FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

EDINBORO AGAIN NAMED TOP 100 SCHOOL IN RUGG'S RECOMMENDATIONS

For the sixth time in as many years, "Rugg's Recommendations on the Colleges," a California-based higher education directory, has named Edinboro University of Pennsylvania as one of the top 100 schools in the nation to offer students the best chance to gain from their education.

Edinboro University is listed in the book's 17th edition on the page titled, "Fred Rugg's One Hundred Colleges... Just Darn Good Schools," and is one of the 12 Pennsylvania colleges and universities listed and the only State System of Higher Education institution on the list.

The other 11 Pennsylvania schools are Allegheny College, Bryn Mawr, Delaware Valley, Franklin and Marshall, Haverford, Moravian, Muhlenberg, University of Pennsylvania, University of Pittsburgh, Susquehanna, and Washington and Jefferson.

The directory is published by Frederick E. Rugg, a Brown University graduate and former director of secondary school counseling programs. Rugg based his year 2000 selections on interviews with more than 1,040 secondary school counselors who were asked the question, "What colleges do you believe offer students the best opportunity to maximize their education?"

Rugg said that his list of "Just Darn Good Schools" is the most valuable page in the book: "I hear more nice things about these schools than any others."

Said Rugg in a footnote to his list of the top 100: "Please don't count the colleges in this list. There's actually a little over 100. I just couldn't get it down to the magic number."

CLARION PRESIDENT REINHARD TO SPEAK AT EDINBORO UNIVERSITY

The President of Clarion University of Pennsylvania, Diane Reinhard, will speak at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania on Tuesday, March 14, at 2 p.m. in the Reeder Hall Lecture Hall. She will share her story as a successful woman in higher education.

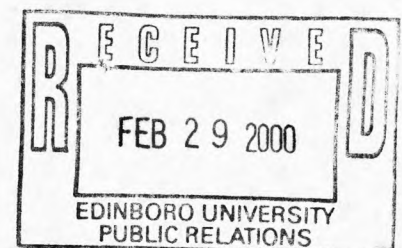

Her appearance is the second in a series of women's leadership presentations sponsored by Edinboro's Commission on the Status of Women. Last year, Erie Mayor Joyce Savocchio discussed her experiences as a woman leader in the political arena.

Reinhard will also talk about her experiences, including special advantages or obstacles she has encountered because she is a woman. As a role model for women in the State System of Higher Education, she will share her advice and tips for success.

A reception for President Reinhard will be held in the lobby of Reeder Hall following her remarks.

ANNUAL MIDDLE SCHOOL CONFERENCE SET FOR EAST HIGH SCHOOL

The School District of the City of Erie will host the seventh annual Middle School Conference on Tuesday, March 7, at East High School, beginning at 3:15 p.m. This year's conference is "21st Century Middle Level Education: Ideas, Ideals, and Inspiration."

"The theme for our conference reflects hope for the future in middle level education," said conference coordinator Kathleen Benson, a professor of education at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania. "Recognizing the critical nature of adolescent development, it is imperative that we renew our efforts the importance of the middle school philosophy."

The conference was created to help middle level educators, parents, and community members learn more about how to meet the needs of the adolescent child in a holistic fashion. Some of the topics include: "The Connection between Learning and Attention," by Joseph Barber from Children's Health Care; "Non-Violent Crisis Intervention – How to Keep Your Head When...", by Russ Taylor and Paul Rogers from the School District of the City of Erie; and "An Intervention Program for Relational Aggression," by Mary Baird, executive director of the Ophelia Project.

Benson said middle level children are at a turning point in their lives. Early adolescence is a time of significant growth and change. Children experience more rapid growth at this time physically, socially, emotionally, and cognitively than any other time in their life except infancy.

The conference is a partnership among the Pennsylvania Middle School Association, the School District of the City of Erie, and Edinboro's Center for Excellence in Teaching Curriculum, Instruction, and Collaboration Institute. For more information, contact Benson at (814) 732-2830.

MEDIA ADVISORY:

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will hold a news conference to introduce to the media and the public one of key featured speakers appearing on the Edinboro campus for the University's 17th International Academic Festival, February 21-25, 2000.

The media are invited to meet award-winning author and lecturer, Dr. Lawrence Frey, professor and chair of the department of communication, University of Memphis, at the news conference, scheduled for 10 a.m., Monday, February 21, in the Reeder Lecture Hall.

Dr. Frey will present two lectures during the festival.

