EDINBORO STUDENTS HAVE BOOK PUBLISHED

The students in professor Elsie Deal's class on American writers at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania are about to become published authors. As part of a class assignment, the twelve honors students wrote essays on the late American author Flannery O'Connor. Deal was so impressed with their work that she suggested their term papers on O'Connor be published in a book, Twelve for O'Connor.

"I thought it would be worthwhile to put the best efforts of the class into a book of student 'criticism' of O'Connor," said Deal. "I felt the students deserved it for the quality of their work – and for whatever incentive it might give them for future efforts in publication."

Deal said it is common for colleges and universities to publish artistic works of students such as poetry and short fiction, but it is highly unusual to find a book of this sort, especially at the undergraduate level.

The essays are student responses or reactions to O'Connor's works. Dr. Robert Weber, dean of liberal arts, said the essays, "are not reformulated versions of one point of view. While they cover a variety of topics, themes, patterns and ideas, they are remarkable in their insights, their novelty of approach and their attempts to come to an understanding of the works."

The students – all taking part in the University's Honors Program – are majoring in a variety of subjects and range from first semester freshmen to graduating seniors. One student, David Kerstetter of Edinboro, is a marshal at the University's Honors Convocation. Another student, Kim Jeffery of Girard, is a mother of five children, including a son, Nathan, who is also a student at Edinboro. The other students are: Heather Kensill of Erie, Amy Martin of Meadville, Lee McCracken of Greenville, Kerri Miller of Johnstown, Alissa Ogurchak of North Versailles, Alison Pensy of Beaver Falls, Christopher Roman of Pittsburgh, Natalie Rusnak of Erie, Angela Sabol of Girard, and Judith Stainbrook of Linesville.

O'Connor is considered to be one of this century's greatest American authors. She wrote several essays and two novels: Wise Blood and The Violent Bear It Away. Following her death in 1964 at the age of 39, her letters were published in a book, The Habit of Being. Edited by Sally Fitzgerald, the book was awarded a Pulitzer Prize.

As part of a class assignment, the twelve honors students wrote essays on the late American author Flannery O'Connor. Deal was so impressed with their work that she suggested their term papers on O'Connor be published in a book, Twelve for O'Connor.

"I thought it would be worthwhile to put the best efforts of the class into a book of student 'criticism' of O'Connor," said Deal. "I felt the students deserved it for the quality of their work – and for whatever incentive it might give them for future efforts in publication."

Deal said it is common for colleges and universities to publish artistic works of students such as poetry and short fiction, but it is highly unusual to find a book of this sort, especially at the undergraduate level.

The essays are student responses or reactions to O'Connor's works. Dr. Robert Weber, dean of liberal arts, said the essays, "are not reformulated versions of one point of view. While they cover a variety of topics, themes, patterns and ideas, they are remarkable in their insights, their novelty of approach and their attempts to come to an understanding of the works."

The students – all taking part in the University's Honors Program – are majoring in a variety of subjects and range from first semester freshmen to graduating seniors. One student, David Kerstetter of Edinboro, is a marshal at the University's Honors Convocation. Another student, Kim Jeffery of Girard, is a mother of five children, including a son, Nathan, who is also a student at Edinboro. The other students are: Heather Kensill of Erie, Amy Martin of

The students in professor Elsie Deal's class on American writers at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania are about to become published authors. Introduction

by Robert C. Weber, Dean

School of Arts and Humanities

The teaching of literature involves the generation of a response on the part of the students. Too often on the part of some professors the student is forgotten in the desire of the professor to express a particular point of view, interpretation, or approach. If that happens, the classroom dynamic will likely dwindle to the point where the professor might as well be talking in an empty room. The teaching of literature involves a great deal more than the sound of one voice talking; it is more than students assiduously taking notes in order to prepare themselves to memorize the professor's views; and it is more than covering a certain amount of time or writers listed on a syllabus.

Professor Elsie Deal's honors course in American Writers focused on the work of Flannery O'Connor. The students were majoring in a variety of subjects, and they ranged from first semester freshmen to graduating seniors. Such a mix of students would ordinarily pose problems for the professor in terms of adjusting to the various levels of background and sophistication with literature represented by the students, but in this case Professor Deal was able to capitalize on the variety of backgrounds by stressing the importance of a genuine response to the material.

