FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO PROFESSOR PRESENTS PAPER ON THALLIUM STRESS TEST

Dr. Thomas Walkiewicz, physics professor at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, presented a paper at the summer meeting of the American Association of Physics Teachers, August 7-12, in Spokane, Washington. The paper: "The Thallium Stress Test," described the use of radioactive isotope Thallium-201 in imaging the heart. Following injection of the dye, the patient remains a source of radioactivity for several days. Such patients can be used by high school-level science classes as a convenient source to measure radioactive half-life.

Walkiewicz noted that such stress tests use a relatively high dosage of radioactive material. It is not uncommon for a patient to receive approximately one rad during the procedure. Federal government guidelines for nuclear power plant workers set five rads as the maximum recommended exposure for an entire year. By comparison, it takes about 100 chest X-rays to equal one rad.

"A single test exposes a person to a significant percentage of the yearly allowed dose," said Walkiewicz. "However, a medically necessary procedure is worth the exposure."

He is currently looking for people who will be undergoing a thallium stress test in the near future who would be willing to have their radioactivity measured following the test. He may be contacted at Edinboro University at (814) 732-2468.

Walkiewicz also published an article in the September 1995, issue of The Physics Teacher. He conducted a simple experiment by rubbing a balloon with an animal fur to create an electrostatic charge. After 45 minutes the balloon was deflated and placed next to a Geiger counter to measure the amount of radiation extracted from the atmosphere. The "hot" balloon provided a phenomenal total activity of 10,051 counts in five minutes. Background radiation in the same area was only 30 counts per minute.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY'S THEATRE FOR YOUNG AUDIENCES
PRESENTS "DOROTHY AND THE WIZARD OF OZ"

Anyone who remembers the splendor and grandeur of the Wizard of Oz will enjoy the Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's Theatre for Young Audiences' presentation of "Dorothy and the Wizard of Oz." Based on the book by Frank L. Baum, the play by Steve and Kathy Hotchner presents the classic story with a few twists.

In this audience participation version, Dorothy finds herself confronted by the good witch Glinda, who worries as much about her vegetable garden as she does about getting Dorothy back to Kansas. Children from the audience will oil the Tinman, stuff the Scarecrow, and hide Dorothy from the witch in a forest they create. Toto will be there too, and children will calm him when his barking gets out of control.

The Theatre for Young Audiences will tour local schools in the Millcreek, Iroquois and Fairview school districts. Production dates at the Center for Performing Arts on the Edinboro campus are Thursday, October 12, and Friday, October 13, at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday, October 14, and Sunday, October 15, at 4:00 p.m. Seating is limited, so reservations are suggested and may be made beginning Monday, October 9, by calling 732-2877 from noon to 2:00 p.m. Ticket prices are $1.00 for adults and $.50 for children. There is no charge for University faculty, staff, students and adults who are accompanied by a child.

In lieu of admission, patrons are invited to donate non-perishable food, discarded eyeglasses, coats, or clean used toys which will be distributed to local charities.

A double cast allows more students to participate with less time lost from classes. Going to Oz will be Tara O'Neill (Bethel Park) and Sarah Alexis Hallam (Oakdale) as Glinda; Holly Curtis (Greenville) and Carrie L. Podroskey (Monongahela) as Dorothy; James M. Shoberg

12 x 23A

Barbara Singer and Michael Gallagher are serving older adults and families through Senior Care Management Associates, a new independent service that helps resolve the problems of older adults, aging parents and relatives.

September 25, 1995

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

MICHAEL GALLAGHER AND BARBARA SINGER: SHAPING THE FUTURE OF GERIATRIC CARE

The dilemma is a common one in the Erie area and across the nation. Sons and daughters grow up and leave home to start new lives in another part of the country. They find jobs, marry, and have families of their own. The years go by, then one day a message comes from back home: mom or dad can no longer care for themselves all of the time – they need help.

The loving adult children want to be there for them but can't afford the time or perhaps the money to return home. They now have their own family responsibilities and a career. How can they help their parents from the other side of the country?

