Presidential candidate majors in listening

Managing Editor

The final candidate for the position of Bloomsburg University president visited the campus last week. The Open Forum held Friday afternoon brought up a number of issues which BU should address.

Dr. H. Erik Shaar, vice president for academic affairs at Shippensburg University, says there are some things the institution should look at.

- 1) accreditation of the BU business department
- 2) relations with the community in regards to the housing situation
- 3) the image of BU by "letting people know it is a fine institution"

Both the master's and undergraduate degrees in business would have to be accredited. This is a recent qualification for accreditation. Here at BU "The master's program may not be in any state for such accreditation," said Shaar.

He majored in music education. One thing needed in such a field is the ability to listen. "I see myself as a good listener," Shaar said. "I don't intend to meddle in things I don't know anything about," added Shaar.

Shaar sees part of the role as president to be a chief fundraiser for the institution. In order to get funding "we have to be more aggressive in the quest for support," according to Shaar. "We should not give up making the case for government support for higher education," said Shaar. "We shouldn't roll over and play dead."

The major responsibility of the president is to see that the actions of the SSHE don't impede the institution in reaching its goals and objectives, according to Shaar.

The students are important to the university, but some are coming without the basic skills. "The answer is not that we should or shouldn't teach basic skills, but regretfully we have to teach such skills," said Shaar.

He holds a bachelor's degree from West Chester State College and a Ph.D. from the Catholic University of America.

Trustees approve candidates

Since July 1, 1984 the Presidential Search Committee has been working non-stop to find candidates for the office of President of Bloomsburg University. The response to the advertisement of the job was over 90 applications which then had to be narrowed to a workable number of applicants. The committee held two different screenings during which the resumes were studied along with the letters of application and the applicant's letters of recommendation. From these screenings, the number of applicants was decreased to 20.

Members of the committee were then divided into groups to conduct telephone interviews with the applicants using a set of common questions. These interviews were taped to allow the entire committee to listen to them, and the number of applicants was then narrowed to 11.

These 11 candidates were further narrowed to five by the contacting of the reference of each candidate. In addition to speaking to two of the three references that each of the candidates had listened, each reference was asked to provide the

Landowners facing vacancies

LORI LEONARD

"To be a member of our association, a landlord must have the current inspection of properties by a code enforcement officer," said Rochelle Warhurst, one of the chairpersons of the newly formed Property Owner's Association. During the meeting on Feb. 19, members of the association, landlords and students met to discuss problems of landlords and tenants alike. The Association was formed in hopes of having a unified voice to represent them and to help students find clean, safe housing.

Sharon Babb, another chairperson, says that their organization is not for absentee landlords or those landlords that do not respond to tenant's needs and problems. "We will have standards for our members, but the problem that remains is that we have no enforcing body," said Babb.

The landlords are concerned with the University's proposal to build another dormitory on upper campus because they have a high vacancy factor at this time. Warhurst pointed out that on the University's approved list alone there are 151 vacancies. Many of these are due to the University not letting students out of their on-campus contracts for Spring term.

The landowners in Bloomsburg generate approximately $300,000 from renting to students which will be threatened if the new dormitory is built.

CGA President, Bret Hoffmaster stated some beneficial aspects of the proposed building. He feels that many students would rather live on-campus and have all matters taken care of for them rather than move off and have to take on the responsibility of paying bills. Hoffmaster also feels that the new building would force many landlords to improve their properties, thus benefiting students.

Some objections to the new structure were presented by both landowners and students. Many students felt that they would rather move off-campus rather than live in the new building with all University policies in effect. The costs of the building will also be large and there will be the additional expenses of janitorial service, upkeep, and utilities.

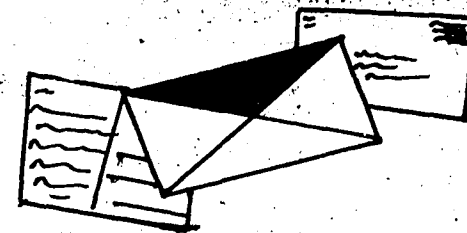

Residence Life is currently in the process of conducting a random survey of both students and parents to obtain reaction to the proposed building. The survey asks students if they would be willing to live in the proposed self-sufficiency type apartments for two to four people, would they be willing to live in the units if the cost were between $500-$600 excluding electric, and would they be willing to live there if all university policies were in effect. The Landowner's Association is anxious to gain the results of the survey.

