Today's Game

We gather together today for the last time in 2007. This afternoon's contest with Slippery Rock has a great deal of meaning.

First of all, we will honor 16 seniors making their final home appearance today.

In addition, this afternoon's game holds a great deal of significance in the Northeast Region Playoff picture.

Whether Edinboro is playing for a playoff berth or just playing the role of spoiler is really out of the Fighting Scots' hands. With Edinboro ranked 12th in the latest region poll, the Fighting Scots are probably on the outside looking in.

Slippery Rock, on the other hand, is ranked eighth in the region and would stand a solid chance of garnering one of the six playoff berths with a win over the Fighting Scots.

Needless to say, this won't be your run-of-the-mill last game of the year. Look for a hard-hitting, competitive game between two of the best teams the PSAC -- and the Northeast Region -- has to offer.

Now let's get back to our seniors for a minute. These young men have made us proud to say we are a Fighting Scot fan. We wish them the very best in their future endeavors. (For a look at our 16 seniors, please see page 60).

The Coaches

Scott Browning (Ohio State '81) took over as Edinboro's 13th head coach on January 5, 2006. He was certainly no stranger to Fighting Scot football, however, serving as an assistant coach for the previous twenty years. While at Edinboro he has coached the offensive linemen, defensive backs and running backs, along with serving as the offensive coordinator. Browning became the first head coach at Edinboro to debut with a win since Bill McDonald in 1969 when the Fighting Scots opened the 2006 season with a 28-14 win at West Chester. He went on to lead Edinboro to a 6-5 finish, the most wins ever by a first-year coach. He has a 13-8 career record, tying the record for most wins by a coach in his first two seasons. (For more on Scott Browning, see pages 6-7.)

Dr. George Mihalik (Slippery Rock '76) is completing his 20th season as Slippery Rock's head coach, and 36th year as a part of The Rock program. Mihalik owns an impressive 135-79-4 record during his tenure as the SRU head coach. He ranks among the Division II leaders in both career wins and winning percentage. The former starting quarterback at Slippery Rock, he has gone on to guide The Rock to four PSAC West championships and berths in the NCAA Playoffs three times.

Last Year's Game

Slippery Rock 24, Edinboro 21 ot

Trevor Harris led Edinboro to the game-tying touchdown in the final minute of play, a seven-yard strike to Kyle Witucki with 57 seconds left. Slippery Rock's Ryan Daniel spoiled the Fighting Scots' comeback hopes as he booted a 41-yard field goal in overtime. Harris would be sacked and fumble on third down to end the game. In a contest which featured some crazy weather, beginning with rain, followed by a second half hail storm and high winds, Edinboro took to the air, as Harris completed 20 of 29 passes for 258 yards. His SRU counterpart, Nate Crookshank, was 16 of 28 for 214 yards.

Scouting Slippery Rock

The Rock has posted an 8-2 record this season, with the losses coming to Indiana(Pa.) (34-31) and California(Pa.) (22-13). Oddly enough, both setbacks came at home. SRU is a perfect 4-0 on the road ... Slippery Rock hopes to gain its first NCAA playoff berth since 1999 ... The Rock showcases a diverse and high-powered offense. SRU leads the PSAC in total offense (460.0 ypg.) and is second in rushing offense (259.8 ypg.). Only California(Pa.) has held SRU under 400 yards of offense ... the defense isn't too shabby, either. While allowing just 315.6 ypg. (4th in PSAC), the aggressive defense is second in sacks (33).

Players to Watch

Nate Crookshank, QB -- the 5-10, 190 lb. senior has passed for 1,984 yards with 19 TDs and 9 INTs, matching his season high for TD passes. He's an elusive player and has been sacked just nine times, the least in the PSAC. Crookshank ranks first in career completion (543), second in career attempts (966), second in career yards passing (7,155) and second in career touchdowns passing (56).

Corey Manfull, RB -- after sitting out the 2006 campaign due to a severe hand injury, the 5-11, 200 lb. junior has come back with a vengeance. He ranks second in the PSAC with 1,086 yards on 178 carries with 11 TDs. That figure ranks 17th in SRU history.

Colin Golden and Paul Favers, WRs -- along with Terry Grossetti, who has a team-high 39 catches, Golden and Favers have 33 and 27 catches, respectively. Golden, a senior, ranks second in career receptions with 133. Favers has 86 career receptions and moved into seventh place in yards receiving (1,480).

Cory Lacek, DE -- the 6-1, 235 lb. senior is the master at making tackles behind the line of scrimmage. He has 8.5 TFL and 7 sacks, giving him 28 career sacks, four shy of the school record. He was a third team Football Gazette All-American a year ago.

Clint Forsha, DT -- along with Lacek and DE Tyler Boudreau (10 sacks), he helps form a formidable defensive line. He ranks second on the team with 55 tackles, with 11 TFL and 9 sacks.

The Slippery Rock Game

Fighting Scots Ranked 12th in Region

With one week left in the regular season, Edinboro is ranked 12th in the Northeast Region. The top six teams in the region advance to the NCAA Division II Playoffs.

1.	California(Pa.)	10-0
2.	Shepherd	9-1
3.	West Chester	8-2
4.	Southern Connecticut State	7-3
5.	Bryant	7-2
6.	Indiana(Pa.)	8-1
7.	Bentley	7-2
8.	Slippery Rock	8-2
9.	West Liberty State	7-3
10.	Charleston(WV)	7-3

2008 Schedule Announced

While it is still tentative and subject to change, here's a look at the 2008 schedule. Please note that in week ten the Fighting Scots will play a home game against a team from the East. That weekend is reserved for the PSAC Championship Game. The top team from the East will play at the top team from the West, with the two second place teams meeting, and so on. In addition, the Fighting Scots may play an 11th game in late August.

Is it Bostic the TB, or Bostic the WR?

At the beginning of the year it was David Bostic the tailback, then David Bostic the defensive back, then David Bostic the wide receiver. When Houston Brown went down with a broken leg, it became David Bostic the tailback once again. The freshman from Tavares, FL is certainly versatile. And on Saturday against Clarion, add explosive to the terms used to describe him. Making his first start at tailback, Bostic became the first Fighting Scot to reach 100 yards rushing. He finished with 113 yards on 18 carries with 2 TDs after entering the game with 28 yards rushing. For good measure, he caught a career-high 9 passes for 86 yards, and also returned four kickoffs for 61 yards. All told, Bostic finished with 260 all-purpose yards.

Spreading the Wealth Around

While setting numerous passing records, Trevor Harris can certainly be credited with spreading the wealth. For instance, in Saturday's 49-30 win over Clarion, the sophomore completed passes to nine different receivers. Six players caught at least three passes, and four players caught passes for 50-or-more yards. That really has been the case all year. Twelve different players have caught passes, and nine players own at least one TD reception. As for Harris, well he just continues to rewrite the record books. His last assault on the records featured a 33-for-46 performance against Clarion, good for 415 yards and 4 TDs. He also rank for 18 yards and a score. The 433 yards was a new school record, and he also set season records for yards passing (2,893) and touchdowns passing (28).

Lucky Number 13

Head coach Scott Browning has tied Bill McDonald and Tom Hollman for most wins by a coach after two seasons. All three have won 13. It is particularly meaningful to Browning since he considers Tom Hollman one of his mentors.

On the Cover

It has always been my tradition to have the seniors on the Senior Day program cover. Unfortunately we were never able to gather everyone for that photo. I ended up putting a picture of Brian Shreve on the cover. Not an all-conference player, or even a starter, probably what jumps out most about Brian is he is my son. Like any parent I'd always looked forward to Senior Day with my son, but was caught off guard somewhat when he decided a week ago to forego his final year of eligibility. I commend him for choosing to move on with his life, knowing it was a difficult decision based on the friendships he has made and his love for football. I got to thinking that Brian represents all those players who toiled in anonymity for the love of the game, with little recognition but self-satisfaction. As for myself, I've watched him play football for too many years now, and can never convey my pride in his perseverance. This is my way of showing how much he means to me.

Welcome to Edinboro

Dear Family, Friends and Fans of the Fighting Scots:

It is a pleasure to be a part of the Fighting Scots Family at Edinboro University. In the short time I have been Edinboro's President, I have been impressed with the excitement and enthusiasm I have felt on campus, especially among our athletes and coaches. This year, for the first time in the school's history, we have artificial turf and lighting at Sox Harrison Stadium. McComb Fieldhouse has been extensively remodeled and now features, among other improvements, one of the finest weight rooms in the state.

We have adopted a new message for Edinboro: "Great Things Happen Here." That greatness applies to athletics as well, as it goes hand in hand with the academic development of our students. I have participated in athletics for most of my life. Prior to coming to Edinboro, I coached the men's and women's squash teams at St. Lawrence University, including at the national tournament.

At Edinboro, we are focused on raising our academic and athletic standards campus wide. As we grow, we will take the University not only to the next level, but to the level beyond that. We believe that everything we do at Edinboro should reflect the excellence of the institution.

I invite you to become a part of this new and "Great" era at Edinboro University.

Go Scots!

 Jeremy D. Brown, President

replace the natural grass. And it will now be illuminated, with lights being installed for the first time. Finally, a new scoreboard was installed.

Sox Harrison Stadium seats 6,000 people in its two grandstands, along with plenty of standing room. In addition to press boxes on both sides of the stadium, the facility has locker rooms, a training room and complete amenities for fans.

The stadium has undergone several renovations, including a new sound system and improved handicapped access areas in 1999. In 1997, a new grandstand was constructed on the visitor's side of the field, adding 2,500 permanent seats, along with a press box, locker rooms and a training room.

In addition to the football field, the facility contains complete track facilities.

Sox Harrison Stadium serves as the home of the Fighting Scots. Dedicated in 1965, the stadium honors the memory of B. Regis "Sox" Harrison, the head football and basketball coach at Edinboro University for 34 years. Sox Harrison was the key figure in the building of Edinboro's athletic program, unselfishly devoting 34 years of service to the University as an athletic director, coach and physical education instructor. Appropriately, he was the first member inducted into the Edinboro Athletic Hall of Fame in 1982.

Harrison coached the Fighting Scot football team from its inception in 1926 to 1938, the returned to guide the gridgers in 1941 and '42. In addition, he coached the men's basketball team for 23 seasons, from 1928-53, winning 175 games.

The stadium received a facelift this summer, giving it a spanking new look. Most noticeable is the installation of an artificial surface, Sportex, to

Head Coach

Scott Browning

2nd Year
Ohio State '81

Scott Browning knows a thing or two about the Edinboro football tradition. With twenty years under his belt as an assistant coach, he was all too familiar with the glory days of Edinboro football. So it didn't take him long to restore some lost traditions when he took over as the 13th head football coach of the Fighting Scots on January 5, 2006.

Most prevalent was the return to the "Boro", the common name the football team was referred to during the 1980's and '90's, some of the most successful periods in Edinboro football history.

One thing Browning didn't mess with was the tradition of winning. His first edition finished with a 6-5 record, the most wins ever under a first-year coach. But it didn't end just on the football field. The Fighting Scots excelled in the classroom, including a cumulative team GPA of over 2.8 for the spring semester.

Browning became the first coach at Edinboro since Sox Harrison to win his first two games as head coach. That happened in 1926, the first year of football at the Boro. Thanks to a 28-14 win at West Chester, he became the first coach since Bill McDonald in 1969 to win his first game as head coach. That victory, on the road at West Chester between a pair of 2005 NCAA playoff teams, also displayed Browning's propensity as a showboat gambler. The Fighting Scots went for it on fourth down four times, and made it three times.

"I am very pleased to announce the promotion of Scott Browning to the position of head football coach at Edinboro University," stated then President Dr. Frank G. Pogue at the time. "Scott has been a member of the Edinboro coaching staff for 20 years. He has demonstrated his ability to not only coach athletes on the playing field, but also to lead young men by the example of his character and by his dedication to them as students and as individuals. He will join our other highly successful coaches at Edinboro University."

After serving as the offensive line coach and recruiting coordinator in Lou Tepper's first season, Browning took over as the offensive coordinator in 2001.

He had previously served as the offensive coordinator for five seasons under Tom Hollman. In all, Browning had served as Edinboro's offensive line coach the previous 12 years.

Browning joined the Edinboro program in 1986 as the running backs coach under Steve Szabo. After two seasons on the offensive side of the ball, the graduate of The Ohio State University moved to the defensive side, serving as the defensive backfield coach under Hollman. In 1994 he moved back to offense as the

former President, Edinboro University

When Tepper came on board in 2000, Browning was appointed the recruiting coordinator in addition to his duties with the offensive line. A year later he was named the offensive coordinator, and the offensive line coach. He had remained in charge of the linemen since that time, coaching such All-Americans as Jeremy O'Day, Joe Valvoda and Greg Bzorek. The last two years Browning's offensive line led the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference in fewest sacks allowed.

Head Coach

Scott Browning is introduced as Edinboro's 13th head coach by then Edinboro University President Dr. Frank G. Pogue on January 5, 2006.

Fighting Scot offense made great strides over the last five years. Browning emphasized a balanced attack which showcased the combination of a strong ground game and dangerous aerial attack. Over his last three seasons Edinboro averaged 29.9 ppg. in 2003, 33.2 ppg. in '04, and 31.4 ppg. in '05.

All told, Browning has been an assistant coach on all seven of Edinboro's NCAA playoff teams, along with five of the nine PSAC champion squads. He took over a team which has been to the NCAA Division II Playoffs two of the last three years, and during that period has posted a 26-8 record. The 26 wins were the most in a three-year period in Edinboro history.

"It goes without saying that I am extremely excited to have this opportunity," noted an elated Browning. "I was proud to be a part of the teams in the 1990's that ranked among the best in Division II, and over the last few years we have once again elevated the program to one of the best in the country. The University and the community of Edinboro mean a great deal to me. Over the years we have tried to become an integral part of this community. I am thrilled that I can continue that association while taking over a group of players that represent the ideals I believe in."

"I'm sure you will see some changes in the future, but I can tell you this, the ideals remain in place for this program, and always have in the time I've been here. Without question we want to be successful on the field, and that means challenging for the PSAC West title. But we won't compromise integrity. We will continue to bring in young men who have the ability to be successful both in the classroom and on the football field. It is my sincere belief that when they take the field, they must wear the Edinboro jersey with pride, and when they are in the community, that they have earned the respect that comes with being a Fighting Scot."

Browning has served on the staffs at three NCAA Division I institutions. Prior to joining the Fighting Scot staff, he coached receivers and running backs at Ohio State for two years while serving as a graduate assistant. That group included Keith Byars. The Buckeyes went to the Rose Bowl in 1984, dropping a 20-17 decision to USC to finish with a 9-3 record. The following year Ohio State went bowling again, this time defeating Brigham Young, 10-7, in the Citrus Bowl, to once again finish at 9-3.

Wayne Bradford

Defensive Coordinator/Linebackers
9th Year
Salisbury State '90

Wayne Bradford is in his ninth year as a member of the Edinboro coaching staff. He enters his third season as the Fighting Scot defensive coordinator, and had previously held the same title in 1999 under former head coach Tom Hollman. After overseeing the defensive line for seven seasons, Bradford took over as the linebackers coach in 2006.

Bradford orchestrated the top defense in the country two years ago, as Edinboro paced Division II in scoring defense (9.3 ppg.), total defense (211.2 ypg.), and rushing defense (53.7 ypg.). In addition, Edinboro was third in pass efficiency defense and turnover margin. The Fighting Scots recorded three shutouts, the most since the 1975 team also shut out three opponents. A total of seven opponents were held to seven points or less. He coached four all-conference performers a year ago.

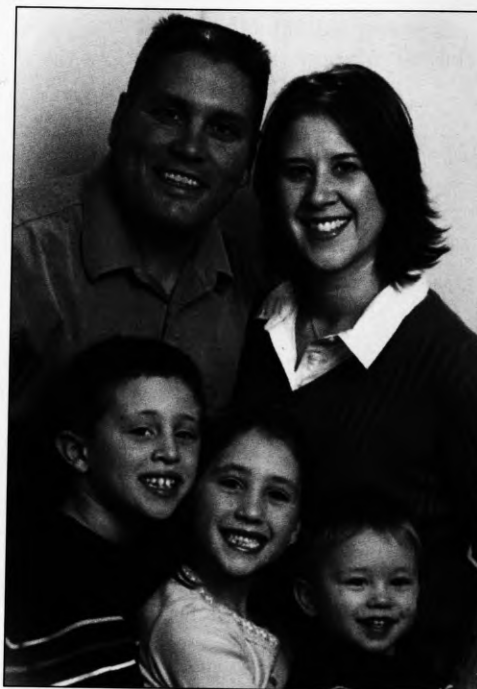

A year ago his defensive unit recorded two more shutouts while leading the PSAC in rushing defense (70.6 ypg.), good for third in the country.

