stadium for road contests.

Saturday: Game Day.

—MA

"When we are watching film, we are seeing whether the weakside linebacker likes to undercut the lineman or go around him, whether they pursue hard or if they like to take the angle," Jones explains. "It's good to see that when we start flowing a certain way, we know how they will react. Depending on how they play, I know if the cutback is there or if I need to stay [to the outside]."

THURSDAY: GET REFINED.

In the week's final full-speed practice, a non-padded workout, Ross tries to bring the game plan into focus.

Thursday is called "downfield Thursday" by Ross and his staff. If the team is conducting a play at the 45-yard line "going in," the players won't finish the play until they are in the end zone.

Army head coach Bobby Ross likes to give his players 48 hours off between the games and the next workout, and Jones and the rest of the Black Knights utilize that extra time to their advantage.

"It's assignment day, no jumping offsides, no holding. You want to get rid of penalties and mental mistakes, and get your self-confidence going for the weekend."

FRIDAY

For a home game, the Black Knights will conduct a walk-through at Michie Stadium before heading to the team hotel in Mahwah, N.J., for the night. On road games, the team's charter plane will depart Stewart International Airport Friday morning in order to get Army to its destination by early afternoon. Immediately upon deplaning, the Black Knights head to the opponent's stadium for a brief walk-through and a stadium acclimation period.

With kickoff for Saturday's game rapidly approaching, Jones finds it difficult to concentrate in class on Friday. Nearing the end of a taxing week that features the expected heavy emphasis on football, coupled with the Academy's grueling academic and military regimen, Jones eagerly awaits the moment when he can think solely about football.

Following a full week of preparation, Jones is more than ready to hit the ground running as soon as he wakes up on Saturday mornings.

"The big thing for me is getting released from class. I'm usually anxious sitting in class. It's hard to concentrate because the game is coming up. Once I'm released, a weight has been lifted from my shoulders because I can focus on football.

"On the way to the hotel for home games, I usually like to look at my playbook to review our alignments and sets, where I have to be, and make sure I'm right on everything," Jones says. "For away games, I'll go through it on the plane."

Once the team reaches the hotel, the itinerary includes rest time, meetings, dinner, a late-night snack and an early "lights out."

SATURDAY: GAME DAY!

Every film clip, meeting, drill and practice throughout the week has been orchestrated to give the Black Knights their best opportunity for victory on Saturday. From the moment he awakens on Saturday, Jones embarks upon his game day routine.

An early wake up call, usually around 8 a.m., followed by a good breakfast and a few meetings, jump starts Jones on Saturday. By the time the team bus departs for the stadium, Jones is already "in the game."

"The bus is usually quiet, guys are focused. On the bus, I imagine myself making runs and cuts. I'm actually playing the game in my head, and going through different situations that can happen. I don't fall asleep on the bus because then I get sluggish.

"At the stadium, everyone has his own routine. Some of us running backs walk around the field, going from one end zone to the other, playing catch, just to get our hands right," Jones says. "Then I'll come into the locker room and get my ankles taped. I get my pads right. Usually I stop by the mirror to make sure everything fits how I want it so I'm comfortable."

Through a haze of smoke, with bagpipes blaring and the Army faithful cheering, Jones sprints onto the Michie Stadium turf knowing he is ready to play. He has watched film, worked hard on the practice field and synchronized his mind and body.

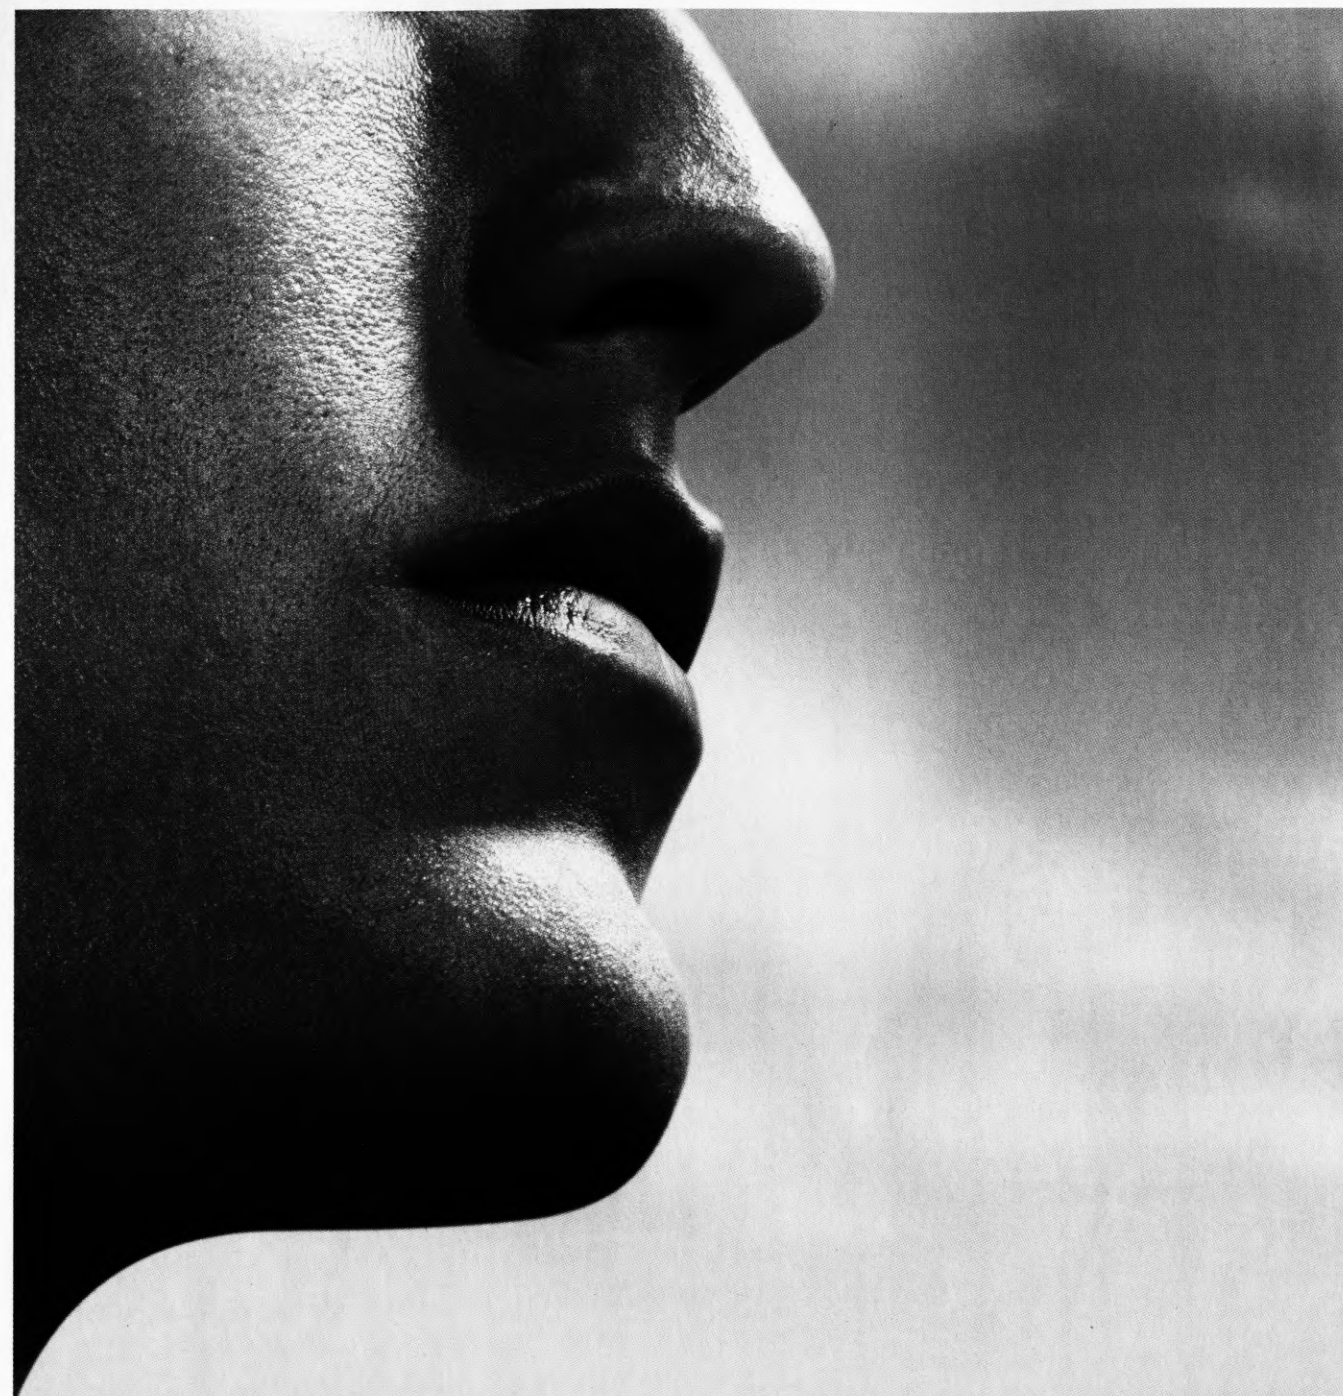

For six days, he has walked the tightrope between being a West Point cadet and an Army football player. On Saturday, he is a football player first. On Sunday, he'll return to his dual roles, but now the spotlight is aglow and it is time to perform. ■

ON THE MARK

Part of a great Pittsburgh Panthers squad, Mary May blocked his way to becoming a member of a new team: the College Football Hall of Fame

At Pittsburgh, May did not allow a sack during his final two seasons. That was very important for fellow Hall of Famer Dan Marino (below right, 13), who May blocked for.

Mark May will be recognized for his phenomenal collegiate playing career at the University of Pittsburgh on December 6 when he receives college football's highest individual honor and enters the College Football Hall of Fame. Don't be surprised if May, on his big day, deflects the spotlight from his accomplishments and talks of others—he has a habit of focusing on the people around him.

Blessed with a Herculean frame (the size 17 feet that support his 6-6, 280-pound frame earned him the nickname of "Footsie"), May was the captain and one of the cornerstones of a Pittsburgh Panther team that featured quarterback Dan Marino, fellow offensive lineman Jimbo Covert and defensive end Hugh Green. During May's collegiate career, the Panthers finished in the AP Top 10 three times and appeared in four bowl games from 1977-80.

Although he did not allow a sack in his final two seasons at Pittsburgh and won the Outland Trophy as the nation's top interior lineman in 1980, May's individual heroics are not part of his resume.

"Basically, it was my job to make sure he didn't wind up on his back," May humbly offers when speaking about protecting Marino.

