PRESIDENTIAL PERSPECTIVES

by Frank G. Pogue

I can only imagine what must have been going through the mind of Principal John R. Flickinger, as presidents were then called, when he conferred degrees upon the 49 graduates of the Edinboro State Normal School's class of 1899, the last graduating class of the 19th century at this institution.

Our University archives show that five years later, most of the class of 1899 became teachers, four had continued their studies, six were homemakers, one became an assistant postmaster, and one other, in the span of five short years, had become an elementary school principal.

These thoughts come to mind as I look forward to conferring degrees upon the 689 graduates of the December 1999 graduating class, the last class to graduate from what is now Edinboro University of Pennsylvania in the 20th century, and the seventh class to graduate since I became president.

As the Edinboro Family knows, we have declared the arrival of the year 2000 and the next millennium as our Century of Civility at Edinboro University. Throughout the celebration of the new millennium and beyond, we have asked the University community to re-dedicate itself to the concept of civility and to incorporate the theme and ideals of civility into our many special events and programs. Through this initiative, we are establishing the goal of creating opportunities for the members of the Edinboro Family and neighboring communities to experience and consider the ideals of civility – fairness, tolerance, collegiality, and civic responsibility – ideals similar to those which I suspect Principal Flickinger proposed to the class of 1899.

It is my hope that you graduate carrying these ideals with you to your families, careers and communities. You will forever be members of the Edinboro Family, and while your lives after graduation may take you to places distant from the campus, I trust that, as alumni of this great institution, you will return as often as possible to join us as we experience the Century of Civility here at your alma mater. Wherever you may be throughout the new millennium, however, I do encourage you to consider your role in promoting civil ideals and actions in every aspect of life.

I hope to see all of you at Commencement on Saturday, December 18, as well as at the Pre-Commencement Brunch. Dr. James Barker, superintendent of schools for the City of Erie, will be the featured speaker and recipient of an honorary Doctor of Public Service degree. You can be proud that Jim Barker will be your classmate.

Congratulations on your graduation. You are part of a proud and distinguished Edinboro tradition. You have my very best wishes and those of Mrs. Pogue for continued success. Please keep in touch.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO GRAD WORKING TOWARD CURE FOR TB

On the wall of William Jacobs' laboratory at the Howard Hughes Medical Institute (HHMI) in New York is a list of endangered diseases. It's a reminder to Jacobs and some 20 other researchers in his lab of the diseases they hope to make extinct.

Jacobs, a 1978 graduate of Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, and currently a medical investigator at HHMI, was in Edinboro recently to address students about his work on finding vaccines for diseases that have developed resistance to multiple drugs.

Much of Jacobs' current research involves the mycobacteria that causes tuberculosis. "More people will die from TB in 1999 than any other year in history – more than three million people," said Jacobs. "That's 275 people an hour. It's estimated that one in three people on the planet have been infected with TB."

In the United States there are drug therapies and a vaccine for TB but neither have worked very well. TB has been kept in control largely because of better hygiene. But Jacobs is concerned about an emergence in the New York City area of multi-drug resistant TB – strains resistant to all seven antituberculosis drugs now in use.

One of the problems physicians face is determining which strain of TB is infecting the patients they are treating. In much of the developed world there are machines that can identify the strain in three or four weeks. But in Third World countries they have to rely on methods that take much longer – five weeks to do a bacteria culture, and another five weeks to do a drug susceptibility test.

Jacobs wanted to find a way to speed up that process. Taking a virus that affects TB, he cloned to it the gene from fireflies that makes fireflies glow. Then he added the virus to the TB to make it glow. But he still needed a way to record the results of drug tests on the glowing virus.

He struck upon the idea of taking a polaroid cassette and having a light-tight box built to hold the cassette, along with several of the TB samples. "We call it the Bronx Box," said Jacobs.

The idea is to have several tubes containing the TB samples and apply a different drug to each sample, and then add the glowing virus. If the drug kills the cell, the light doesn't come on. If the sample is drug resistant, the virus doesn't die and the glowing light shows up on the polaroid film.

"We can have light signals in hours," said Jacobs. "We are setting up to do trials in Mexico, South Africa and China to see how well this system works in the field."