Under Bradford's tutelage, Edinboro has had twelve first team All-PSAC West defensive linemen. In fact, he has been responsible for the last three PSAC West Defensive Players of the Year, with Ben Stroup earning the honor a year ago, Chris Amico the 2005 recipient, and Seth Fragale, the winner in 2004.

Bradford had previously been at Salisbury State since 1990, and was the Sea Gulls' defensive coordinator from 1994-98.

A graduate of Salisbury State, Bradford began his coaching career at his alma mater in 1990, serving as an assistant coach in charge of the linebackers (1990-92) and defensive linemen (1992-94). In 1994, he was promoted to defensive coordinator.

In 1997, Salisbury State ranked 38th in NCAA Division III in total defense, allowing just 268 yards per game. His 1995 defensive

RIVALS

Notre Dame vs. USC

Since 1926, USC vs. Notre Dame has been one of the biggest games of the year for the entire country. No matter where the two teams are ranked, when the gold helmets of Notre Dame and the Trojans of Southern California clash in the annually televised culture war, it's always a game worth watching. No school has beaten USC more than Notre Dame and no school has beaten Notre Dame more than USC. For bragging rights and a notch on the Jeweled Shillelagh (a replica Gaelic war club that serves as the rivalry's official trophy), they will meet this year for their 78th gridiron clash. We enlisted two Trojans and one of the Fighting Irish to help us break down the matchup.

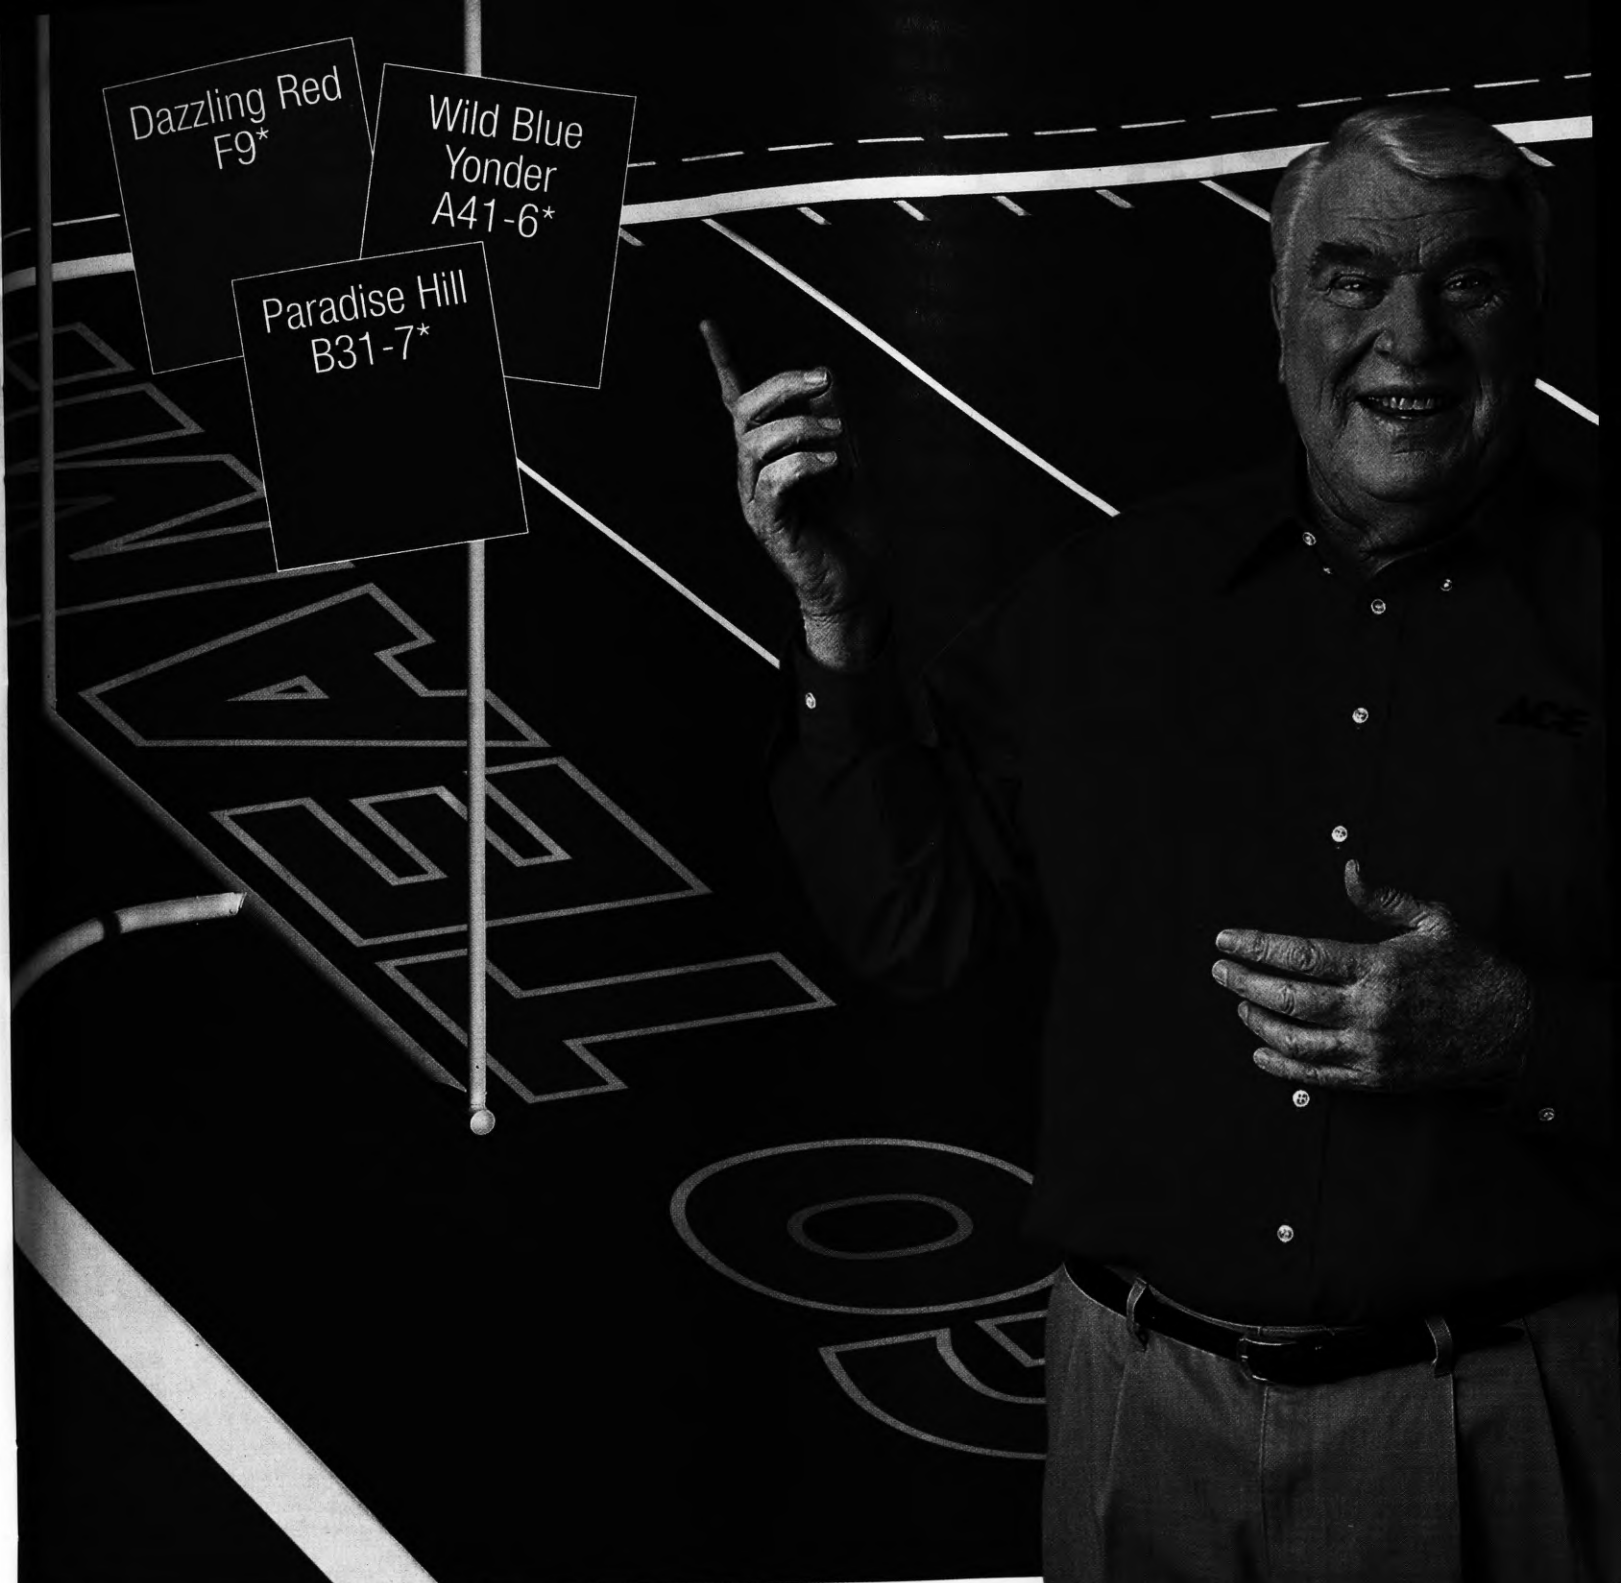

By Storm Millican, Class of '06

- If it wasn't for Notre Dame's All-American back and Hall of Fame coach Knute Rockne, football wouldn't be the same. Rockne was the first person to figure out how to really utilize the forward pass, while holding a summer job as a lifeguard in 1913.
- One word: Rudy. Notre Dame has the greatest college football movie of all time. USC has Saved By The Bell: The College Years.
- Scoreboard: Notre Dame leads the rivalry with a record of 42-31-5.
- No matter how much their games get televised, Notre Dame will always be the ultimate scrappy underdog team, which is part of what makes it so satisfying when they beat the Trojans. Like the "green jersey game" in 1977, when ND came out of the tunnel wearing the Irish national color for the first time and pummeled the heavily favored USC, 49-19. Goosebumps.
- What do you get when you drive slowly by the USC campus? A degree. Compare that to Notre Dame, who has graduated 98.74% of its football players in four years, since 1962.
- Even people from Los Angeles have to respect Notre Dame's history, like the Four Horsemen. All of them were less than 6-0 and 162 pounds, but they were one of the most devastating backfields of all time, taking the Irish to a 30-2 record over the course of their college careers. And this was all the way back in 1922, when players stayed on the field for both offense and defense.
- Notre Dame might not have a band, but we have the best fight song of all time.
- Gameday in South Bend means no advertisements, no B-list celebrities lurking around the sidelines and no Jumbotron. Just 80,000 crazed fans singing every cheer and throwing each other into the air.

By Devon Pollard, Class of '04 and Rory MacDonald, Class of '02

- History repeats itself. USC shut out its first ever opponent, winning 16-0 on November 14, 1888. Notre Dame began a long history of losing one year earlier, getting shutout by Michigan in its inaugural game, 8-0.
- The USC Song Girls are the greatest cheerleaders in the history of sports. Who do Notre Dame fans have to look at on their sideline? Charlie Weis?
- The comeback. In 1974, the Trojans were trailing the Irish 24-6 at halftime, but in the third quarter, USC turned it on to score 35 points. The final score: 55-24.
- USC fans know when and when not to celebrate. In the 2005 matchup, Irish fans rushed the field, not realizing that there was actually still one down left to play, which was even more embarrassing after running back Reggie Bush pushed quarterback Matt Leinart over the goal line to a 34-31 USC victory.
- Let's talk geography. Where is Indiana even located? I'll tell you where it's not: Southern California. Yeah the postcards are true, it's nice over here.
- Notre Dame has one impressive record: nine straight bowl losses. That's the NCAA record!
- When USC needs to, it gets lucky. In John Robinson's last game (his first time around) at USC, the Trojans had the ball at Notre Dame's one-yard line. USC running back Michael Harper fumbled trying to punch it in, but the referees called it a touchdown anyway. Sorry!
- USC has won the last five meetings between these two schools by a combined score of 208-92. In that span, the Trojans have not scored less than 34 points against the Fighting Irish in each meeting. USC has also beaten Notre Dame by 20 points or more in the three games played at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

TDI's Game Ball Goes To:

Muhlenberg College

By Stephanie Plotino

For most people, it's not very often that they see a 220-pound lineman running around in a skirt, but on the Muhlenberg College campus, it is an annual sight.

For the last three years, the Muhlenberg football and field hockey teams have faced off against each other in a charity field hockey game, and every year the big, burly football players show up in field hockey kilts, while the women abandon their usual garb to don oversized football jerseys.

"I'm an offensive lineman, so I'm a big guy running around in this field hockey skirt that goes halfway around my waist," says Muhlenberg senior footballer Mike Gawel. "It's a good advertising point."

Gawel's teammate and fellow senior, defensive lineman Chris Musselman, adds, "At first it kind of seemed like it was going to be embarrassing [to wear a kilt], but if you don't think about it, it doesn't really bother you. Knowing that it's all in fun, you just kind of shrug it off and have fun with it."

Although it's all fun and games on the field, the players know they are there to take care of business.

This spring Gawel, Musselman and two field hockey representatives chose the Special Olympics of Pennsylvania (SOPA) as the beneficiary of their fundraiser and brought in $760 for the organization.

"We wanted to choose a charity that was sports-related," says Gawel.

The 2007 campaign was the most lucrative thus far, and the SOPA – which strives to "provide year-round sports training and competition in a variety of Olympic-type sports for children and adults with intellectual disabilities," as stated on its Web site – was grateful to receive the donation. The organization put the money towards its Operating Fund, which is used to finance general needs, such as athletic equipment, transportation expenses, food and lodging, among other things.

"We charged $3 for a raffle ticket, and that's where all of our proceeds came from," says Muhlenberg field hockey head coach Megan Eddinger. "If anyone wanted to give a donation, the [players] took donations at the table, too."

The raffle consisted of a slew of prizes donated by local stores and restaurants, including vouchers and coupons for anything from pizza to coffee to donuts. The student-athletes went door-to-door among local businesses located near the college's campus in Allentown, Pa., and most merchants were happy to get involved.

"Usually when we would go to a pizza place, we would just ask for one pie," Musselman says. "Anthony's Pizza gave us a few pies. And Starbucks gave us a whole gift basket of cookies to raffle off."

In the first two years of the charity event, the student-athletes donated their proceeds to the Fox Chase Cancer Center, based in Philadelphia. Over those first two years, the players raised about $900, bringing the three-year total of funds raised through the event close to $1,700.

The student-athletes believe that what has made the charity event so successful is that it is based around having a good time.

"I think people really enjoy it," Gawel says. "We get a lot of people to come out and support the charity. It's a good time when we get people to come out and watch us chase a little ball around."

This year's game, which took place on April 20, saw the field hockey team defeat the football team by a score of 2-0. The field hockey team now leads the all-time series with a perfect 3-0 record.

"We go out there, and [the field hockey players] are definitely good at what they do," Musselman says. "Even as big as we are, there are just certain rules that we don't have any idea what they are. Whistles are blowing every five seconds, and we look up because we have no idea what's going on."

