The Bloomsburg University Forensic Society traveled to Ithaca College, Ithaca, N.Y., on Feb. 16, to compete in Ithaca College's annual tournament.

Coming home with three awards, the team captured 8th place sweepstakes. Seventeen colleges and universities attended the tournament, with 160 competitors and 30 judges present. Forensic teams from New York, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts were represented. Such universities as Cornell, Syracuse and West Point also attended.

Awards were received in Persuasion and Impromptu events. John Chapin and Lisa Cicioni placed 4th and 5th, respectively, in Persuasion; and Grace Coleman placed 5th in Impromptu speaking.

Others who contributed to the team showing were Diane Bodnar, Patty Buglio, John Gasink, and James Barksdale. Graduate assistant David Gass traveled with the team and served as a judge at the tournament.

B.U.'s next tournament will be at Maryland's Anne Arundel Community College, in the Maryland State Competition on March 3.

Cape cod jobs

HYANNIS, MASS. — Cape Cod, Massachusetts and the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard are offering thousands of interesting summer jobs to college students and teachers from all over the country again this year.

According to Bonnie Bassett, spokesperson for the Cape Cod Summer Job Bureau, "the recent explosive growth in tourism here has created unprecedented scrambling by businesses looking for summer help. The seasonal job market has never been this good"... "the jobs are waiting, now we just need people to fill them," she added. The opportunities are

Columbia Hall residents honored

PATTY MOYER

Assistant News Editor

Columbia Hall students were honored for their academic achievement, Tuesday, Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. in Columbia Hall's formal lounge.

The Residence Life staff and the Columbia Hall staff with Carol A. Courtney, Residence Director of Columbia, planned this First Annual Academic Achievement Reception for those students who achieved a 3.25 average or higher for the fall semester of 1984.

"With all the pressures and temptations that students encounter these days, it's an even more prestigious honor to get awarded for one's own academic success," Courtney said in a letter sent to each of the 97 students prior to the reception.

Other residence halls will also have the opportunity to plan programs to honor their students. Courtney organized a semi-formal reception with a planned program because she felt the students "deserved the very best."

"This reception is not only for the students with the 3.25 average, but it is also an incentive for those who need extra prompting," Courtney added.

Dr. Larry Jones, Interim President, welcomed the students, reminding them that they will look back on their achievements and contributions they made while at Bloomsburg.

"You achieved the best you are capable of, which is extraordinary," Jones added.

Students were awarded certificates according to their majors. Those majors represented were Undeclared/All Majors, Education, Communication Disorders/Special Education, Business, Nursing, Biology and Allied Health Science. The Resident Advisors who attained a 3.25 average or higher were feted as well.

Sixty-nine students were present to receive their certificates. Refreshments were served following the program.

The Board of Trustees listens to the Presidential Search Chairman, Robert Buehner Jr., as he presented the three candidates' names for approval. The candidates begin their interviews in Harrisburg today.

Open Forums Observed

Over the past three weeks I have found myself sitting in the University Forum, McCormick building, every Tuesday and Friday afternoon from 3 p.m. to 4:15 p.m. This voluntary action led to some observations of faculty, administrators and students. These events were held to give everyone in the college community the chance to meet and questions the five presidential candidates. Those who never made one of the Open Forums don't know what they missed.

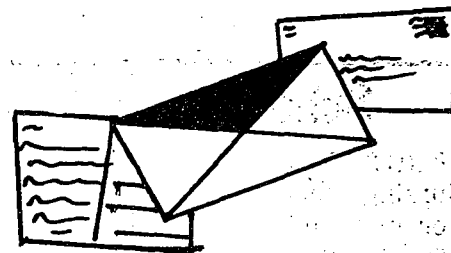

All five candidates answered questions and commented on current issues before a virtual standing room only crowd. Unfortunately, the number of students represented was poor at times. There were a few instances that a candidate didn't even have to answer a question raised by a student.

Faculty from each department were represented in varying numbers, depending on the candidate's field of study. Some faculty faces were only seen when the candidate had a similar interest with that person. Like one of the candidates said "everyone wants a piece of the president."

Who wouldn't want a piece of the president to make their concerns known? The position of president is a very important one to any institution. This institution hasn't had to make such a decision for a few years. As president, the person must be a representative and a chief fundraiser for the institution along with other jobs. How these jobs are done have an effect on all members of this university. They are important decisions to be made, so why was there a small percentage of individuals present to hear the strategies for fulfilling those duties.

Sure, there was standing room only, but one cannot forget that there are over 6,000 students and many faculty, staff and administrators not present.