The essays in this collection share one thing in common: they are all genuine responses by the student. They are not reformulated versions of one point of view. While they cover a variety of topics, themes, patterns, and ideas, they are remarkable for their insights, their novelty of approach, and their attempts to come to an understanding of the works. These papers are an indication of a special dynamic that was at work during the course, an interaction between professor and student that encouraged self-expression and even self-discovery. One does not come away from reading these essays feeling that the students were dutifully submitting their end-of-term papers; rather, one senses the emergence of an area of interest in one paper, the sense of delight in another, and the expansion of knowledge in yet another.

These papers are excellent examples of the pleasure of teaching literature--they are responses.

The idea for our project came to me one day as I was reading student responses to one of the O'Connor short stories. I was impressed by the perceptions, insights, clarity of thought, and the many points of view expressed in our small group.

I therefore thought it would be worthwhile to put the best efforts of the class (their term papers) into a book of student "criticism" of O'Connor. I felt the students deserved it for the quality of their work--and for whatever incentive it might give them for future efforts in publication. While it is common enough for colleges and universities to publish artistic works of students, i.e., poetry and short fiction, to the best of my knowledge, no publication of the type I envisioned had been done before, at least at EUP. When I told the class what I was thinking, their response was enthusiastic --to be published as undergraduates would surely be rewarding. I also believed such publication would give concrete evidence of the value of their academic performance.

So the essays were written, I hope with greater effort than would be usual for term papers. Two or three students wrote quite excellent papers. All did respectable work-- work which was interesting to read, work which could also encourage its readers to think, work which required very little mechanical correction, indeed, work which appeared to have been done with a good will. The students seemed to feel a sense of accomplishment even before papers were graded and before we knew funding would be available.

I tried to respect each student's efforts as well as each student's interests. With experience in the class so extremely varied, with freshmen and seniors, with various majors, it was important to me to see to it that students shared their ideas, no matter how disparate...it seems to have worked.

TO THE PARENTS AND
NORMA V STANFORD UC CU PAEDINBEDI 05234 0019
RD 3
CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS, PA 16403

Dear NORMA V

Everything is now official. We have received your biography and, when the USAA National Awards Yearbooks are published, YOU WILL BE AMONG THE WINNERS FEATURED! You have a right to be proud of your award.

A number of outstanding students have been recognized for USAA National Awards this year. Biographies are still coming in from award winners nationwide. Once we have all the necessary information on these students, we will begin publishing the Yearbook in which you'll appear.

You still have the opportunity to reserve YOUR OWN COPY of the Official USAA National Awards Yearbook featuring your biography. You can do so by completing and returning the attached order request. According to our Editorial Staff, award winners who reserve a personal copy of the Yearbook can look forward to receiving it by JANUARY 31, 1996

Scholarship Information

Let me remind you of the important scholarships for which you can now compete. On the following page you will find information explaining the details of the Scholarship Program. In it is your application, with instructions telling you how to apply.

If you wish to apply for one of this year's scholarships, you must return your application to the Academy WITHIN THREE WEEKS after you receive this letter. That's why I urge you to fill out your application immediately and send it back to the Academy.

All applications in by the deadline will be evaluated for this year's scholarships. The Scholarship Committee decides the amount of scholarships awarded and who should receive these grants. Applicants will be judged on their ability, performance and academic skill.

News Release

Surely members of your community would enjoy knowing about your national award, and we'd certainly like to see you receive the further recognition you deserve. You can announce your award by filling out the enclosed news release and distributing copies of it to your local radio stations, television stations and newspapers.

If your news release is published in your local newspaper, we'd appreciate you sending us a clipping of it. We maintain a file of clippings from award winners across the country, and would be delighted to add yours to it.

Once again, congratulations from the entire staff of the USAA. Hard work does have its compensations, and we hope this achievement award encourages you to continue performing to the utmost of your abilities.

Cordially,

George Stevens

Dr. George Stevens
Executive Director

PS Remember to return your scholarship application to the Academy WITHIN THREE WEEKS of receiving this letter. Remember to submit your news release to your local newspaper...and please send us a clipping when it's published!