May is quick to recall helping lead a teammate in a long run from scrimmage for a decisive touchdown run in a rout over rival Penn State. He takes pride and satisfaction in reminiscing about a senior receiving recognition and playing in his place when he was a freshman.

For May, it's all about the people around him. He credits the camaraderie of his teammates as one of the forces that shaped him for success through college and beyond.

"You see guys now and maybe they go out with two of their teammates," he interjects. "When we went out, we were eight to ten in a group."

Their chemistry illustrated to May what it meant to be part of a team and to work hard for your teammates. They were only part of the equation, as May recognizes that his Panther coaches were instrumental in his success, instilling a work ethic that enabled him to excel.

"If you take a look at the guys who make it, they're out there every day [in practice] working and working hard".

After graduation in 1981, May was chosen in the first round of the NFL Draft by the Washington Redskins and enjoyed two Super Bowl victories during his stay in the nation's capital.

It was in Washington where May's altruistic endeavors began; his focus on others stretched beyond the playing field as a member of Nancy Reagan's "Team Up Against Drugs" program during his ten years with the Redskins. Currently, May is helping his hometown region of Oneonta with his participation in the Doretta Rich Memorial Golf Tournament, a charitable event that helps raise money for the Catskill Area Hospice.

Regarding his current career path, May realizes the help he received from those closest to him. After his 13 years in the NFL, he was contemplating playing another season when his agent secured a broadcasting position at Pittsburgh. The experience was invaluable, as May received the advice that would shape his style—"relax and keep it conversational, you know football." May leveraged his time in the Panthers broadcast booth into a position at TNT, eventually landing at ESPN where he currently is a TV analyst.

Indeed the seeds were planted early for his ESPN role. "It all comes back to Pitt," he proudly declares. ■

The Falcons' 138 Halfback Pass led to pay dirt for Fisher DeBerry and Air Force, leaving the confused Colorado State Rams' defense in the dust

COURTESY UNITED STATES AIR FORCE ACADEMY

Fisher DeBerry is not one to use trick plays often, but since the Falcons mainly run the football and execute the option, the halfback pass has been most effective at times.

Air Force Academy head coach Fisher DeBerry knows the right time to roll the dice and call a trick play. Call it experience gained in 44 years of coaching football—the past 22 seasons being on the sidelines in Colorado Springs.

The 67-year-old DeBerry is the winningest coach in Air Force history (161-94-1 heading into 2005) and the third longest tenured at one school (behind Penn State's Joe Paterno and Florida State's Bobby Bowden). As such, he's probably forgotten more football than some coaches will ever know. But one thing he never forgets is when and how to pounce on an opening an opponent gives him.

Stressing the ground attack has been the key to making the Falcons' offense go, and while he prefers to play it straight, DeBerry admits his team's commitment to running creates opportunities to use some razzle-dazzle.

"I'm not a big trick guy, but the halfback pass has been a part of our offense for a long, long time," said DeBerry, Air Force's head coach since 1984. "Because we rush the football and because we run the option, and we pitch the ball to our halfbacks and we commit so fast to the run game, often we're able to get our halfback to throw the ball, and we've had some big plays doing that."

One of the biggest came on October 16, 2003, in a game at Fort Collins, home of Mountain West Conference rival Colorado State.

With about six minutes left in the second quarter, and his team trailing 10-7, DeBerry called for the 138 Halfback Pass, and his offensive unit ran the play to perfection.

Split back Joe Schieffer began the play by coming around from the left side and taking a handoff from quarterback Chance Harridge. As Schieffer headed around the right corner on what looked like a typical sweep, he suddenly stopped and fired downfield to wide-open receiver Alec Messerall, who caught the pass and waltzed into the end zone. The play covered 69 yards and gave the Falcons a 14-10 lead, although Colorado State would eventually come back to win the game.

"We've had a lot of success, probably had 80 percent success," said DeBerry of the 138 Halfback Pass.

While the element of surprise is a contributor to the play's success, DeBerry believes the defense's aggression can be its own worst enemy.

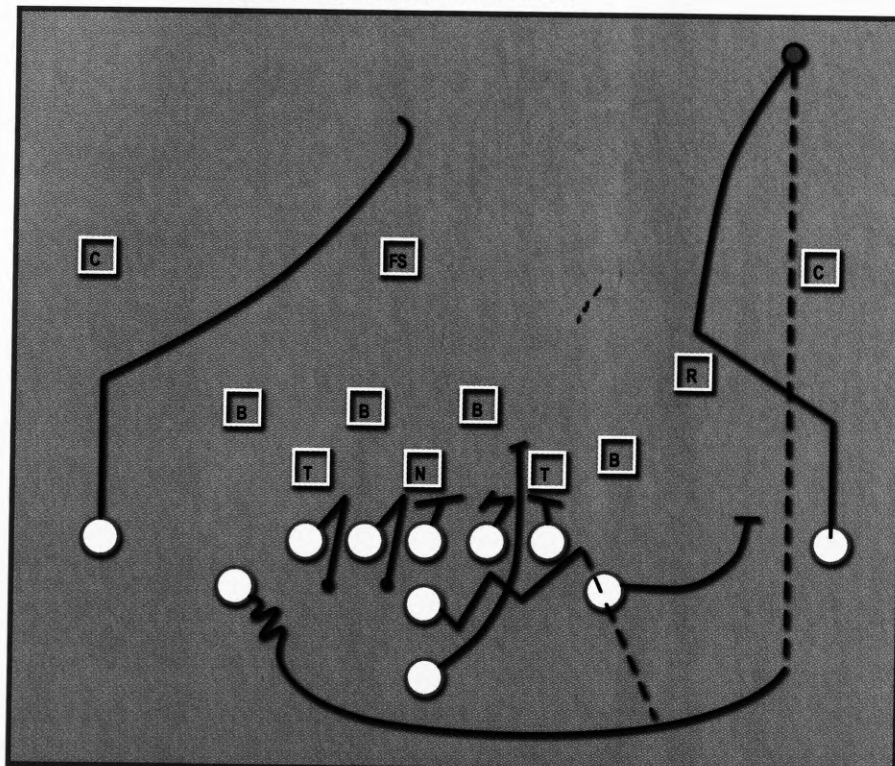

"Teams get so involved in stopping the run that they over pursue, overreact to the play-action of the run," DeBerry said. "Their own pursuit triggers your thought to use it, too."

In the end, DeBerry relies on his instincts to make that call.

"You just get a feel on the sidelines that the defense is reacting in the way that you would like to see this play set up," he said.

With 44 years of getting that feel, it's no wonder the play is such a success. ■

THE 138 HB PASS

Selling the run is vital. Split back Joe Schieffer lines up in the slot to the left. On the snap, he starts left then reverses his field, taking the handoff and heading toward the corner as if on a sweep. Out to the right, wide receiver Alec Messerall cuts inside, then, once he sees the right-side linebacker and corner come up to play the run, he cuts back outside and heads to the corner.

PATROLLING

THE GRIDIRON

BY STEVE SINISKI

CONTINUING FLORIDA STATE'S TRADITION OF GREAT LINEBACKERS, JUNIOR ERNIE SIMS HAS A CHANCE TO GO DOWN AS ONE OF THE BEST THE SEMINOLES HAVE EVER HAD

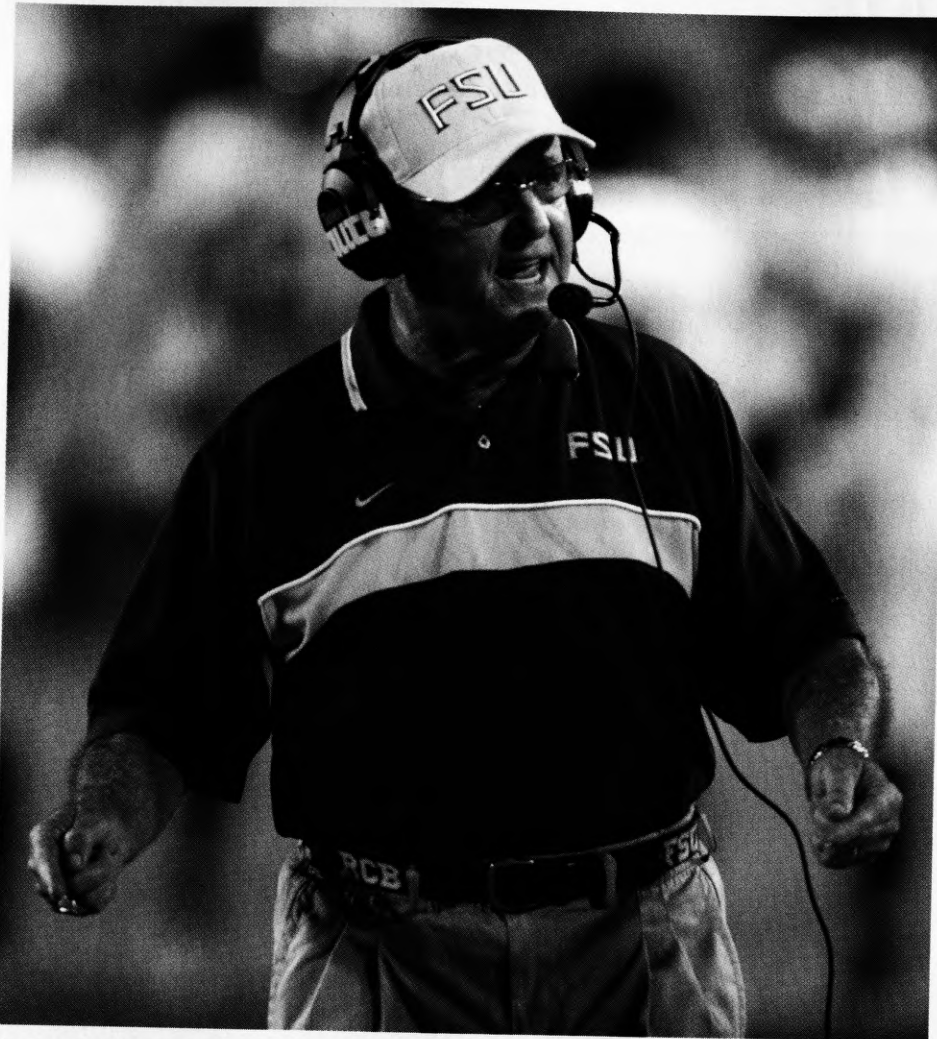

IF FLORIDA STATE linebacker Ernie Sims ever decided to take a different career path, there's no doubt it should be with the highway patrol. His biggest physical asset is speed and pursuit is undoubtedly Sims' strength. After seeing him track down ball carriers with a relentless sideline-to-sideline style, offenses might want to push for Sims to get a flashing red light—complete with siren—put on the top of his helmet so they'll know what's coming up behind them, and in some cases, right at them.