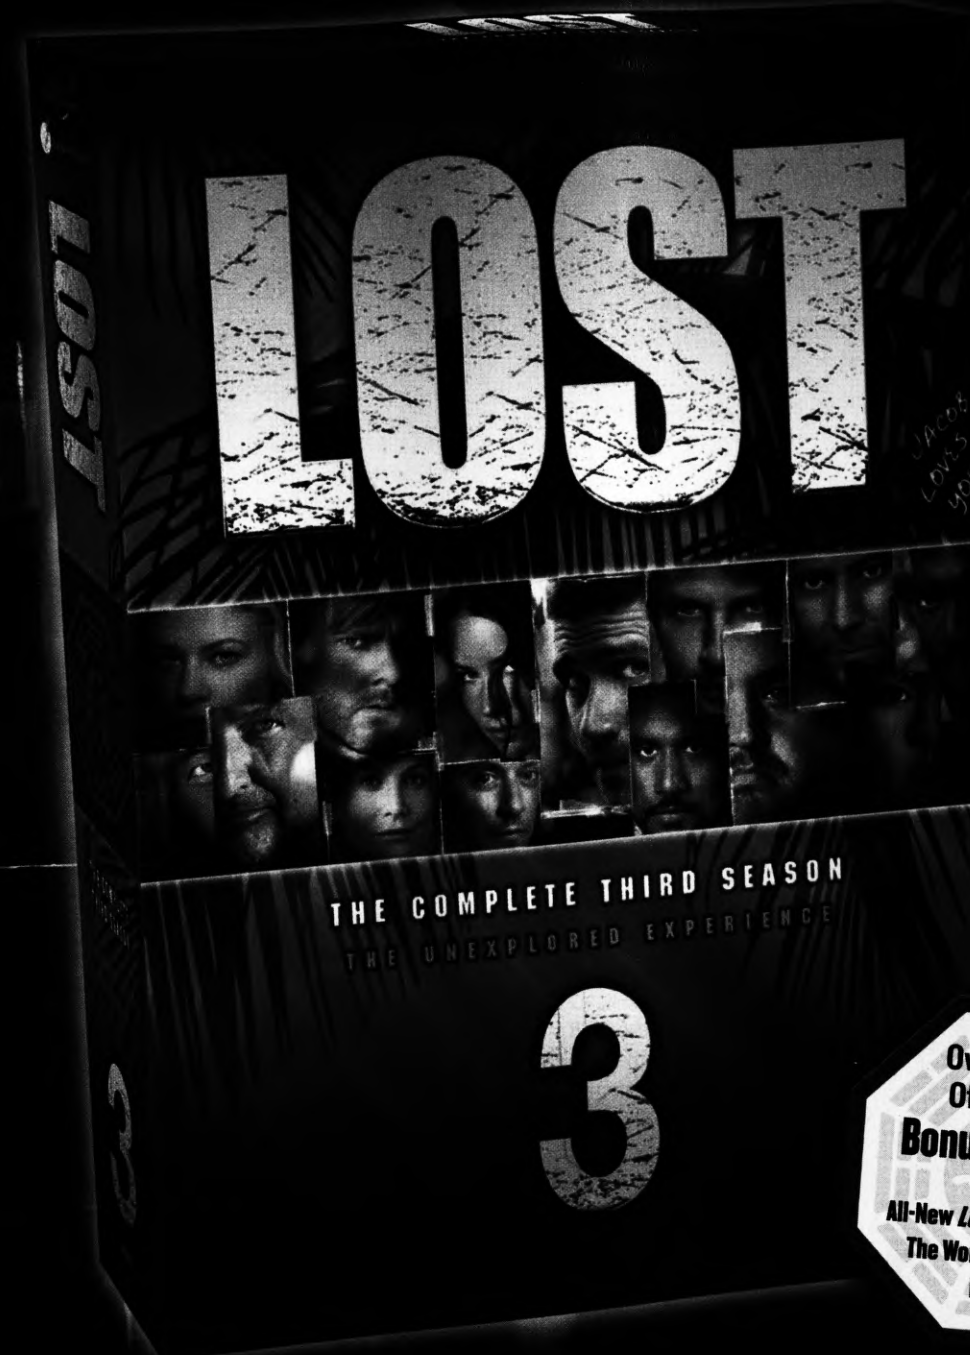

The referees behind the whistles are the Muhlenberg field hockey coaching staff. When asked if that could be a reason why the football team has lost every game, Musselman noted that the refs have actually treated both teams pretty equally.

"Really, if our coaches tried to go out there, they wouldn't have any idea what to call anyway," Musselman says.

But ask any of the players involved, and you'll find out that it's the amount of money donated to charity – not the final score – that is the more important tabulation of the day.

Musselman concludes, "It's fun, and it gives you a sense of humility just knowing that you are playing for a good cause." ●

Tommy Tuberville

Auburn Head Coach

By Jon Cooper

Life has been pretty good for Tommy Tuberville since he arrived on the plains of Auburn University from the University of Mississippi before the 1999 season. After a 5-6 inaugural campaign as the Tigers head coach — only the third losing season in school history — Tuberville's squads have been among the best in the nation. Since the start of the 2000 season, only 12 schools in the nation have more wins than Auburn's 66 (Tuberville has a .739 winning percentage).

His teams have also dominated in the rugged Southeastern Conference, chalking up a league-best 42-14 record in conference play during that span (Florida and LSU are next at 41-13). Under Tuberville, the Tigers have won 23 of their last 26 games against SEC schools, and took home the 2004 SEC Championship, when his team recorded a school-best 13-0 season. He's even tormented in-state rival Alabama, winning five straight Iron Bowls, a feat that hasn't been accomplished by an Auburn coach since Ralph "Shug" Jordan (one of the men for whom the school's stadium is named) did so from 1954-58. In addition, Tuberville became the first coach ever to win four games at 'Bama's Bryant-Denny Stadium.

Along the way, the man once nicknamed "The Riverboat Gambler" has overcome obstacles that every college coach faces, like graduation (including his entire starting backfield prior to the 2005 season) and coordinator defections. Others though, have been unique to say the least, including a failed, secret, rogue attempt to pull the rug out from under him led by a powerful booster, the school's president and the athletic director (the latter two were forced out shortly thereafter). Tuberville has dealt with it all with class, dignity and a charming personality.

Always rumored to be going somewhere during the off-season, the only place he went this spring was to the hospital for a surprise appendectomy.

A fully recovered Tuberville took time out to talk to Touchdown Illustrated about his 2004 team's affect on the 2006 BCS balloting, college football's new rules for 2007 and approaching the 100-wins plateau.

TOUCHDOWN ILLUSTRATED: Controversy surrounded the BCS two years ago after Auburn was squeezed out of the BCS Title game despite going 13-0. After seeing Florida's late rise through the polls with one loss to get into last year's BCS Title game do you think '04 Auburn helped '06 Florida?

TOMMY TUBERVILLE: I don't think there's any doubt. It's timing, it's a little bit of luck. Going into the last couple of games last season, we were ranked No. 3, ahead of Florida. We don't lose to Georgia, it's probably going to be pretty hard to put them in front of us at the end of the season. Then, of course, USC loses. It's just how things happen. [When we went] 13-0, Oklahoma had a couple of close games at the end of the year, USC did but they were able to pull them out, and kept us out of the picture. It's how things work out. In our league, it's very hard to go undefeated. Florida and LSU in the last five years have won National Championships with one loss. But that's just the way things happen.

TDI: How do you feel about the new rule changes speeding up the game?

TUBERVILLE: I'm on the rules committee. I'm one of 12 guys that came up with this. The biggest thing we changed last year was we kept the clock running. But we thought it was hurting college football so we changed it back. We did as much as we could to help college football. Unless it's good for college football, we try not to do it and we also try to do it for the fans. The games were getting too long. The rules that we changed this year, we'll have to wait and see if they help. Kicking off from the 30-yard line will help the fan because it will add more excitement. I think cutting out 12 or 15 plays was detrimental to college football. We decided to add those back. It will be interesting. We don't want to mess with it too much but we also want to make sure we keep the players and the fans in mind.

TDI: Does television exert too much control over the game?

TUBERVILLE: Television really doesn't have a lot to do with it. On the rule committee we always keep television in mind because they do a lot for college football and it's made it one of the most popular sports going. But we also want to keep in mind that it's for the players and for the fans. Everything we do or have done in the last few years we kept that in mind. But television is a big part of it. If it weren't for them we wouldn't have the facilities that we have or the things that it takes to make this sport better.

TDI: What do you think of Nick Saban not only returning to coaching in the SEC West, but at your arch-rival Alabama?

TUBERVILLE: Nick's a good football coach. He's been around, he's won. He's in a different situation there in Alabama than he was at LSU, but he's a guy that has got a great work ethic, he understands football and I think he'll make our conference that much better than what it was.

TDI: You've won five straight Iron Bowls. How does it feel to be on the winning side of such a heated rivalry?

TUBERVILLE: It's been fun. We've had a run. They've had some problems and we've been good enough to be on the winning side. But rivalries usually balance out. We just want to win our share. Obviously everybody wants to win the game and when you're on the other side of it for a while it probably wears on you a little bit. I've been on that side before in some other situations. But that's the reason you play the game. That's the reason rivalries are fun because people get into it. They take the winning part big and they take the losing part even bigger. Obviously that's one of the reasons Nick Saban is there, to try and get that turned around and it'll be a challenge for us.

TDI: You began the 2007 season with 95 career victories as a head coach. Have you thought about win No. 100?

TUBERVILLE: In a career you always look at certain situations. When I was a young coach I wanted to be a head coach, then I wanted to be a head coach at a major university. I was able to do that at a pretty young age, around 40. But you never dream that you'll win an SEC Championship or that you'll have an opportunity to win 100 games in a very tough league. You have to have goals and you have to have things that you put in front of you. One hundred wins would be very special but you never look at that. We, as a coaching staff, look at games one at a time. If you win it then you celebrate and you go to the next one. If you lose then you just go to the next one. [One hundred wins] will be fun to think about one day, but right now we just have to take them in stride and try to do the best we can.

TDI: You used to be known as "The Riverboat Gambler." Does that nickname still apply or do you feel another nickname is more appropriate?

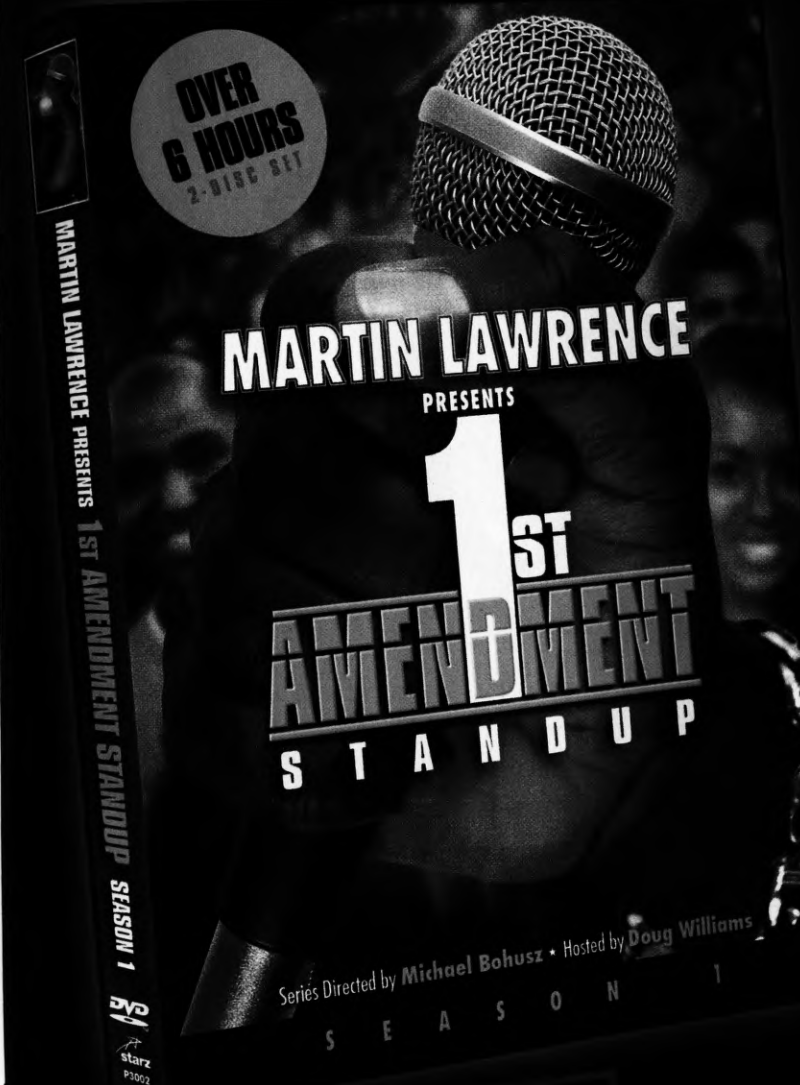

TUBERVILLE: When I first became the head coach at Ole Miss, we were swinging a short stick. We didn't have a lot of things going for us because we lost 24 scholarships, had no TV. I told our team back in 1995, "Hey, we're going to give you a chance to win. We're going to work hard, we're going to try to get better. We're going to go into games trying to win." We'd go for fourth downs, fake punts, fake field goals. I think it really kept our guys inspired. Even though we weren't a great football team, it gave us a chance to win. We did unorthodox things, onside kicks. That kind of stuck with me when I came to Auburn. We kind of had the same situation when we got to Auburn so we kind of kept it up. Now over the last few years we've had a pretty good football team and we didn't have to take as many chances as we did earlier. But I like to keep the momentum. I like to keep our guys' attention. I like to try to change the momentum of a game by faking a punt or field goal, going for fourth down on our side of the field, those kinds of things. That's just our personality. Our players really like that. I think that they work hard knowing, "Hey, our coach is trying to win the game. Let's help him out." ●

Is 14.4 million miles of road testing excessive?
That depends on what kind of car you're building.

INTRODUCING THE ALL-NEW 2008 C-CLASS.

Why did we drive it the equivalent of 600 times around the world? Why did we force it to endure the snowstorms of Scandinavia, the dust storms of Namibia and every torturous climate in between? And why did we subject the new C-Class to so many miles on the earth's most unforgiving and punishing roads? The answer is simple: because we promised you a Mercedes-Benz.

After seven years of unremitting testing, we bring you the 2008 C-Class. From its very core, with over 70% of the body built with high-strength steel, it is a tribute to our legendary reputation for safety. The braking system, complete with perforated front rotors,* is capable of stopping the car from a speed of 80 mph in just four seconds. The door hinges can hold the weight of a 200-lb man. The windshield wipers were designed to wash away heavy rain at autobahn speeds. And the suspension was tested for stability at 130 mph, ensuring the utmost in confidence and control.

Inside, the passenger cabin is as scientific as it is beautiful. Seats were not merely built for comfort, but were ergonomically contoured and cushioned to make even the longest journeys relaxing for the body. And the dashboard is the very first in a Mercedes-Benz to meet standards in helping drivers keep their attention on the road.

THE C-CLASS. Nothing is too excessive when you're building a car like this. Starting at $31,975.

Unlike any other.

Carolina Challenge

First-year Coach Butch Davis is trying to convert basketball-crazy Tar Heel fans into football followers

By Brian Lester

“I think there is every reason to believe Carolina can win a championship in football,” says first-year Tar Heels head coach Butch Davis.

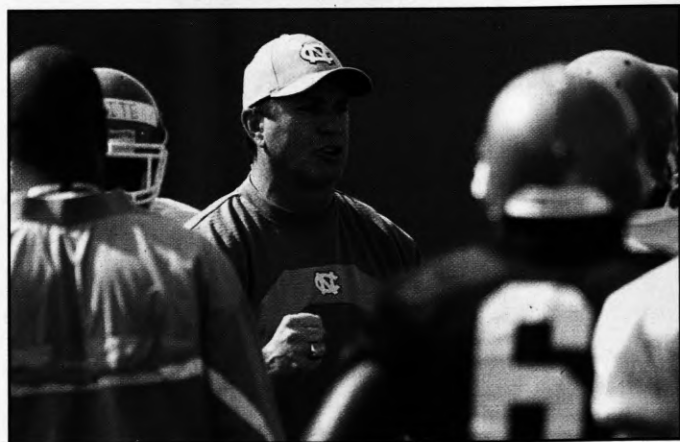

He has his work cut out for him, trying to convert believers at a university where hoops is king. “They’ve had tremendous success in basketball, but there is success in the athletic department across the board. I had a chance to look at North Carolina, and in my determination, it has everything necessary for a championship football program,” Davis says. “It has access to athletes, great academic credibility and tremendous support and resources.”

Still, turning UNC into a champion may turn out to be the greatest challenge of his career, although his past indicates Davis is able to get the job done. In 1995, he took over a Miami program that had its scholarships reduced during his first three seasons. It didn’t matter. The Hurricanes churned out an 8-3 record and went 9-3 a year later, toppling Virginia in the Carquest Bowl. In both seasons, Miami earned a share of the Big East championship.