EDINBORO SCIENCE STUDENTS PERFORM COMMUNITY SERVICE AT WALNUT CREEK MIDDLE SCHOOL

Three science students from Edinboro University of Pennsylvania are each spending 900 hours of their free time in community service as part of the Pennsylvania Service Scholars program. David Ohmer (Jr., Erie), Mitch Ruzak (So., Newtown) and Eric Wiser (So., Boyertown) are working with science teachers in the Walnut Creek Middle School on several hands-on science projects with the middle school students.

Edinboro chemistry professor Dr. Theresa Thewes, who is coordinating the program, said the Edinboro students have an opportunity to serve as consultants to the middle school students and teachers. They gain valuable teaching experience while mentoring the students and assisting the teachers in their classrooms.

One project they will be working on is getting the school's waterfall and saltwater aquarium operational. In another project, the scholars have borrowed the air track from the Edinboro physics department to help the seventh graders learn about velocity and acceleration. A third project will have the Edinboro students working with the teachers to find science resources on the Internet.

Many of the projects are directly linked to the teacher's lesson or classroom activity. Much of the program takes place during the school's weekly activity period. This is a cooperative program: both Edinboro students and WCMS's principal and teachers are adjusting their schedules to best serve the middle school students.

The Walnut Creek school has a reputation for excellence in science education. One of its teachers, Ruth Ruud, a 1983 Edinboro graduate, has been nationally recognized for her work, and several of its students will be competing at the state level in the Pennsylvania Junior Academy of Science Competition.

Edinboro University is committed to the program with Walnut Creek for at least three years. The Pennsylvania Service Scholars made a seed grant to the University that will fund it through January of 1996. Some of those funds will be used to send the three Edinboro scholars and other volunteers to the Pennsylvania Science Teacher Association's state conference this November.

In return for their hours of community service each of the three Edinboro students will receive a post-service educational award from the Pennsylvania Service Scholars and a matching amount from the University. Thewes sees the real reward as the impact the program is having on the lives of everyone involved. "We are role models - both as college students and scientists - for these middle school students and their teachers," said Thewes. "Because of this program, Edinboro science students will recognize that they can and will contribute to the science education of our children. I am certain that each will volunteer in science classrooms for many, many years to come."

PA SERVICE SCHOLARS LAUNCH STATE COMMUNITY SERVICE PROJECTS

_____ [city] _____ (_____ [date] _____) -- More than 130 students from 32 Pennsylvania colleges and universities were sworn in as Pennsylvania Service Scholars in a ceremony held January 16th at the state Capitol.

The students will augment their classroom studies by working part-time in local community partnerships to address human, educational, public safety and environmental needs. The students are participating in an AmeriCorps project of President Clinton's national service initiative. The project is funded through the Corporation for National and Community Service. It is the only nationally funded statewide higher education service corps in the nation.

The program is administered in partnership by PennSERVE, the Governor's Office of Citizen Service, and the Pennsylvania Campus Compact. The swearing-in was part of a series of Pennsylvania field events on Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

At the Swearing-in ceremony, PennSERVE Executive Director John Cosgrove said the Pennsylvania Service Scholars will work in communities across the state to "continue Pennsylvania's outstanding record of youth community service."

Cosgrove noted that Martin Luther King Jr. once said that 'Life's most persistent and urgent question is: What are you doing for others?'

"These Pennsylvania Service Scholars are answering that question by helping their community neighbors while at the same time improving their own scholarship and citizenship," Cosgrove said.

The students will receive a minimum wage and will qualify for an education benefit of $2,363 upon completion of 900 hours of service in a 3-year period. The institution the student attends will match the education award for a total benefit of $4,726.

The colleges were selected based on a competitive process from applications from higher education institutions across the Commonwealth. Students were chosen based on merit and their accomplishments and proven interest in scholarship and community service.

Service Scholars Notes

Students working on campus project: David Ohmer, Secondary Ed./Chemistry
Eric Weiser, Pre-med/biology
Mitch Ruzak, Environment/Biology

They are teamed with six science teachers at Walnut Creek. Teachers decide which projects to work on with the student volunteers.