Letter to the Editor

Culture at BU

Dear Editor,

I have been in the Bloomsburg community for a short time and would like to make one small comment. I feel that the university is doing a fine job at trying to get a wide variety of cultural performances for both students and town people. I've attended performances of Ragtime music and an enjoyable night of music provided by the male singing choir and a visiting choir from Connecticut.

Thank You,
Culturally Enriched

Campus scouts get involved

CATHY DESKO
Voice Contributor

The Campus Scouts, an organization that aids area Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops, will meet Thursday, Feb. 28, 8 p.m., in the Green Room of the Kehr Union.

According to Marianne Zellner, activities coordinator for Campus Scouts, the "organization is open to any college student, and it is registered under the Girl Scouts of the United States of America." The group is involved with various fund raisers and activities.

The Scouts have completed taking orders for Girl Scout cookies, but they ordered extra boxes of cookies that will be sold in the Union before spring break, said Zellner.

"We are helping a local Brownie troop by selling candy bars leftover from their fund raiser," she added.

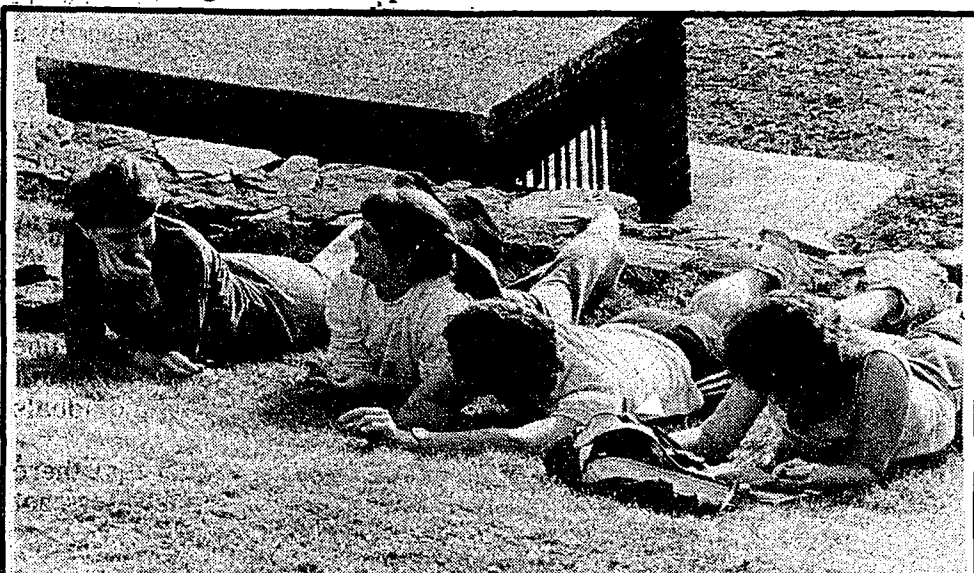

The Scouts also attend training sessions designed to help new leaders and organize outdoor events. Zellner said, "One session was for training leaders for the five-year-old Daisy Girl Scouts."

Ideas for future Scout activities include song nights, dessert nights and hiking trips, said Zellner. "In June we're doing a service project," she said. "We're doing a flag ceremony for an outdoor neighborhood event."

The officers for Campus Scouts are Patty Longcoy - president, Jane Sando - vice president, Doug Miller - treasurer, Tonya Sutton - secretary and Marianne Zellner - activities coordinator. Shell Lündhal, from the counseling center, is the group's advisor, and Barb Rosene serves as council liaison.

The Scouts, who have been organized for less than a year, meet every other Thursday night in the Union.

Students enjoy the beautiful Spring weather we've been having.

SPRING BREAK '85

The Lightstreet Hotel

LORI A. LEONARD
Executive Editor

A small colonial plaque on the door bids, "All ye who wear smiles, enter in." An air of friendliness is immediately apparent, and that friendliness is what keeps people coming back, says Donna Laubach, hostess of the Lightstreet Hotel Restaurant.

The Lightstreet Hotel, located in the village of Lightstreet on the outskirts of Bloomsburg, was founded in 1856 by Peter Shook. Shook built it out of brick burned on his farm. His neighbors who disagreed with his selling of 'spirits' forced the loss of his license.

In 1860, the new owner, Daniel L. Everhart, not only got a new liquor license, he also opened rooms on the second floor to travelers. Everhart went off to fight for the North in the Civil War. He was captured by the Confederate army and while in prison his health declined. When he finally returned he was forced to sell the hotel.

"The United States Hotel" was the new name given the hotel by owner Philip G. Keller in 1865. Keller added a large meeting hall and dance hall on the third floor. The hotel lasted with the Keller family through the Gay Nineties and was a popular place for gathering.