If their parents live in northwestern Pennsylvania they can call Michael Gallagher or Barbara Singer, partners in Senior Care Management Associates. Singer and Gallagher have master's degrees in gerontology from Edinboro University of Pennsylvania and are members of the National Association of Professional Geriatric Care Managers.

They joined forces earlier this year to form Senior Care Management Associates, the only private service of its kind in the Erie area. Their mission is to maximize the independence and autonomy of frail elders in a cost-effective manner.

"What we really are," said Singer, "are professional adult children. Where there is a need in a family, we will come in and bond with the family – the older adults themselves and the adult children. We're there to help the family reach its goals."

In their role as surrogate children, Singer and Gallagher look after the older parents when the adult children can't. When a client is referred to them – either from a physician, the Alzheimer's Association, GECAC, the Area Agency on Aging or other source – they visit the home to assess the situation, make a series of recommendations, and put the client in touch with the myriad of resources available in northwestern Pennsylvania.

Each case and each family is unique. In some cases all that is required is to monitor the family once a month. In other cases it may be necessary to take a more active role. Gallagher and Singer do not provide care themselves, but they will do those things to get the client to a place where he or she can function independently.

“We might go with the clients to a doctor's appointment to make sure they get the information they need,” said Singer, “or we might have to take them to look at a choice of housing, or arrange for a home health person.”

More commonly, they will monitor their clients' bank accounts, make sure they are eating right, taking their medicine and generally functioning well.

The growing need for geriatric care managers like Singer and Gallagher stems from broad changes in society: people are living longer, adult children are living farther away and more women are in the work force.

“In the past,” said Gallagher, “the children were there. Everything in society has changed in the past 20 or 30 years. The fastest growing part of the population is the age group over 85. The daughters are no longer homemakers – they are no longer home.”

“Our goal is to help the elderly stay as independent as possible,” said Singer. “We are looking for the best quality of life for them. We are able to open up the world for people. It's hard for them to do it themselves. They need someone who is supportive and knows how to do it.”

That should help allay the concerns of adult children who fear putting their parents into nursing homes. Nationally, only about five percent of older family members are in nursing homes – perhaps only 20 percent over age 85. Typically, the clients Gallagher and Singer work with either have a cognitive problem or are deep into their 80s. Still, even the ones who are not able to stay in their homes do not necessarily lose their independence. The bottom line is the best quality of life. Sometimes that means getting out of the home where they are all by themselves and have no companionship and no activities, and into a place where they have assisted living.

Gallagher and Singer each have some 15 years of experience in the social work and gerontology fields. In addition to her master's degree from Edinboro, Singer has a master's of education degree from Columbia University. She serves as senior adult coordinator for the Jewish Community Council where she does case management, program development and volunteer recruitment and coordination, and developed a holistic manner of dealing with older people. She was a delegate to the May 1995 White House Conference on Aging. She will preside over a post conference, "Closing the Gap: Generations Uniting For Clout and Understanding." She has also served as president of the Independent Council on Aging and chaired the GECAC/Area Agency on Aging advisory board.

Gallagher has a bachelor's degree in social work from Gannon University. He was program director for the Mercy Center on Aging at Mercyhurst College and was director of the gerontology program at Saint Vincent Health Center for eight years. He also serves as coordinator of hospice social workers and volunteers at the Visiting Nurse Association of Erie County, and is chairperson of the Northwest Region of the Pennsylvania Council on Aging.

Their combined experience has given Singer and Gallagher a thorough knowledge of the services available to their clients. "It can be a real nightmare to start from scratch to find out what services are out there," said Gallagher. "I know that there are many times when I am doing research on what services exist in the community, I discover another service or program that has been in existence for a number of years that I never knew about. Barbara and I are out there all the time networking and being involved in the community."

One thing adult children are often concerned about is their parents' nutrition. Erie County has a meals on wheels program that delivers one hot meal a day. Crawford County's program delivers ten frozen meals on a weekly basis. Gallagher has discovered several small grocery stores and a few large supermarkets that will also make deliveries.

As adult children themselves, Gallagher and Singer have empathy for the situations faced by other adult children. They are very conscious of the costs involved in providing care for elderly parents, as well as the costs for adult children to return home to look after their parents well being. They, too, are part of what they call the "sandwich generation."