Pa. Junior Academy of Science Competition – 19 students going to state.

Waterfall and saltwater aquarium in the school, our students are helping to get it operational.

The school has an activity period once a week.

The hands-on science activity may be linked to the teacher.

One of the projects Edinboro students may be using in the future is training teachers how to gain access to the Internet.

Another project is to plant bulb flowers in the garden as a project for biology.

7th grade teachers in physical science, hands on activities linked to lesson.

The concept for this project began before the Walnut Creek School opened.

The grant money is effective through Jan '95. Much of it will be used to send the students to the PA Science Teacher Association's State Conference in November of 95.

The grant requires 900 hours of community service from each student; 2700 hrs total.

We are committed to a three year period for the project.

Ken Borland has been very supportive. He even changed (?) the school's activity day from Thursday to ?

Other faculty involved are David Hurd in geosciences, Karim Hossain in physics, Kiran(?) Misra in biology and David Wagner or David Giltinan in physics.

We are a conduit for the Internet.

We are role models – scientists and college students – for these middle school students. Because of programs like this, students such as Eric Weiser who plans to be a doctor, see part of their role will be in a grade school classroom.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

MAESTRO EIJI OUE TO RECEIVE HONORARY DOCTORATE AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY'S SPRING COMMENCEMENT

Eiji Oue, music director and conductor of the Erie Philharmonic Orchestra, has been selected to receive the degree Doctor of Humane Letters (litterarum humaniorum doctor, honoris causa) at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's Commencement ceremonies on Sunday, May 14, in the University's McComb Fieldhouse.

A native of Hiroshima, Japan, Oue began his musical training at the age of four. He studied conducting with Hideo Saito at the Toho School of Music and with Larry Livingston at the New England Conservatory. In 1978, he was invited to participate in the conducting program at the Tanglewood Music Center. He returned there in 1980 and received the Koussevitzky Memorial Fellowship Prize. Before coming to Erie in 1990, Oue served as associate conductor of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra and music director of the Boston Mozarteum Chamber Orchestra.

In the summer of 1985 Oue toured internationally with the late Maestro Leonard Bernstein, conducting the European Community Youth Orchestra. The tour, dedicated to world peace, performed in Athens, Hiroshima, Vienna and Budapest. In 1989 he once again shared the podium with Bernstein during a summer tour of European cities, including Leningrad, Paris and Milan. Inspired by his studies with Bernstein, Oue credits him with "profound influence on his artistic refinement."

Oue's long-time dedication to the training and education of young musicians is evidenced by his active participation with several premier organizations. He served the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra and the Empire State Youth Orchestra as music director, and led the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra on several international tours, most recently a concert tour of Japan. He has continued his mission to bring music to the masses by making public appearances throughout the Erie area.

On May 6, Maestro Oue will complete his fifth and final season with the Erie Philharmonic before assuming the position of music director of the prestigious Minnesota Orchestra in Minneapolis. After only five seasons in Erie, he leaves the Orchestra much richer – both spiritually and financially.

SPECIAL TO THE SPECTATOR

NOTICE

More than 700 students will be honored at the spring commencement ceremony on Sunday, May 14. Commencement marks the height of most students' academic careers, and some may even be the first in their families to graduate from college. This accomplishment deserves to be rewarded.

That's what the ceremony is for – to recognize each individual's academic achievements. You've worked hard. You deserve this kind of recognition.

Please respect your peers and remain seated until the closing of the ceremony. This is your day to shine! Let's make it enjoyable and rewarding.

MEDIA RELEASE IMMEDIATE
April 14, 1995

The Edinboro University's Music Department is pleased to announce "First Tour Europe." From June 9-19, 1995, thirty-four Edinboro University students, along with nine faculty members and alumni, will tour Europe performing six concerts in three different countries. Under the direction of Dr. Peter van den Honert, the students, who are members of Edinboro's University Singers, will be performing in Prague, Czechoslovakia and Munich, Germany, as well as in Vienna and Salzburg, Austria. A highlight of the trip will be a performance in St. Stefan's Cathedral, where Mozart wrote one of his most famous motets. This is a great accomplishment for the University Singers as they will be representing Edinboro University as well as Northwestern Pennsylvania on their first overseas tour.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY CELEBRATES "WEEK OF THE YOUNG CHILD"

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will celebrate the Week of the Young Child, April 24-25, with a daily program of activities at its Miller Research Learning Center for pre-school through fourth grade.