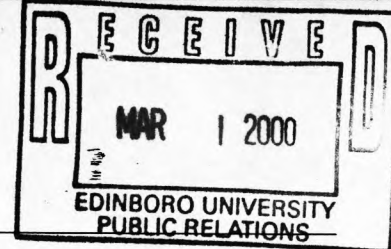

The first, "The Fragile Community: Communication and Community Building in an AIDS Residential Facility," will be presented on Monday, Feb. 21, at 6 p.m., in room 306 of Edinboro's University Center. Based on the book, The Fragile Community: Living Together with AIDS, which Frey co-authored with Dr. Mara Adelman, his multimedia presentation documents more than eight years of research into how collective communication practices helped to create and sustain a sense of community among patients at the Bonaventure House – a residential facility on Chicago's north side for people with AIDS – and how the lessons of the Bonaventure House can be an inspiration for strengthening communities in all our lives.

In his second festival presentation, "Looking for Justice in All the Wrong Places: On a Communication Approach to Social Justice," scheduled for Tuesday, February 22, 6 p.m., in the Reeder Lecture Hall, Frey will advance his concept of "social justice sensibility," an approach grounded in engaging and advocating those in society who are underresourced economically, socially, politically or culturally.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY INTERNATIONAL ACADEMIC FESTIVAL FEBRUARY 21-25

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania's 17th Annual International Academic Festival will take place on the Edinboro campus February 21-25. The Festival – a celebration of diverse cultures – features a variety of public lectures, presentations and discussions. Topics range from travel, music, art, and history to education and student issues.

As we focus on the Century of Civility, we can begin to change the world by changing ourselves. Learn about the 12 Attitudinal Principles and how to apply them to your life during “You Are the Answer to World Peace. Change Your Mind, Change Your Heart, and Change the World” on Thursday, February 24, at 6:30 p.m. in the University Center.

How can individuals enhance civility in the workplace? Discover this and more at “Civility in the Workplace” on Tuesday, February 23, at 3 p.m. in the University Center. Different work situations will be addressed including civility during the interview, civility in a new work environment, and civility when working collaboratively with other departments/organizations.

? “Civility = Serving Others” will be presented by Edinboro University's Community Outreach Center, Americorps National Service Scholarships and American Humanities Certification on Tuesday, February 23, at 3 p.m. in the Miller Research Center. You will discover how you can impact the lives of others and make a difference in your own by becoming a volunteer.

On Tuesday, February 22 at 6 p.m., in Compton Hall, “Into the Valley of Mexico:

- more -

A Multi-media Presentation" will take you to Mexico City and to the pyramids of Teotihuacán. "Edinboro University's Exchange Programs with Universities in Lublin, Poland" will follow at 7 p.m., and will address the opportunities available for students to participate in exchanges with Polish universities. Both events will be held in Compton Hall.

Displays highlighting the history and culture of Poland and Mexico can be viewed throughout the week in the Baron-Foreness Library and the University Center. "Folktales from Japan," a collection of unpublished Japanese folktales currently being edited, will be presented on Thursday, February 24, at 7 p.m. in Butterfield Hall.

A panel of foreign students from five continents will answer questions about housing, food, schools, dating, transportation, marriage, religion, political correctness and more during "How the Others Live" on Wednesday, February 23, at 7 p.m. in the University Center.

Delight in the sights and sounds of Scotland on Thursday, February 24, as you watch highland dancers, listen to the stirring performances of pipers and drummers, and view beautiful arts and crafts during "A Scottish Experience: Let Freedom Ring" at 6 p.m. in the University Center.

"Women in Cuba: From Maids to Compãneras," is a collaborative effort of a Cuban filmmaker and an American academic. This documentary, held on Wednesday, February 23, at 2 p.m. in Hendricks Hall, centers on the life experience of former Cuban maids and the new opportunities they encountered with the 1959 revolution.

Guide dogs assist thousands of visually impaired individuals worldwide to travel safely and independently. Learn how these amazing teams – a guide dog and his or her handler – navigate their environment during "Quality Partnerships: Guide Dog Teams." This program, held on Monday, February 21, at 3:30 p.m. in Reeder Lecture Hall, will raise awareness of visual impairment and guide dogs in an informal, interactive setting.

Over the next 25 to 30 years, the number of Americans collecting Social Security benefits will grow from the present 44 million to a baby boom-inflated 78 million. "Will America Grow Up Before it Grows Old?" examines the economic, social and moral implications of the retirement of the baby boom generation on Monday, February 21, at 7 p.m. in Reeder Lecture Hall.

Critical thinking enables us to recognize and correct deficiencies in everyday reasoning. On Monday, February 21, 8 p.m., in the Reeder Lecture Hall, "Critical Thinking vs. Some Fallacies of Common Sense" will demonstrate several ways that critical thinking can solve problems. "Infusing Critical Thinking Into the Classroom," a panel of faculty interested in issues of critical thinking, will share tested techniques infusing critical thinking in their classes on Wednesday, February 23, at 4 p.m. in Reeder Lecture Hall.

