The creative energy and collaborative spirit emanating from within the Institute have been remarkable. We have seen successful projects, seminars, and events and activities were investigated and brought to fruition. This development has been highly desirable because we believe that the work of our Institute should extend from its members. The results of the work of the Institute have been reported on in several reports. We are particularly pleased with the efforts and successes of our Institute in working with the University and with outside institutions. INTRODUCTION

The Center for Excellence in Teaching has completed its second year of operation. Following the "Thrust for Excellence" Task Force Report and the charge from President Diebold, we continued to consult with our Advisory Board and the four Institute chairpersons to further develop our conceptual plan for this new body. The Center's mission and goals statements continued to serve as our guide in providing direction for the Institutes.

The organization of the Center for Excellence in Teaching has remained effective. Meeting regularly with the four Institute chairs collectively has been fruitful and has fostered activities with two institutes working cooperatively. Monthly meetings with the Dean of the School of Education and the Advisory Board have been helpful.

The creative energy and collaborative spirit emanating from each Institute have been remarkable. While some successful projects were repeated, many new events and activities were investigated and brought to fruition. This development has been highly desirable inasmuch as we believe that the work of the institutes should evolve from its members. The results of the work of the discrete Institutes have exceeded our original expectations. We are particularly pleased with the efforts and successes of collaboration within the University and with outside institutions. The Institute chairs have provided exemplary leadership and devoted countless hours to their Institutes.

We acknowledge the contributions of President Foster Diebold, Dr. John Fleischauer, Provost, and the Center Advisory Board in providing counsel during our second year. The possibilities for internal and external collaboration have not diminished. In fact, each new endeavor serves to encourage us to explore new avenues which will expand and strengthen the goals of the Center and the four Institutes. We are excited and confident that personnel within the Center for Excellence in Teaching will continue to provide the energy and enthusiasm needed to meet the demands and challenges facing the teaching profession.