The highlight of the event will be the dedication of a memorial to former Edinboro student Suzanne McCready who was killed in an automobile accident shortly after graduating from Edinboro last year. Her parents will be on hand for the dedication, which will take place on Friday, April 28, at 10:00 a.m., in front of the Miller School. A tree will be planted in her memory as part of the school's annual observance of Arbor Day.

The Week of the Young Child will begin with the Miller Center's spring choral concert on Monday, April 24, at 7:00 p.m. Led by Rosemary Omniewski, the concert will feature more than a dozen performances under the theme of "I Love the Music in My Life."

Tuesday, April 25, will feature the observance of Math Imagination Morning, the world's largest math event, from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m. in the Miller Gym. Students from Edinboro Elementary School and Emerson-Gridley in Erie are expected to join the Miller students. Immediately following the event, a group of gifted area high school students in the Project Enhance program will present a series of skits based on children's literature.

Students from Professor Ruthanne Atkinson's Reading and the Young Child class will present readings and literature-based games for Miller students on Wednesday, April 26. Later that day, elementary education professor Jacqueline Power will lead the Art Fair from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the Miller Gym. Among the many workshop activities will be jewelry, design, mobiles, medieval banners, mosaics, and tie-dyeing.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY HOSTS MATH IMAGINATION MORNING

More than 150 students at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will be participating in the world's largest math event, Math Imagination Morning, Tuesday, April 25. They will be joined by approximately 150 elementary students from the University's Miller Research Center, Emerson-Gridley Elementary School in Erie, and Edinboro Elementary School.

The Edinboro observance of the nationwide event will take place from 9:30 to 11 a.m. in the Miller Gym. The university students have created dozens of fun math activities for the elementary students to take part in. These include geometry, estimation, problem solving, fractions and math facts.

This is the fourth Math Imagination Morning at Edinboro University. However, this is the first annual World's Largest Math Event and this year Edinboro is incorporating the two. These events are also in celebration of the 75th anniversary of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics. Math Imagination Morning is also part of Edinboro's observance of the Week of the Young Child, April 24-28.

The purpose of the event is to bring more fun to math as a subject and stimulate interest in math among both college students and elementary students. It encourages elementary children to have fun with math as they interact with the materials and provide valuable feedback to the Edinboro students.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY CELEBRATES "WEEK OF THE YOUNG CHILD"

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will celebrate the Week of the Young Child, April 24-25, with a daily program of activities at its Miller Research Learning Center for pre-school through fourth grade.

The highlight of the event will be the dedication of a memorial to former Edinboro student Suzanne McCready who was killed in an automobile accident shortly after graduating from Edinboro last year. Her parents will be on hand for the dedication, which will take place on Friday, April 28, at 10:00 a.m., in front of the Miller School. A tree will be planted in her memory as part of the school's annual observance of Arbor Day.

The Week of the Young Child will begin with the Miller Center's spring choral concert on Monday, April 24, at 7:00 p.m. Led by Rosemary Omniewski, the concert will feature more than a dozen performances under the theme of "I Love the Music in My Life."

Tuesday, April 25, will feature the observance of Math Imagination Morning, the world's largest math event, from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m. in the Miller Gym. Students from Edinboro Elementary School and Emerson-Gridley in Erie are expected to join the Miller students. Immediately following the event, a group of gifted area high school students in the Project Enhance program will present a series of skits based on children's literature.

Students from Professor Ruthanne Atkinson's Reading and the Young Child class will present readings and literature-based games for Miller students on Wednesday, April 26. Later that day, elementary education professor Jacqueline Power will lead the Art Fair from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the Miller Gym. Among the many workshop activities will be jewelry, design, mobiles, medieval banners, mosaics, and tie-dyeing.

Dear Parent,

Today your child attended a Health and Safety Fair presented by senior level nursing students who are enrolled in a community health nursing course at Edinboro University.