The controversial head tax, proposed to take effect in July was also discussed. The tax will require each landlord to pay $10 per student per semester which will probably be reflected in students' costs. The association feels that the tax is discriminatory, that it allows the government too much control in private enterprise. "The buildings are inspected for safety, I don't think we need stricter regulation," said Babb. "It hurts the free enterprise system!"

Along with the head tax, the possibility exists of the development of a demerit system. This would mean that any time police are called to a student's residence, the landlord will be given a demerit. After a predetermined number of demerits, a landlord may face the revocation of his license to rent. Donald Camplese, BU professor and landlord questioned the theory of making someone responsible for someone

Letters to the Editor

In the dark!

Dear Editor,

At the beginning of the semester you wrote an editorial about students not complaining. Well, I hope you're ready because I have a long list!

My complaints focus around the darkness we, the students, are kept in. After all, this is our campus. We are paying to attend this university, but no one seems to care though.

I recently heard through the "grapevine" about issues we the students of BU should be aware of. I mean all the students, not just those lucky enough to be in the right place at the right time.

For instance, there is a proposal for an admissions building. I ask you, is that the best way we can think of to use the money? If they're (whoever they are) so hip on buildings, what about a study building? God knows we need one. The library is overly crowded. The President's Lounge is usually occupied, plus the idiot who designed it put it in the middle of a main hallway, a game room, a TV lounge, bowling lanes and a beeping MAC machine.

What about our parking problem? They say we are lazy and don't want to work. Would you want to walk with a backpack full of books 12 blocks from campus? Sometimes I think the reason nothing is being done about the parking is because BU makes a bundle off parking tickets. We are the main reason of campus police—surely it's not to promptly let you in your dorm if it is after 2 a.m. (What could possibly take them half an hour to arrive?)

The lot by Centennial is a disgrace. At first I thought they were speed bumps—well they're not!

Next on the agenda are plans for a reflecting pool in front of the library. Whose benefit would that be to. Surely not ours! I guess it would appear nice to high school seniors and make them come to BU. How about making this campus not only appear beautiful but actually be beautiful? I mean academic wise. Couldn't that money go toward scholarships or getting journalism its own department?

I bet over half the students didn't know we in journalism want and need our own department. Of course not, this campus keeps things like that hush-hush. God forbid should we get those "radicals" going! Come on students, start talking and even protest if we must. Let's pull together and make it our campus! Don't be so stuffy. TALK! RESPOND! Show you exist!

EDITORIAL

It is a fact that students have been living in some poor conditions this year such as being tripled up in non-designated triple rooms and sleeping in study lounges. Much of the overcrowding situation came about as a result of a decision not to let students out of their on-campus housing contracts for the spring semester. I am not disputing that decision, but I think the number of transfers and returning summer freshman should have been known before that decision was made. The university claims that a situation like that will never occur again. They are combating the overcrowded conditions with the idea of another dormitory on upper campus. It would be structured more along the lines of self-sufficiency apartments for 2 to 4 people. The idea is a good one as long as the University does not build it, and then find that students would rather live off-campus than in a building with all University policies in effect.

The University sent out a questionnaire to students to see if students would be willing to live there. If students are allowed out of their housing contracts for spring semester, I feel they are more likely to move off-campus to escape University policies.

The Property Owner's Association of Bloomsburg recently held a meeting to address the problems they will face if the new building is constructed. From the approved housing list available from the Residence Life office alone there is a total of 151 vacancies in the approved residences available to students. The landlords feel that the new dorm will put them out of business and claim a new building is unnecessary due to the vacancies in town and the trend of declining University enrollment. The figures of enrollment may be remaining stable, but an increasing number of those students are non-traditional, commuting students.

William Kreisher, a member of the association, disclosed some objections to the site of the new building. The site is known as a wind plateau which would make heating costs astronomical, the site does not have enough water pressure to fight a fire, and there would be the extra cost of busing students to the Commons area and to classes.

The University should take the time to complete the results of the survey and do more research to the vacancy situation in town before embarking on such a timely and costly endeavor.

Library aid needed

Have you noticed over the past few months the increased activity that has been going on in the Andruss library?

Because of lack of space and moving of offices to the McCormick Human Services Center, many journals, periodicals and books are being moved to other areas in the building, some of which are currently under lock and key.

Recently, I became aware of the lock and key area. A large group of journals, some of which I and other students like myself will be referring to over the next few months, are stored in what was "the old Dean's office," located on the ground floor of the building. Making requests for these journals is reoccurring and creates a nuisance for both myself and the person from the current periodicals desk who must retrieve the journals I had requested.

