CGA clarifies issues

MIKE FEELEY
Staff Reporter

Lengthy conversations and mix-ups led to an unusually long CGA senate meeting, Monday.

The mix-ups occurred in the recent elections and the interpretation of the CGA constitution under voting procedure.

Yvette Brown came and spoke to the senate, Monday, and asked for reasons why she was not included in the final votes of the elections held February 14th.

After seeing an ad in BU Today, which said petitions were available for the position of recording secretary, Brown went to the CGA office to get one. She was told by CGA President Brett Hoffmaster that the ad was a mistake, but she could run for the office as a write-in candidate.

She did this, but afterwards was told by newly elected president Sean Mullen that she could not win by write-in votes, but that he had to appoint someone.

Her main concern was that she was misinformed by Hoffmaster about the elections and was not told all the proper procedures and qualifications.

For this, Hoffmaster apologized but still felt that he made a sound judgement.

After the meeting, Mullen explained that he would like to have appointed Brown to the position, but because of her academic standing, she could not be given the position.

At the finance committee meeting February 19th, the committee allocated $10,000 to go to the Campus Beautification Committee to build a picnic area next to Montour Hall, by the scheduled walkway over Lightstreet.

Along with another $11,000 from the university, the Beautification Committee hopes to put in a sewer system to drain rain water, and set up, 20 permanent picnic tables.

One of the other things would be a lighting system, with lights donated by the class of 1921.

The CGA senate passed this allocation with the stipulation that students will be informed and involved in the construction, rules and planning of the area. The Beautification committee hopes to have this project finished by graduation in May.

Mr. John Walker spoke at the meeting, explaining to the senate the program being developed, called the Husky Ambassador Club. He stressed that he was looking for students who were outgoing, and confident, and able to interact with other people.

"This program," said Mr. Walker, "will be individuals who would act as hosts, guides and represent BU at off-campus meetings."

He went on to say, that this was more than just a tour guide, the student will be asked to do much more than guide.

Although a specific amount of people has not been set yet, they are looking for about ten people, with a GPA of 2.5 or over.

"We are looking for diversity," said Walker. "We are not looking for a bunch of clones."

Anyone interested in becoming a Husky Ambassador can get in contact with the Alumni office, in Carver Hall, to pick up an application.

In a unanimous decision, SOAR (Students Organization of Adult Resources) was given a seat on the senate. It will be written in the constitution that one member of SOAR will have a seat on the senate.

Appointed to the position by president of SOAR, Pat Deibert, was Mark Hoover a full time student from Shickshinny Lake. He is an Earth Science Major.

Also elected to the senate was Kerry Boll, as an off campus representative.

The senate will be meeting again after spring break, on the 18th of March. The executive council will be meeting this Monday.

Marching band on the upbeat

The Maroon and Gold Band is making much effort to improve the interest and the number of members in the band.

In the past few years, there has been little interest shown toward the band from the students, as exemplified by its small membership. Terry Oxley, band director of Bloomsburg University, says he feels there are two main reasons for this lack of interest.

First, because there were three different directors in the last three years, the students may feel that if the band directors did not like the band, they probably would not like it either. Also, upperclassmen previously in the band may be unsure of the adjustment to a new director and his techniques.

The second reason Oxley gave was that students, especially freshmen, do not know that the University's band practices and rehearsals take only one-third of the time that high school bands usually take. In the instrumental section of the 1984 marching band, only seven freshmen participated.

Oxley, along with some students, is in the process of mailing some 500 letters to newly accepted students who previously participated in band. These letters emphasize that the band is a social group with the single purpose of creating enjoyment for the members and the football audience. Also emphasized is the lesser time required in the Maroon and Gold Band compared to most high school bands.

Another way to create interest is to give more leadership to the band

The office of orientation is looking for students who will serve as Orientation Workshop Leaders (OWLS) for the summer and fall of 1985. Students must have attended B.U. for at least two semesters, have a cumulative average of at least 2.2, have a good conduct record, have filed (by 3-22) a financial aid form, have agreed to work June and July as well as twelve weeks in the fall semester, and have agreed to attend training sessions.

This year there will be fewer OWLS than in the past years and the training will be more specified and intense. The pay will be $3.25 per hour for about 85 hours in the summer and 60 hours during the fall semester. Room and meals for the summer orientation sessions will be provided as well.

"An OWL is an important contact for a new student, and an important representative for the University. We are interested in students who have a commitment to this institution and to the concept of orientation, and who can fulfill this commitment through their leadership," Sandy Walker, Orientation Coordinator, said.