The Hurricanes struggled through a 5-6 campaign the next year, but bounced back in 1998 with a 9-3 record as they defeated North Carolina State in the Micron PC Bowl. Miami’s greatest season under Davis arrived in 2000. A year after finishing 9-4, the Hurricanes stormed through an 11-1 run and finished the year ranked second in the nation in addition to wrapping up an outright Big East title.

“The challenge at Miami was a little different than what I am facing here,” says Davis, who finished with a 51-20 record at the helm for the Hurricanes. “At Miami, you had a rather long tradition of winning in football, but we also had to deal with scholarship cuts and people calling for the disbanding of the program. Those challenges don’t exist at UNC. We just need to continue to recruit well because that is the lifeblood of any program.”

Davis left Miami after the 2000 season and took on his next challenge as the head coach of the Cleveland Browns. Davis, who was an assistant with the Dallas Cowboys when they won Super Bowls XXXVII and XXXVIII, was able to lead Cleveland to seven victories in his first season, two more than the team had won in its previous two years combined. In 2002, Cleveland reached the playoffs with a 9-7 record, but lost 36-33 in the first round against the Pittsburgh Steelers. The next two seasons would not go so well for Davis, as he won only nine games while losing 23. Still, he has no regrets about his stint with the Browns.

“Cleveland was a great learning experience and there were a lot of positives,” Davis says. “We took a team that won only five games the previous two years and won seven games in my first year. We ended up making the playoffs the second year and that was a huge accomplishment. I found out a lot about myself and I am a better coach because of the experience I had in Cleveland.”

To fully understand the kind of person Davis is, one must consider that the UNC coach is a fighter. Last March, a dentist found a cancerous growth in his mouth during a routine cleaning. It was diagnosed as non-Hodgkins lymphoma. He underwent chemotherapy as a precautionary measure and the growth was removed. Today, Davis is healthy and focused on putting the UNC football program on the map.

“The cancer was difficult to deal with, but I had my family and friends to rely on. They helped me through the tough time,” Davis says. “I’ve had all the treatments and the doctors have said everything looks good. I’m happy to be healthy again.”

And he’s happy to be a coach again. Davis knows he has his work cut out for him as the Tar Heels went just 3-9 last season under John Bunting. He loves the passion fans have for football in Chapel Hill, and while he promises no instant fix, he does promise success in due time.

“Building a program is a process,” says Davis, who has coached in 11 postseason games as a head coach at the collegiate level. “There is no immediate quick fix. You have to lay the foundation for the first couple of years for what you want to do. Our ultimate goal is to win a national championship at North Carolina, and I truly believe we can make that happen.”

Tailgating is a tradition as big as the game

By Jeff Cummins

Picture a chilly, autumn Saturday morning on your typical college campus. The game is still hours away and the sun is barely coming up, but in the parking lots and parking fields adjacent to America's collegiate football stadiums, game time is now.

Wherever the game is played, tailgating is always part of the experience. The Ivy League schools are known for their upscale style, while on many campuses there are RVs parked as far as the eye can see, some with elaborate designs painted on them, having lined up for their spots as much as four or five days before the game. There are also a few schools where fans moor their boats near the stadium, and create a tailgate party flotilla, what some call a "sterngate party." No matter what approach you take though, in many circles, tailgating has now become as big as the main event. For some fans, attending the game has become optional, and the tailgate party is the highlight of the weekend.

Naturally, weather plays a big role in the type of tailgate parties thrown at a particular school. Each region has its own style, its own charm.

Some schools make the event a fashion show, like Mississippi does at "The Grove," which covers 10 acres in the middle of campus. Large oak trees and magnolias provide shade and enhance the atmosphere, while women frequently attend parties in dresses, with men wearing ties under jackets and sweaters, all with a sense of style and southern hospitality. In this environment, 2007 looks almost exactly like 1957, and the grandparents attending the game almost surely engaged in the same rituals decades before.

At Mississippi, tailgating is traditionally referred to as "groving," probably because there are few vehicles on the grove, though plenty are parked on adjacent roads. Instead, the pre-game parties are hosted in a veritable city of party tents, as revelers go from one tent to another, sampling food and exchanging stories. Partygoers frequently arrive days in advance to reserve the spot for their tents, and have even been known to arrive in the middle of the night. If Ole Miss wins, that's a plus, but a defeat certainly won't stop the faithful from enjoying themselves.

Football Festivities

In Tempe, Ariz., the atmosphere is substantially more casual on the parking lot outside Arizona State's Sun Devil Stadium. Yellow tank tops, t-shirts and shorts are the rule of the day. Sunglasses are also necessary, given the shadeless atmosphere around the stadium. Skateboards roll along the pavement and footballs fly through the festive air — and suntans are everywhere.

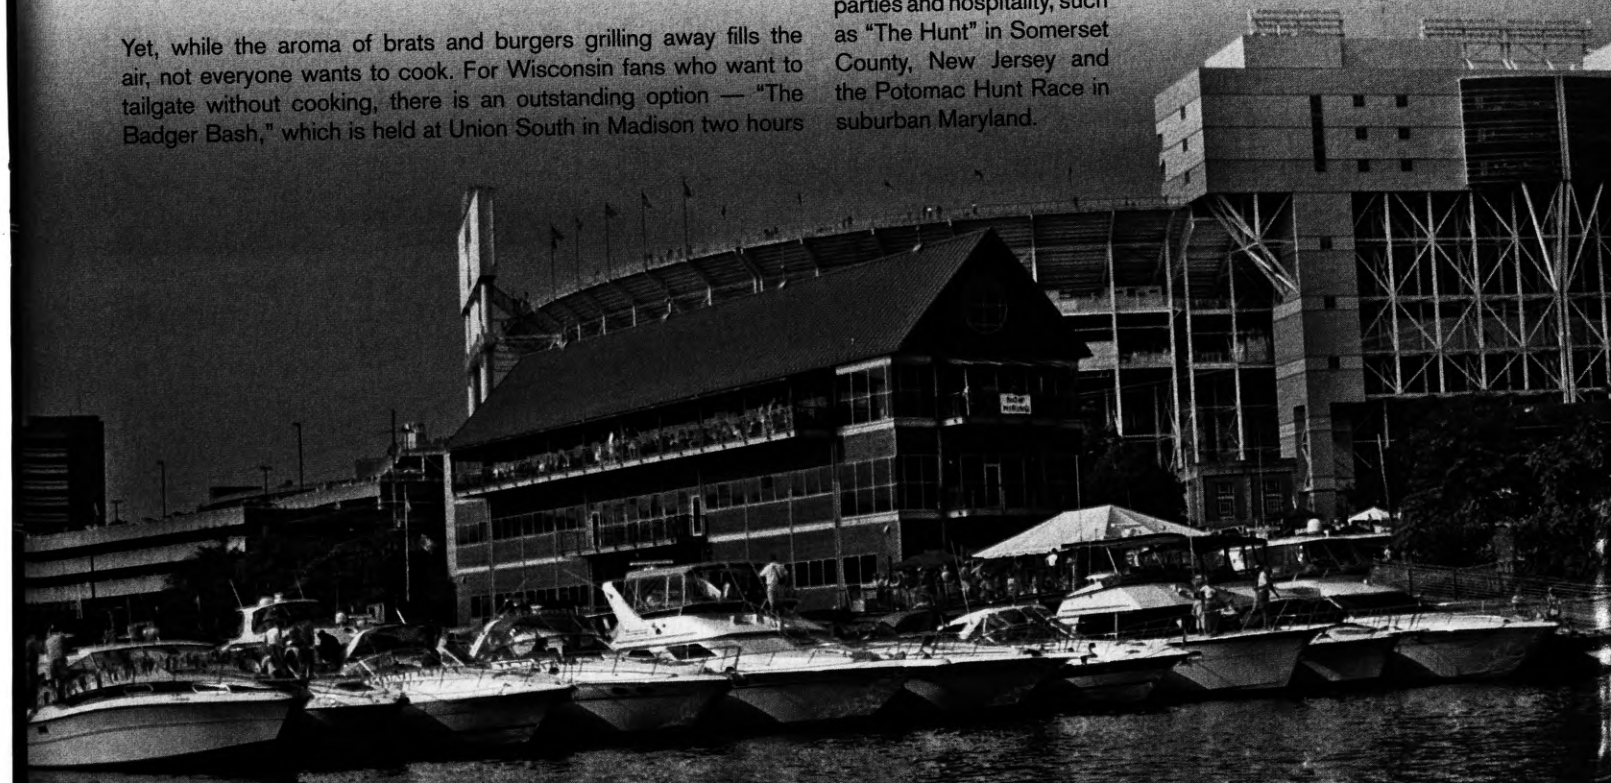

Fans are bundled up more at Madison, Wisc., where virtually everything is bright Wisconsin Badger red. Sweatshirts, sweaters and official Wisconsin Badger jackets replace the t-shirts early in October, when the first chill comes. Badgers' fans favor the long-time staple of Big Ten tailgating, the grilled bratwurst, which is often referred to in tailgating circles as "brats on the grill."

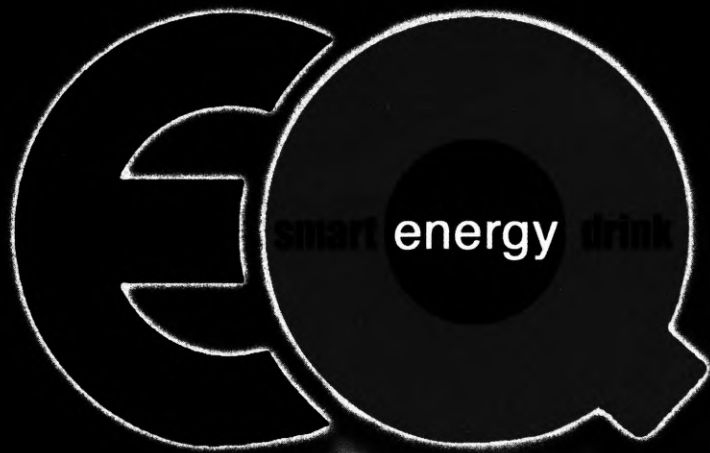

Yet, while the aroma of brats and burgers grilling away fills the air, not everyone wants to cook. For Wisconsin fans who want to tailgate without cooking, there is an outstanding option — "The Badger Bash," which is held at Union South in Madison two hours before kickoff. Even the school's mascot, Bucky the Badger, makes an appearance.

Outside one of the nation's most scenic venues, Kenan Stadium at North Carolina, fans dress in shorts and t-shirts or sweaters, depending on the variable weather, and the taste of the south holds sway at Chapel Hill tailgates.

College football's influence is evident throughout the nation, as tailgating has expanded beyond its college football roots to every major sport, concerts, graduations, and even high school sporting events on occasion. In some instances, tailgating at college football games has even influenced — and been influenced by — corporate parties and hospitality, such as "The Hunt" in Somerset County, New Jersey and the Potomac Hunt Race in suburban Maryland.

Football Festivities

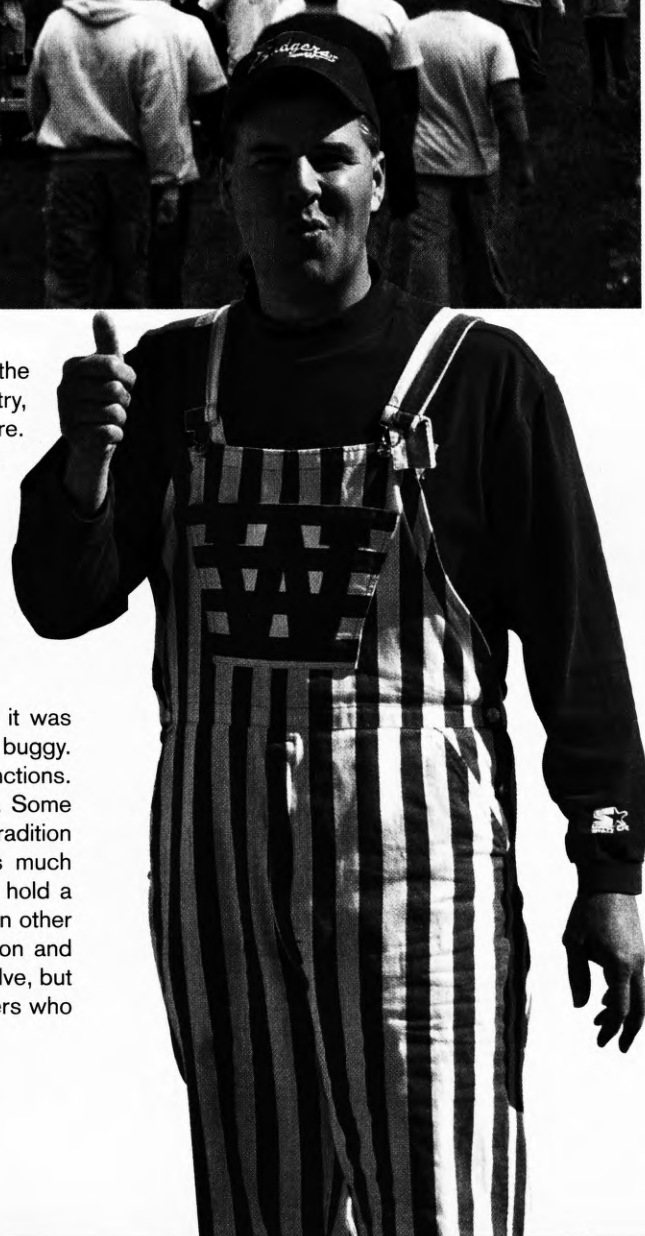

In some cases, actual vehicle tailgates are still used. But that's just the beginning. The marketing of tailgating gear has become a year-round industry, including all forms of tents, tables, cookware, grills, gas generators and more. There is even a swingout table that can be attached to the rear of one's vehicle, allowing guests to stand at a table while eating.

Tailgating has also become a source of revenue generation for schools, with many hosting official alumni tailgate parties, while other schools provide VIP tailgate parties for corporations and significant benefactors. Corporations use tailgate parties as a way to boost business, using the event for networking opportunities and team building exercises.

After its humble beginnings, tailgating has evolved from the days when it was thought of as little more than a brief bite to eat at the rear of a horse and buggy. Now vehicles are designed with tailgating in mind as one of the primary functions. Some parties hire bands to play at their tailgates, others have speakers. Some tailgate parties are still the small, three and four-person affairs that the tradition originated from. Others have become elaborate affairs that require as much planning and preparation as a wedding. There's no one correct way to hold a tailgate party. Simple works better in some instances; elaborate is better in other instances. Ultimately, the party is limited only by the creativity, imagination and budget of the hosts. One thing is sure: Tailgate parties will continue to evolve, but the one thing that will always remain the same is the people, the partygoers who will always enjoy the party. 🍷

Storm Clouds Have Silver Lining

By Kristy Booher

LAKE ERIE
COLLEGE

School News

❑ No team. No field. No uniforms. Sounds like a stormy beginning for anyone looking to join the collegiate football world – anyone that is but Lake Erie College, a private NCAA Division III institution in northeast Ohio.

When president Michael T. Victor proposed the idea of starting a football program to the Board of Trustees back in early 2006, the suggestion seemed preposterous for a 150-year old school – which up until 1985 was an all-female college known for its equestrian program. Nonetheless, the trustees of the 73-percent female institution unanimously approved the proposal, and Lake Erie was off and running in developing what will become its 14th varsity sport.

The college hired Mark McNellie – who previously was a member of Mercyhurst College's coaching staff for the past 16 years – to head the program. For a few months, it was the ambitious Bedford, Ohio native on his own, with no business cards, no office, no assistants, and no home field, trying to establish a new team. Needless to say, the task seemed overwhelming. But now a year later, McNellie has a staff of nine coaches, a roster of 100-plus players, a schedule of 10 games and a stadium with more than $100,000 worth of renovations. He also has a campus and a community buzzing with enthusiasm for a program which will compete at the club level during the fall of 2007 before its first varsity season in 2008.

Currently Lake Erie College has 13 varsity teams competing within D-III. Additionally, the school is in its second year of exploratory status, anticipating provisional Division II status for the fall of 2008. The move into D-II would make Lake Erie the first institution in northeast Ohio to compete at that level and only the fifth of its kind in the entire state.

Before all of that happens, however, McNellie and crew will take the field and make history as possibly the most-highly anticipated endeavor in the college's athletic existence. It is a lot of pressure to put on one individual, but McNellie is not carrying the load on his own. From the president and the Trustees, to the athletic department and the students – not to mention the Painesville City community – everyone is on board for Lake Erie College football.