From Marvin Jones to Derrick Brooks to now Ernie Sims, the middle of the field has always been protected well by Florida State's dominate linebackers.

Head coach Bobby Bowden has coached some excellent linebackers in all his years on the sidelines, but the ones as special as Ernie Sims don't come around all that often.

"Nine times out of 10 [offenses are] running away from me, but I do get a chance to get around on the weakside," Sims said, displaying the type of closing ability that would make any state trooper proud.

The former prep star has made a seamless transition to full-time linebacker after dominating the Florida high school ranks as a dual threat in the backfield. Sims' reason for sticking with defense is a simple, yet understandable one, even for non-football fans.

"As a running back, you have 11 guys trying to take your head off," he said. "As a linebacker, you have 10 guys helping you take someone's head off."

Besides having some help—which Sims doesn't necessarily need, considering he racked up 88 tackles as a sophomore—most would agree with Sims's assessment. Dishing

HURRICANE SEASON

MIAMI FRESHMAN WILLIE WILLIAMS HAS THE POTENTIAL TO BE THE SUNSHINE STATE'S NEXT MENACING LINEBACKER

Florida State's Ernie Sims has no trouble with the law, because he lays it down. Willie Williams, the gem of the Hurricanes 2004 recruiting class, has had some struggles avoiding it. Coupled with injuries—a torn ACL and a broken finger marred his initial campaign—there's been far more pine time than shine time for the former prep star.

Though he hadn't had an opportunity to make a major impact before this season, Williams still holds the potential to be the next in a long line of great Miami linebackers. He was the complete package in high school, and a smooth on-field transition to the college game has helped crank the hype machine up in Coral Gables.

—SS

out punishment is always better than trying to absorb it. And therein lies the part of football Sims loves the most, and he makes that painfully clear to opponents.

"I love the contact," he said. "The idea of me being given the chance [to hit people] without committing a crime is great. I was always a tough kid, but the contact [in football] grew on me."

The way Sims combines speed and toughness puts him at the top of the class when it comes to college linebackers. Equally adept at getting to the quarterback, stuffing the run and dropping back into pass coverage, no play is too far out of his reach. But if Sims had to pick a defining moment from his Florida State career, it would be a sack of Virginia quarterback Marcus Hagan during the Seminoles' 36-3 home win in October, 2004. In that same game, Sims also displayed his versatility by blocking a punt in the end zone for a safety.

"That [sack] put my face on national television and showed I can be a big-time football player," he said.

Opposing pass catchers shouldn't feel comfortable roaming the field, however, even if Sims' signature play was on a quarterback blitz. He still racked up five pass break-ups during his sophomore year and loves to play the role of gardener in the open field by planting anyone coming across the middle.

"[Playing the pass] gives me a chance to hit wide receivers regardless," he said.

At 6-0, 220 pounds, Sims may not be the biggest linebacker on the landscape, but you can't block what you can't catch. And for all the discussions on the pedigree of the Manning family (Archie, Eli and Peyton), they have nothing on the Sims'. Ernie's father, Ernie Jr., a former Seminoles football player himself, once ran a 9.97 in the 100-yard dash, while his mother, Alice Bennett, was an athletic star in her own right. She took major strides with the Florida State track team, running one leg of a relay that beat a UCLA team anchored by Olympians Florence Griffith-Joyner and Jackie Joyner-Kersey. Talk about a deep gene pool.

"I may not be the biggest or the strongest, but my speed stands out," Sims said. "That's what programs look for. Some people say I have the perfect genes and that my parents created an amazon. [My strength] is getting to the ball and hustling."

Despite the accolades and freakish physical gifts, opponents will rarely hear a peep from Sims. More of the quiet type, both on and off the field, the well-spoken, well-mannered junior leads by example. And who can argue with that approach, after seeing the way his body flies around on Saturdays?

"Me being humble, that's what's been engraved in me," he said, despite the fact he has every reason to be the loudmouth, star athlete. "Don't get a big head."

Each passing season has been a learning process, and it's clear Sims has taken good notes. But

THE SUNSHINE STATE'S GREATEST LINEBACKERS

The state of Florida has long been known as a hot bed for college football, though much of the success has often corresponded to how well the offenses performed. But the three major in-state powers—Florida, Florida State and Miami—have also turned out their fair share of hard-hitting defensive players, specifically linebackers. The Seminoles' Ernie Sims and Hurricanes' Willie Williams have quite an uphill climb if they want to reach the top of the mountain at their position. Here are five of the best the Sunshine State has ever seen:

MARVIN JONES, FLORIDA STATE (1990-92)

Freshman domination (133 tackles) turned into full-blown superstardom. Jones earned All-America status as a sophomore and junior, then left for the NFL.

DAN MORGAN, MIAMI, FL. (1997-2000)

A triple crown in baseball is a rarity, but it's even tougher to come by in college football. Morgan, the first player to win the Butkus, Nagurski and Bednarik Awards in the same year (2000), is the Hurricanes all-time leading tackler.

WILBUR MARSHALL, FLORIDA (1980-83)

Any player named his school's Defensive Player of the Century certainly gets a top five spot. Marshall finished up his Gators career as a two-time All-American and National Defensive Player of the Year (1982 & '83).

DERRICK BROOKS, FLORIDA STATE (1991-94)

Brooks followed the legacy of Jones with one of his own, anchoring one of college football's most ferocious defenses. He earned All-America honors in his final two years.

RAY LEWIS, MIAMI, FL. (1993-95)

Lewis played with Hurricane force long before his days in the NFL. He started three years (including his freshman season) and is the only player in school history with more than one season of 150-plus tackles.

—SS

Sims ranked second on the Seminoles last season in tackles with 86, and was third in sacks with 4.5. This season the junior is looking to shatter both marks as the premier defender for Florida State.

the funny thing is, the most important lessons about football haven't necessarily come while the clock is running.

"When I first got here, I went through the motions," the one-time top recruit in the nation said. "Now I've gotten into film work. In practice, I work on every aspect of my game, everything we do from footwork to eye-transfer. Once [we do it] I try to perfect it."

The immense crowds associated with Atlantic Coast Conference games also gave Sims an early run for his money. But even they did little more than act as a mini speed bump on his road to stardom.

"My freshman year gave me a lot of game experience," he said. "Some away games were a shock to the system with the crowds. I'm more prepared."

True to form, Sims tackles another obstacle in his path head on. ■

HEISMAN CANDIDATE

BY SCOTT WOLF

Best of the Best

IF MATT LEINART CAN LEAD THE USC TROJANS TO ANOTHER NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP AND ONCE AGAIN TAKE HOME THE HEISMAN HARDWARE, HE WILL BE THE MOST DECORATED QUARTERBACK IN THE HISTORY OF COLLEGE FOOTBALL

It's not unusual to see USC quarterback Matt Leinart walking around with his head buried under a Los Angeles Dodgers cap.

It makes sense for two reasons: Leinart grew up a Dodgers fan and, perhaps far more important, wearing the hat makes him less noticeable.

During USC's spring scrimmage at the Coliseum, fans formed a line that stretched nearly a quarter-mile just to get a picture taken with the Heisman Trophy winner. Even in star-studded Los Angeles, Leinart is a celebrity, hanging out with singer Nick Lachey and actress Alyssa Milano while finding his way into gossip magazines.

But after leading USC to back-to-back national titles and winning the Heisman, Leinart faces a dilemma. Can he top it all this season?

The quick answer is probably not, because no team's ever finished atop the Associated Press top 25 poll three straight years. And only one player won the Heisman twice, Ohio State tailback Archie Griffin (1974 and '75).