The bottom line, however, is that our library is in dire need of an expansion to create space which can be used to increase and diversify the current educational sources which it offers to both our students and the community.

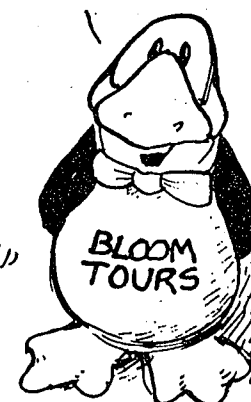

Recently, the University received funds, which totaled 3 million dollars, to renovate the Old Science building. We also saw the opening of the McCormick Human Services Center in the fall of 1984. Maybe it's time that both the current and future administration of this college concentrate their efforts to remedy this problem and make the Andruss library a modern facility which can meet the growing needs of the student population it serves.

Sincerely,
David M. Murphy

else's behavior.

Another cost concerning the landlords is the 30 percent increase in garbage removal in the next few months, with a possible 50 percent increase in less than a year. Judy Kline, a chairperson of the association, said, "It reflects back in the rents kids. Students should care, we are doing this to help them."

A major problem facing both the Association and the students is the lack of communication. These meetings are designed for discussion between the landlords and students who rent or will rent in the future.

Was it live or was it Memorex? It was live! The piano accompanied songs and the zany imitations of an impressionist were Bloomsburg University's participants of the Talent Show.

The show took place in the Kehr Union, Wed., 8:00 p.m. The talent show consisted of 11 performances.

— Rico DeFelice as an impressionist did imitations of John Wayne, Howard Cosell, Jimmy Carter, Rocky and others.

— Joy Burgess and Andre Wills sang "How Do You Keep the Music Playing", by James Ingram and Patti Austin. Joy and Andre were assisted by pianist Lavon Wills and guitarists Kevin Turner and Rich Djarahar of the band Trop-X.

— Paul Topete played a classical piano piece titled "Toccata" by Kachuturian.

— Kris Kehr, Maryann Mimmeti and Eric Woods did an original song called, "Watch the Sunrise."

— Diane Nerch performed a solo jazz dance to "Look Out for Number One", by Sylvester Stallone.

— Kathy Baurley played guitar as she sang the original song, "Where Am I Going?"

— Christine Tencza also did a solo act, played the piano and sang "Song Bird", by Christine McVie.

— Anita McCoy received a hearty round of applause for her solo of "What About Me?" by James Ingram.

— Dave Ricker played the piano and harmonica when he sang,

"Piano Man", by Billy Joel.

— Grace Coleman and John Chapin did a dramatic reading form the play, Defenseless Creature, by Neil Simon. The reading was a light comedy that helped add variety to the show.

— Crystal Eiswert, the final act, did a solo at the piano and sang an original song, "Dream World", that she dedicated to her parents.

Acting as m.c., Andy Scarpati, from Philadelphia, introduced each performance and ended the talent show with a comedy routine. Scarpati's wit and talent made it easy for several audience members to come up to the stage and tell their favorite jokes after the show was over.

As the judges tallied points of each participant in order to come up with the three place winners, audience members and contestants waited nervously. The judges, in order to evaluate fairly, looked for the following things in the performance: presentation, quality, musical ability, creativity, originality, audience response, emotional content and more.

The winner of third place and a cash prize of $25 was Dave Ricker with his version of "Piano Man". The winners of second place and a $50 cash prize were Joy Burgess and Andre Wills who sang the love ballad, "How Do You Keep The Music Playing?". Taking first place and the grand prize of $100 was Anita McCoy who did her super solo version of, "What About Me?".

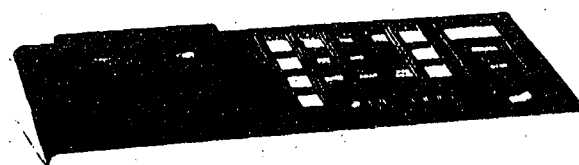

Thanks to all of the participants the talent show was a great hit! Congratulations to all!

Dr. Howard Schreier was drafted into the military in May, 1967 and served until January of 1969. He spent about one year of this time in Vietnam. He was sent there as a cook but was soon promoted to sergeant because this was the rank needed to command a platoon. However, when Dr. Schreier was discharged, it was not at the rank of sergeant. The army never processed the paperwork necessary to give him the title.

Schreier says, "I didn't want to attend college. I received an associate degree in December of 1967. I picked the wrong time to take time off."