The team's first club game is September 1 against the Central Canadian All-Star team. Storm supporters are preparing for the first-ever tailgate, which is expected to become a weekly tradition. Storm fan gear has been ordered and the Thunder mascot costume is in production. Several horses are in training to present the American and Canadian flags, a nod to the college's nationally-recognized equestrian program, and a local high school marching band has signed on for all five home contests. Deals are also in the works to broadcast the games on a local AM radio station.

It may seem like a lot of buildup for a program that is only considered club level at this time, but the hype is well deserved considering the spark the team has provided for the entire institution. Enrollment has increased, with this year's freshman class of 300 equaling the largest in school history. New majors have been added, including Sports Management and a campus-wide beautification process has been put in motion, complete with landscaping and building renovations. In addition, a new marketing campaign has put telephone pole banners around the city and billboards around the state. Plans to build additional campus housing and facilities have also been created.

Overall, it's a wonderful time to be associated with Lake Erie College. And no matter their record at the end of this first season, these Storm clouds definitely have a silver lining. ●

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?
THREE HEISMAN TROPHY WINNERS TALK TO TDI
ABOUT LIFE AFTER FOOTBALL.

By Steve Siniski

☐ To most, they are the heroes of yesterday, representatives of greatness in college football. They are forever revered for their actions on the field, and for the 72 winners of the Heisman Trophy the award serves as merely a jumping off point. Touchdown Illustrated tracked down three former winners, finding out that life off the field has been just as rewarding as between the sidelines.

Archie Griffin, RB, Ohio State (1974-75 Heisman Trophy Winner)

Griffin became a legend by running away from people and avoiding contact during his four years at Ohio State (1972-75). But times have changed over the last 30-plus years, and the only two-time winner of the Heisman Trophy has pulled off a 180-degree turn in adding to his legacy at The Ohio State University.

Now, Griffin is making big strides running into people and making contact, as the Buckeyes Alumni Association President/CEO. The new objective suits Griffin just fine. "When you consider the fact that your job is keeping alumni connected to the university that you love, it gives me a great feeling," he says.

The Ohio State University has been a part of Griffin's makeup seemingly forever. Born at the University's medical center, he hasn't strayed too far from the campus in 53 years. After starring for the Buckeyes and playing for the Cincinnati Bengals in the NFL, Griffin returned to his alma mater as a member of the Human Resources Department in 1984. Following a 19-year tenure as the associate director of athletics, he took on his current position in 2004, where he oversees a staff of 62 people and tries to connect—or re-connect—with an alumni base numbering over 400,000. "It's an honor to have the position I'm in," he says.

Andre Ware, QB, Houston (1989)

Ware's playing days have been over since 1999, but the 55th winner of the Heisman Trophy hasn't strayed far from the gridiron. In fact, you might say he's simply moved up in the world—literally—trading in his helmet and shoulder pads for a microphone and a seat in the broadcast booth.

The former Houston Cougar, who threw 46 touchdowns during his Heisman season, doesn't toss scoring passes anymore, he calls them as a member of the Houston Texans radio broadcast team. Though he was a marketing major at Houston, Ware always had an interest in broadcasting and began his second career not long after his playing days ended, calling games for his alma mater.

"It keeps me close to the game," he says. "It's a game I grew up loving and still have a passion for without the bangs and bruises. I have the best seat in the house."

A member of the Heisman Winners Association, Ware is active in helping raise money for a variety of charities, some of which provide endowments and scholarships, others which include his own personal time.

And if there's one lasting memory from 1989 for Ware, it's the fact that his individual Heisman became a team award. "It was the first time a player won the trophy from a team on probation," he says. "It became a rallying cry for the team so-to-speak. It was my opportunity to share with my teammates. I got to share it with a great group of guys."

Ty Detmer, QB, BYU (1990)

Ty Detmer (BYU Photo Archives)

It's only been two seasons since Detmer officially hung up his cleats, but the former quarterback, whose professional career spanned six teams and 14 seasons after he captured the 56th Heisman Trophy at BYU, is still involved with the game. While he's no longer calling the shots on the field, he has taken an active role on the business side of the game as the Senior Vice President of Sports Management for Triton Sports Management.

"You see the needs of a player and what guys go through from a financial aspect if they're not careful," Detmer says, noting his current work with a few NFL clients. "I hope to help a few put some [money] away and save for the future. If you help some guys now when they're young, [they'll be better off]."

Detmer's also taken a proactive approach in using his status as a member of the Heisman Winners Association and the charities they represent, a win-win situation for the exclusive group. "It's a chance for [Heisman] winners to get together, put their resources together and raise money [for charities]," Detmer says. ●

Stadium heritage lives on in SEC

By Chris A. Weber

☐ Hang up on that wireless service, deposit your money in that mattress and leave the ketchup bottle on the shelf. When it comes to the names of football stadiums in the Southeastern Conference, you won't find the far-reaching tentacles of corporate America clinging to the facades.

These are Saturday cathedrals we're talking about here, when folks in the Bible Belt attend church not once, but twice. From Kentucky to Arkansas, hundreds of thousands of fans and alumni make their pigskin pilgrimages each weekend, passing through turnstiles beneath the names of honored men – and women – carved into the edifices above.

For many, saying the name Griffin or Neyland or Williams-Brice is an afterthought, a simple identifier to let friends and family know where they'll be for a few hours, cheering their hearts out. But who are these people in the tradition-rich SEC and why are they recognized?

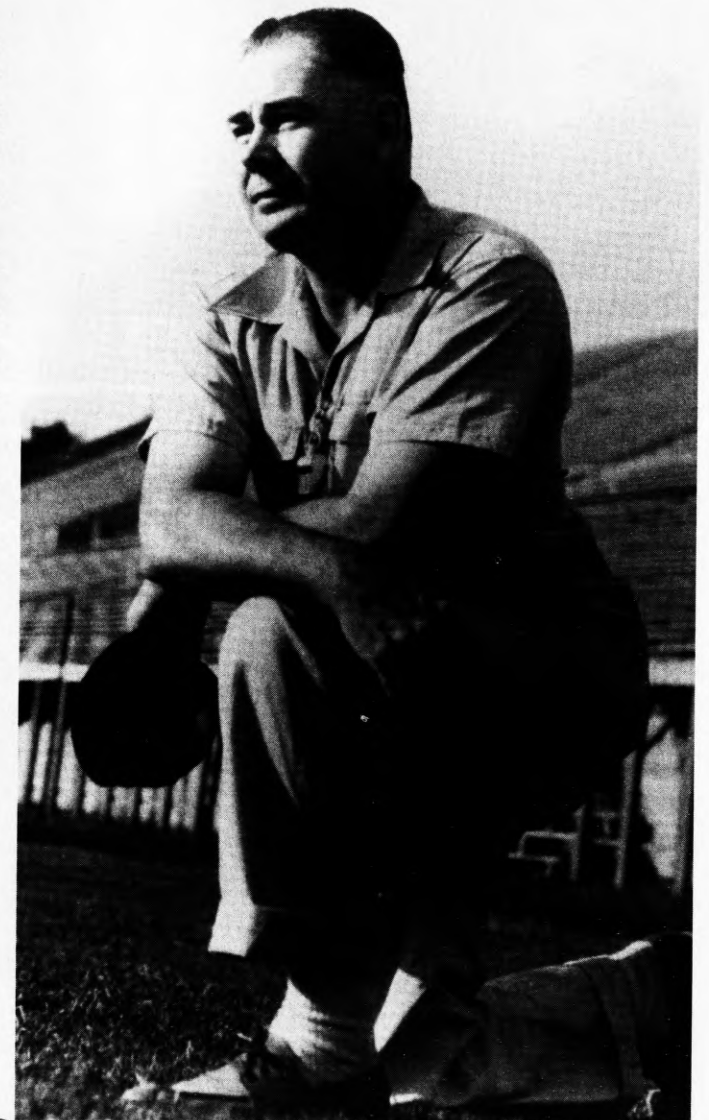

T VETERAN INFLUENCE

☐ In college basketball, Texas Tech head coach Bobby Knight may be nicknamed "The General," but Robert Reese Neyland actually attained the prestigious military ranking. A Texas native and West Point graduate, Neyland was an engineer who led the University of Tennessee football team from 1926-52, twice taking leave to fulfill military service (first in Panama and later in World War II). Prior to that, Neyland also served during World War I.

A brigadier general when he left the military in 1946, Neyland's background dovetailed perfectly with the regimen of college football, where he led the Vols to 173 wins in 213 games, six SEC titles and four national championships. He retired in 1952 as the school's all-time leader in victories before serving as the school's athletics director until his death in 1962.

Built in 1919, Neyland Stadium (formerly called Shields-Watkins Field) has grown to become the largest stadium in the conference, seating 102,038. It might be assumed that Neyland would be surprised at the size of the stadium that bears his name today. But Tennessee athletics director Mike Hamilton believes otherwise.

"Being an engineer, I think General Neyland would be amazed at how the stadium has grown throughout the years, [but] he was known for thinking big," Hamilton says. "In fact, he envisioned a 20,000-seat basketball arena years before it came to fruition."

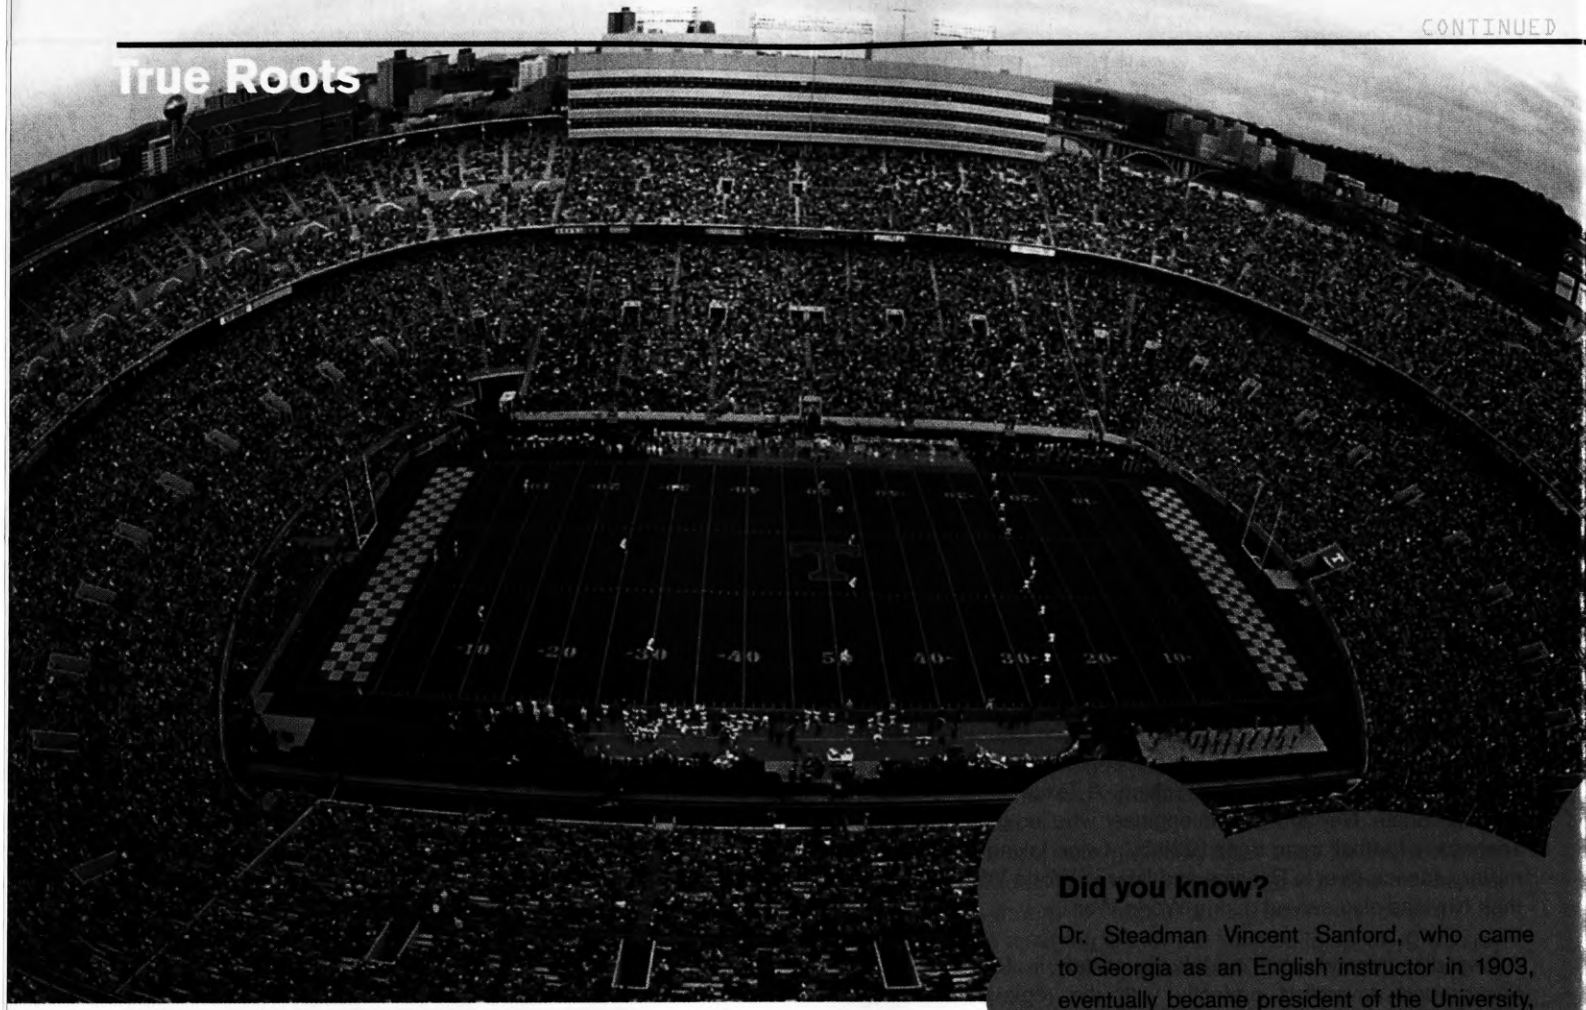

Robert Neyland

Did you know?

Campus mixers: Prior to being hired as Auburn's head football coach in 1951, "Shug" Jordan also coached basketball at Georgia, compiling 45 wins. In addition, Alabama icon Paul "Bear" Bryant coached at SEC rivals Vanderbilt and Kentucky before leading the Crimson Tide. Most recently, South Carolina's Steve Spurrier coached Florida to the 1996 National Championship.

True Roots

Did you know?

Dr. Steadman Vincent Sanford, who came to Georgia as an English instructor in 1903, eventually became president of the University, chancellor of the university system and president of the NCAA. Sanford Stadium was named in his honor in 1929.

Not to be outdone, Mississippi's Hollingsworth Field at Vaught-Hemingway Stadium—quite possibly the longest stadium name in college football—also boasts the name of a former coach and military hero. Built in 1915 and currently seating 87,451, the venue was originally known simply as Hemingway Stadium in honor of Judge William Hemingway, a professor of law and early athletics committee chairman at Ole Miss. In 1982, it was renamed to include Johnny Vaught, the legendary Rebels' head coach.

A naval lieutenant commander in World War II, Vaught took over the program in 1947, leading the school to five SEC titles and a share of three national championships. Vaught, a 1979 College Football Hall of Fame inductee, passed away in 2006 at the age of 96.

Contributing to the stadium name's many syllables was Dr. Jerry Hollingsworth, a longtime supporter of Ole Miss football whose bloodline was added in 1998.

Heading east just over the state line, Auburn's 87,451-seat Jordan-Hare Stadium at Pat Dye Field also recognizes a coach and military veteran. James Ralph "Shug" Jordan led the Tigers to the national title in 1957 and ranks first in wins among all Auburn football coaches. A 1932 graduate of Auburn, Jordan lettered in three sports before seeing action in World War II, where he earned a Bronze Star and Purple Heart for his efforts during the invasion of Normandy. He also saw action in North Africa, Sicily and in the Pacific.

Jordan's name graced the stadium in 1973 (while he was still coaching no less, making the stadium the first to be named after an active coach), joining Clifford Leroy Hare, a member of the Auburn's first football team who later became a professor and dean in the School of Chemistry.

Hare's name was added in 1949, replacing the original moniker of Auburn Stadium. Pat Dye, another successful coach who paced the sidelines with his trademark orange and blue ties from 1981-92, was a 2002 College Football Hall of Fame inductee who was given field naming honors in 2005.