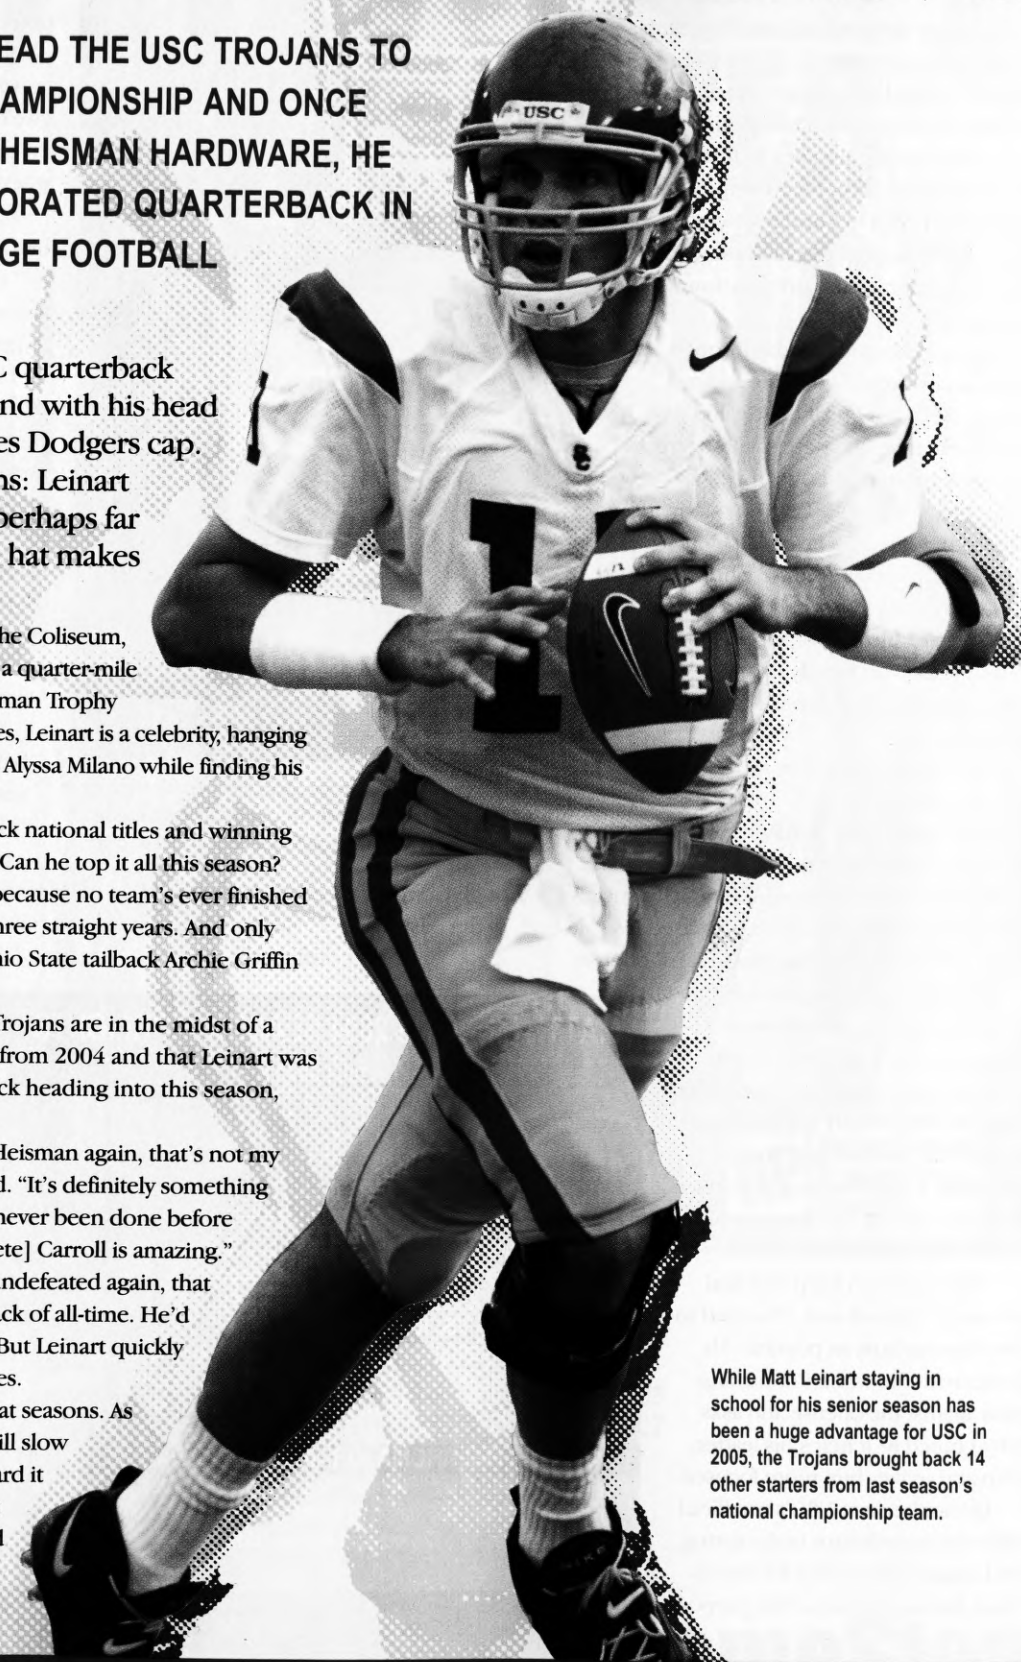

However, if you consider that the Trojans are in the midst of a modern dynasty with 15 starters back from 2004 and that Leinart was 25-1 as the Trojans' starting quarterback heading into this season, maybe it's not such a far-fetched idea.

"I'm not thinking about taking the Heisman again, that's not my goal and it wasn't last year," Leinart said. "It's definitely something special what's going here, though. It's never been done before and to do it so quickly under Coach [Pete] Carroll is amazing."

A case could be made, if USC goes undefeated again, that Leinart is the greatest college quarterback of all-time. He'd certainly be one of its most successful. But Leinart quickly shifts credit to Carroll and his teammates.

"We've had back-to-back-to-back great seasons. As long as Carroll's here, I don't think it will slow down," Leinart said. "We realize how hard it is to do it again. We have a bigger target on our back. But we're a very motivated team. We don't get complacent."

COURTESY UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

While Matt Leinart staying in school for his senior season has been a huge advantage for USC in 2005, the Trojans brought back 14 other starters from last season's national championship team.

Although Leinart often gets little privacy and requires two security guards to escort him off USC's practice field to discourage the constant threat of autograph seekers, his life remains stable.

Every Monday during football season, he goes to dinner with his brother, Ryan. Every Wednesday, he goes to lunch at a local sandwich shop near campus with his father, Bob. On Sundays, he goes home to Orange County to rest with his family before tackling preparation for the next game.

"I'm never home Monday through Friday, so it's nice to go home and rest," Leinart said. "But I really love game days. It's my favorite time. I'm never really nervous. I'm just anxious to get out and play. This is my last year, hopefully I can go out on top."

Another factor in favor of Leinart repeating his 2004 accomplishments is his undemanding class schedule. Leinart, who is a redshirt senior, earned his degree in four years and is only taking a ballroom-dancing class this fall that meets twice a week.

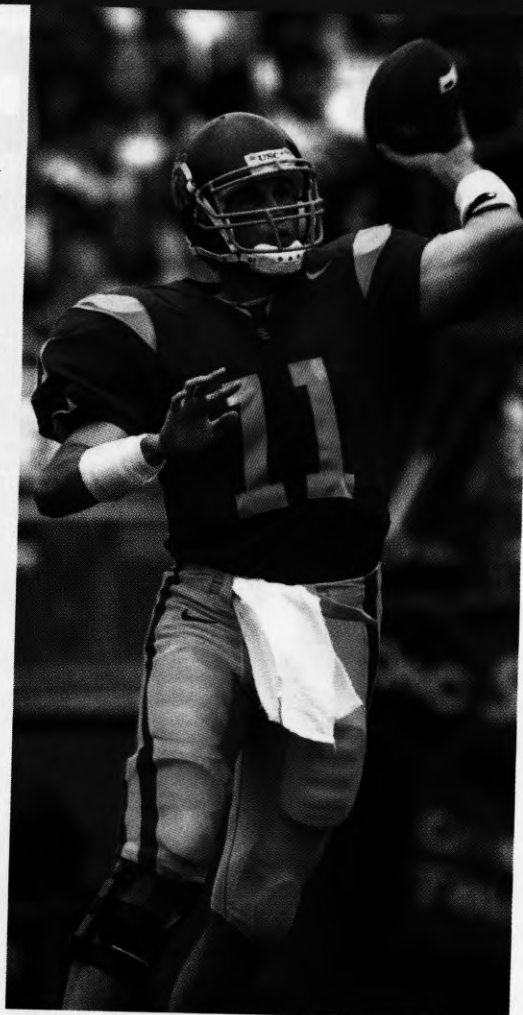

"It should be fun, I've never done it before," he said.

If Leinart's stable family provides an off-field support system, then Carroll is the on-field backbone of the quarterback's success. Although Carroll's background is defense, he's increased his role each of the past three seasons in running the Trojans' offense.

Even during spring practice, which Leinart sat out following offseason elbow surgery, Carroll took his prize quarterback under his wing, forcing Leinart to follow him around the practice field and meetings. Carroll wanted Leinart to learn exactly why he chose certain defenses to confuse an offense.

"We've tried to keep him real attentive," Carroll said. "We tried to keep him as busy as possible. He hangs with me when I'm making calls against the offense and asks why I called it? It helps his leadership and makes him more focused."

Leinart became USC's unofficial offensive coordinator in the spring, and began calling plays for the offense during practices. The purpose was to help Leinart call more audibles this season in games, something Carroll believes college quarterbacks don't do enough.

After having elbow surgery in the off-season, Leinart stayed close to defensive minded head coach Pete Carroll in order to learn why opposing coaches call the defenses to stop certain plays.

"It's part of our system that we want him to do more thinking," Carroll said. "We'll let him do a lot more than we ever let [quarterback] Drew Bledsoe do when I was in New England."

Leinart thinks the experience makes him a more dangerous NFL prospect.

"Peyton Manning knows everything about a defense," he said. "I'm trying to get to his level."

Leinart has needed to make more decisions because offensive guru Norm Chow left after four years to become an assistant with the Tennessee Titans. Some are skeptical about USC's ability to remain as explosive without Chow calling the plays.

However, Carroll quickly filled the void by hiring Oakland Raiders quarterback coach Steve Sarkisian, who coached Leinart his first three years at USC.

"I had a great relationship with Matt before, and there's always been respect between us," Sarkisian said. "Matt is a special kid. He's never been a problem. It's great to come back and get to coach him for another season."

Leinart enjoyed a close relationship with Chow, but with the offensive playbook remaining intact under Sarkisian, he is expecting even bigger things this season.

"Obviously, a lot of people expected it to be rough," Leinart said. "But I didn't know why we couldn't be better. I was with Sarkisian for three years already. We all know the system."

"Chow set such a high bar, and expectations were so high for these guys. But there was a sense of urgency with this coaching staff. If anything, we might have been more efficient this year." ■

Scott Wolf covers the USC Trojans for the Los Angeles Daily News.

BUBBLE, BUBBLE, DEFENSE IN TROUBLE

Purdue may not run the Bubble Screen as much as it used to, but it's still one of Joe Tiller's favorites

Purdue head coach Joe Tiller doesn't believe in "trick plays."

"We have multiple 'deceptives' as we like to call them," he says with a laugh. "We think 'trick plays,' from a professional point of view, is not the correct nomenclature."

But, then, what's in a name?

For Purdue, when the name is the "Bubble Screen Throwback To Quarterback," it's usually six points. "It's a play that has a high success rate," Tiller says, who's in his ninth year at the helm in West Lafayette. "We've run a number of them over the years. I put it in the trick play category because we've scored off it a couple of times."

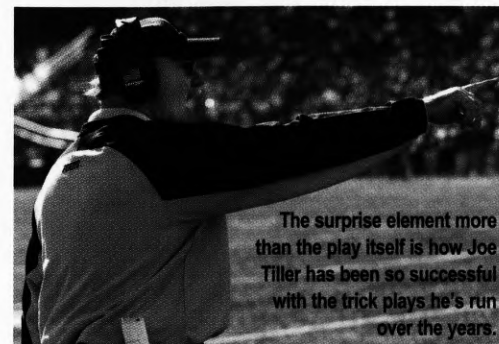

What makes the Bubble Screen Throwback so deceptive is that it looks just like the bubble screen.

"We run that bubble screen, kind of a quick-toss screen outside where a defense has to react very quickly," Tiller says. "If they don't, if they hesitate, you can split the defense and make a lot of hay on that particular play."

"This play works well when the bubble screen has been run successfully three or four times previously," he adds. "The defense is now worried about the bubble and is rapidly pursuing to the football."

That's when their aggressive pursuit works against them, leaving them wide open for a big gainer.

"We flip it out there and, as we do, the quarterback watches the play. He literally stands there and watches the play a little bit and lets

The surprise element more than the play itself is how Joe Tiller has been so successful with the trick plays he's run over the years.

the defense pursue the play," Tiller explains. "Then he takes off in the opposite direction up the sideline and we have a double-pass, where the guy throws it back to him."