"The people caught in this bind are middle-class people like we are," said Singer. "They are either trying to save for their children's college education or deal with their children's college at exactly the same time their parents might need them. A plane ride home may sound easy, but it means taking time off work, at least a $300 plane ticket from most anywhere in the country, and enduring a lot of stress. In most cases we are able to go in and take care of a situation for less money than it would take for someone to fly home.”

Gallagher and Singer believe the future of managed geriatric care may lie in the same direction child care has taken in the past 20 years. Many businesses and government agencies established day care centers for their employee’s children. In the next century there may be just as many elder care centers.

Whatever direction geriatric care takes, Singer and Gallagher are likely to be at the forefront. “This is our life’s work,” said Singer. “We like it because it challenges our creativity. It’s like a puzzle when you work with older people, because it’s never just one piece you have to find. There are so many systems you have to access and so many things you have to factor in. It’s extremely creative work.”

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EMPLOYEE ANNUAL FUND DRIVE UNDERWAY AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY

Advancement officials at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania have announced that the employee phase of the school's 1995-96 Annual Fund drive – one of the most important fund-raising programs at any institution of higher learning – is underway and will continue until June 30, 1996.

“What makes the Annual Fund for faculty and staff so important is the message it sends off campus to corporations, foundations, businesses, friends of the university, and other external donors and donor prospects,” said Mark Carter, Edinboro University's assistant director of institutional advancement and director of the Annual Fund.

“The external funding sources we contact for contributions routinely ask if our own employees give to our campaigns and what percentage of them give to the traditional faculty/staff Annual Fund,” said Carter.

“For that reason, the theme chosen for this year's employee Annual Fund is ‘Giving Starts at Home,’ and the purpose is increasing employee participation,” Carter said.

“We believe that the dollar and participation rate goals for the 1995-96 campaign are both realistic and attainable,” Carter added. “We have an outstanding faculty/staff campaign committee whose members believe in Edinboro University and its mission to provide a quality education at an affordable cost to students and families.”

Named to the 1995-96 faculty/staff Annual Fund volunteer committee are: Dr. Louella “Bunny” Bucho, English and theatre arts; Dr. Margaret (Peg) Bevevino, educational services; Lisa Brown, director of intercultural relations; Janet Dean, assistant vice president for faculty relations; Julie Fedders, assistant director of student activities; Emily Green, executive assistant to the president; Gordon Herbst, associate vice president for financial operations; Dr. Wally Jewell, math and computer science; Dr. Jerry Kiel, assistant vice president for academic administration; Kerri Watson, associate director of admissions; and Dr. Robert Zanotti, who recently retired from the School of Education faculty.

Carter said that employees who contribute to the Annual Fund may do so in several ways, such as a payroll deduction, a pledge payable over time, or simply a lump sum gift. He added that donors may also designate gifts to a specific scholarship or project. Many individuals restrict their gifts for a specific area that directly assists students in a particular field of study, such as a departmental scholarship.

“As state appropriations continue to diminish, Edinboro University must increasingly seek revenue generated from other sources,” said John (Jack) E. Martin, associate vice president for institutional advancement, “and what makes support from the faculty and staff so important and vital is that it indicates our own commitment to higher education.”

Martin said that the prevailing myth continues to exist both on and off campus that the state appropriation provides sufficient, if not total, funding for the University to operate effectively and efficiently and meet its academic mission.

“We have witnessed the fiscal year appropriation from the Commonwealth dwindle from where it made up 60 percent of Edinboro’s total operating budget in 1985 to where it now constitutes less than half – 42.7 percent for 1995-96, to be exact,” Martin said.

“To ensure that Edinboro University retains its prominence in the region, and to continue to attract and retain academically-talented students, campaigns such as the employee Annual Fund have become a critical part of the University’s advancement enterprise.”

Edinboro's display at the Expo, which was visited by an estimated 1,000-plus seniors, focused on the University's contributions to community service and learning while emphasizing its Intergenerational Center and the two senior citizens' nursing centers in Edinboro and Waterford.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

DIEBOLD ANNOUNCES ORGANIZATIONAL CHANGES AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY

Top level changes are in the works at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, according to a recent memorandum from University President Foster F. Diebold to the Edinboro campus community.