The fair included information and activities about the following topics:

Dental Health

Proper Use of 911

Healthy Snacks

Fire Safety

Street and Bicycle Safety

A Visit to the Doctor's Office

Your child also received coloring pictures, pencils, etc. that will help to reinforce material they heard about today. We encourage you to ask your child about the Health and Safety Fair and take time to discuss these concepts as they might relate to your family.

Sincerely,

Janice Giltinan
Clinical Nursing Instructor

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY HOSTS MATH IMAGINATION MORNING

More than 150 students at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will be participating in the world's largest math event, Math Imagination Morning, Tuesday, April 25. They will be joined by approximately 150 elementary students from the University's Miller Research Center, Emerson-Gridley Elementary School in Erie, and Edinboro Elementary School.

The Edinboro observance of the nationwide event will take place from 9:30 to 11 a.m. in the Miller Gym. The university students have created dozens of fun math activities for the elementary students to take part in. These include geometry, estimation, problem solving, fractions and math facts.

This is the fourth Math Imagination Morning at Edinboro University. However, this is the first annual World's Largest Math Event and this year Edinboro is incorporating the two. These events are also in celebration of the 75th anniversary of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics. Math Imagination Morning is also part of Edinboro's observance of the Week of the Young Child, April 24-28.

The purpose of the event is to bring more fun to math as a subject and stimulate interest in math among both college students and elementary students. It encourages elementary children to have fun with math as they interact with the materials and provide valuable feedback to the Edinboro students.

RE: Math Imagination Morning
DATE: April 4, 1995

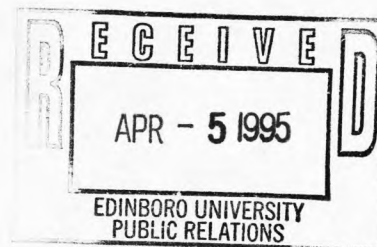

This year Edinboro University and the Miller Research Center will be participating in the World's Largest Math Event, celebrating the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics 75th anniversary. The Math Imagination Morning has been an annual event here on the Edinboro Campus, however, this is the first annual World's Largest Math Event and this year Edinboro is incorporating the two. The event will take place April 25, 1995 from 8:00-11:00 a.m. in the Miller Gym. Miller students and area elementary students have been invited to attend, and Elementary Education Math students will be participating as well.

What Dr. Rahal was wondering was if we could get the news out that we are participating in this event. We cannot offer an open invitation to attend, but she was hoping that maybe the local newspapers or TV. stations might show some interest in reporting on the campus' participation in such a big event.

I am sorry this request is coming to you so late in the planning process. Any help you can give us as far as letting the public know about our participation in this event will be appreciated. Thank you for your time and help, and again sorry this is coming to you so late. If you have any questions or need further information please call me at X2958.

NEWS ADVISORY:

TWO SPECIAL EVENTS AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY THIS SATURDAY

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will hold two special events on campus on Saturday, April 15.

At 5:30 p.m., the new East Hall will be dedicated in a special ribbon-cutting ceremony. The new facility, used primarily by the University's art department, replaces the original East Hall which was destroyed by fire in 1991.

At 7 p.m., Edinboro University and its Alumni Association will hold their fifth annual Alumni Art Achievement Awards banquet in Van Houten Dining Hall. The awards program recognizes Edinboro alumni, faculty and staff who have given their talents to art and art education. Eight artists and art educators will be honored in after-dinner ceremonies.

Media coverage of these events is invited.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

732 STUDENTS TO GRADUATE AT EDINBORO'S SPRING COMMENCEMENT

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania President Foster F. Diebold, now completing the 16th year of his presidency, will confer degrees on 732 students at Edinboro's spring Commencement ceremony on Sunday, May 14, at 2:00 p.m. in McComb Fieldhouse. With a December graduating class of 813 students, Edinboro granted approximately 1,545 associate, bachelor's and master's degrees during the 1994-95 academic year.

Carrying the ceremonial mace and leading the academic procession at the ceremony will be Dr. Bob Wallace, professor in the department of speech and communication studies and director of television and media services.

