WILLIAM BACU NAMED EDINBORO STUDENT TRUSTEE

William Bacu, a business administration major from Imperial, Pa., has been named the student representative to Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's Council of Trustees. Bacu, a junior, is minoring in economics.

In recommending Bacu to the position, outgoing student trustee Tyler Snyder (who received his bachelor's degree in business administration at the University's spring Commencement ceremony) said Bacu has a strong awareness of campus issues and a good understanding of the role of a trustee in the State System of Higher Education. Snyder chaired the student trustee selection committee.

Bacu said he applied for the position not only to further his collegiate and professional career, but also to make a contribution to the University. FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO STUDENTS BUILD HABITAT FOR HUMANITY HOME IN NORTH CAROLINA

While thousands of college students were spending their spring break in sunny Florida, a group from Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's residence life and housing staff endured rain and cool temperatures to build a house for a needy family in Cape Fear, North Carolina. The 10 students and two staff and faculty members took part in a Habitat for Humanity project, March 6-13, building floors, walls and the roof, and installing doors and windows.

Joining the Edinboro contingent were 11 students from Eureka College in Illinois, and two students from the University of North Carolina - Greensboro. Not only did the volunteers give up their free time to work on the project, each one chipped in or raised $150 to help defray the cost of building materials. They were housed in the basement of the St. Andrew Covenant Presbyterian Church in Wilmington, and area churches provided most of their meals.

The University provided two vans for the trip and two advisers. The residence life staff organized the trip and the Student Government Association contributed $500.

Beth Shick, an Edinboro University residence hall coordinator, said students got a lot out of working on the project for a good cause. "It was an incredible experience to watch the house come up in front of our eyes," said Shick. When the students arrived on the first day, only part of the foundation was in place. By the end of the week the roof and exterior walls of the house were up and some of the interior was taking shape.

Laura Paul, a senior from Edinboro, was one of the assistant residence hall coordinators who organized the trip. She said all of the students took turns in most facets of the construction - digging, nailing, sawing and even laying down the concrete foundation.

Working alongside with them was the single mother who would be moving into the house. "The best part was knowing you were down there helping someone," said Paul.

Meeting the family who would live in the house and seeing who would benefit from their work was a very emotional experience for the volunteers. Before leaving North Carolina, everyone signed his or her name on the house.

Despite the inconvenience of sleeping on cots and sharing two showers among 30 people, Paul said she would do it again and is already helping to plan next year's trip and other projects for Edinboro's Habitat for Humanity chapter.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

AREA UNIVERSITIES ANNOUNCE PROJECT HERO

In an unprecedented collaboration, area colleges today announce the creation of Project HERO (Humanitarian Emergency Relief Operation), a broad-based, community-wide effort to raise funds for Kosovar refugees through the Greater Erie County Chapter of the American Red Cross and the International Institute of Erie.

The presidents of Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, Mercyhurst College, and officials from Allegheny College join with representatives of the Red Cross and the Institute to announce the start of Project HERO and light a unity candle to signify the coalition's goal of bringing together all of northwestern Pennsylvania in a common humanitarian effort.

Project HERO will aid Kosovar refugees directly in the Kosovar region by raising funds for the Red Cross's international relief efforts. HERO will also help the Kosovar refugees who come to the Erie area by raising money and supplies for the International Institute. The two relief agencies were chosen to help refugees both locally and abroad, and give contributors a choice of where they would like their funds to go.

The initial goal of Project HERO is to raise $50,000, but the coalition believes as interest in the cause grows, significantly more money will be raised. Contributors will be asked to make their donations directly by check to either the Red Cross or the International Institute, and to write "Project HERO" in the memo section of the check. That will tell both agencies where the money is to go and will also make it possible to track which funds have been raised through Project HERO.

- more -

One of the things that makes project HERO unique is its plan to invite others to become equal "HERO Partners." Any group or any person can become a HERO partner: businesses, corporations, educational institutions, religious and civic organizations. Each partner will be encouraged to stage or support fund-raising events of their own choosing. For example, the colleges and universities will be asking their student organizations to develop fund-raising events in their campus communities.

A third way to support Project HERO is through collection canisters. The coalition hopes to place canisters at dozens of public locations around the region where on-the-spot cash contributions can be made.