The impending departure of Provost and Vice President for Academic and Student Affairs, Dr. John Fleischauer, has precipitated the changes in assignments, Diebold said.

Fleischauer has been named provost at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, and will assume those duties on October 2.

"Since Dr. Fleischauer's departure will occur less than a year prior to my own announced retirement," Diebold said, "I have examined several options on how to fill not only the position of provost, but also to staff other areas of the University which have been consolidated in order to conserve funds and also to provide the new University president the greatest flexibility in determining the administrative structure."

Diebold announced that Dr. Robert Weber, Edinboro's dean of liberal arts since 1989, will become the interim provost and vice president for academic affairs, effective October 2.

To fill Weber's dean of liberal arts position, Diebold has appointed Dr. Philip Kerstetter, the University's current dean of education, to serve in that capacity in an acting status while maintaining his responsibilities in the School of Education.

Diebold also announced that Dr. Charles F. "Rick" Abel, who currently serves as the faculty intern in the president's office, is being appointed dean of graduate studies and director of institutional research and planning.

A member of the State System of Higher Education

"This position has been vacant for some time but it is one that I believe will be of vital importance in the coming months as the University moves closer to a transition in the office of the president," Diebold said.

During his internship in Diebold's office, Abel continued to serve as an assistant professor in Edinboro University's political science department.

To respond to current needs brought on by the reorganization of the student affairs division begun last spring, Diebold also appointed Gary Jamison, currently director of student services, as interim vice president for student affairs. Jamison has been an administrator and manager in various student affairs positions, as well as a faculty member, since his employment began at Edinboro University in 1969.

Also, Dr. Denise Ohler, director of advising and career services, was named associate dean of the University College. Ohler will add to her current responsibilities the area of new student orientation, according to Diebold's announcement.

Diebold said that further administrative appointments will be necessary as a result of these changes and will be announced as quickly as possible.

"These appointments reflect my belief that Edinboro University will continue to maintain effective operations in all areas and will provide a flexible structure for a new president," Diebold said.

Diebold is scheduled to retire in the summer of 1996. At the time of his retirement, he will have been Edinboro University's president for 17 years.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY'S BRUCE GALLERY
PRESENTS THE ART OF EIGHT SCULPTORS

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's Bruce Gallery will present an exhibition, "Contemporary Sculpture: Eight Points of View," which opens Wednesday, October 4, and features the distinctive personal styles of eight artists. The show was organized by artist-educator Barry Parker, chairperson of the sculpture department of the University of the Arts in Philadelphia. Barry was an associate professor of art at Edinboro University from 1969 to 1979. He is on the Board of the International Sculpture Center in Washington, D.C., and like the other exhibiting artists, is a member of the Sculptors Guild in New York City.

The diversity within the exhibition is immediately apparent with work seen in a wide range of materials. Leonard Cave, a Maryland-based sculptor, creates forms developed from the natural properties of wood. These have figurative references in an Expressionistic manner. The wood becomes an energetic "Dog In Space." Cave's treatment of his material leaves the viewer aware of the tree that provided his medium.

New York artist Sydney K. Hamburger's art refers to feelings of anxiety based on social, cultural, and spiritual crises that she perceives in today's world. Her art seeks to provide some safety and comfort to the viewer. Her exhibited "Danto's Lair" is a clay, wood, and mixed-media piece that suggests a "safe space" and protective environment.

Manchurian born Mashiko came to the United States in 1962. Her sculpture uses organic forms that appear to allude to growth and natural processes. In the Bruce Gallery exhibition one piece is alabaster and the other was created with Tennessee Marble.

All eight artists have exhibited numerous times in the United States. Some of the Sculptors Guild members recently participated in an exhibition in Kyoto, Japan. Several of them have also shown large public sculptures in outdoor locations. Because of size limitations the Bruce Gallery show displays smaller pedestal-sized pieces which exert their own particular aesthetic appeal and power.