Schreier is an associate professor in the Department of Communication Studies. He is known among students as being a tough prof because of his teaching style. Dr. Schreier challenges students. When a point is raised in class, Dr. Schreier will take the opposing point of view even if he doesn't believe in it.

"When students start to work, they will be challenged," says Schreier, "they might as well get used to it." He believes that his teaching style prepares students for jobs and even job interviews. Schreier tells all his classes that participation is not only expected, it is demanded. Schreier will antagonize students on issues so they will learn to speak up.

Dr. Schreier attended Brooklyn College after returning from Vietnam. He received his B.A. from Brooklyn in 1974. After that he received his M.A. from the University of Georgia in 1976 and a Ph. D. from Temple University in 1981.

Along with his aggressive teaching style, Dr. Schreier also uses extensive visual aids to complement his lectures. He makes use of handouts, but he also uses videotapes. In his Persuasion class, he uses a taped episode of "The A-team" to illustrate for students the concept of moral drama and justice as shown on T.V. Schreier also shows a series of M-TV videos to show the persuasive messages in song lyrics.

"When you sing a song, you might not realize the meaning of it. You just mouth the words," says Schreier, "but the video sends a message you can't ignore."

Dr. Schreier is also interested in researching his field. He is currently working on a convention paper for the Communication Law Interest Group. The paper deals with the argument supporting the Income Tax Amendment to the Constitution. He is also researching the television show "The A-team" as moral drama. In the future, Schreier hopes to study communication problems among Vietnam veterans.

Dr. Schreier believes that the classes he teaches will prepare students for their career fields. "Rhetoric, the art of persuasion, is a discipline without a subject. It can be applied to any subject area," says Schreier.

Dr. Schreier has held teaching positions at Adelphia University, Temple University and Villanova University. He came to Bloomsburg because he was attracted by the tenure plan. Schreier was also attracted by the rural area and the small enrollment. Schreier's wife, Jennie, is a Montessori certified pre-school teacher but she is taking time off from teaching to raise their two children, Amie, 8; and Daron, 4.

Dr. Schreier has many interests outside of the University. He collects old toys and old advertising, as well as turn of the century Americana. Schreier also enjoys working on his sports car, an MGB.

"Students are most important," says Schreier. He bases his teaching style on helping students to go into their career field. As for aggressive methods of preparation, Schreier has received mixed reviews from students. He says, "Some appreciated it, some didn't at all. My favorite comment is that my bark is worse than my bite."

name of another individual that had not been listed as a reference. According to Robert Buehner, Chairman of the Search committee, this was one to provide a more complete view of the applicant. Members of the Search Committee also visited the campuses where the five finalists are presently employed.

The five finalists then were invited to Bloomsburg for a visit of the campus and the area. An Open Forum, open to all members of the university community was conducted by each finalist.

After the completion of these campus visits, the Search Committee reviewed all information including the resumes and background of the applicants, the formal interviews, the visits to the campuses of the individuals, and the feelings of many campus constituencies.

The Search Committee then presented its list of three candidates to the Council of Trustees of Bloomsburg University. The names submitted to the Board for approval were Dr. Harry Ausprich, Dr. Larry W. Jones, and Dr. H. Erick Snaar. These names were approved by the Council of Trustees by a majority, with one vote by Council member Aaron Porter against the recommendations.

These recommendations now go on to the Chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, Dr. James McCormick, who will make his recommendation to the Board of Governors at their next meeting on March 19. The Chancellor will meet with each of the candidates and they will attend a full day of interviews at the SSHE offices in Harrisburg. The final decision will be made by the Board of Governors.

Ausprich is currently dean of the college of fine arts and professional arts at Kent State University. He has written a number of articles which have appeared in such publications as Speech Teacher, Players Magazine, and Southern Speech Journal. He has also had extensive experience in faculty development and retraining in Pennsylvania and New York.

Jones is interim president of Bloomsburg University where he has been since 1981. In 1981 he came to Bloomsburg as Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs. He was the author of "Issues in Private Support for Public Higher Education" at the University of Southern Illinois Press in 1980. Jones is also on the board of Directors for the Columbia County United Way.