Indeed, it is Jacobs' concern for the peoples of the Third World that is driving much of his research. Three-fourths of the world's population live in developing nations. Yet, in places like Africa, no more than a dollar per person is available for public health. Jacobs knows that even if drug companies had an effective vaccine for Third World diseases, they would be unlikely to produce it because the people who need it couldn't afford it.

But Jacobs has a solution. Since 1948 newborns in the Third World have received a vaccine for TB called BCG. The vaccine is so safe, it is the only one given at birth. Thanks to research like that of Jacobs', scientists now have the means to put genes from other organisms into BCG.

I'm very committed to solving Third World problems," enthused Jacobs. "Not only solving the problems, but finding the solutions that are affordable in the Third World. I really want to make a vaccine for malaria. It is the number two killer in the world next to TB. So right now, we have expressing on the surface of BCG a protective antigen for malaria. Out of studying these mycobacteria, we can make vaccines against basically any disease. We can make a vaccine against 20 different diseases that's going to be affordable for children in the Third World."

After graduating from Edinboro with a mathematics degree, Jacobs did post-graduate work at Edinboro in microbiology before getting a doctorate at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. From there he went to Washington University in St. Louis and then the Albert Einstein College of Medicine where he is professor of microbiology and immunology and of molecular genetics.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA WINTER COMMENCEMENT

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania President Frank G. Pogue will confer degrees on 689 students at the Commencement ceremony on Saturday, December 18. With a May graduating class of 655 students, Edinboro granted approximately 1,344 associate, bachelor's and master's degrees during the 1999 calendar year.

Twenty-four undergraduate students will be graduating with summa cum laude honors (3.80 to 4.00 grade point average), 33 with magna cum laude honors (3.60 to 3.79), and 56 cum laude (3.40 to 3.59).

Carrying the ceremonial mace and leading the academic procession as the Grand Marshal at the ceremony will be Ruthanne Atkinson, professor of elementary education. A member of the Edinboro faculty since 1969, Atkinson earned her bachelor of arts in elementary education at Grove City College in 1966. She received her master's from Kent State University in 1969, and completed additional coursework at Allegheny College, Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, and Indiana University of Pennsylvania. In addition, she earned certification as an elementary principal in 1985 and elementary supervisor in 1987.

Receiving an honorary doctorate during the ceremony will be Dr. James E. Barker who has served as superintendent of schools for the School District of the City of Erie since 1993. Barker received his bachelor's degree in biology and psychology and his master's in special education/school psychology from Kent State University, before earning an advanced degree in school psychology and several post-master's certification programs at Edinboro University.

The winter Commencement ceremony will take place in the University's McComb Fieldhouse at 1:00 p.m.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

BEN VEREEN TO APPEAR IN ERIE AND EDINBORO

Emmy and Tony Award-winning entertainer Ben Vereen will appear in Erie and Edinboro on Wednesday, January 19, for two events sponsored by Edinboro University of Pennsylvania. Vereen will be the featured speaker at the President Frank G. Pogue Honors Scholarship Luncheon which will be held in the Zem Zem Shrine Club beginning at 11:30 a.m. The luncheon is expected to draw as many as 1,000 business and community leaders. Vereen will also appear as a lecturer and performer at 8 p.m. in Edinboro's Memorial Auditorium.

One of America's most respected and admired entertainers, Vereen has earned critical and audience acclaim through numerous roles in film, stage and television. In addition to his landmark portrayal of Chicken George in the groundbreaking television mini-series "Roots," his own ABC special "Ben Vereen: His Roots" won seven Emmy awards. He has co-starred in series ranging from "Webster" and "Tenspeed and Brownshoe," to "Silk Stalkings" to "The Fresh Prince of Bel Air." In film, his roles include the quintessential entertainer in "All That Jazz."

His stage credits include his role as the Chimney Man in "Jelly's Last Jam," and the lead role in the musicals "Grind" and the long-running "Pippin," for which he won a Tony for best actor in a musical.