The exhibition will be on display through October 28. Gallery hours are 2 to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 7 to 9 p.m. on Wednesday evenings. For additional information, call 814-732-2513 or the Edinboro University Art Dept. at 2406.

Saturday's events continue with a football game at Sox Harrison Stadium with the Fighting Scots hosting the Lock Haven Bald Eagles. Kickoff at 2 p.m. A special alumni tent at the stadium will be open for alumni to gather and renew old acquaintances with classmates, faculty and staff, and to sign up for raffle prizes.

EDINBORO TO HELP TRAIN INSURANCE PROFESSIONALS

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania officials announced at a recent news conference that the University is joining with Preferred Insurance Educational Services of Erie to provide training in the form of continuing education credit hours for insurance agents and brokers in northwestern Pennsylvania.

Making the formal announcement at Edinboro's Porreco Extension Center were Robert Potalivo, president of Preferred Insurance Educational Services (PIES) and Dr. John Fleischauer, the University's provost and vice president for academic and student affairs.

PIES, a non-profit organization for insurance professionals, announced its formation at a news conference last month. The organization will help local insurance agents and brokers obtain the 24 Continuing Education Units (CEUs) they need every two years to retain their sales license. The training is mandated by Act 48, a new state law.

Edinboro University will provide the academic logistics leading to the CEUs, as well as the Porreco Center training site, for the first two courses approved for presentation in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Both courses will be presented as seminars through Edinboro University's Institute for Research and Community Services and Department of Continuing Education.

The instructors for the first two Edinboro seminars – attorney George Joseph of the Quinn Law Firm, and R. Art Lubomski, an agent with the Lincoln Financial Group – were introduced at the news conference. Joseph will instruct a class on workers' compensation, while Lubomski will teach a course on life insurance fundamentals and financial planning.

“We are grateful that Edinboro University is taking the lead in cooperative spirit between the academic and business worlds,” Potalivo said, “for education and communication are the solutions to the business environment that has Pennsylvania’s economic growth near the bottom among the 50 states.”

Potalivo said that Medicare and the availability and affordability of workers’ compensation insurance are among the issues PIES will explore in forthcoming seminars.

“Edinboro University is a natural choice to be partners with Preferred Insurance Educational Services as trainers and educators of insurance professionals,” said Fleischauer, “and we are pleased at the prospects of this alliance.”

PIES, which operates in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Insurance Department and the Insurance Testing Corporation, estimates that as many as 3,000 individual insurance agents and brokers will need the training under the new state mandate.

EDINBORO BAND PERFORMS AT NFL GAME

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's Spirit of the Scots Marching Band will get little rest this weekend. Saturday the band plays the Albion Fair Parade and the Cambridge Springs Band Festival. Sunday the group travels to Rich Stadium where it will perform at the Colts-Bills game. The band will play the pre-game ceremony, half-time and in the stands during the game.

"We're very pleased to play at Rich Stadium," said Dr. Gary S. Grant, the university's director of bands. "We applied to all three NFL organizations - Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Cleveland - and Buffalo invited us." Grant hopes the band will eventually be able to perform for the other teams, perhaps on an annual rotation.

Edinboro University draws students from all three metropolitan areas, and its band members share the same divided NFL loyalties as the rest of the student body.

Before the game the band will play six songs, including "Scotland the Brave," "American Fantasy" and the "Star Spangled Banner." Taking the field at halftime the Spirit of the Scots will entertain with "It Don't Mean a Thing," "Hook," "Auld Lang Syne," and two other selections. During the game the band will perform fan favorites including "Respect," "Hang on Sloopy," "What I Like About You" and "Gimme Some Lovin'."

Under Grant's direction, this year's band has 110 members and combines traditional marching band instruments with bagpipes, creating its own distinctive sound. In addition to performing at the Buffalo football game, the Spirit of the Scots will vie for top honors at the Tournament of Bands Championship Competition in Washington, Pennsylvania, October 28.