While cash donations are the best way to support Project HERO, the International Institute is in urgent need of other support as well. To meet the needs of the refugees once they arrive in northwestern Pennsylvania, the Institute is seeking housing, furnishings, storage space, personal care items and school supplies. Specifically, the Institute is looking for beds and bedding, furniture and major appliances, and simple things like toasters, dishes and silverware. It also needs storage space to house those items and assistance in their delivery. The Institute is also interested in contacts from people who can speak Albanian.

KAREN MURDZAK NAMED NETWORKS AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS DIRECTOR AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY

Karen M. Murdzak has been appointed networks and telecommunications director at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania. Prior to her appointment, Murdzak was Edinboro's network operations manager.

Murdzak has a bachelor's degree from Edinboro and has pursued graduate studies in math and computer science at Edinboro and Purdue University. She has 20 years of experience in networks and telecommunications at GTE and Edinboro. She joined the University in 1995 as student telecommunications services coordinator before taking her most recent post last year.

In her new position Murdzak is involved in the planning and implementation of the University's campus networks and telecommunications operations. Specifically, she will oversee the implementation of the school's new ATM voice and data network and the Campus-Wide Information Network that will provide cabling for the main campus and Edinboro University in Erie – The Porreco Center.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

AREA COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES ANNOUNCE PROJECT HERO

A coalition of colleges and universities from northwestern Pennsylvania yesterday announced the creation of Project HERO (Humanitarian Emergency Relief Operation) to raise money for the Kosovar refugees. The three schools – Allegheny College, Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, and Mercyhurst College – will work with the American Red Cross and the International Institute in Erie, Pennsylvania, to provide funds for the relief efforts in the Kosovo region, and support Kosovar refugees who will be relocated in northwestern Pennsylvania.

Making the announcement were Edinboro President Frank G. Pogue; Mercyhurst President William Garvey; Allegheny College's Director of Public Affairs Mary Norton; the Director of Development and Public Relations for the Greater Erie County Chapter of the American Red Cross, Sheridan Stricker-Caughlan; and the Executive Director of the International Institute, Michael Murnock.

The participants marked the announcement by lighting a unity candle to represent the coming together of the schools in a common humanitarian effort.

Pogue said any person, group, business or religious organization can join the coalition as a "HERO Partner." Edinboro will be sending out hundreds of letters inviting others to join the coalition.

The initial fund-raising goal of Project HERO is $50,000, but the members believe the total could be much greater.

"Philanthropy is an American tradition," said Garvey. "The Erie community is a generous one, which is why we feel this will be a success."

The colleges will be calling upon their students to take up Project HERO as one of their community service projects when they return to school in the fall. The more than 10,000 students at Mercyhurst and Edinboro alone put in some 70,000 volunteer hours last year.

Pogue believes the needs of the refugees will be with us for many, many years. Even if the reported peace settlement in Yugoslavia should be a lasting one, it will take a long time for the refugees to rebuild their homes and their lives.

"We're talking about a long-term venture here," said Pogue.

EDINBORO, MANSFIELD UNIVERSITIES OFFER DEGREE VIA VIDEO TO ELK AND CAMERON COUNTIES

Residents of rural northwestern Pennsylvania will soon be able to earn a college degree in criminal justice locally thanks to an agreement between two State System of Higher Education universities and the Community Education Council of Elk and Cameron Counties.

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania and Mansfield University of Pennsylvania are collaborating to offer an associate of science degree in criminal justice administration at the Education Council's facilities in St. Marys, Pa. The courses will be taught via interactive video from Mansfield and Edinboro with Mansfield offering all of the criminal justice courses and Edinboro providing the general education courses from its facilities at Edinboro University in Erie – The Porreco Center.

The degree will be a part-time evening program offered over a period of four years. Two courses will be offered each fall and spring semester. A student enrolling when the program begins in the fall of 1999 could receive his or her associate degree in 2003.

The program will prepare students to work in probation, parole, drug enforcement, security and investigation, and meet the minimum 60 credit hours now required by the Pennsylvania State Police.

Edinboro's Dean of Liberal Arts, Dr. Terry Smith, said the program combines the quality of Edinboro and Mansfield courses with the convenience of holding the classes in St. Marys.