True Roots

T FOR EVERY GOOD MAN,
THERE'S A GOOD WOMAN

And they say chivalry is dead. Not in the SEC, where the ladies have also left their mark on the college football landscape. At Tennessee, Shields-Watkins Field earned its name thanks to Colonel W.S. Shields, president of Knoxville's City National Bank and a University of Tennessee trustee, who provided the initial capital to prepare and equip an athletic field. Completed in 1921, it was named Shields-Watkins Field in recognition of the donor and his wife, Alice Watkins-Shields.

At Williams-Brice Stadium in Columbia, South Carolina, school officials have steadily increased the stadium's capacity since its completion in 1934. Today, what once was a 17,600 stadium is now an 80,250-seat marvel, but enhancing its size required enhanced generosity. In 1972, seating was increased to more than 53,000, thanks in large part to a gift of $2.75 million, made on behalf of the estate of the late Mrs. Martha Williams Brice, whose family operated a successful furniture company in Sumter. Williams Brice was married to Thomas H. Brice, who lettered with the Gamecocks from 1922-24. The stadium was rededicated in 1972.

Did you know?

Paul "Bear" Bryant amassed a 72-2 record at Denny Stadium, which was named after former Alabama president George Denny. Bryant's name was added to the 92,138 stadium in 1975.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

Ben Hill Griffin Stadium at Florida Field (88,548) is affectionately known as "The Swamp," but its official title is given with good reason. Originally labeled Florida Field when it was completed in 1930, the stadium was renamed in 1990 to honor Ben Hill Griffin Jr., a citrus baron, cattle rancher and "near-alumnus" whose passion for Gators football was matched only by his enthusiastic generosity.

Griffin gained his knowledge of citrus as a student at the University of Florida. A hard-working man, he left school in 1933 after three years because he had taken all the agriculture classes that were available and had gleaned all the education he needed.

Thanks to a wedding gift of 10 acres given to him by his father, Griffin went on to become a multi-millionaire and state politician whose personal worth was estimated at more than $300 million. But he always remembered his time in Gainesville, and would repay the university for his partial education in kind, with donations totaling nearly $20 million over the course of his lifetime.

Griffin passed away at the age of 79 in 1990, less than a year after the stadium's re-dedication.

True Roots

In Memorial

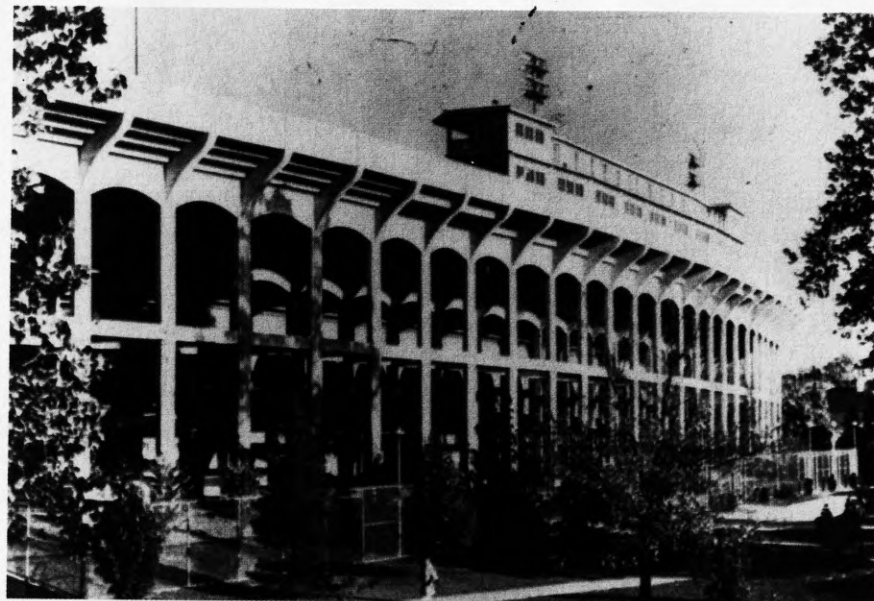

Currently, 15 venues in college football bear the name "Memorial Stadium," including Clemson, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Memphis, Southern Cal, California, New Mexico State, Wyoming and Navy. In the SEC, Arkansas plays a partial schedule at Memorial Stadium in Little Rock.

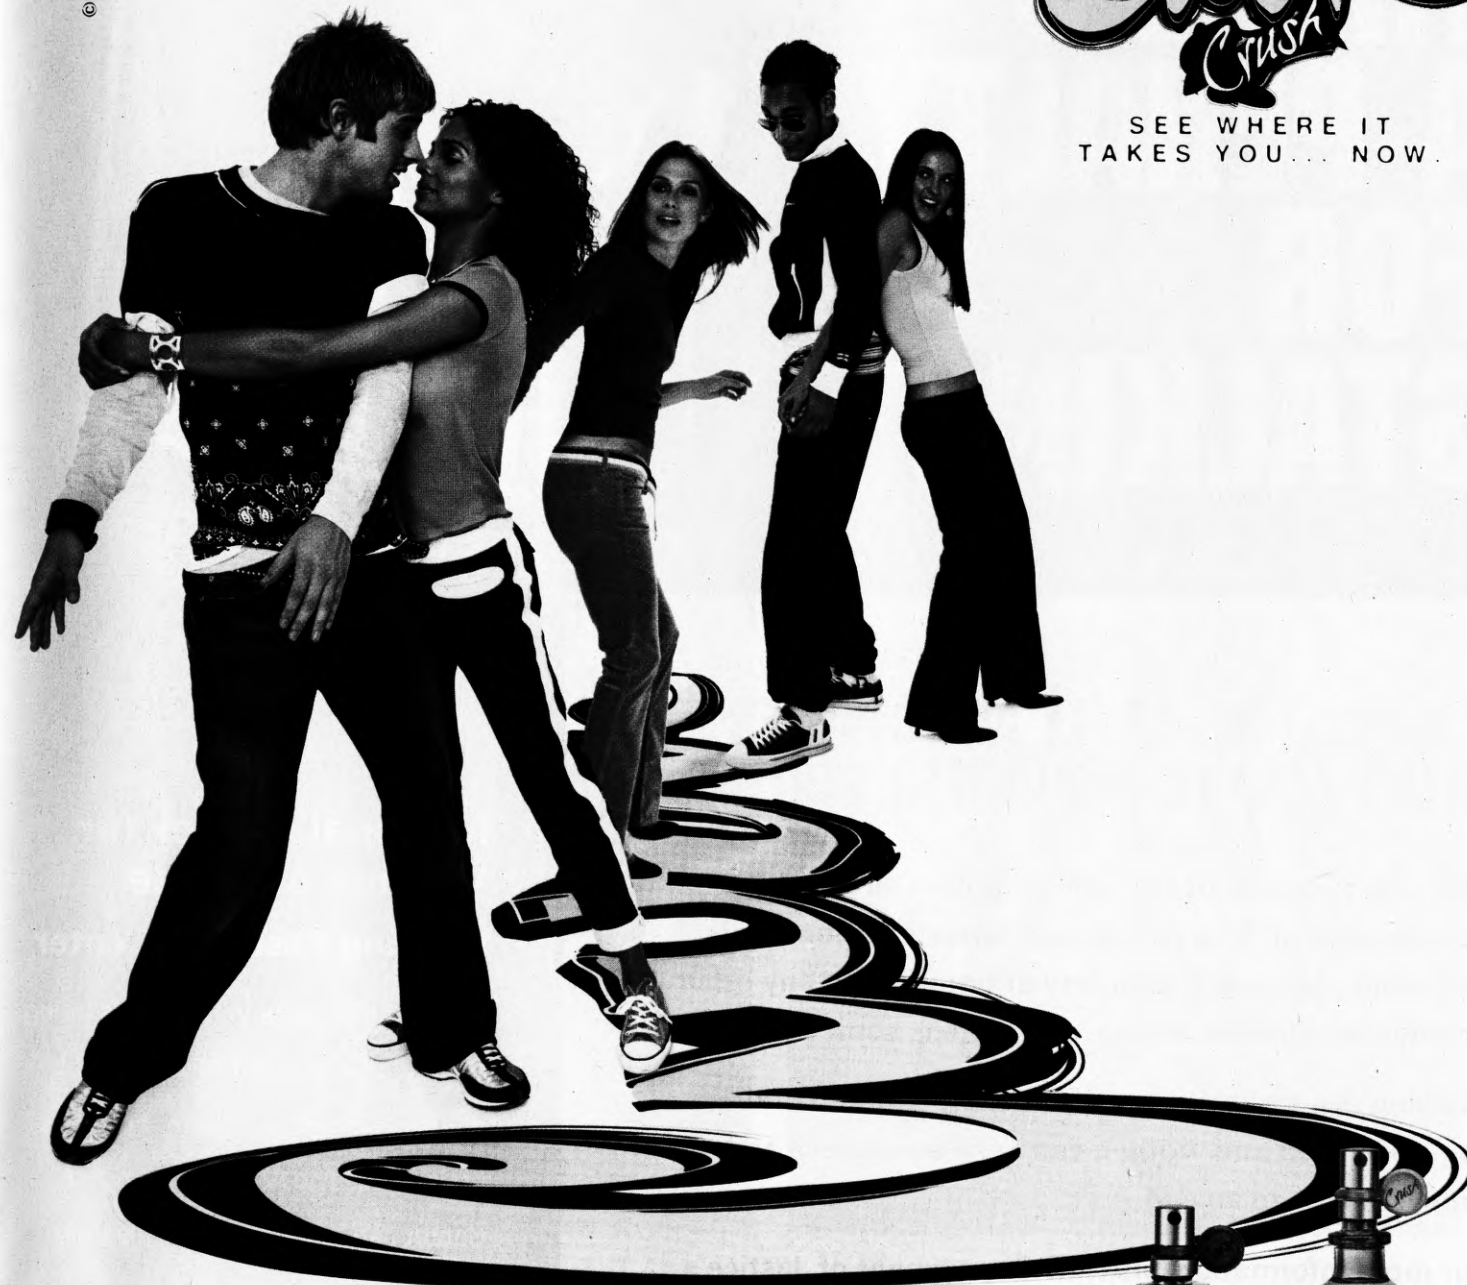

UK GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN

Although the University of Kentucky has called Commonwealth Stadium home since 1973, the men whose names once graced the team's previous home, long since torn down, are not forgotten. Etched on plaques on Commonwealth's grounds are the late Judge Richard C. Stoll, a prominent alumnus, trustee and benefactor and Price Innes McLean, a former player whose career met a tragic end.

In 1916, Kentucky officials christened the team's first football field as Stoll Field, with McLean gaining joint billing eight years later. McLean was a center on the 1923 squad who died as a result of injuries sustained in a November game versus Cincinnati. He was 22 years old. The following season, the stadium grandstands were named in his honor.

Florida football powerhouses welcome new additions to the club

By Jeff Levers

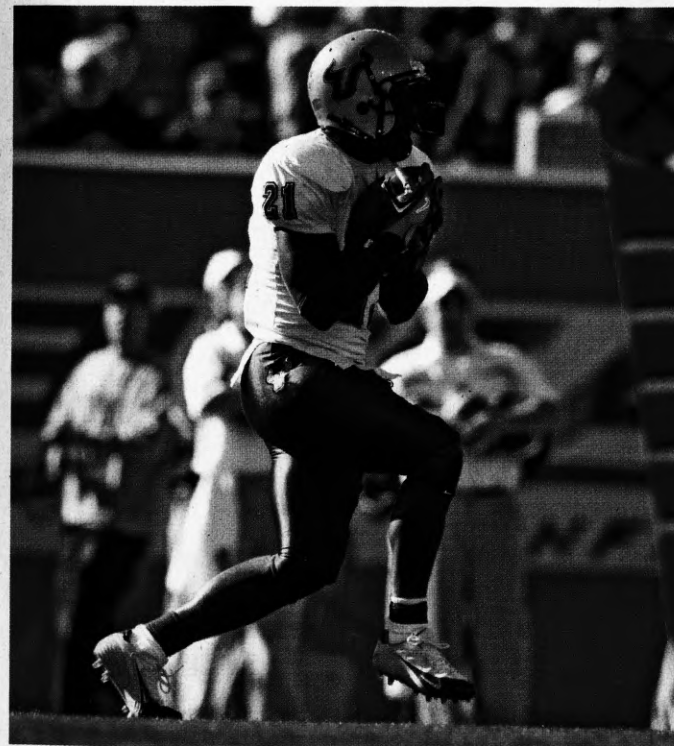

College football fans will always argue over what team is the best in a given year. The same can't be said though when the question comes up asking which state has been the most dominant in the modern era. Florida wins that discussion hands down — with no need for a recount — due to the level of excellence the University of Florida, Florida State University, and the University of Miami have exhibited in the past 25 years.

From 1982 through 2006, the "Big Three" have combined to win nine of the last 25 national titles, 28 conference championships, and compiled a record of 704-194-7 (.784). They have been able to maintain that level of success thanks to being located in the most fertile recruiting ground in the country. Due to year-round warmth, athletes in Florida can compete outdoors for 12 months, playing a big factor in the quality of athletes the state produces. With more time to practice and develop their skills, these highly trained student-athletes don't have to look far to find top quality programs. Also, by having dominated the college football landscape, a continuous national presence has allowed these schools to attract the top players from all over the country.

That has created an image of the "Big Three" schools being an exclusive club within the state. Every game they play is like a state championship, with each team competing for the Florida Cup. But it looks like the state will soon be admitting four more members. Schools like the University of South Florida, University of Central Florida, Florida Atlantic University, and Florida International University — once considered Florida college football afterthoughts — have developed into legitimate programs. The ability of these schools to offer kids immediate playing time while staying close to home is luring them away from the other in-state destinations.

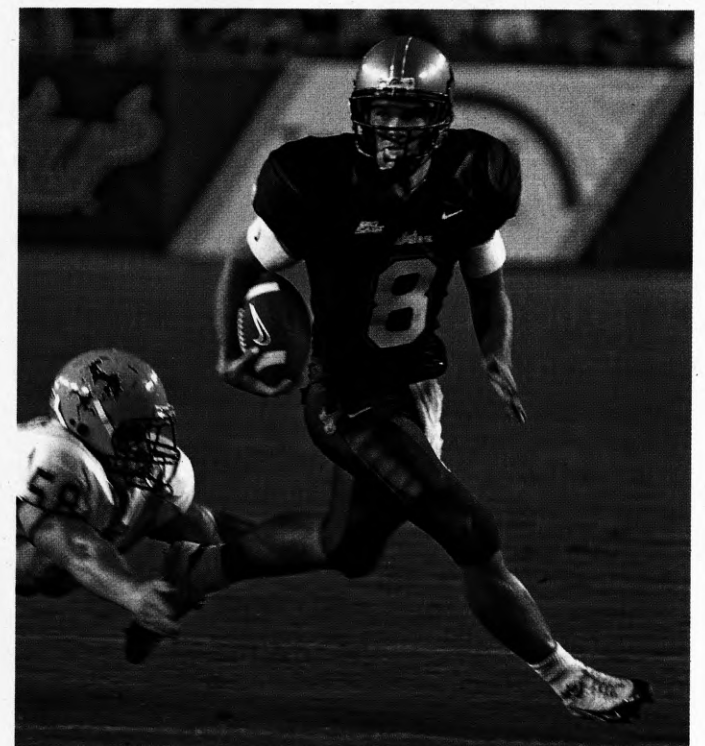

Here's a look at the football programs that are about to make a big impact on the Sunshine State's football landscape.

University of South Florida (USF)

Inaugural Season: 1997
Division I: 2001
Record: 70-43
Conference: Big East

The Bulls can be considered the most successful of these four emerging programs, recording 70 wins in their first 10 seasons and becoming the first Division I team to play in a bowl game in their first 100 games played.

In 2005, they moved from Conference USA to the Big East and scored impressive wins over Louisville in 2005 and West Virginia in 2006. They play their home games in Raymond James Stadium, the home of the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Last year the Bulls finished just outside of the top 25 and ranked in the top 25 in several early polls for 2007.

USF is led by 2006 Big East Freshman of the Year, QB Matt Grothe and an attacking defense led by senior LB Ben Moffitt. This schedule won't be easy though, with their first game at Auburn and with West Virginia and Louisville both coming to Tampa.