Shaar is currently vice president for Academic Affairs at Shippensburg University. Among his accomplishments, he reduced personnel costs below 80 percent of the budget, thus providing increased funding for academic materials and supplies, library acquisitions, and equipment. He is also a member of the Shippensburg Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

The spring semester intramural bench press contest featured seven lifters from campus. Of all the lifters that competed, not one bench pressed twice his own body weight. The closest, Rick Ianieri, just missed double body weight, but had enough strength to take the middleweight division. Although Ianieri won his class he was forced to struggle. Ted McDonald gave Ianieri the most trouble because McDonald, thought he bench pressed double his body weight, it was disallowed by the judges and he had to settle for third place. Todd Newman made two out of his three lifts to place second. Fourth place went to Rick Fisher and fifth place to Chris Snyder.

The lightweight division and the heavyweight division had only one lifter representing each of their classes, Damian Hojnacki despite having no competition, bench pressed 240 pounds while weighing in at just 137 pounds. Curt Bauer made all three of his lifts, benching 375 pounds to take the heavyweight division.

throughout the entire match, by taking him down, and letting him up at will.

McFadden's win made the team score 21-19 PSU's favor, setting the stage for the heavyweight bout. The Nittany Lions upped their record to 10-6, while BU falls to 15-5.

Since the match was the Huskies last dual meet, seniors — Phil Conner, Steve Gible, Moser and McFadden were honored in pre-match ceremonies. Coach Roger Sanders was also presented with a plaque from the Husky Club, for his two hundredth victory, coming against the University of Pittsburgh.

Both teams will be competing in EWL tournament scheduled for March 1 and 2, at Lock Haven.

Nationally ranked teams square off

DAVID LOVELL
Sports Writer

A standing-room only crowd of three thousand plus packed into Nelson Fieldhouse Friday night to see Penn State University defeat Bloomsburg, 27-19.

The Nittany Lions entered the contest ranked ninth in the nation, and the number one team in the East. Bloomsburg is currently 13th in the nation.

The Nittany Lions ended BU's hopes for victory when PSU's heavyweight Steve Sefter pinned Ron Ippolite in four minutes, nine seconds. Sefter led 3-0 after the first period, and added an escape, and takedown in the second before pinning Ippolite.

PSU clinched the Eastern Wrestling League regular season title with a 6-0 record; BU has a 3-2 record in the EWL.

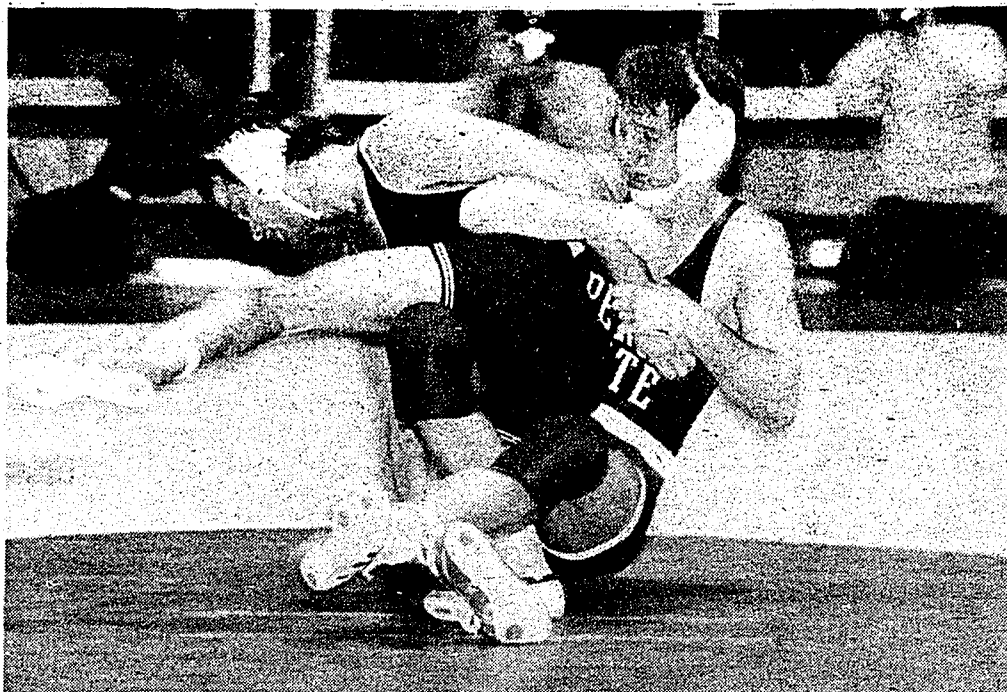

PSU's Ken Chertow got the Lions on the board first with a superior decision over Rob Rapsey 18-7 at 118. Chertow was in control throughout the entire match. He led 6-1 after the first, and 8-3 after the second. Rapsey is filling in for Rick Bonomo, who has a knee injury.