EDINBORO'S ON-TRACK PROGRAM TARGETS RURAL WOMEN STUDENTS

More than 70 students from rural high schools in northwestern Pennsylvania will take part in a program June 27 – July 1 at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania designed to prepare and motivate rural students for a college education.

The On-Track program will help students – especially women – become aware of their academic and career potentials, opportunities and resources. This year's program has grown to 32 rural high schools participating with students entering their sophomore, junior and senior year in the fall.

Faculty, staff and students will introduce the five-day program that will feature several daily seminars on topics such as career assessment, team building, and mind/body connections. Students will learn how to manage stress more effectively through art therapy techniques. They will be exposed to diversity issues on a college campus, attend a planetarium show and experience hands-on activities in the art department.

In addition to the scheduled courses, participants will also be able to select self-interest groups in the areas of loss and separation, eating disorders, peer relations and influences, substance abuse and dealing with stress.

The evenings will be spent in recreational activities, including a boat ride and catered picnic at Presque Isle, karaoke, and line-dancing.

Amanda King, a graduate of Saegertown High School, participated in the 1992 On-Track program prior to entering eleventh grade. She had no idea what she was going to do when she graduated. "After attending the On-Track program," King said, "I understood my personality and what I should do with my future. I highly recommend the program to any student who is looking for direction." King is now a junior at Edinboro University majoring in secondary English education.

Parents and students will join the camp kick-off on Sunday, June 27, with tours of campus and Edinboro community, followed by a short program and dinner. The five-day program will conclude with a certificate award ceremony on Thursday, July 1.

Since On-Track began in 1992, every student who has participated in the program has graduated from high school and 90 percent have gone to college.

DIXON GIFTS EDINBORO $150,000 FOR NEW DISABLED COMPLEX

A $150,000 gift from the Widener Memorial Foundation in Aid of Handicapped Children will bring students with disabilities at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania one step closer to a new learning and recreation complex.

Edinboro University President Frank G. Pogue has announced that the University's request for special Widener Memorial Foundation support was fully funded by the Foundation's trustees at their spring meeting in Lafayette Hill, Pa.

Notifying Pogue of the gift was the Foundation's President, F. Eugene Dixon, Jr. Dixon is also chairman of the Board of Governors of the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education.

The $150,000 will go toward funding an elevator and special access ramp in Edinboro's planned Crawford Center for Health and Physical Education and Disabilities Resources. When completed, the new Crawford Center will add more than 27,000 square feet of new construction and renovate 23,000-plus square feet in what is now Crawford Gymnasium. The proposed annex will house the University's Office for Students with Disabilities and facilities which serve the instructional, athletic, recreational and rehabilitational needs of those students.

The Widener Memorial Foundation normally makes grants to organizations located in Pennsylvania's Delaware Valley area for the care of orthopedically handicapped children.

"Because of the reputation of Edinboro University and its tremendous support for students with disabilities, the members of the Foundation board decided to make an exception to our geographical requirement and fully fund Edinboro's request," Dixon said.

“You have made my year,” Pogue told Dixon when telephoned about the approved funding.

“While we are very proud of the programs and services we currently offer for students with disabilities, your gift on behalf of the Widener Memorial Foundation will greatly enhance access to the facilities of the Crawford Center and allow the program to grow,” Pogue said. “On behalf of the Edinboro Family, I am honored to express our appreciation to Mr. Dixon and the Widener Foundation for the generous contribution.”

HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS TO TAKE PART IN EDINBORO UNIVERSITY'S ERIE/MEADVILLE PARTNERSHIP SUMMER PROGRAM

Students from high schools in Erie and Crawford counties will take part this summer in a two-week college preparation program at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania. Between 35 and 40 students who will be juniors this fall at East, Central, Strong Vincent, Meadville and Cochranon high schools will take part in the Erie/Meadville Partnership, July 15-17, at Edinboro.

The Partnership is a three-phase program designed to prepare academically promising students for college careers. The first phase – the Rising Juniors Program – is the one taking place at Edinboro this summer. It is intended for high school juniors who are B and C students who show interest and ability in college.

The Edinboro program will stress activities that require teamwork such as an outdoor challenge program and camping out along French Creek. Other activities will include science, ceramics, an environmental program, and a karate session to teach discipline. The students will make field trips to Presque Isle and the Maritime Museum in Erie.