Florida Atlantic University (FAU)

Inaugural Season: 2001

Division I: 2006

Overall Record: 33-37

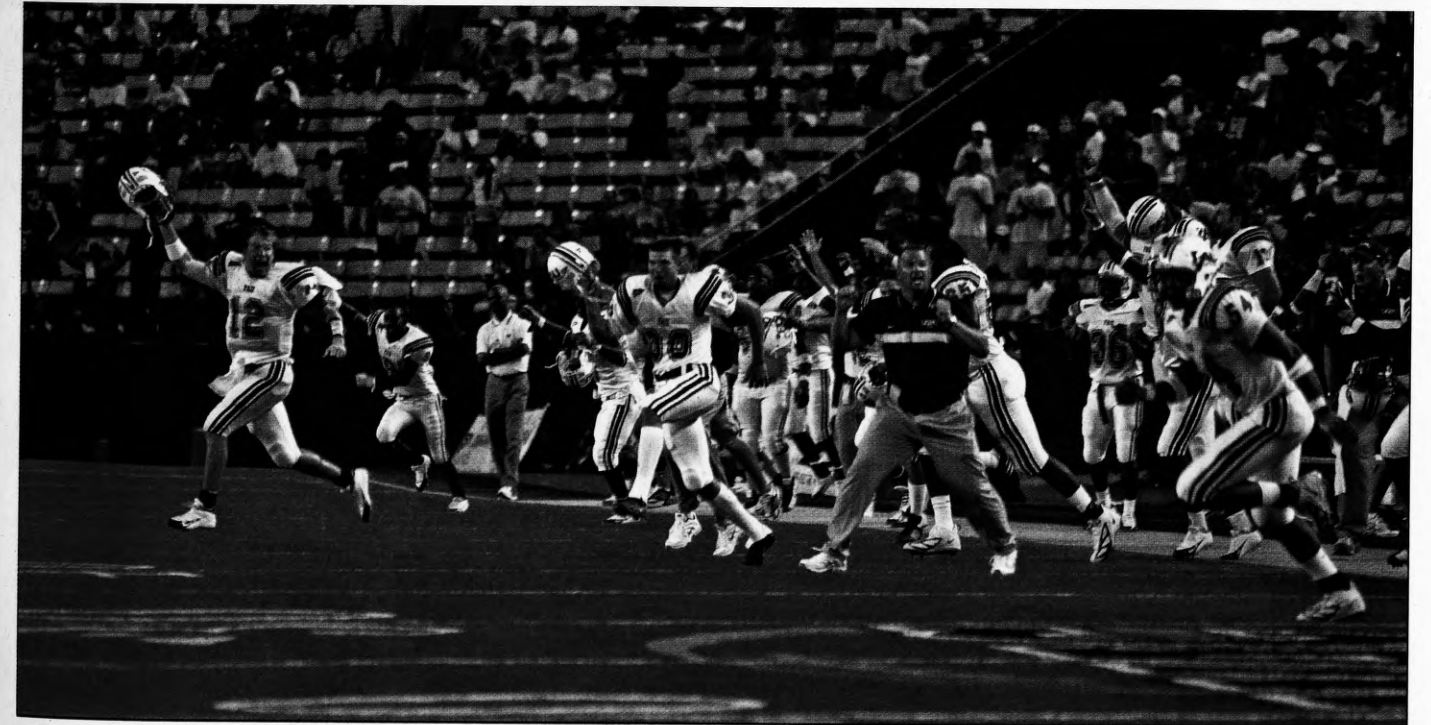

Conference: Sun Belt

Although they began play in 2001, the Owls always knew who would lead the charge of building their program from scratch. They hired Howard Schnellenberger in 1998 to be the head coach and director of football operations based on his success in building programs at Miami and Louisville.

Since 2003, the Owls have played their home games in the 20,000-seat Lockhart Stadium in Ft. Lauderdale, but it is set to be demolished in the near future. In 2006 FAU's Board of Trustees approved initial plans for a 30,000-seat, open-air stadium to be built on their Boca Raton campus, that can eventually be expanded to 100,000 seats.

FAU has developed an immediate rivalry with FIU that hopes to grow to the level of Florida-Florida State in the near future.

Florida International University (FIU)

Inaugural Season: 2002
 Division I: 2006
 Overall Record: 15-41
 Conference: Sun Belt

Located in Miami, FIU is well represented locally, with 10 of their 17 recruits in 2007 coming from South Florida.

The Golden Panthers have chosen to play away games against big-time programs as a method to increase their profile and they use those paydays to drastically improve their facilities. This season alone they play away games against Kansas, Maryland, Arkansas, and Penn State, as well as a game against Miami. This game has become a huge rivalry because many players from these two teams grew up together and played with or against each other from Pop Warner to high school.

The Panthers will be playing their '07 games in the Orange Bowl, before opening the renovated FIU Stadium against South Florida in 2008. The renovations increase the capacity to 23,500, with additional work planned to push the capacity to 45,000 by 2010.

University of Central Florida (UCF)

Inaugural Season: 1979
 Division I: 1996
 Record: 156-154-1
 Conference: Conference USA

The Golden Knights have taken the most deliberate path to D-I football, but they appear to be accelerating that plan in recent years. They moved from the Mid-American Conference to Conference USA in '05, and promptly won the East Division with a 7-1-conference record.

They are set to open the 2007 season in their new home against 2005 national champion Texas. Talk about a great inaugural opponent to play at the 45,000-seat Bright House Networks Stadium. Plans include the ability to increase the stadium to 65,000 in the future.

Miami native RB Kevin Smith, who has rushed for 2,112 yards through his first two years, leads the 2007 team. They return 18 starters and should be competitive in a wide-open C-USA East Division.

All four of these teams have the potential to reach the level of the Gators, Seminoles, and Hurricanes. The Big Three took decades to reach their current levels of success, while these four programs are on the verge of breaking through within their first 10 years as Division I football programs. The facility upgrades and the quality recruits available in the state are helping make that dream of becoming a top flight program a reality. The sun is definitely shining in the state of Florida and it's not just on the Big Three anymore. ☀

"Building Leaders Through Football"

What's in a Name?

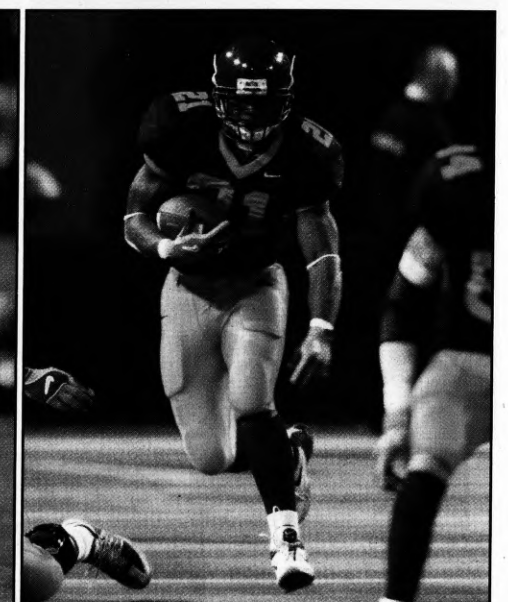

Following in a famous father's footsteps doesn't guarantee success, but it does give the son a unique opportunity to shine.

Marion Barber III (Photo by Univ. of Minnesota)

By Jon Cooper

College provides a chance for kids to find their own identities. It's often an age of rebellion, when parents' advice goes in one ear and out the other, and following in their footsteps is the last thing they want to do.

But there are exceptions. Many of them can be seen on Saturday afternoons in the fall, in the form of sons following in the footsteps of their famous fathers on college football fields across the nation.

While they may not remember much about their fathers' careers, the legacies and proverbial shadows are unavoidable for second generation student-athletes.

Some, like University of Minnesota senior free safety Dominique Barber, embrace that challenge. Barber's father, Marion Jr., and older brother, Marion III, starred at running back for the Golden Gophers before each embarked on NFL careers, so the question of where to attend college was never an issue for him.

"I had some other schools looking at me, but I knew from when I was watching my dad on film when I was four or five years old that I always wanted to be a Gopher," he says. "Also, the opportunity to play with my brother for a year was an amazing thing."

Where he went was a priority for Dominique, a star running back in high school, but his position was not, even if it meant breaking the chain of Barber running backs.

"When I was a freshman, the coaches told me the best possibility for me to get on the field was in the secondary," says Barber, who was among the Big Ten leaders in interceptions and pass breakups in 2006. "I'm a team player, and if that's what I had to do to help the team, I would do whatever. I didn't really think about playing running back at all."

In the case of Chris Long, coaches at the University of Virginia didn't mess with the family recipe of success. They were more than willing to see how the son of Howie Long, an All-American at Villanova and an NFL Hall of Fame defensive end (he's currently a FOX studio analyst), would fare at the same position his dad played. The apple didn't fall far from the tree.

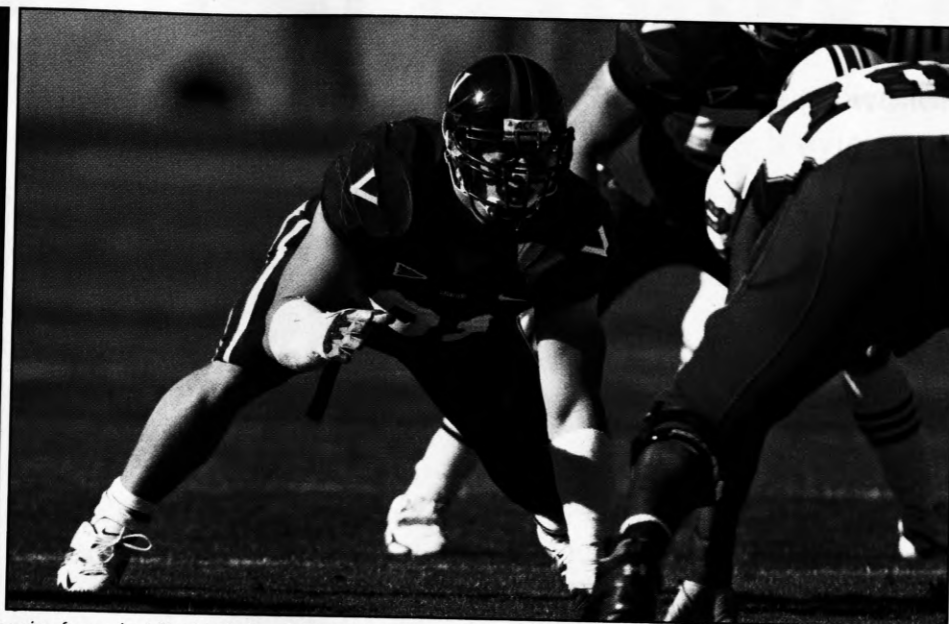

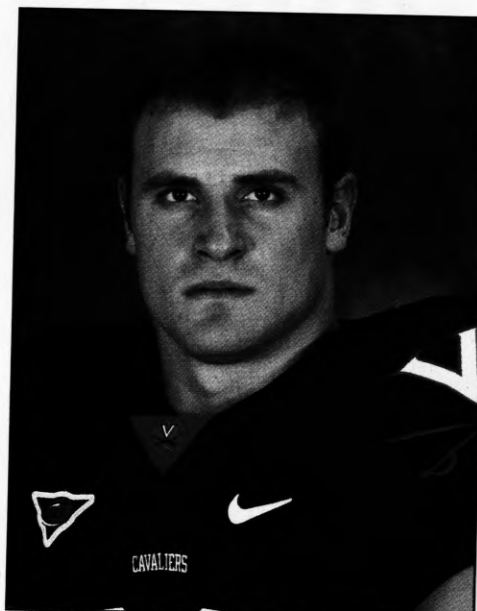

The high expectations never bothered Chris, who has two younger brothers, Kyle and Howie Jr.

"I look at it as an advantage," says the senior defensive end, who was a preseason candidate for the Outland and Nagurski trophies.

"Folks probably look at it as a disadvantage because obviously everybody's judging you based on something you have no control over. But as time's gone by, it's been a great advantage. Not only is he a great father figure for me, and a role model, but he is somebody who knows a great deal about my life."

For Chris, who was also named a preseason First Team All-American, and candidate for the Bednarik, Lombardi, and Hendricks Awards, fame has its advantages, like being able to hobnob with other famous people — in this case pro players and All-Pro coaches.

"I don't really remember too many of his games, but he's still in contact with some people that know the game pretty well," Long says of his father. "Every now and then, I'll be lucky enough to maybe meet a Michael Strahan, who I got to sit down and talk with for about five minutes at the National Championship game because I was with my dad. It's really valuable to a kid like me who's trying to do what I'm trying to do, just to soak up all the knowledge they can [offer]."

Ohio State junior wide receiver Brian Robiskie also was able to mingle with big name stars thanks to his dad's career.

"I got a chance to be around Tim Brown at a really young age, before I think I was even playing football," recalls Robiskie, the Buckeyes' leading returning receiver heading into 2007.

Robiskie's father, Terry, starred at LSU, where he was the 1976 SEC Most Valuable Player. Terry has coached in the NFL since 1982 and is currently wide receivers coach for the Miami Dolphins.

"I really wasn't paying attention, but now I can see that he was definitely one of the hardest workers that I was around," adds Brian, whose father was an assistant coach with the Oakland Raiders from 1982 through 1993. "I got a chance to meet Jerry Rice. To hear from him the kind of work and the kind of determination you need to play the game and to play receiver, that helped me a lot. As he's moved around, a couple of guys have always been there to give me advice."

Sometimes the most important advice a son can get isn't about X's and O's.

"[My dad] wants me to do whatever my heart desires," Boise State sophomore quarterback Nick Lomax says, whose father, Neil, graduated from Portland State as the holder of 90 NCAA passing records, before embarking on an eight-year NFL career. "He didn't really care if I wanted to do curling or something like that or tennis or whatever. He's supported me every step of the way. It's just a coincidence that me and him were both quarterbacks."

Dionte Johnson, a senior fullback at Ohio State, also never felt the pressure to follow in his father's footsteps. His dad, Thomas "Pepper" Johnson, starred at linebacker for OSU before playing 13 years in the NFL. Pepper is now a defensive line coach for the New England Patriots, and is a member of the Ohio State Varsity "O" Hall of Fame.

"That's one thing about my father, he never made it so that I felt like I had to come to Ohio State," says Dionte, who also has a brother, mother, and godfather (former NFL star Keith Byars) who graduated from OSU. "His whole thing was, just don't go to Michigan. As long as I didn't do that, he was all the way behind me."

Not every father is as strict as Johnson when it comes to a son's choice of school.

Daniel Lofton is the son of James Lofton, an eight-time All-Pro and NFL Hall of Fame wide receiver, who attended Stanford University and twice interviewed for the school's head coaching position. Yet when the time came to choose a school, young Daniel diverged from the path of his father and older brother, David, who was a safety in Palo Alto from 2002 through 2006, and went to...gasp, the University of California-Berkeley.

"It's pretty ironic, because in coming to Cal, my dad was probably my biggest supporter," says Daniel, a redshirt freshman receiver. "He thought it was the best fit for me instead of just the best fit in other people's minds. He was real supportive and he's always liked the offensive system that's going on here.

"I definitely like not being in that shadow as much. Even though it gets brought up, at the same time it's kind of good to be the first Lofton to have my name associated with the school."

So what happens on Dec. 1, when the hated rivals lineup for The Big Game?

"There are no hard feelings, because my brother doesn't play there anymore," Daniel says. "It will just be a rivalry game like it is for everyone else."

Of course for these select players following their father's legacies, they already know they're not like everyone else, and that is something they're accustomed to by now. "It kind of follows me everywhere. It's something I'll always have to accept," says Lofton. "I went through things because I am the son of James Lofton. There's always added pressure with that. At the same time, there's always benefits to it, because I'll always have a father who can show me the way and can help me out with stuff, especially on the field."

Generation X's and O's

Not all sons choose to walk in the footsteps of their football-playing dads. Some prefer to carve their own niche and sometimes, prolong their football careers by following their dad to the sidelines.

Here are just six sons of legendary coaches who are making their own mark as coaches in the college ranks.