The Spirit of the Scots is the epitome of active student involvement. Each year players compete for the posts of section leader, who are responsible for consistency and uniformity of playing style for each section of the band. This year's section leaders for the band are Ed Best (Greenville), Sherrie Black (Homestead), Michelle Bockstoce (Washington), Chad Danka (Apollo), Jen Green (Pittsburgh), Kim Hartman (Erie), Mike Konieczko (Erie), Andy McKay (Edinboro), Jeff Mortimer (Telford), Alison Reichenfeld (Sharon), Rob Rohrbach (Erie), Joe Sensor (Erie), Erin Stahlman (Bellefonte) and Aaron Strausser (Pine Grove).

The animation program at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will be one of the featured segments of Heart of the Arts, which will air Wednesday, September 13, at 9 p.m. on WQLN-TV. Also featured in one of the shows will be Edinboro art professor Shelle Barron.

The segment on Edinboro's animation program will include professor David Weinkauf, and students Fred Albrecht, Richard Scarpitti and David Filoni. Albrecht and Scarpitti are non-traditional students. Clips of student work using traditional and computer animation will be shown.

Weinkauf said the artist remains important, even in this age of technology. "Nothing can replace an artist," he said. "If we get to the point where the arts are de-emphasized, then I think we are in trouble as a people."

Students from Edinboro University of Pennsylvania entered the Erie Ad Club's annual Golden Rooster awards competition, winning second place in the television/video category. ### LAWLOR EARNS DOCTORATE IN HIGHER EDUCATION ADMINISTRATION

Andrew C. Lawlor, associate vice president for academic programs and dean of the University College at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, was awarded a doctoral degree in higher education administration during recent commencement ceremonies at Kent State University.

Dr. Lawlor's research focused on the perceived organizational effectiveness of college and university presidential leadership strategies and their relationship to institutional culture.

Lawlor joined the Edinboro University staff in 1985 and for six years was the assistant director for academic computing technology in the University's Computing and Communications Center. In 1989 he served as Edinboro's representative to the Pittsburgh Supercomputer Center's Academic Affiliates Program, and in 1991 was president of a regional higher education computing consortium. He also chaired the Planning Chapter Subcommittee during preparation for and conduct of Edinboro University's 1993 reaccreditation site visit by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools and served as a member of the "Thrust Toward Excellence" task force in the University's School of Education. Lawlor has also intermittently taught continuing education courses on computer applications and operations.

In 1993, Lawlor was named by Edinboro University President Foster F. Diebold to a special summer appointment as administrative intern in the president's office. In that position he served as a staff assistant to Diebold, participating in a number of special assignments, refining the University's planning process, researching materials for the president's office and learning its operations.

A member of the State System of Higher Education

Later in 1993, Lawlor was appointed interim associate vice president for academic programs and dean of the University College. He served in that interim capacity until recently being named to his current position. As dean of the University College, Lawlor oversees the Center for Advising and Career Services and Department of Academic Support Services, as well as University programs for adult learners, internships, freshman outreach, tutoring, general studies, and Act 101.

In 1994, Lawlor co-authored the study, "Library/Computer Center Relations: A Comprehensive State University View," which was published in Cause/Effect, a higher education journal focusing on information technology issues. The article described the changing role of the library in the era of information access via technology and suggested strategies for enhancing working relationships between libraries and computing centers at state universities.

Lawlor since January has also coordinated matters involving legislative affairs and governmental relations on behalf of Edinboro University. He recently joined U. S. Rep. Phil English (R-21st Pa. Dist.) in Washington to deliver testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee in hearings on miscellaneous tax reforms. In his testimony, Lawlor offered support of both Edinboro University and the State System of Higher Education for legislation English had introduced in the House of Representatives to exempt for tax purposes earnings on tuition credits for individuals participating in state pre-paid tuition programs.

English, a freshman member of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, said that his legislation - which he introduced as the "Tuition Account Assistance Act of 1995" in a special news conference held last march on the Edinboro University campus - will enable families to save for their children's education without tax penalties and help make a college education more affordable to young people in Pennsylvania and America.

Anyone interested in a career in the environmental field will be able to learn more about it at the Environmental Jobs Forum on Wednesday, September 20, at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania. Sponsored by the school's department of geosciences and its Center for Advising and Career Services (CACS), the Forum will be held from 7-9 p.m. in 119 Doucette Hall.