Experience the underwater world as you enjoy a free scuba lesson on Wednesday, February 23, at 8 p.m. in McComb Fieldhouse.

Musical events on Thursday, February 24, begin with the University Women's Chorus as they present "Songs of Spring," a concert of sacred and secular music at 11:15 a.m. in the Arts and Sciences Center. Then spend an hour listening to the elegance and beauty of the harpsichord during "Stylishly Baroque: The Art of the Harpsichord at 2 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium.

Study tips to aid in memory retention time management will be shared during "How to Study More Effectively" on Tuesday, February 22, at 2 p.m. in the University Center. "Interpersonal Communication" will follow at 3 p.m. and will offer suggestions on how to express oneself and how to listen to others.

The International Academic Festival runs February 21-25. For more information on these and any of the other Festival events, which are open to the public, call the public relations and publications office at 814-732-2745 or visit our website at www.edinboro.edu.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY PRESENTS "GENETIC MANIPULATIONS IN HUMANS, WHY OR WHY NOT?"

Edinboro University of Pennsylvania will present "Genetic Manipulations in Humans: Why or Why Not?" on Thursday, February 24, at 3:30 p.m., in Reeder Lecture Hall as part of the 17th Annual International Academic Festival. Join us as we explore issues from cloning to the essence of what it means to be human.

Would you consider the possibility of having a clone of yourself genetically engineered for "spare parts?" What does it mean to be authentically "human?" Does our biological machinery and its functions purely define us? Does a woman have any legal rights to an embryo which she has housed in her body but to which she has no genetic ties? This presentation will focus on these and other questions as you explore a multitude of ethical and legal issues related to the genetic manipulation of human beings.

"Genetic Manipulations" is presented by Edinboro University's Center for Excellence in Teaching, Institute for Ethics and Values in Education. Speakers include Rev. Dr. David Fulford, biology department and Vicar of St. Augustine of Canterbury Episcopal Church; Dr. Robert Rhodes, political science and criminal justice department; and Professor Janet Newcamp, nursing department.

The International Academic Festival runs February 21-25. For more information on "Genetic Manipulations" or any of the other festival events, which are open to the public, call the public relations office and publications office at (814) 732-2745.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY ANNOUNCES SPRING PLANETARIUM SCHEDULE

The Edinboro University of Pennsylvania planetarium is presenting several educational and entertaining shows this semester on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in Cooper Hall.

Examine the latest news from the Hubble Space Telescope and view the current sky during "Constellations and More" on February 17 and March 30. Explore the deep space during this program that highlights the majestic constellations and the secrets found within.

Discover how the slaves used the constellation called the Drinking Gourd, or Big Dipper to guide them north to freedom during "Follow the Drinking Gourd" on February 24. The characters from Jeannette Winter's book will also join you as they use the words from a song that led them to the shores of Lake Erie and on to freedom.

March 2 is designated "Scouts Night." If you are trying to earn an astronomy badge, the Edinboro University Planetarium can help.

What do trains and the Earth's rotation have in common? How important were trains in this area? These and other questions will be answered during a trip back through time called "Riding the Rails" on March 16.

Join a star as he searches for planets during the action-packed children's show "Little Star that Could" on March 23. The current night sky will also be highlighted.

"Laser Enya" will feature laser light put to the music of Enya and will examine the current night sky on April 6.

What will happen on May 5, 2000? Will the world come to an end? Find out what is going to occur and why you should have nothing to worry about during "5/5/2000" on April 27.

The programs are free and open to the public. However, seating is limited and reservations are required. For further information or to make reservations, call the Edinboro planetarium at (814) 732-2493.

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY OFFERS ROAD TOUR OF THE AMERICAN SOUTH

The history department at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania is offering its third annual "On the Road" experience this summer, May 15 to June 8. Students will spend 23 days traveling thorough the American South visiting Charlottesville and Williamsburg, Virginia; North Myrtle Beach and Charleston, South Carolina; Montgomery, Selma and Birmingham, Alabama; New Orleans and Natchitoches, Louisiana; Vicksburg, Mississippi; Cherokee, Asheville, Winston-Salem, and Greensboro, North Carolina; and Harpers Ferry, West Virginia.

Courses will be offered in American colonial history and the turbulent sixties.

Edinboro's "On the Road" program toured the American West in 1998 and the American Southwest in 1999.

The cost for this year's trip is $900 plus tuition and fees. Limited seating remains.

For more information, contact Professor Ronald Spiller at 732-2966 or history department chairperson Jerra Jenrette at 732-2575.