The hotel's present name came from owner Frank Kimble, in 1910, who named it after the village of Lightstreet. The village had been named by Methodist clergyman Marmaduke Pearce who had lived on "Light Street" in Baltimore as a boy.

From 1976 to 1982 the hotel was owned and operated by Wayne and Wilma Naus. During that time there were major renovations done to both the inside and outside of the building. The kitchen was also renovated and the interior was redecorated. "We tried to restore the comfortable, cozy, friendly atmosphere that people in years gone by have come to expect," says Wayne Naus, the former proprietor. "We also encouraged local artists to hang their paintings in the dining rooms to give it a local, friendly atmosphere."

The Lightstreet Hotel, located in the village of Lightstreet, specializes in fine food and drink.

Ken Wajda

Naus believed that two things are necessary when someone goes out to eat. Good food and good service. "My wife and I ran the restaurant with the help of Donna Laubach, and the three of us liked people," says Naus. "We enjoy serving people and making them comfortable. We remembered many of the names of our customers and we tried to remember their little idiosyncracies. Some people like to be served a cup of coffee as soon as they sit down and others like their bread heated. We also remembered drink preferences and had them ready when the people were seated. This just helps to make the customer comfortable." The Naus era of the Lightstreet Hotel made it credible for its friendliness and family-like atmosphere.

The hotel is presently owned by Dana and Debby Gottloeb. The Gottloeb's continue to serve customers in the warm and friendly manner the hotel is known for.

Friendliness is tradition

The hotel no longer rents out rooms; it is now simply a restaurant. The last time rooms were rented out was in 1972 when the rooms were rented out to flood victims.

The third floor dance and meeting hall has been removed due to a fire that caused the entire third floor to be destroyed.

Today, the restaurant, open six days a week, has four dining rooms, the downstairs seating up to 100 guests and the upstairs used for seating up to 25. The second floor is often used for small private parties, and a local bridge club holds their meetings there weekly.

Traditionally, the Thursday lunch features chicken and waffles. The Sunday brunch serves all local meats, fruit, juice, and homemade "goodies" on the pastry bar.

"Although there is competition in the area, the Lightstreet Hotel competes by continuing a tradition of friendly service," says Donna Laubach. "The people come back for the friendly service and good food."

"We have a lot of regular customers," says Laubach. "Many of them ask for a certain favorite table. We don't number our tables, but each of them has a personality. We have our favorite, the 'little round table in the corner.' This is a nice romantic, cozy table and it is the most commonly requested."

The hotel once received a call from Connecticut from a family asking for dinner reservations. The family was traveling with their daughter and were visiting colleges. When they arrived, and Laubach asked them how they had heard of the restaurant, the father pulled out a business card from the restaurant that was years old. He explained that a friend had heard of his plans to visit the area and gave him the Lightstreet Hotel's business card with the name of the hostess and waitress that he should ask for. The friend said the family should definitely try to eat there, it is a 'one of a kind place.'

"We get a lot of transit trade like that," says Laubach, "many business people recommend us and have their friends plan their trips around the hours we serve."

"We also serve a lot of famous people," says Laubach. The hotel has served the Mills Brothers, Dick Haines, and the Philadelphia Eagles.

Some of the regular crowd the hotel gets comes from the referees of the Bloomsburg University games, the Penn State football crowd, and the townspeople.

"The reason people keep coming back is due to the friendly service," says Laubach. "The advertising claims that this is the friendliest restaurant in the country, and I really believe that we are," says Laubach. "I really feel that we are more personable."

The Bloomsburg University women's swimming team placed second in the Pennsylvania Conference swimming meet despite scoring the most points ever by a BU team.

The Huskies' 575½ points, trailed only Clarion's 724½ points. After BU came Slippery Rock with 822, host Indiana (PA) 149, East Stroudsburg 144, Shippensburg 116, West Chester 106, Lock Haven 65, Millersville 43, Edinboro 30 and Mansfield 30.

"The team really wanted to end the season on a good note, especially for Sarah and Jeanne," said sophomore guard Linda King.

Radcliff was hampered in the first half with four fouls and interim head coach Dolly Anderson was forced to take her out of the game.

Many of the Huskies previous games have been decided against them due to their extensive fouling. Saturday night was not the case however, the Huskies were clearly out hustled with ESU stealing the Husky ball 14 times.

The Huskies shot just 32.5 percent from the floor while the Warriors hit for 52.4 percent.

Opening the second half with a 13 point lead, ESU used a fastbreak type offense to break the game wide open. For every two points the Huskies scored ESU answered with four.