Tiller admits that they don't run the play as much as they used to—the best he can remember, the Boilermakers ran the play for a score a few years ago with Drew Brees starting and finishing the play.

"We're down to running this play maybe once a year now," he says. "We used to run it about every fourth game because people were still trying to get used to the offense. Now they're more used to it, so we can't run it as often."

Ironically, the repetitions needed to plant the seed in the opposing defenses' minds goes against Tiller's beliefs as to when to run a 'deceptive,' an idea he learned while attending a clinic held by legendary coach Paul Brown.

"[Brown] mentioned that kind of a rule of thumb, you want to run your trick play before they run theirs," Tiller says and laughs. "So you kind of want to get it out of the can early in the game, in the first quarter or the first half."

"But often times, when you use a trick play, it's not so much the play itself that leads to the success so much as it is the surprise element," he adds. "Calling the right play at the right time against the right opponent in the right environment has as much to do with the success of the play as the design of the play."

Or the play's name. ■

BUBBLE SCREEN THROWBACK TO QUARTERBACK

The quarterback receives the ball from the center out of the shotgun and throws the ball to the receiver just as he would in the bubble screen. The wide receivers will also perform their normal bubble screen techniques.

The blocks by the wide receivers are just as important, because now the inside receiver must have time to stop, turn and throw the ball back to the quarterback.

The backside receivers must run their routes at full speed. They must act as decoys and pull the defensive backs across the field to create room for the quarterback to run his route.

BY JEFF CUMMINS

DAVID WAS GOLIATH

To this day, Illinois' David Williams is one of the most impressive wide receivers the game has ever seen, and the College Football Hall of Fame has recognized that

During his career at Illinois, David Williams averaged over 13 yards per catch while hauling in 245 receptions—including 101 in 1984.

It seems hard to believe, but some scouts doubted whether David Williams would ever become a big-time college football player.

Looking back, it seems absurd that anyone would question Williams' talent, but in the early 1980s, his lack of experience concerned some people in college football.

"I played only one year of high school ball and one year of junior college ball, and some people thought I was a fluke," said Williams. "A scout from Washington State didn't think I was that good, and he told me thought I didn't have the talent to play in Division I. A couple of years later, I saw him, and we smiled at each other."

It's a safe bet that then-Illinois head coach Mike White was smiling while Williams played for the Illini—and many of their fans were smiling as well. Williams played for the Illini from 1983-85, establishing himself as one of the greatest receivers of all time. By the time he was done, Williams caught 245

ONE MOMENT IN TIME

In 1983, David Williams led the Illini on a magical 9-0 run through the Big Ten schedule, winning games they weren't expected to win, as well as earning their first conference title in 20 years and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

"We were up, 10-6, against Michigan, and whoever didn't score next was going to be in trouble," said Williams. "We were 46 yards away, and on the first play of the fourth quarter, I caught a pass, went over the middle, outraced the defender and dove into the end zone."

"The fans wound up picking me up off the ground. We won the game, 16-6, in Champagne, and it turned out to be huge. Needless to say, Williams' heroics touched off a mild celebration in Champagne."

"The fans were incredible," Williams noted. "At most schools, they stop you from tearing the goal posts down. When we won, they must have said, 'We'll buy new posts.'"

—JC

"When everyone saw me, they got real quiet," said Williams, sounding so confident and enthusiastic you get the feeling he'd be willing to play today.

"When the whole defense looks at you, that's when you know you've arrived."

Williams readily admitted that he wasn't the only reason defenses were worried. With White and quarterback Jack Trudeau directing the offense, Illini opponents had their hands full during Williams' era.

"Mike was a very methodical coach; he'd make you do something over and over until you got it right, and then he'd give you a different look and a different situation," said Williams. "The games were easier than the practices, because in practice, the defense knew what you were doing. In games, the other team's defense was thinking."

And Williams held Trudeau in equally high esteem. "I can't say enough about Jack," he said. "He'd change all the plays based on the defense at the line of scrimmage. Actually, it seemed like your coach was standing on the field."

Fast forward to 20 years later, and Williams, who lives in Cardena, Calif., still uses that competitive edge in his work as an outside sales representative for the Jorgensen Steel Company, where he calls on aerospace companies to determine their needs for materials.

"I look at the sales for the day, see who we need to call and who we need to follow up on," Williams said. "I compete against four steel companies now, but there are so many guys behind the scenes." ■

Goin' Streaking

THERE HAVE BEEN SOME OBSTACLES ALONG THE WAY, BUT UC DAVIS HAS MANAGED TO KEEP ITS WINNING SEASONS STREAK ALIVE. NOW WITH ITS MOVE TO DIVISION I-AA, THOSE OBSTACLES ARE GOING TO COME MUCH MORE OFTEN

The year was 1969. The Miracle Mets, World Series champions. Richard Nixon, President of the United States. Neil Armstrong became the first man to walk on the moon. Led Zeppelin's "Whole Lotta Love" was the top-rated song in the land. Gasoline cost 29 cents per gallon.

The University of California Davis football team wrapped up a desultory 3-7 season. It would be the last time a Davis team would have a non-winning season until...well, since the Mets, Nixon, Armstrong and Zeppelin each made their own history.

UC Davis, located 19 miles east of Sacramento, Calif., owns more current consecutive winning seasons, 35, than any Division I, I-AA or II institution. The Aggies' record in that time frame includes three times as many wins as losses, 288-90-1, through 2004. The 27,000-student university is in the third year of its four-year transition period from Division II to Division I-AA in football.

Three men have guided the program during the three-and-a-half-decade success span. Jim Sochor, enshrined in the College Football Hall of Fame, took over in 1970 and retired in '88 with a school record 156 victories. Sochor coached Ken O'Brien, one of the six quarterbacks taken in the first round of the legendary "Class of 1983," a group that included future Hall of Famers John Elway and Dan Marino.

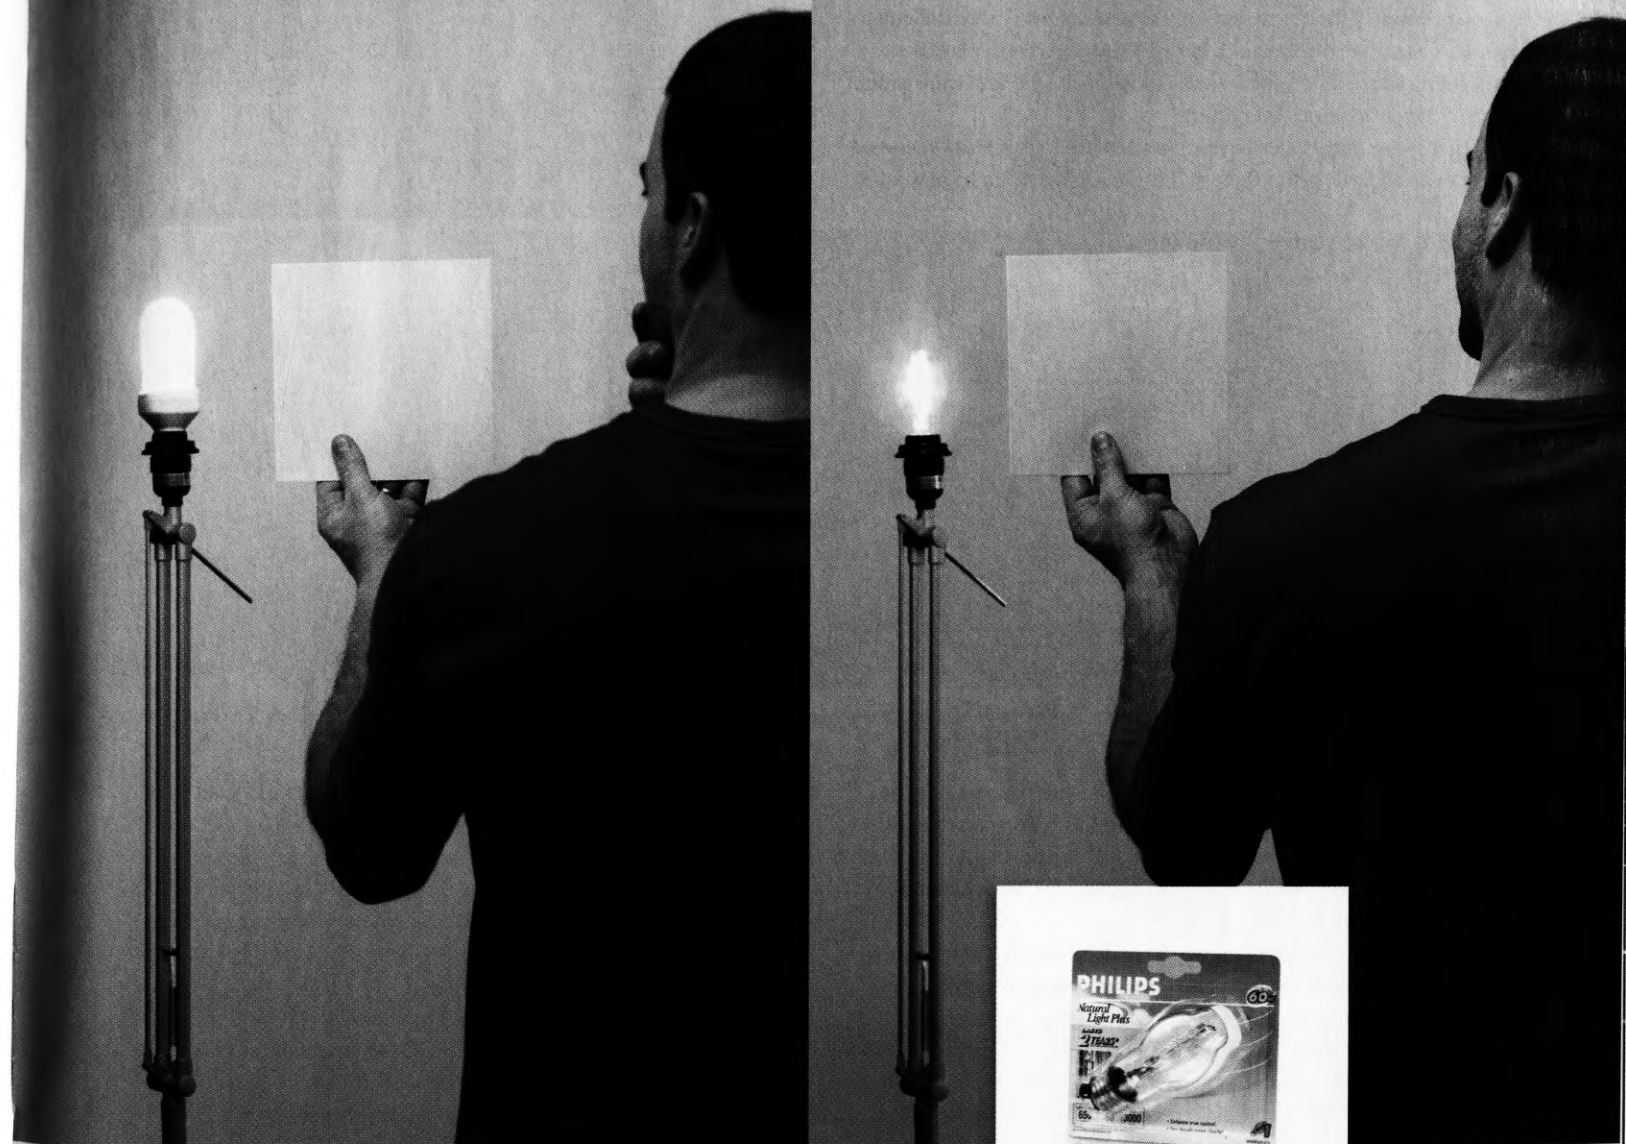

Bob Foster coached from 1989 through '92. Current head coach Bob Biggs, now in his 13th year, was elevated from offensive coordinator/assistant head coach in '93 and earned his 100th win last season at Northern Colorado.