Vereen has also been widely honored for his humanitarian activities. He spearheads the work of "Celebrities for a Drug-Free America," which provides support to drug education programs across the nation, and speaks regularly to the nation's youth all over the country. In 1990 he received the prestigious Victory Award for his success in overcoming adversity and helping others. Indeed, his greatest success is his miraculous recovery from a truck accident that nearly took his life. Today, he is a smiling symbol of all that faith and will can accomplish in the face of overwhelming adversity.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY ANNOUNCES
BRUCE GALLERY OF ART 2000-2001 SCHEDULE

During the month of September, Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's Bruce Gallery of Art will be filled with jewelry created by 14 metalsmiths from around the country, and exquisitely detailed ceramic sculptures by artist Leah Hardy. On Wednesday, September 6, the Gallery will host two lectures and a reception to open three art exhibitions: "Marked by Media," "Concordance, A/K/A:92," and "Leah Hardy, Enshrined Metaphors." Artist Marjorie Simon, a member of the editorial advisory staff of Metalsmith magazine, will present a slide lecture at 6 p.m., in 119 Doucette Hall on the women's artist group "A/K/A:92." An opening reception in Bruce Gallery will follow from 7 - 9 p.m. Simon will also present "The Art of Writing about Craft," from 3 - 5 p.m., in the Loveland Hall jewelry studio.

Ten prominent artists in the field of metalsmithing create the exhibition of contemporary jewelry in "Marked by Media." The artists, chosen by Edinboro University professors Sue Amendolara and Cappy Counard Wolf, represent a broad range of conceptual concerns and have in common a strong sense for the aesthetic possibilities of the media they use and a dedication to craftsmanship.

Four women artists from the metropolitan New York area formed the group "A/K/A:92" in 1989 with the belief that they might have more impact as a group than as individuals. They have met bimonthly since to plan collective exhibitions and projects as well as offer support, interest and encouragement to one another. "Concordance, A/K/A:92" is an exhibition of jewelry by the four women artists.

“Leah Hardy, Enshrined Metaphors” is an exhibition of ceramic sculptures by artist Leah Hardy. Hardy creates intimate-scaled architectural shrines that form a sacred space for objects and vignettes that symbolize the concepts of growth, change, choice or chance.

“Marked by Media,” “Concordance, A/K/A:92,” and “Leah Hardy, Enshrined Metaphors” will remain on view through September 28.

“Edinboro University of Pennsylvania Annual Faculty Exhibition” will be on display from October 4 through 26, and will present artwork in all media by 42 studio art faculty members. An opening reception is scheduled for Wednesday, October 4, from 7 - 9 p.m. in the Gallery.

“Residue,” an exhibition of contemporary paintings and sculptures, will be exhibited November 1 through 30, with the opening reception held on Wednesday, November 1. Paintings by Deborah Randall and Hee Joung Kwon, and sculptures by Keith Krueger will be included in “Residue.” Opening reception will be held 7 – 9 p.m., on Wednesday, November 1 and the Gallery will be closed November 22 through 26 for Thanksgiving break.

The opening reception for “Painted Diaries” will be held 7 – 9 p.m., on Wednesday, December 6. “Painted Diaries,” on display until January 25, will feature paintings by Waldek Dynerman, Diane Fitch and Joan Linder. The Gallery will be closed for semester break December 16 – January 16.

An exhibition of contemporary prints and sculptures will be on view during “Shape and Content,” January 31 – February 22, with the opening reception from 7 – 9 p.m., on Wednesday, January 31. “Shape and Content” will include prints by Minna Resnick and Endi Poskovic, and sculptures by Arnold Nadler.

Contemporary photography by Mark Abrahamson and Catriona Fraser will be appearing in “Active Stills,” from February 28 – April 5, and will include installation by Keith Holmes. An opening reception is scheduled on Wednesday, February 28, from 7 – 9 p.m. The Gallery will be closed for spring break March 7 - 18.

The Bruce Gallery of Art 2000-2001 season will conclude with "Edinboro University of Pennsylvania Annual Student Art Exhibition," April 11 – May 5. Artwork in all media will be displayed, and an opening reception is scheduled 7 – 9 p.m., on Wednesday, April 11.

The public is welcome to attend all events. Gallery hours are from 3 to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday and from 7 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday evenings. For more information, or to schedule viewing hours for high school art classes, call (814) 732-2513 or 2406.