A native of Florida, Wallace earned a bachelor's degree in broadcasting from the University of Florida in 1962. He received a master's in radio and television from Indiana University (Bloomington) in 1965 and completed his doctorate in communications technology at the University of Pittsburgh in 1976.

His career began while still a student at the University of Florida. In 1961 he was an announcer for WRUF-FM, the campus radio station, and from 1960 to 1962 he served as production assistant for WUFT, the University's television studio. While at Indiana he served as graduate assistant and production assistant in the departments of radio/television and radio and television service.

For one year, 1964-65, he was an instructor and producer of radio programs at Okeechobee High School in Florida, before joining the faculty of Edinboro University in 1965.

Twenty-three undergraduate students will be graduating with summa cum laude honors (3.80 to 4.00 grade point average) 42 with magna cum laude honors (3.60 to 3.79), and 67 cum laude (3.40 to 3.59). In addition, eight students will be graduating as part of the University's nationally-recognized Honors Program.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

STATISTICAL ANALYST AND MATH PROFESSOR COMPETES IN PAGEANT

Julie Beck Dilick is living proof that beauty, brains and personality do indeed mix.

Dilick, an honors graduate from Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, is a research/statistical analyst, a part-time mathematics professor, and a former Miss Teen of Pennsylvania. In May she will travel to Lancaster to compete for the Mrs. Pennsylvania United States crown. She was first runner-up in the contest last year and is considered a favorite to win the crown on her second try.

A native of Lander in Warren County, Dilick now lives in the city of Warren where she works for the Blair Corporation. Her husband, Shawn, is a computer specialist for the United Refining Company in Warren. Once a week she drives 30 miles to McKean County where she teaches algebra and statistics to inmates in the all-male Federal Correctional Institution, McKean.

Dilick's talent and ambition became evident as a student at Eisenhower High School. She was an all-sport cheerleader for five years, a member of the color guard in her junior and senior years, band front commander in her senior year, and graduated eighth in her class in 1985.

In the summer of her senior year she entered and won the Miss Teen of Pennsylvania pageant which was held in Reading that year. She represented Pennsylvania at the Miss Teen of America contest and, although she did not win, received a $1,000 scholarship for raising the most money for the March of Dimes.

A member of the State System of Higher Education

Dilick began to blossom while a student at Edinboro University. She majored in math with a concentration in psychology and was accepted into the University's honors program. Her scholastic ability earned her the Frank Hawthorne math scholarship, and she received the Oxford Presidential Honors Scholarship which allowed her to attend the Edinboro at Oxford University program in August of 1988. In her spare time she tutored other math students and was chosen for homecoming court in her junior year.

She credits math professors William Etling and Dr. Thomas Nufer and education professor Dr. James Flynn for being her role models. "They took time to listen to me," said Dilick. "They showed me that math is not just a bunch of numbers – it's problem solving. That's something I try to get across to my students."

She graduated a semester early in December of 1988 with a 3.68 grade point average and a dual degree in secondary education. Her academic achievement paid off with a graduate assistantship from Bucknell University. She enrolled there in February 1989 and received a master's degree in math in December 1990.

Dilick immediately became a substitute for the Warren County School District and for two months was an advanced mathematics tutor at Gannon University.

Then in the Spring of 1991, she was accepted as a management trainee at the Defense Mapping Agency in Bethesda, Maryland. Just days before she left for her new job, Shawn, who was then her boyfriend, proposed to her.

"I took the job realizing I wouldn't be staying there long because of his proposal," she said. "If we were to have any children I knew I didn't want to raise them in a big city. I grew up in a rural area, and I want to raise my children there, too."

Thus, after only a month she left her job to return to the Warren area and by July had landed her current position at Blair Corporation. Six months later, in January of 1992, she also took a part-time position as a math professor at the University of Pittsburgh-Bradford. In addition to teaching algebra and statistics to inmates at the prison in McKean County, she also teaches adult students at sites in Warren and St. Marys.

A prison may not seem like an ideal working or learning environment, but Dilick has found the experience rewarding. "Some of the best students I've ever had have been inmates," she said. "They want to better themselves to avoid recidivism. They have to pay for class and their own books. They are motivated learners."

Even though some of her students may have committed violent crimes, there are no guards with her in the classroom. There's only Dilick, up to 20 students, and a body alarm she wears which can be used to summon help within seconds.