"When you're in the midst of it, you don't really think a whole lot about it," Biggs says. "I think once I step away [from coaching] and look back on it, then I'll think of all the things we've done."

One thing Biggs has never done is talk to his teams about what's known on campus simply as "The Streak."

"The burden is always going to be there," Biggs says. "Every year, when we have gotten that sixth win, it's a sigh of relief for the players. None of them want to be on the team that allowed the streak to be snapped."

The Aggies 13-year head coach Bob Biggs, who earned his 100th win in 2004 and was the offensive coordinator for the Aggies before taking over the top position, has been a large part of keeping "The Streak" alive.

The 2005 Aggies have played their most formidable schedule. The first three games included a visit from New Hampshire, a I-AA playoff team a year ago, Big Sky contender Portland State and a mid-September contest at Stanford, the first I-A team the Aggies played since 1997.

Biggs knows "The Streak" will become more and more difficult to maintain. His goal, often stated, is for UC Davis "to be a playoff-contending team" when the school is eligible for the I-AA tournament in 2007. "That overrides everything."

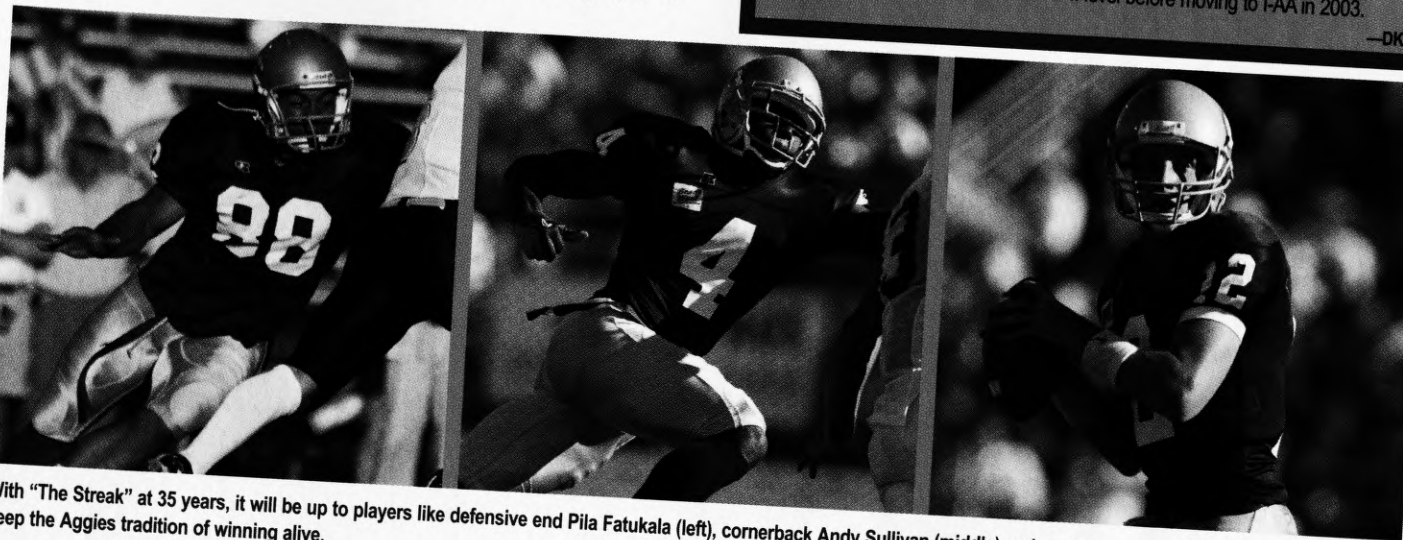

To get there, the Aggies have upgraded their competition considerably from their Division II days. It is the school's aim to play a I-A opponent each year in the future. San Jose State comes onto the schedule in 2006 and '07, and down-the-road I-A opponents ideally will be in state or West Coast based. California and UCLA are possibilities. Series with I-AA powers Eastern Washington, Montana and Northeastern await as well.

With "The Streak" at 35 years, it will be up to players like defensive end Pila Fatukala (left), cornerback Andy Sullivan (middle) and sophomore quarterback Jon Grant (right) to keep the Aggies tradition of winning alive.

"It is a tremendous challenge to keep [the streak] intact, but we expect to do so," Biggs says. "[The schedule] is more difficult but people don't care about that."

"Our program over the years has been built on us being one of the top programs in the country. Where we were in Division II is where we want to be at I-AA, and that is to contend for a championship."

While at the D-II level, Davis appeared in 18 playoff games, the most of any D-II school.

Biggs' first mark on the program was as its quarterback. In 1971, he engineered a comeback that produced 16 points in the final 20 seconds, the "Miracle Win" over Cal State Hayward. His favorite receiver was current Oregon head coach Mike Bellotti.

While Biggs hasn't quite seen all of the winning seasons, Fred Arp has. Almost.

The Aggies' assistant head coach and defensive line mentor is in his 39th season at the school. Arp began coaching as an undergraduate in the late 1960s and, save for a one-year hiatus in '72, has witnessed every year of "The Streak."

There have been several close calls. In '79, the Aggies came back from a 0-2-1 start to win six of their final seven games. The team opened 1-4 two years later "and we had to kick a field goal to win 6-3 the next week," Arp recalls. Five wins in a row to close the '81 season produced a 6-4 record. The team would go on to win 17 straight, still a school record, advancing to the D-II championship game in '82. In '96 and '97, UC Davis lost its first two games each season, but rebounded after the slow start to make the D-II semifinals both years.

After 10 seasons as an independent, the school joined the Great West Football Conference last season. Other football-only GWFC members include South Dakota State, North Dakota State, Cal Poly, Northern Colorado and Southern Utah. Saint Mary's was supposed to join, but gave up football in 2004.

"It's great to be in a conference again," Arp, the point man for future scheduling, says. "It's just that the membership keeps changing."

Indeed, Northern Colorado is headed for the Big Sky, so the GWFC will undergo a slight facelift come '06. Several Western schools, some making the move from II to I-AA, are candidates for membership.

"Our rivalry with Cal Poly goes back so many years," Arp says, "and there are a lot of players, back then and now, who [come down to] the final choice between going to Davis or going to Poly."

"It is extremely important for us to maintain that rivalry, and it's important for us to play in a conference where we can develop other rivalries."

All the while putting "The Streak" on the line, yet again. ■

DOUBLE TROUBLE

The Mickey Throwback Double Pass hooked the 'Horns for Mike Leach and Texas Tech

With last season's top-rated passing offense, Texas Tech would have been more aptly nicknamed the Air Raiders rather than the Red Raiders.

That proficient aerial attack is the signature of Tech head coach Mike Leach, who has left his mark on programs at Valdosta State, Kentucky and Oklahoma before settling in at Lubbock. Over his career, Leach has developed a stable of superb quarterbacks, including Tim Couch, Josh Heupel, Kliff Kingsbury and B.J. Symons.

Imagine the surprise the Texas Longhorns felt three years ago, when a third-and-long pass with less than three minutes remaining in the game came not from Kingsbury, but from split back Mickey Peters. The completion thwarted UT's comeback plans as Leach's squad held on for a 38-34 victory.

The play is called "Trips Right, SB Randy TE Pass." With Peters acting as triggerman, Leach called it "Mickey Throwback Double Pass."

Calling a trick play—and especially the Mickey Throwback Double Pass—that late in the game is usually the last thing most coaches, including Leach, would normally do.

"Generally, tricks are best run early to make something happen early," he said. "You usually don't do it late. You usually do something that you're really solid with and comfortable with. But this particular time we threw it to Mickey Peters, who threw it to Wes Welker and got about 30 yards. We held onto the ball and won by four points."

Generally, Mike Leach likes to run a trick play early in the game to rattle the opposing coaches and players.

COURTESY TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY

Leach's reach into his bag of tricks is a lot less common than some think. In fact, he insists that bag is perceived to be deeper than it actually is.

"We probably have somewhere in the neighborhood of six trick plays ready at any time, of which, when the season is over, we probably run two," he said. "Maybe the fact that we throw it, people view us as tricky, but generally what makes our stuff run is just the bread-and-butter pass plays. They're bread-and-butter plays that we run every day."

Leach keeps opposing defensive coordinators and their charges off balance by using a multitude of formations.

"Offensively, you'll have planned to do a couple of things out of a formation—say two or three things you can run out of it," he explained. "The edge that it gives you is a defense's imagination runs wild with what you can run out of it. Even though you can only run a few things, they don't know what those few things are on the front end.

"I'm not running that for their players as much as for their coaches," he continued. "If you can get their coaches going over there on the sideline, scribbling a bunch of stuff up to try and stop it, or address a bunch of concerns, you get them rattled. Then they are going to rattle their players. And then a lot of things work that shouldn't or work better than they should." ■

THE MICKEY THROWBACK DOUBLE PASS

The play begins with quarterback Kliff Kingsbury turning and throwing a backward pass to split back Mickey Peters, who is lined up out to the right next to the flanker. Peters starts downfield, drawing the strong safety and strong-side linebacker up. Tight end Wes Welker makes contact with the strong-side linebacker then runs by him and completes his out pattern. Peters stops, then throws long to the wide-open Welker.

After both Louisville and Boise State tried playing BCS bowl busters, they found themselves pitted against each other in the Autozone Liberty Bowl last season.