Son: Shane Beamer (South Carolina)- Asst. Coach/OLBs/Special Teams
Father: Frank Beamer (Virginia Tech)- Head Coach

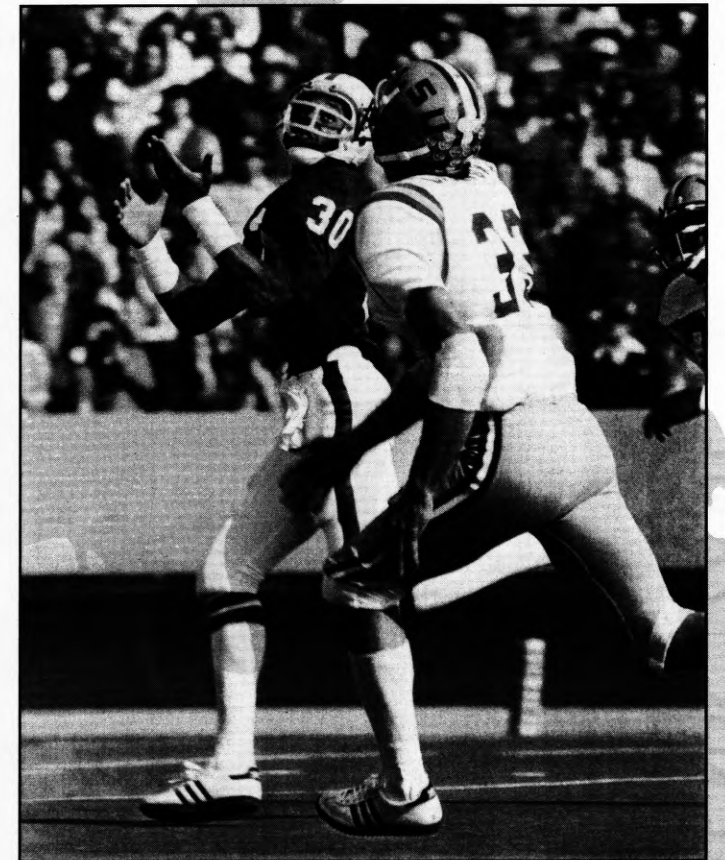

Son: Tommy Bowden (Clemson)- Head Coach

Normally it's not a good sign to have pie on your face, but in this case, it's all in good fun. A tradition at many bowl games is to have pre-game battles between the two teams where they compete in various events from hula-hoop to wing-eating contests. The Las Vegas Bowl holds a pie-eating contest, which sometimes can turn out to be a bit sloppy. Photo courtesy of the Pioneer Las Vegas Bowl.

Tougher men demand a tougher oil.

Jerome Bettis knows what it means to go the distance. That's why he relies on Mobil Clean 5000. It's as tough and durable as he is, with serious engine protection guaranteed for 5,000 miles. In fact, it's the only conventional oil to make that kind of claim. And with most carmakers now recommending oil drains beyond 3,000 miles, that's a very good thing. Mobil Clean 5000. It's seriously tough oil. Learn more at mobiloil.com.

All-Americans

Harlan Hill Trophy

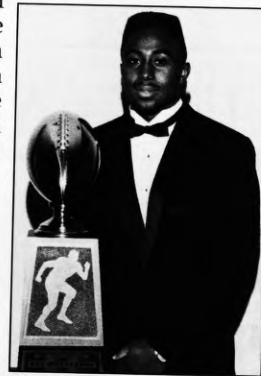

Two Edinboro University football players have been finalists for the Harlan Hill Trophy, presented annually to the top player in NCAA Division II football. Running back Elbert Cole was one of three finalists in 1989, while wide receiver Ernest Priester was a finalist a year later. Cole placed third in the '89 balloting. He earned All-American honors in 1989, receiving first team accolades from Kodak/American Football Coaches Association, second team recognition from Football Gazette, and third team status from Associated Press.

Cole rushed for 1,507 yards and set Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference records for touchdowns (24) and points (148). He led the Fighting Scots to the PSAC West title, a 8-3 record and a number seven ranking in the final Division II poll.

Priester was runnerup to North Dakota State quarterback Chris Simdorn in 1990 when the Bison claimed the Division II national title. Priester was the PSAC Western Division Co-Player of the Year in 1990. He was also recognized by Kodak/American Football Coaches Association, Associated Press and the Football Gazette as a first team All-American.

The wide receiver hauled in 47 passes for 1,102 yards and 15 TDs. Edinboro finished 9-3, reaching the Division II quarterfinals.

Three years ago Andre Burke (below) made a run at the Harlan Hill Trophy, as the tailback was a Northeast Region semifinalist. Burke ended up with a school-record 1,713 yards and 19 TDs.

Robson and Wolf Honored as Pete Nevins Scholar-Athletes of the Year

Chris Robson

Jamie Wolf

Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference Commissioner Steve Murray has announced that 1,420 student-athletes from the league will be recognized as "Scholar-Athletes" for the 2006-07 academic year.

Headlining the list of recipients are this year's Pete Nevins Scholar-Athletes of the Year, as selected by the league's sports information directors. Lock Haven University's Chris Robson was named the male Scholar-Athlete of the Year and Clarion University's Jamie Wolf gained the same honors on the women's side. The 1,420 scholar-athletes account for approximately one third of the 5,200 + student-athletes in the PSAC. Commissioner Murray will award each scholar-athlete with a certificate of distinction.

The PSAC Pete Nevins Scholar-Athlete of the Year Awards are presented to the top student-athletes who have achieved at least a 3.25 cumulative grade point average while competing at an outstanding athletic level. Student-athletes must have been recognized as a Fall, Winter or Spring Top Ten Award winner to be eligible.

In its 17th year of existence, the awards were renamed this year to honor East Stroudsburg's long-time sports information director Pete Nevins, who passed away in January after a short battle with cancer. Nevins held his position at ESU for 33 years, and it is estimated that he wrote articles on more than 12,000 ESU events that covered more than 5,000 student-athletes.

Robson graduated with a 3.86 GPA in health and pre-physical therapy. A four-time Top 10 Award winner, Robson earned an NCAA Post-Graduate Scholarship and will pursue a doctorate in physical therapy at the University of Delaware.

The distance specialist earned All-America honors this past season by finishing eighth in the steeplechase at the NCAA Outdoor Championships. He posted the league's fastest effort for 2007 in the event at the PSAC Championships, winning his second consecutive title with a time of 9:03.28, which also established a new school record. He was an All-PSAC performer in cross country with a 16th-place finish in 27:15 at the PSAC Championships, helping Lock Haven earn the team title. He earned a 27th-place finish at the East Regional to help guide the Bald Eagles to another team championship and aided LHU's 11th-place finish at the NCAA Championships. He has been a key member of the Bald Eagle squad that has won four consecutive PSAC Cross Country Championships and three of the last four NCAA East Region Championships.

Wolf graduated with a perfect 4.0 GPA in molecular biology. The 2007 NCAA II Female Diver of the Year, Wolf won both the 1- and 3-meter national championships while setting the NCAA 1-meter diving record with 453.75 points. She is a three-time NCAA II Female Diver of the Year (2007, 2005, 2004) and has won an NCAA record seven national championships in eight tries. She also has been named Clarion's Female Athlete of the Year and a Winter Top 10 selection three times. Wolf has accepted an NCAA Post-Graduate Scholarship and will attend Ohio State University and where she will major in molecular genetics.

Additionally, ESPN The Magazine/CoSIDA named Wolf the 2007 At-Large Academic All-America of the Year for the College Division, which, in addition to swimming and diving, recognizes the sports of bowling, crew, fencing, golf, gymnastics, field hockey, ice hockey, lacrosse, rifle, skiing, tennis, and water polo for NCAA II, III and NAIA.

The Cactus Bowl

Offensive linemen Greg Bzorek and LaMont Singleton continued the tradition of Edinboro Fighting Scots playing in the Cactus Bowl in January 2006. (NOTE: The 2007 contest was suspended.) For a number of years Division II football teams had an all-star game named the Snow Bowl, which was played in Fargo, North Dakota. In 2000 the contest was moved to Kingsville, Texas and renamed the Cactus Bowl. The contest features the top small college seniors in the country. Edinboro has had at least one representative in every Cactus Bowl (aka Snow Bowl) but one, with a streak of eight straight years. Here's a complete list of the Fighting Scots who have performed in the Cactus Bowl Division II All-Star Game.

Dear Fans:

I hope that our fans will applaud and frequent the 15 supporters listed below from the Edinboro community who have supported our players with evening snacks through the grueling practice sessions in August. Our "August Snacks Program" has been a huge success. I can't tell you how appreciative our players are of these generous donations. This is the seventh consecutive year that the community has reached out and assisted us. Our players have asked me to thank each of the restaurants/eateries below. Please support these Edinboro business! THANK YOU.

Where Erie Fans go for sports!

This marks the 22st season that I have been fortunate enough to be a member of the Edinboro football staff. During that time it has been very gratifying to see the response of local organizations in assisting Edinboro football. In recent years the service organizations has provided invaluable assistance, including running the 50/50 raffles. We look forward to working with these organizations again this year, and thank them for their support of Boro Football.

Sincerely,

Scott Browning

dous team player who always looked for a place to contribute and has always been dependable. He never showed frustration when his number was not called. He's been a jack of all trades.

40 Caleb Mayer – FB, Bennington, VT

Major: Psychology
Date of Graduation: Spring '08
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: The good times with my teammates.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: Get married and start my life.
Coach Browning Comments: Caleb gave up so much to join the Boro three years ago transferring from Liberty. He sat out his first year using his "red shirt" to scope out the position which would best fit his abilities. He has a strong passion for football, his teammates and the Boro. Caleb has been persistent in finding a way to make a contribution. Caleb will finish strong contributing greatly as a fullback and on special teams.

70 Mike Mills – OT, Girard, OH

Major: Communications & Media Studies
Date of Graduation: Fall '07
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Living in Blackwatch and all the great times on the field.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: I'm gonna make it what it do baby!
Coach Browning Comments: Mike has overcome so much over the past six years, but he saved his best for last. Not only has he enjoyed a productive senior year on the football field but has set himself up to graduate at the end of this semester.

33 Justin Olney – FB, Amanda, OH

Major: Recreation Administration
Date of Graduation: Spring '08
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: I have two, one being Chris Amico getting trapped under the tarp our freshman year. He came out with tears in his eyes saying "I thought I was going to die". I never laughed so hard in my life seeing him kicking and screaming as he came out. The second was coach making me do 200 up-downs for missing a morning lift my sophomore year.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: I plan on getting a job in recreation somewhere around Columbus and start working on my master's at Ohio State.

Coach Browning Comments: Justin has had five solid years at the Boro playing fullback off and on as a starter and sparingly on special teams. Justin has been a valuable team player and has provided leadership even though he has not been a starter his senior season.

12 Bill Schneider – QB, Hookstown, PA

Major: General Science -- Secondary Education
Date of Graduation: Spring '08
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Freezing at the Slippery Rock game in 2006.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: Graduate in the spring and look for a job as an educator in the Pittsburgh area.
Coach Browning Comments: Bill came to the Boro asking only to be given an opportunity to lead the scout team offense as the quarterback. Throughout Bill's time at the Boro he has contributed to the scout offense and more. Bill has held for the extra point field goal team the past two seasons as well as contributed on a number of the other special teams on Saturday afternoons.

77 Brian Shreve – OT, Erie, PA

Major: Speech Communications
Date of Graduation: Spring '08
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Getting to know some of the best players and coaches around, plus getting to hang out in the football office with Peggy.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: I plan on doing an internship somewhere and then get a job as a pharmaceutical salesman.
Coach Browning Comments: Brian always has a smile. He has a great passion for the game of football, but more importantly, his teammates. He's been a solid backup who has always been there.

13 Taurean Valentine – CB, Allentown, PA

Major: Recreation Administration (minor Health Fitness Wellness)
Date of Graduation: Spring '07
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Being a part of the championship teams and meeting and playing with some great people/players.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: Start a career somewhere warm.
Coach Browning Comments: Mike has been a tremendous team player who always looked for a place to contribute and has always been dependable. He never showed frustration when his number was not called. He's been a jack of all trades.

84 Kyle Witucki – TE, Tarentum, PA

Major: Health & Physical Education -- Sports Administration
Date of Graduation: Fall '08
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Participating in the 2004 NCAA Playoffs and scoring my very first career touchdown at Bentley. Also, spending time in the football office with the coaches, and especially Peggy.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: Pursue a career in Sports Administration and to have a healthy and wealthy family.
Coach Browning Comments: Not only will Kyle be missed on the field at the tight end position but also around the office where he seemed to hang around an awful lot over the past four years. His four years as a tight end would rank up there with anyone who played the position here at the Boro. He's a true team player who had everyone's best interest at heart.

76 Andy Young – OG, Greenville, PA

Major: Health & Physical Education Teaching Certification
Date of Graduation: Spring '08
What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: The wins over Bentley and Bloomsburg were pretty big. And spending time with Peg in the football office.
What do you plan on doing after Edinboro: Get a job as a gym teacher.
Coach Browning Comments: "Don't worry", a famous quote from Andy Young at seemingly the most critical times. He has enjoyed playing a lot of football at EVERY position on the offensive line. Andy's an Intelligent player.

Today's Feature

Goodbye Seniors!!!

by Bob Shreve, Sports Information Director

Each year we look forward to this date, yet we also dread it. The final home game is always designated as Senior Day. Today we bid farewell to 16 seniors. These young men have continued the proud tradition of Edinboro football. We wish them the very best as they move on with their lives. Hopefully the ideals they have learned as Fighting Scots will guide them in their future endeavors. (story continued on pg. 60)

2 Donnye Aiken – CB, Erie, PA

Major: Political Science

Date of Graduation: Spring '08

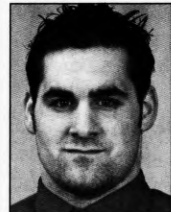

What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: After the come-from-behind win at Bloomsburg.

What do you plan on doing after Edinboro:

I plan on running for public office. I would like to get elected mayor of Erie.

Coach Browning Comments: Donnye transferred from Colgate and worked his way into a starting role his senior season. A little under-sized, Donnye has played his best football as a senior for the Boro. This will be one to remember for Donnye.

42 Chris Amico – NG, Webster, NY

Major: Communications (minor in Criminal Justice)

Date of Graduation: Fall '07

What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Meeting all the players and coaches and my time spent at Edinboro.

What do you plan on doing after Edinboro:

I want to start on a job and get acclimated to the real world.

Coach Browning Comments: Chris is about as good as any football player to play for the Boro in my 22 years. Too short, too small until it is time to compete. Thank god he wore the red and white on Saturday afternoon.

Mike Cradduck – Warren, PA

Major: Health & Physical Education – Teacher Certification

Date of Graduation: Fall '07

What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Covering and uncovering Sox Harrison Stadium every home game my freshman year, and skit night my freshman year with the team.

What do you plan on doing after Edinboro:

Teaching in the Erie area and also coaching.

Coach Browning Comments: Mike came to the Boro from nearby Warren, Pa. He worked hard and played in a reserve role at the linebacker position while contributing on special teams. He chose to student coach his senior year due to an overload in academic course work and also to gain some practical experience from the coaching side as he has helped out student coaching throughout the 2007 season. I know he's excited about entering the education field in the near future.

25 Tom Davidson – FS, Geneva, OH

Major: Special Education

Date of Graduation: Spring '08

What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Coming to Edinboro as a walk-on and earning a scholarship and being a four-year starter. Also the many great games and even greater friends I have met along the way.

What do you plan on doing after Edinboro:

I plan on leaving Edinboro and becoming a special edu-action teacher, probably moving to Chicago to live with Nate Eimer (former Edinboro tight end).

Coach Browning Comments: Tom Davidson joined the Boro as a walk-on with hopes of seeing the field someday. After redshirting his freshman year Tom broke into a starting role at safety and has not left the field. Tom has been the quarterback of our secondary for the past four years. He's been known for his dependability and bringing on the rookies. Tom has 15 career interception to date.

21 James English – LB, Mayfield Heights, OH

Major: Psychology

Date of Graduation: Fall '08

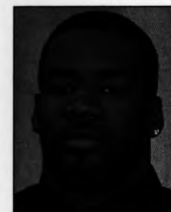

What has been your most memorable experience at Edinboro: Meeting new friends and having fun with football and teammates.

What do you plan on doing after Edinboro:

Working as a school psychologist and a coach.

Coach Browning Comments: James came to the Boro as an athlete and spent four years moving from wide receiver to safety to linebacker. Over the four-year period James has had a very positive influence on special teams while becoming more involved as a linebacker. James has been a "do what is best for the team" type of guy.

48 Syl Hanner – DE, Pittsburgh, PA

Major: Sports Administration

Date of Graduation: Fall '08