One of the program's coordinators, elementary education professor Mary Jo Campbell, said the program emphasizes building character, self-esteem and capitalizing on the skills the students already have. The other coordinator is history professor Umeme Sababu.

The second phase of the Erie/Meadville Partnership – the Rising Seniors Program – is a three-week residential program at Mansfield University of Pennsylvania. For the Partnership's third season – the Collegiate Summer – those students who choose to attend a university in the State System of Higher Education enroll in a regular summer school session to take college

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY SIGNS AGREEMENT WITH NORTHWESTERN

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania and the Northwestern School District have signed an articulation agreement that will make it easier for graduates of Northwestern High School to attend Edinboro. The agreement allows students to earn college credits by completing accelerated or advance placement courses. Graduates of Northwestern who earn an A or B average in advanced English, mathematics and science courses will receive credit for Edinboro courses in college writing skills, precalculus and introduction to biology.

Signing the agreement for Northwestern were Superintendent Lynn Corder and Principal Joseph Meako. Signing for Edinboro were President Frank G. Pogue and Dean of Liberal Arts Terry Smith.

Northwestern Superintendent Corder said parents who realize its potential benefits have eagerly anticipated the agreement. "I think it is an excellent thing," he said. "The University has been really cooperative and we appreciate that."

Pogue said the agreement with Northwestern makes a lot of sense because of the close proximity to each other and the number of students who have matriculated to Edinboro.

"Over the last ten years we have admitted some 400 Northwestern graduates," said Pogue. "Nearly half have graduated and a significant number of those are still enrolled. Some 24 graduates will be coming to the University this fall and we have already identified six who will benefit from this arrangement."

This signing brings to nine the number of similar articulation agreements Edinboro has signed with area school districts. The others include Conneaut, Corry, Crawford Central, Fairview, General McLane, McDowell High School, Quaker Valley and Wattsburg.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY SIGNS AGREEMENT WITH QUAKER VALLEY

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania and the Quaker Valley School District have signed an articulation agreement that makes it easier for graduates of Quaker Valley High School to attend Edinboro. The agreement allows students to earn college credits by completing accelerated or advance placement courses. Graduates of Quaker Valley who earn an A or B average in English, mathematics and science honors courses will receive credit for Edinboro courses in college writing skills, precalculus and introduction to biology.

Signing the agreement for Quaker Valley were Superintendent R. Gerard Longo, Principal Jeanne Johnson and former school board president and Edinboro alumnus Michael Zahorchak. Signing the agreement for Edinboro were President Frank G. Pogue and Associate Vice President Donald Dilmore.

Longo, a 1965 Edinboro graduate and 1994 Distinguished Alumni Award recipient, said the agreement is an important opportunity for the district. "To be able to establish a relationship with Edinboro University is a matter of personal pride."

"The line between high schools and colleges is beginning to blur," said Johnson. "You have many students...who have taken advantage of the enormous opportunities outside the wall of a high school. Many of them are ready to move ahead and the typical high school environment no longer meets their needs. I think it's really important that we start exploring ways to connect to colleges [and] to the outside world which will give us our best chance not only of positioning our best kids, but actually getting our kids who might not be tempted to go on to school to think about that and to see that they can be successful."

Pogue said the program is beneficial because it gives students early access to the college experience. "It is also important for our professors to stay in touch with high schools," he said. "They, too, are learning what is taking place. Early connections really provide an opportunity for us to have access to the very best students produced by our high schools. Some 18 students from this high school have graduated from Edinboro in the past ten years. We can only look to increase those numbers. This is an exciting time for us and we are anxious to get started."

Zahorchak, a 1937 Edinboro graduate and honorary lifetime member of the University's Alumni Association, has been a long-time proponent of bringing the two schools together. "Our alumni have a responsibility to guide some of these students to Edinboro because we have a fine, fine program."

This signing brings to nine the number of similar articulation agreements Edinboro has made with area school districts. The others include Conneaut, Corry, Crawford Central, Fairview, General McLane, McDowell High School, Northwestern and Wattsburg.