In the 126 lb. class, BU's Rocky Bonomo, who is ranked third in the nation easily defeated fourth ranked Tim Flynn. Bonomo used three takedowns, a reversal and put Flynn on his back twice enroute to a 13-3 victory.

At 134, BU senior Jon Moser missed a tie with Jon Monotti by two seconds. In college wrestling a wrestler with at least one minute riding time advantage over his opponent receives one point. In Moser's case at the end of the bout, he only had 58 seconds on the riding time clock, giving Monotti a victory 13-12.

Freshman standout Marty King put the Huskies ahead 10-8, by pinning PSU's Gary Kaschak in two minutes, 39 seconds. King took Kaschak down, and put him right on his back for the fall. King received the "Good AS Gold" outstanding wrestler award.

PSU went on to win the next three weight classes. Glenn Koser upset BU's Mike Rudolph at 150, with a second period pin in four minutes, 56 seconds of the bout. Rudolph was winning at the time 8-4.

Chris Bevilacqua major decisioned BU's Dan Klingerman at 158, and Greg Elinsky decisioned Bruce Wallace 11-5 at 167. With the score tied 5-5 late in the third period Elinsky took Wallace down, and put him on his back for three back points. Elinsky received one point for riding time advantage.

At 177 PSU's string was snapped as BU's Darrin Evans pinned Andy Voit. Evan's wasted little time in taking Voit to the mat, and recording the fall in one minute, 48 seconds.

Senior John McFadden kept BU's come back rally alive with a 15-9 decision over Mike Seckler. McFadden dominated Seckler

Women's basketball

Mounties outlast BU

Although the BU's women's basketball team outscored host Mansfield University 34-30 in the second half, it was not enough to overcome a 13 point deficit they had allowed built against them in their 61-52 loss last Wednesday evening.

The Huskies, playing a matched zone defense, stuck with the Mountaineers basket for basket for the first 6 and a half minutes of the game. Mansfield, led by Paula Oleksy, the games high scorer with 22 points, converted 5 straight Husky turnovers to put them ahead, 19-9 in a 4 minute stretch. BU had difficulty finding the basket with many of their shots either falling short or bouncing off the back of the rim. It was the lack of offensive rebounding that allowed Mansfield to get such a large lead in such a short space of time.

The spasmodic hot and cold shooting followed the Huskies into the second half. They shot 33 percent from the floor and 42 percent from the free throw line. With a half time score of 31-18, BU allowed the Mountaineers to continue their dominance of the boards, with Deb Schneider hauling down a game high 13 rebounds, Mansfield opened up an 18 point margin with 12:18 left to play.

With just under 10 minutes showing on the clock, the Huskies, behind the steady shooting of Sarah Hackforth, who scored 16 of her 20 points in the second half, and Carla Shearer, who scored 8 of her 14 points also in the second period, poured in 8 straight points to bring BU back within striking distance.

Using half court pressure, BU was able to bring the game to within 5 points before time ran out and the Huskies were forced to foul in order to stop the clock.

Linda King and Amy Wolf each pulled down 9 rebounds for the Huskies while Hackforth and Jeanne Radcliff had 8.

Noack has 16

Huskies fall 69-52

MIKE ALBRIGHT

Bloomsburg held a five point lead just before halftime but a late Mansfield run and the subsequent change in momentum was all it took as the Mounties handed BU a 69-52 loss.

Chris Venning and Allan Spicer combined for a nine point run late in the first half which turned a five point deficit into a four point halftime lead at intermission.

Glenn Noack's jumper to open the second half pulled the Huskies to within two but that would be as close as BU would get the rest of the way.

Mansfield extended its lead to 19 with five minutes remaining on the strength of some strong rebounding.

Chris Venning led the Mounties with 20 points, 10 coming in each half. Andy Moore had a strong first half with 12 points and finished with 61. Allan Spicer chipped in with 11 points and a game high 13 rebounds.

Noack topped the Huskies with 16 points while Shane Planutis added 11 markers. Wes Wright was the Huskies top rebounder with seven.

Bloomsburg's record fell to 14-12 overall and 6-7 in the Pennsylvania Conference's Eastern Division. Mansfield now stand at 19-5 and 11-3 in the division.

With the victory, the Mounties assured themselves of a home court advantage for the first round of the conference playoffs. They will host Cheyney.

This will be the first time in five years that Bloomsburg has not participated in any post-season action. The Huskies closed out the season with a home victory against East Stroudsburg on Saturday night.