ON

SUCCESS

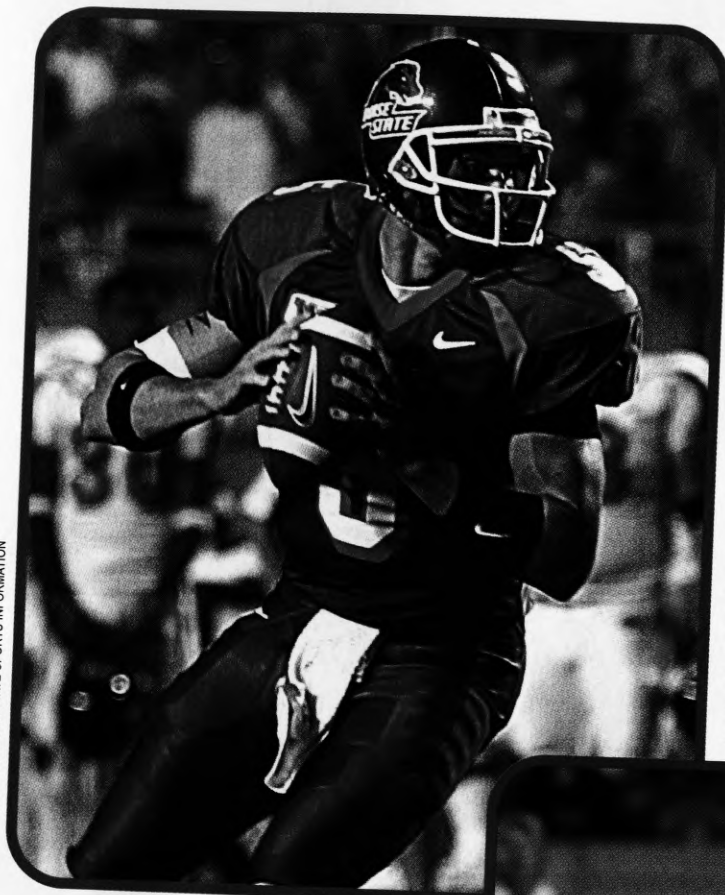

FOLLOWING A GREAT 2004 SEASON AND A TREMENDOUS AUTOZONE LIBERTY BOWL SHOWDOWN, DAN HAWKINS AND BOBBY PETRINO HAVE TAKEN THE BOISE STATE AND LOUISVILLE FOOTBALL PROGRAMS, RESPECTIVELY, TO NEW HEIGHTS

Louisville's Bobby Petrino and Boise State's Dan Hawkins are two of the hottest coaching commodities in college football, each leading his team into the top 10 a year ago with programs not considered among college football's bluebloods.

Petrino and Hawkins, both 44, are still relatively young, each with his own style but each with an offensive imagination that would rival a charging general. They matched wits in last year's AutoZone Liberty Bowl, with Petrino's Cardinals coming out on top in just the kind of game that everyone imagined, a 44-40 fireworks extravaganza.

Touchdown Illustrated asked them their thoughts coming off the 2004 season and how the wonderful campaigns set things up for '05.

top four or five schools could compete with anyone in the Big East, but there were some weeks where we had a little bit of a break.

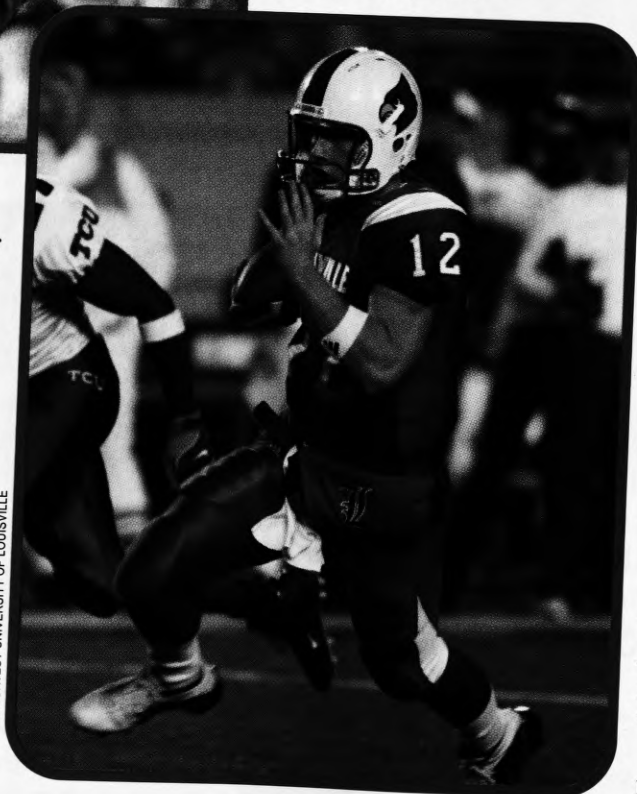

TDI: Coach Hawkins, you faced Bobby Petrino's Louisville team in the AutoZone Liberty Bowl game last year. What was your impression of him?

DH: He's an excellent coach. Their players are very well coached. They do a great job. They do a lot of things that give you problems. They do a great job recruiting. He's got them as one of the elite teams in the country.

TDI: Coach Petrino, what was the key to your bowl game victory over Boise State?

BP: Our defense kept us in the game early, and then our offense had enough poise in the second half to execute and not really worry about the scoreboard and win it late. It was just a great team effort.

In 2004, Jared Zabransky (left) threw for nearly 3,000 yards for the pass-happy, high-scoring Broncos of Boise State. Meanwhile, Brian Brohm earned Freshman of the Year honors in Conference USA while splitting time at quarterback with the now graduated Stefan LaFors.

Touchdown Illustrated: Did you two envision the kind of success you've had or has it reached beyond your expectations?

Dan Hawkins: I'm always one of those big thinkers. I always have a lot of high goals and high standards. I'm always amazed at what can happen when you dream big and back it up with a little bit of work, but I'm not surprised at all.

Bobby Petrino: It's something we thought we could do. We felt good about the players we had in the system and we felt really good about the ability to recruit young men here. It might have happened a little bit quicker than we thought. We're having another really good year and hopefully we build it into something where we can consistently compete at that level.

TDI: Coach Petrino, what were your thoughts going into the Big East this year?

BP: Last year our starters were on the bench a lot by late in the third quarter. That makes it easy to stay healthy. I think we've been in a lot of battles that came down to late in the fourth quarter and so had to be in great physical condition. In Conference USA, I think the TDI: What are your impressions of Coach Hawkins?

BP: I knew he coached at Willamette and my father coached at Carroll College, NAIA schools, so I was aware of what they were doing offensively. I've got a tremendous amount of respect for Boise and how they function offensively and defensively. I sent two coaches out there in the spring to study what they're doing offensively and he was gracious enough to welcome us out there.

TDI: Coach Hawkins, your current quarterback, Jared Zabransky, is he the prototypical quarterback for your system?

DH: There's no real prototypical guy for us. Our offensive coordinator, Chris Petersen, does a great job of molding the offense around the players we have had.

TDI: Coach Petrino, same question. Is your current quarterback, Brian Brohm, the prototypical quarterback for your system?

BP: I don't know if there is a particular type. We have this great big playbook. We try to introduce it all to the quarterback and find out what they do well and what they can't do and adjust it to them. Brian is a very talented young man, not only physically but mentally. He can absorb a lot of information.

TDI: What's the most fun thing about game day for the both of you?

DH: Seeing it all come together. Seeing all the hard work the players and staff put in come to fruition. There's certainly a tremendous amount of poetry and synchronicity that goes on. That's one of the great joys about football, because it's such a great strategist's game. Being able to see all those things come to fruition and seeing your players rejoice in the moment and have some success shows that all the hard work is really rewarding.

BP: When the kickoff occurs and you can just focus on the game. Just being out there and calling the game is fun. It's not a lot of fun leading up to it. The clock does not tick. You sit there and wait around a lot on game day.

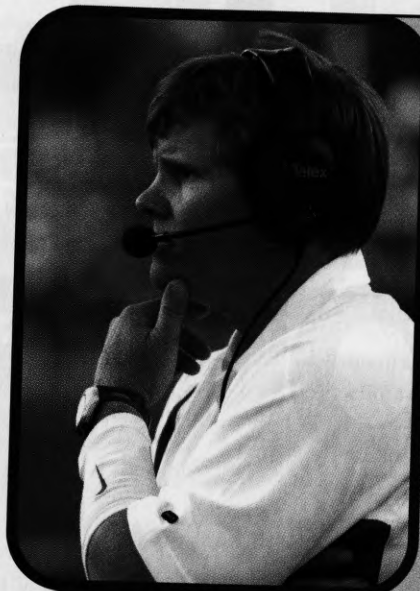

TDI: Coach Hawkins, do you see yourself staying at Boise State long-term?

DH: I hope so. You never know. You lose a couple years in a row and you're out on your ear. I like it here. It's a great place. It's been very good to me and we've had a lot of success. I think it's a place that's really on the rise. We're upgrading facilities. We've had a ton of success, and I think we can have more.

TDI: Do either of you have any NFL aspirations?

DH: You never exactly know how things work. There was a time that certainly was burning at my heart. I'm not saying at some point in my career I wouldn't love to do it because it's a great level, a great experience and it's hard-core football, and that part is certainly appealing. But I'm also the kind of guy who thinks it'll happen like it's supposed to happen. If I'm meant to be here 20 years, I will, and if I'm meant to be in the NFL, that'll happen as well.

BP: I'm not sure. I enjoyed my time there (three years with the Jacksonville Jaguars). I have a tremendous amount of respect for the players because not only do they have the best talent, they're the

HAWKINS AND PETRINO ON...

FIRST COACHING JOB:

Dan Hawkins: I was the defensive coordinator at UC Davis. All the time spent on planning, all the hard work, then having it pay off, seeing the smiles on the players' faces when they take charge and make it happen.

Bobby Petrino: When I was a student assistant at Carroll College and drove from Helena, Mont., to Sonoma State in Northern California. I took us two days to get there. It was a long, long trip, but it was a lot of fun. On the way back we stopped and watched a 49ers game.

BIGGEST INFLUENCES:

DH: Bob Foster, the head coach when I was at UC Davis. He's a great tactician, great with players and he has great perspective on and off the field.

BP: My father [Bob]. He was the head coach at Carroll College for 29 years. I knew at a very young age that's what I was going to do. When other people were studying business and pre-med, I was in the film room. I still bring him out for spring ball every year so he can evaluate what's going on, and then he can coach me up at night.

FAVORITE PLAYERS:

DH: John Homer, a quarterback at Willamette. He was kind of an undersized guy, but a great leader with a tremendous amount of heart who just loved football, just a great field general.