Ohler said there are also opportunities for persons with expertise in related fields such as law, business, or writing.

EDINBORO EVENTS FEATURE COMEDY, MAGIC AND MUSIC

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's special events program offers comedy, magic, alternative music and country and western line dancing this fall. The season kicks off Saturday, September 9, with the progressive rock of Freudian Slip.

Since its formation in 1991, the Grove City quartet has gradually built a dedicated following of fans in northwestern Pennsylvania. Freudian Slip has performed in concerts at Clarion University, Grove City College and California University of Pennsylvania. The band also plays venues as varied as coffeehouses and outdoor festivals.

The group recorded three independently-produced recordings: Fragments (1992), an untitled album (1994) and a six-song EP titled On Second Thought. The band favors dynamic musical arrangements, intelligent lyrics and atypical, yet listener-friendly, song structures.

The stand-up comedy of Keith Leslie comes to Edinboro Saturday, September 23. A former staff writer on The Dennis Miller Show, Leslie also worked with John Byner on the A & E channel's Comedy on the Road in 1993.

Besides stand-up stints as a regular performer in comedy clubs throughout the Midwest, Leslie has opened for some stellar performers: Miller, Brett Butler, Jeff Altman, Michael Winslow, Emo Philips and South Side Jonny among others.

Now Leslie is bringing his brand of humor to colleges and universities. The Pittsburgh resident has performed at the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie-Mellon University, Penn State, the University of Dayton and Indiana University.

October offers improvisational comedy, hypnotism, music and dancing. The comedy comes first, on Saturday, October 7.

Susquehanna Hat Company, a comedy improv troupe, promises comedy at the drop of a hat. The troupe takes its audience's suggestions and builds characters, scenes and situations from them – and if you're not careful, you may find yourself part of the act.

Created at Friday Night Improvs at the University of Pittsburgh, Susquehanna Hat Company has performed for professional organizations, clubs, Pittsburgh radio and television stations, and even Barnes and Noble bookstore. The "Hats" entertained at the 1994 Major League All-Star Fan Fest, Pittsburgh First Night '95 and Improv-a-Thon '94.

Be warned. Susquehanna Hat Company's show has been described as "Rocky and Bullwinkle meet Tolstoy," so prepare for a highly funny, clever, offbeat night of comedy.

Doctor Mort Berkowitz – "Hypnotist to the Stars" – will mesmerize and amaze on Friday, October 13. Berkowitz earned his nickname for his therapeutic work with Hollywood celebrities and professional athletes, but now divides his time between his practice and live performances around the country.

While not a top hat and black cape wearing magician, Berkowitz will "magically" transform unsuspecting audience volunteers into hilariously different people. His program, "Adventures in Hypnotism," is a vivid and funny demonstration of how imagination and belief can be harnessed for success.

In his practice, Berkowitz uses hypnosis to help his patients stop smoking, control weight and end addictions. He taught hypnotherapy and holistic medicine at the University of Southern California and UCLA. Berkowitz has received the American Cancer Society's "Lifesaver Award" for helping others adopt healthier lifestyles.

From 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. on Saturday, October 21, line dancing lessons will be offered to country and western fans who always wanted to try it but couldn't find anyone to teach it. Learn the Boot Scootin' Boogie, the Achy Breaky Heart and other popular steps from instructors at the University Center.

At 8:00 p.m. dancers can show off their new skills at Country Western Nite in the University Center. DJ Steve Sarrick will keep feet tapping with the music of "today's country" throughout the evening. It's the perfect occasion to wear that Garth Brooks hat!

Saturday, October 28, brings possibly the tallest and thinnest musical duo in New York City. "The Nudes" team guitarist/vocalist/songwriter Walter Parks with cellist/vocalist Stephanie Winters for an evening of eclectic songs that are hard to categorize, yet easy to love.

The Nudes headlined The Black Mountain Folk Festival in 1993 and have appeared with Bela Fleck and the Flecktones, Tuck and Patti, and Daniel Lanois. Since the 1993 release of their self-titled debut CD, The Nudes have toured throughout the country.

Comedy rules in November as David Kaye and Doc Dixon close the schedule.