Officials of Edinboro University of Pennsylvania and the Quaker Valley School District sign an articulation agreement allowing Quaker Valley students to earn Edinboro credits while still in high school. Signing are Quaker Valley Superintendent R. Gerard Longo, former school board president and Edinboro alumnus Michael Zahorchak, Edinboro President Frank G. Pogue, Edinboro Associate Vice President Donald Dilmore, and Quaker Valley High School President Jeanne Johnson.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO SIGNS AGREEMENTS WITH NORTHWESTERN, QUAKER VALLEY

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania President Frank G. Pogue signed articulation agreements with two school districts last week that will make it easier for graduates of those districts to attend Edinboro. Pogue signed one agreement with the Quaker Valley School District in Sewickley, near Pittsburgh, on Tuesday, June 8, and the second agreement was finalized on Friday, June 11 with the Northwestern School District in Albion.

Both agreements allow students to earn college credits by completing accelerated or advance placement courses. Graduates of Northwestern and Quaker Valley who successfully complete honors courses in English, mathematics and science will receive credit for Edinboro courses in college writing skills, precalculus and introduction to biology.

Signing the agreement for Quaker Valley were Superintendent R. Gerard Longo, Principal Jeanne Johnson and former school board president and Edinboro alumnus Michael Zahorchak. The Northwestern agreement was signed by Superintendent Lynn Corder and Principal Joseph Meako.

Longo, a 1965 Edinboro graduate and 1994 Distinguished Alumni Award recipient, said the agreement is an important opportunity for the district. "To be able to establish a relationship with Edinboro University is a matter of personal pride."

"The line between high schools and colleges is beginning to blur," said Johnson. "You have many students...who have taken advantage of the enormous opportunities outside the wall of a high school. Many of them are ready to move ahead and the typical high school environment no longer meets their needs. I think it's really important that we start exploring ways to connect to colleges [and] to the outside world which will give us our best chance not only of positioning our best kids, but actually getting our kids who might not be tempted to go on to school to think about that and to see that they can be successful."

Pogue said the program is beneficial because it gives students early access to the college experience. "It is also important for our professors to stay in touch with high schools," said Pogue. "They, too, are learning what is taking place. Early connections really provide an opportunity for us to have access to the very best students produced by our high schools."

Northwestern Superintendent Corder said parents who realize its potential benefits have eagerly anticipated the agreement. "I think it is an excellent thing," he said. "The University has been really cooperative, and we appreciate that."

Pogue said the agreement with Northwestern makes a lot of sense because of the close proximity to each other and the number of students who have matriculated to Edinboro.

"Over the last ten years we have admitted some 400 Northwestern graduates," said Pogue. "Nearly half have graduated and a significant number of those are still enrolled. Some 24 graduates will be coming to the University this fall, and we have already identified six who will benefit from this arrangement."

These two signings bring to nine the number of similar articulation agreements Edinboro has signed with area school districts. The others include Conneaut, Corry, Crawford Central, Fairview, General McLane, McDowell High School, and Wattsburg.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

PROJECT HERO MAKES APPEAL FOR KOSOVAR REFUGEES

With the arrival this week of one Kosovar refugee family and the anticipated arrival of several more this month, Project HERO is issuing an appeal on behalf of the International Institute of Erie for supplies and funding. Institute Executive Director Michael Murnock said beds and storage space are especially needed. "We need bed frames as well as mattresses," said Murnock, "and we need some additional room to store them."

Project HERO (Humanitarian Emergency Relief Operation) is a coalition of Allegheny College, Edinboro University of Pennsylvania and Mercyhurst College which formed to raise money for the Kosovar refugees through the Greater Erie County Chapter of the American Red Cross and the International Institute.

Murnock said funds are also needed immediately to purchase used beds when donated beds are not available. Even with cash contributions, there may not be enough used beds on the market and new beds are prohibitively expensive. That is why Project HERO is making a public appeal. What makes the appeal critical is a number of refugee families may be arriving at the same time.

Anyone wishing to make a contribution of supplies may contact the International Institute at 517 East 26th Street, Erie, PA 16504-2803, or call (814) 452-3935. Cash donations may be sent to the Institute or the Greater Erie Chapter of the American Red Cross, 4961 Pittsburgh Avenue, Erie, PA 16509, or call (814) 833-0942. Be sure to designate "Project HERO" on the contribution.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY HONORS SEVEN ALUMNI

Seven Edinboro University of Pennsylvania graduates were recently named distinguished alumni at a special luncheon ceremony highlighting the school's 1999 Alumni Reunion Weekend.