"There's never been an incident between the inmates and a female," said Dilick. "I'm very comfortable there and have established a rapport with some of my students."

How did someone who has a gift for mathematics and teaching also develop an interest in pageants?

"It's a little girl's dream to wear a crown and shimmery dresses," explained Dilick. "I watched the pageants on television and was impressed that they were so poised and could speak so well."

In addition to her successful entry into the Miss Teen of Pennsylvania pageant, she also entered the Miss State Capital Pageant in 1990 while she was at Bucknell. That contest was a preliminary to the Miss Pennsylvania and Miss America pageants.

One of the reasons Dilick is expected to do well in the Mrs. Pennsylvania Pageant is its emphasis on personality projection.

"They look for the contestant's inner beauty, her activities in her hometown, and of course, her physical fitness," said Dilick.

Half of a contestant's score is based on an interview with the judges. The other 50 percent is split between the swimsuit and evening gown competitions. There is no talent portion in the pageant. In last year's event, Dilick had the highest overall score in the interviews.

"The interview category is most important to me, because a person can get only so far on looks," she said. "Being able to communicate clearly and concisely gets you much further in the world."

In addition to her own experiences as a contestant, Dilick was a national judge for the 1994 Miss Teen of America pageant, and coordinator for the 1993 and 1994 Miss Teen of Pennsylvania pageants.

Win or lose, she has no regrets about any part of her life. "I wouldn't do anything different in my life," she said. "The greatest rewards have been my husband, working with the young girls in the pageants, and touching other people and being touched by them."

Sept. 28, 1994

Dear Ms. Kant,

Thank you for your interest in the Mrs. Pennsylvania United States Pageant where I was the first runner-up. Here are some details that you requested.

The Mrs. Pennsylvania United States Pageant was held May 7, 1994 in Lancaster, PA. There were 25 contestants ranging in age from 21 to ladies in their 50s. The judging categories are as follows:

- (1) 25% of your score is in Swimsuit,
- (2) 25% of your score is in Evening gown,
- (3) 50% of your score is in a Judges Interview with all the judges.

The emphasis in this pageant is personality projection. They look for the inner-beauty, the activities the contestant is in in her community and of course, her poise and physical health(fitness). Although there is an overall winner and four runners-up, each decade of age receives an award in each judging category for the highest score in the decade and category. I was first runner-up overall, but I also was the winner in the 20s decade in interview. My interview score happened to be the highest overall interview score also. The interview category is most important to me, because a person can get only so far on looks. Being able to communicate clear and concise gets you much further in the world. Having a Master of Science degree in Mathematics, working full-time as a Research/Statistical Analyst and part-time as a mathematics professor for the University of Pittsburgh-Bradford, communication plays a big part in my life's work.

Other special awards were presented. One that I won was the advertising award. I raised the most money in advertising for the program book.

The husbands got involved too. We did a production number on stage the final night. My husband, Shawn, was a little timid at first, but once all the guys got together he really enjoyed himself. He is use to having me be on stage, not the other way around. Shawn even led half the guys out on stage in the production number. The production number was performed to the song "It's Raining Men". We had a GREAT time!

What did I win? I won a trophy for each of my awards, a sequined scarf, a gift basket of sparkling grape juice and two glasses, a massage, a Mary Kay makeover, a one year subscription to "The Winner", a pageant newsletter and many sweet memories.

-C

They've asked me to come back next year, but we have to wait and see what's happening in our lives at that time.

Who won? Billie Jo Cole is 21 and from a small town in the middle of the state. Billie went to the national Mrs. United States Pageant in Las Vegas, NV. She placed in the top fifteen.

Am I disappointed that I didn't win? It would have been nice to win, of course. I was Miss Teen of Pennsylvania 1984. It's would have been enjoyably ironic to be Mrs. Pennsylvania 1994, (ten years later). I'm happy that I placed as high as I did. Not winning means God has something else in store for us this year. No, I'm not disappointed.

Thank you very much for your inquiry. If you have any questions, please call me at work (814) 726-6178 8 am - 4:30 pm or at home (814) 723-2151.

Sincerely,

Julie Dilick