Stand-up comic David Kaye claims his 1978 senior class voted him "most likely to be a high voltage comic." Kaye brings his High Voltage Comedy act to Edinboro Saturday, November 11. The Pittsburgh resident has played in comedy clubs from Maryland to California, appeared in local television and nationally on ABC's America's Funniest People, and opened for stars like Ray Charles, Gilbert Gottfried, Richard Belzer and Tower of Power.

Kaye has made college and university appearances in New York, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania. Pittsburgh area residents may best remember him as the star of In Town After Dark on WTAE-TV, a show he also wrote and co-produced.

On Saturday, November 18, Doc Dixon will magically appear at the University Center. In the tradition of "The Great Ballantine," Doc Dixon is a skilled magician who mixes comedy into his act.

Edinboro University's special events programs for 1995 will begin at 8:00 p.m. at the University Center, except the line dancing lessons noted above. All of the events are open to Edinboro University students, staff and the community. For more information contact Cindy A. Clark, coordinator of university programming and activities, at 732-2842.

EDINBORO'S FLEISCHAUER TO TAKE TOP ACADEMIC POST AT WRIGHT STATE

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's chief academic officer, Provost and Vice President for Academic and Student Affairs Dr. John F. Fleischauer, has been named provost at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio.

A native of Dayton, Fleischauer will assume Wright State's highest academic post on October 2. He emerged as the top candidate for the position after an extensive, year-long national search.

Reporting directly to Fleischauer as Wright State's provost will be the deans of 10 colleges and schools; a branch campus; the vice president for student affairs and enrollment services; and associate provosts for undergraduate education, research and graduate studies, campus climate, and institutional research and planning. Wright State's current student enrollment is about 17,000.

"Wright State University is indeed fortunate to have such an outstanding scholar and nationally recognized academic leader in this pivotal position," said Wright State President Harley E. Flack. "Dr. Fleischauer's experiences parallel the direction of Wright State University as a collective community of scholars and learners, and I am pleased to have him serve with me in a leadership role."

As provost, Fleischauer will also serve as the school's chief executive officer in the absence of the president.

Fleischauer came to Edinboro University in the fall of 1987 as the dean of liberal arts. After serving as interim provost, his permanent appointment as Edinboro's provost and vice president for academic affairs came from University President Foster F. Diebold in April 1989 after a national search. In May 1995, he assumed the additional duties of vice president for student affairs.

Prior to his arrival at Edinboro, Fleischauer was dean of the College at Mount Union College in Alliance, Ohio. At Mount Union, he created several award-winning development programs for the college faculty. Prior to that, he was chair of the Division of Languages and Humanities and professor of English on the graduate faculty at Columbus College in Georgia. He began his teaching career as an assistant professor of English and director of 100-level English courses at Ohio University, and as a faculty member and teaching fellow at Denison University.

Fleischauer received his bachelor's degree from Cornell University and his master's and doctoral degrees from The Ohio State University. He is well known in the field of higher education for his scholarly publications in literary criticism and academic administrative theory.

Edinboro University President Foster F. Diebold said that he is "pleased that this significant opportunity has been afforded Dr. Fleischauer. John Fleischauer is most deserving of this professional opportunity. He is a scholar and leader and has established himself in a most positive way nationally as well as here at Edinboro University and within the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education. His professional energy and commitment will be missed significantly at Edinboro University. In addition, and on both a personal and professional note, I will miss the close proximity of a good friend and trusted adviser and co-worker. We all wish him well," said Diebold.

"The decision to leave a rewarding and contributive position is always difficult," Fleischauer said. "I am excited by the challenges and opportunities offered at Wright State and the chance to return to my family home. It is an excellent university with a feasible goal of pre-eminence as a major metropolitan university. At the same time, I am proud to have shared in Edinboro University's growth and will take much of Edinboro with me in my next assignment," said Fleischauer.

He and his wife, Janet Patterson Fleischauer, D.Ed., an associate professor in Edinboro University's department of elementary education, are the parents of three adult sons. Together the Drs. Fleischauer have co-authored several articles and collaborated on a number of professional papers and presentations in the areas of adult literacy and Service-Learning.