Honored were artist and professor Donna Arnink, artist and retired teacher Vernon Dornbach, Patricia Czynnik Boord of the FBI Academy, Edinboro University professor Dr. Charles Babbitt, educator and founder of Pennsylvania's first Charter School James Gentile, former Reagan cabinet-level appointee Dorothy Jean Benish Potter, and Bradford schools administrator and community activist David Sheneman.

In addition to traditional college classes, artist and art educator DONNA ARNINK, '68, has taught elementary and secondary students, adult learners and senior citizens. Currently a tenured professor at Colorado College in Colorado Springs, her career in education included positions at Michigan State, Penn State, and at Bedford College in London. She is credited with developing an innovative approach to makeup for theater, film and television which she describes in her book, Creative Theatrical Makeup, published by the Michigan State University Press. Arnink has worked on more than 200 dance, opera and theatrical productions and has collaborated with theatrical artists famous in their fields from around the world.

Over his 40-year career in art education, former Fulbright Scholar VERNON DORNBACH, '44, taught all ages, from grades 1-12 in New Zealand, to junior and senior high in Pennsylvania, and Elderhostel in California. After 17 years as a professor, department chair and gallery director at California's University of Redlands, Dornbach retired in 1986. Redlands honored him with an endowed art scholarship in his name upon retirement. He continues to paint, do volunteer work, present slide lectures, and hike the canyons of Arizona and Utah.

A member of the State System of Higher Education

Although PATRICIA CZYRNIK BOORD, '77, graduated from Edinboro with a degree in music education and the idea of becoming a musician and conductor, in 1979 she accepted an appointment as a file clerk with the FBI in Washington, D.C. After working as a document classification specialist and writer/editor for the Firearms Training Unit, she was transferred in 1985 to the FBI Academy's Firearms Training Unit to assume responsibility for the statistical analysis of FBI shooting incidents. After a 1986 Miami shooting incident in which several FBI agents were killed and wounded, Boord's analysis served as the foundation upon which the FBI modified firearms training tactics and upgraded the weaponry issued to special agents. In 1988 she was appointed to the faculty of the FBI Academy as a senior instructional systems specialist, and in 1996 was transferred to the FBI's National Security Division where she is responsible for building and managing the Bureau's distance learning program. She now serves as the FBI's leading distance learning expert and provides consultation to numerous domestic and foreign government agencies, law enforcement organizations and branches of the military.

Sociologist and professor Dr. CHARLES BABBITT, '63, started his teaching career at Northwestern High School in Albion, Pa., where he also coached football. After teaching at Buffalo's Canisius College, Erie County Community College in Williamsville, N.Y., and summers at Penn State-Behrend, he returned to Edinboro in 1971 as an assistant professor of sociology. He has since served on and chaired countless committees and boards, provided consultant work, and served as chair of Edinboro's department of sociology/anthropology/social work and sociology program director. He has held visiting professor and scholar appointments in Austria, China, Pakistan, Taiwan, the University of California at Berkeley, and at the Curry School of Education at the University of Virginia.

Former salesman, truck driver, laborer, 1979 National Armwrestling Champion, football star and coach, and teacher JAMES GENTILE, '68, is the founder and CEO of Keystone Education Center, Inc., Pennsylvania's first charter school. He began his career in education teaching at schools in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and became involved in the field of alternative education in 1987 at George Junior Republic in Grove City, Pa. In 1993 he founded Keystone Adolescent Center, Inc., a private children and youth agency which is said to be the Commonwealth's largest community-based home. In 1997 he founded Keystone Education Center, Inc., the first school in Pennsylvania to receive charter school designation. He now serves as president and CEO of both corporations. The school provides educational alternatives that address the needs of a wide variety of students who have difficulty functioning in the traditional public school environment. Two of Gentile's four sons, Mike and Matt, are employed at Keystone. Both are Edinboro alumni and, like their father, were star football players.

Former Pennsylvania Teacher of the Year DOROTHY JEAN BENISH POTTER, '69, taught students from kindergarten through college in both Pennsylvania and West Virginia before accepting the position of director of early childhood education for the state of West Virginia in 1971. After two months of national-level service as deputy assistant secretary of elementary and secondary education, she was asked by President Ronald Reagan to serve as acting assistant secretary of education, a post she held for two years. In a ten-year period, she went from being a kindergarten teacher to managing all of the nation's elementary and secondary schools. Today, she finds great joy in creating a variety of children's learning tools and writing books.