BP: It would be hard to pick one out as my favorite. The one I cheered for more than anybody was a quarterback at Idaho named Steve Nolan, a fifth-year senior. He never played much and our starter got hurt, and Nolan came in and won nine straight games for us. I thought that was one of the most rewarding seasons to watch him perform like that.

THIS YEAR'S BEST NFL PROSPECTS:

DH: Daryn Colledge (6-5, 298 pounds). He's our left tackle and I think he'll end up being a first- or second-round pick.

BP: Of the senior class, it would have to be linebacker Brandon Johnson. He's 6-5 and can run. If he plays the way he can, I could see him being drafted fairly high.

OFFSEASON HOBBIES:

DH: I'm a big reader. I don't read a lot of fiction. Most of the stuff I read is autobiographical or historical in nature. I take a lot of pleasure in learning. I like to exercise and spend a lot of time with my family. I love football and learning about football.

BP: I like to jog and play a little golf, which is something I enjoy, and I do a lot of water skiing. My whole family goes water skiing as often as we can.

hardest workers. But for my family and the way I want to raise my kids, college football's much better for them.

TDI: Where do you two see yourselves in 10 years?

DH: Hopefully, I'm still happily married. Hopefully, my kids are still the great people that they are. Hopefully, I'm still surrounded by great people. I don't know where the road will lead. I'm always amazed that it's happened how it has. I just try to get better and improve, and make the most of each day and let it happen like it's supposed to happen.

BP: Hopefully, I'm here. Hopefully, we're able to build this program into a national [power] and win a lot of games. And if I were still the head coach, that would be good. ■

*Is it possible to think of a health insurer
as you would a next door neighbor?*

A familiar face. A supportive shoulder. A willing hand. Through the years, Highmark has funded programs that address domestic violence and promote nurturing, positive family environments. Supported numerous health and wellness programs. And worked to keep donations flowing into local United Ways. So why do we do all this, and more?

To improve the health and well-being of our communities, of course. And, to make some good friends along the way.

Dear Fans:

I hope that our fans will applaud and frequent the 16 supporters listed below from our community who have supported our players with evening snacks through the grueling practice sessions in August. Our "August Snacks Program" has been a huge success. In the past, our players had nothing to eat in the evening after practices, conditioning and lifting. I can't tell you how truly appreciative our players are of these generous donations. This is the fifth consecutive year that the community has reached out and assisted us. Our players have asked me to thank each of the restaurants/eateries below. In nearly 30 years of coaching at the Division I level, I never had players respond with such gratitude.

Please support these Edinboro businesses! THANK YOU.

PSAC Names Kline and Larson Scholar-Athletes of the Year

Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference Commissioner Steve Murray has announced that 1,366 student-athletes from the league have been recognized as "Scholar-Athletes" for the 2004-05 academic year. The total eclipses last year's record-setting total of 1,239.

Headlining the list of recipients are this year's league Scholar-Athletes of the Year, Kutztown University's Laura Kline and California University's Mike Larson. Those awards are selected by the league's sports information directors.

Larson, a senior baseball player from Weyburn, Saskatchewan, is a repeat selection for Scholar-Athlete of the Year. A criminal justice major, he recently graduated from California with a 3.85 GPA. This past season, he started 49 of California's 50 games, and led the team in several categories including hits (62), home runs (8), runs (43), RBI (49), total bases (107) and slugging percentage (.622). He finished his career among California's top five in batting average (.375), hits (191), doubles (43), at bats (505) and among top 10 in homers (18) and RBI (119).

The multi-talented Larson was a three-time All-PSAC-West choice. In 2004 he led California to its first PSAC Championship title since 1979, earning first-team honors as an outfielder, second-team honors at pitcher and being named the West's Athlete of the Year. Larson is a two-time ESPN The Magazine/CoSIDA Academic All-American, a two-time all-region player, and has made the Dean's List every semester at California.

Mike Larson

Kline, a junior standout on Kutztown's field hockey and track & field squads, hails from Reading. She carries a 4.00 GPA as a special education major. This past year she earned All-PSAC certificates in field hockey, indoor and outdoor track & field. In field hockey she was a second-team choice for a defense that posted a PSAC-best six shutouts in league competition. The Golden Bears allowed just 1.21 goals per game in conference action, tied for second best in the PSAC. She chipped in with two goals and four assists as well.

Laura Kline

Kline also played a key role on Kutztown's PSAC Championship squads in both indoor and outdoor track & field. During the winter she finished second in the 400-meter run and as a part of the 4-x400 meter relay team. During the outdoor season she paced the field in the 400-meter hurdles by running a time of 1:03.10, and was part of the winning 4x400 relay team which finished in a time of 3:53.01. Both times established new stadium records. In addition, she qualified for the league championships in the 200- and 400-meter races, and earlier in the season, ran a PSAC season-best time of 1:03.05 in the 400-meter hurdles.

The PSAC Scholar-Athlete of the Year Awards are presented to the top student-athletes who have achieved at least a 3.25 cumulative grade point average while competing at an outstanding athletic level. Student-athletes must have been recognized as a conference Fall, Winter or Spring Top Ten Award winner to be eligible for the honor.

Since arriving in Edinboro in January 2000, I have felt it is essential that we give to the community and vice versa. It has been very gratifying to the response of local organizations in assisting Edinboro football. Three years ago the service organizations proved invaluable working at the Bills - Browns scrimmage, and for the last two years have run our 50/50 raffles. Their assistance was greatly appreciated. Myself and my coaching staff looks forward to working with these organizations once again this year, and thank them for their support of Edinboro Football.

Sincerely,

Coach Tep

Athletic Fund Drive

Thank you for your support of the Annual Athletic Fund Drive.

A year ago I told you that it was a year to remember. How do you come back a year later and say that we exceeded last year's results. Just as a year ago, Edinboro University brought home three Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference championships. The Fighting Scots repeated as champions in football and women's cross country, and over the winter brought home the men's basketball crown.

The women's cross country proved that you can peak at the right time, finishing second at the NCAA Division II National Championships as four runners earned All-American honors. The men's cross country team, meanwhile, also earned a top ten finish, placing seventh. In addition to those two teams, football, men's basketball, wrestling, swimming and track & field either competed as a team or had individuals qualify for NCAA Championships.

It was indeed the year of the individual, as no fewer than 15 individuals earned All-American status. Shawn Bunch made a run at becoming Edinboro's third NCAA Division wrestling champion before settling for second place at 133 lbs. In men's basketball, Jakim Donaldson was a consensus first team All-American. And keep an eye out for Brooke Heath, a freshman swimmer who earned a pair of All-American certificates at Nationals. Ryan Coon doubled as a cross country and track All-American.

I have to tell you it would be a disappointing year if those successes weren't duplicated in the classroom. Fortunately, that was not the case. A total of 116 student-athletes were recognized at our annual Scholar-Athlete Banquet. These individuals were honored for maintaining a cumulative grade point average of 3.00 or better. Sixty Fighting Scots were accorded PSAC Scholar-Athlete status, with a 3.25 GPA or higher.

That's what we're all about at Edinboro - building winners, on the playing fields and in the classroom. We're beginning to see the fruits of our labor in terms of fundraising, as improvements to the wrestling locker room were completed last fall. A new track is being installed at Sox Harrison Stadium, and improvements are being made in the grandstand. Next up - more locker room improvements, and a new and improved weight room.

These projects are all part of the University's Capital Campaign. Another area where your donations make an immediate difference are endowed scholarships. Last year more than 80 endowed scholarships were awarded. This is a number that continues to grow, and makes a very tangible difference.

Your support has been greatly appreciated throughout the years. As we begin our eighth annual athletic fund drive, we hope you'll again consider a generous contribution. And please don't forget to let others know about what we're accomplishing and what we can do in the future with their help.

Goodbye Seniors

by Bob Shreve, Sports Information Director

We've come to that time of year when it's time to bid farewell to our seniors. Each year seems to get more difficult, in part because of the class they've exhibited, and in part because of their role in rebuilding Edinboro's winning tradition. Today, we say goodbye to 15 seniors making their final regular season home appearance at Sox Harrison Stadium. Unfortunately, space does not permit us to do justice to their accomplishments. We did want to take a moment to present them to you one last time, as they answered two questions for us. Good luck seniors, and we wish you the very best in your future endeavors.

JUSTIN BOUCH (QB, Brackenridge, PA)

What is your most memorable moment while playing football at Edinboro? "The whole Bentley trip, from going to the dorms to watch ESPNNews to see where we were playing, flying there and Pickle being scared. Then in the locker room after the game getting two big hugs from Nate Eimer and Justin Lipscomb."

What will you miss most about your time at Edinboro? "The brothers that I have made over the last five years. And just playing the great game of football."

NATE EIMER (TE, Oswego, IL)

What will you miss most about your time at Edinboro? "The whole family atmosphere. I have a lot of people whom I have become real close with over the years and it will be hard when we go our separate ways."

SETH FRAGALE (DE, Emporium, PA)

What is your most memorable moment while playing football at Edinboro? "My best memory would have to be the trip up to Boston to face Bentley. The entire team was excited to fly (except coach Peluso and Christopher Amico). It was an interesting site upon our arrival. It was snowing. It kept snowing and snowing. When we pulled into the hotel there was at least six inches of snow that had fallen. Boy-o-boy, those beds were comfortable. I, myself, wasn't afraid of the flying we did, or the snow, and especially not Bentley. I was afraid of getting pink eye from those tight-knit, extremely close offensive guys. The game was a shootout. Back and forth we battled for the lead. We prevailed and enjoyed our trip home. I think Chafeh even got Caroline's (the flight attendant) phone number."

What will you miss most about your time at Edinboro? "Sure, I will miss the excitement and adrenaline from playing the game. I am going to miss most the companionship that I have had with my teammates. The fun in the locker room, away trips, and the dance. I am thankful for all the great memories and will surely miss them."

GREG MacANN (DE, Rochester, NY)

C.J. TRIVISONNO (TE, Kirtland, OH)

What is your most memorable moment while playing football at Edinboro? "My most memorable moment while playing football at Edinboro was beating IUP in the 2003 season."

What will you miss most about your time at Edinboro? "I would definitely have to say that I will miss the good times that I have with my teammates and the comraderie we have built as a team."

JERMAINE TRUAX (CB, Horseheads, NY)

What is your most memorable moment while playing football at Edinboro? "Playing against Saginaw Valley, the number one ranked team in the country, and having the opportunity to cover two current NFL receivers."

What will you miss most about your time at Edinboro? "Suiting up on Saturday's knowing we have an opportunity to win every game. There's nothing like being a part of a great team that is nationally ranked."