The recipient of the 1999 Distinguished Alumni Award for Public Service is DAVID SHENEMAN, '64, who has dedicated his professional life to the Bradford (Pa.) Area School District. Beginning his career there as an art instructor, he has held the positions of administrative assistant to the principal, assistant principal for student conduct and attendance, technology administrator, acting superintendent, and director of personnel and administration, a position he has held since 1977. Active in community service, he is the past president of the Pennsylvania Association of School Administrators, the Bradford Rotary Club and the Grace Lutheran Church, as well as first vice president and past campaign chairman of the Bradford Area United Way. While president of the Edinboro University Alumni Association, he oversaw the design and construction of the Alumni House, which was dedicated in 1995. Three $25,000 Dean's Scholarships and an annual $40,000 Admissions Scholarship were also established during his presidency.

Edinboro University has honored 85 distinguished alumni since the program began in 1976.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO INTERNS PLAN AREA SENIOR TOURISM PROGRAM

Tourism in northwestern Pennsylvania is getting a boost this summer thanks to a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Aging, the offices of Active Aging in Meadville and four marketing students from Edinboro University of Pennsylvania.

The students are working with Pam Roberts at Active Aging to attract senior citizens from Ohio, New York, West Virginia and Canada to the Lake Erie region. The Department of Aging made a $15,000 grant available to promote tourism for seniors in a part of the state which ranks sixth in attracting tourist dollars.

Roberts, a 1981 graduate of Edinboro, called upon Edinboro marketing professor Sherry Reynolds to seek her assistance in developing a marketing plan especially targeted for out-of-state senior citizens. Reynolds selected the four Edinboro students – Bob Skiddle of Amherst, Ohio; Kyra Sherba of Pittsburgh; Tim Cheers of Franklin; and Junia Isiminger of Canadohta Lake – to serve as interns at Active Aging. Within a few weeks the four put together a comprehensive integrated marketing plan they hope will lure thousands of visitors to the area.

Reynolds said the interns created a trade show booth, logo, brochures and are even in the process of designing a website. Earlier this month they attended the Seniority Expo in Monroeville, Pa., and will soon distribute 100,000 tourism materials touting the Lake Erie region to some 750 senior centers in neighboring states and Canada. In August they will attend the Pennsylvania Senior Center Conferences in State College.

For more information on the project, contact Pam Roberts at Active Aging at 1034 Park Avenue in Meadville, or call (814) 336-1792.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

LOCAL STUDENT RECEIVES SCHOLARSHIP

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania has announced that Joseph Capezzuto, West Alexander, is the recipient of the Frank G. Pogue Scholarship.

This award was created in recognition of Dr. Pogue's inauguration as Edinboro University's 15th president on September 12, 1997, and the celebration of the University's 140th anniversary.

This scholarship is awarded to an incoming freshman or upper class student who meets all of the criteria required to participate in the Edinboro University Honors Program, although the student need not be formally enrolled in the Honors Program. The student must be enrolled full time. This prestigious scholarship is renewable through the completion of 128 credits provided the student maintains an overall cumulative QPA of 3.30 or better. Financial need is not a factor.

Joseph is the son of Joe Capezzuto, and Donna Capezzuto. He is a graduate of McGuffey High School and an applied media art major at Edinboro.

Dear Mr. Kenneth P. Brandt and Ms. Judith A. Viveralli,

I recently received a letter in the mail about the Board of Governor's Award that I received for the academic year of 1999-2000. I am writing this letter to express my gratitude for selecting me as a recipient of this award. I am truly grateful. I want to assure you that you have not made the wrong choice. I would also like to assure you that the work I intend do at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania surely will not be mediocrity, but of work to my best ability. Receiving this award gives me inspiration, as well as a goal to achieve and rise above. I know the roads that lie ahead are only stepping stones toward a better, brighter future, and trust that Edinboro University will aid in my guidance along the path. Again, I deeply appreciate you as well as the selection committee for selecting me as a Board of Governor's Tuition Waiver recipient. You have my promise that I will not let you down.

With Sincere Gratitude,
Aaron Taylor Barnes