"Each OWL will have about 15-18 students for which he or she is responsible during the Summer Orientation sessions. In the fall, each OWL will continue to contact and give guidance to the students he or she had in the summer. That could be as many as 90 students. Some specific times will be scheduled for OWL and student meetings during the fall semester. Sept. 1 and 2 are fall dates when

Institutionalized racism

This past Sunday, February 24, a small group of administrators, faculty and students gathered together at a public meeting of the Council of Trustees to hear the results of the presidential search committee. Mr. Robert Buehner, a member of the Council of Trustees and chairperson of the presidential search committee, repeatedly commended the committee for its services during the last ten months, then announced the top three candidates for the position. Except for one trustee, the council wholeheartedly accepted the committee's recommendations. One of these three men will become president of Bloomsburg University. Congratulations!

However, I would like to raise one moral and ethical question: Where was the minority participation in the nominating process? Our university consists of many different constituents. Not one Black, Hispanic, Asian or American Indian served on the committee to nominate a president who will, at one time or another, represent all members of the university community. I must admit Mr. Buehner did mention Mr. Irvin Wright, a black administrator who served as Affirmative Action office. But, Mr. Wright's job was to make sure that the search and screen committee followed affirmative action policies and procedures. He was not a voting member as Mr. Buehner attempted to imply.

This type of problem, little or no representation, is common at Bloomsburg University. There are other similar circumstances and situations which when taken individually, mean nothing but collectively one can see the whole picture. The whole picture is a problem which I call institutionalized racism. It is a byproduct of a self-perpetuating circle of narrow-minded people in positions of power. Institutionalized racism is not open, blunt or easily recognized initially but rather quiet, passive and controlled. It is crisis oriented. Instead of looking for long-term solutions, this form of racism rises to the occasion for the moment until things cool down then silently returns to status quo.

I have finally figured out the game. This information will be passed down to other students so that together we can combat this affliction. I am issuing a complaint to Bloomsburg's ultra-conservative, reactionary administration. Things must be different.

Women's sports still overlooked

Dear Editor,

Another sports season is coming to a close and it seems there has been no changes in respect to the treatment of women's sports. They still continue to be overlooked. For example, on the weekends, the buses up to Nelson seemed to run only when there was a home wrestling match or a men's basketball game. If the girl's basketball team had a home game on a weekend, the buses were not running unless the guys also had a game.

This does not encourage support for the women's team. Many on-campus fans do not have their own transportation up to Nelson. If the buses did not go to the fieldhouse, these fans either skipped the game or had to walk up to Nelson at night.

Circumstances would be different if the men and women's sports were treated equally. However, evidently this is not the case. What is offered to the men's sports and their fans could be offered to the women's sports and their fans.

There does exist student support for the women's teams, so that is no excuse for no buses. By not supplying buses, administration is not encouraging support for the teams. There is only so much the fans can do without the help of administration.

Hopefully we will see a change for the better in the upcoming sport seasons.

Signed,
Fan of Women's sports.

Announcement

The administration of Bloomsburg University has determined that for the upcoming summer semester, fees must be paid the day of registration. Deferment of fees for financial aid will be possible, but only financial aid will be deferred.

International Relations Club plans elections

PATTY MOYER

Voting for officers, planning club activities and discussing the Falkland Islands were topics on the agenda for the second meeting this month of the International Relations Club held Sunday, Feb. 24, 7 p.m., at the KUB

Ken Bingener

Coffeehouse.

The International Relations Club is an organization of about 45 foreign and American students who discuss their cultures and important cultural issues. Some countries represented were England, Cameroon, Kenya, Korea, Kuwait, Pakistan, Sri Lanka and Uganda.

In opening remarks, Alfred Tambe, president of the club, informed the members about the need to elect new officers since some of the present ones will be graduating in May. He urged members to think about running for one of the positions.

The club voted on trips to New York and Washington, D.C. A New York trip is being planned the weekend after spring break, however, no date was set for the Washington trip.

Another issue raised at the meeting was a plan for a Multi-Cultural Week presented by the KUB program board on April 22-26. Mr. Tony Sylvester, the group's advisor, encouraged members to organize panels, programs and volunteers for this event. "We must get the different cultures to be seen by the people," he said.

Before the meeting ended, Andres Molteni and Greg Estadt headed a discussion about the Falkland Island wars. "One of the most important beliefs is that everybody is equal, however, some countries still tell other countries what to do," Molteni said while discussing Imperialism.

Elections and plans for the Multi-Cultural Week will be on the agenda for the next meeting. The date and time for the next meeting will be posted around campus after spring break.

Custodian retires after 19 years

CATHY DESKO
Voice Contributor

It's Monday morning, and the bathrooms in Elwell Hall are filthy. A custodial worker prepares to scrub the sinks, wash the showers, and clean the toilets. It's a familiar scene to her, but she won't see it much longer. After 3 p.m., Friday, March 1, she won't have to clean another dormitory bathroom again.

Arlene Stine, a custodial worker in Elwell Hall, is retiring after working 19 years at Bloomsburg University.

Stine, a lifetime resident of Catawissa, worked at the Hotel Magee and the Stone Castle Motel before coming to BU. "The summer was busy at Stone Castle," she remembers, "but things slowed down in the fall, so I was out of a job, so I applied for a job at the college."

Stine works Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., in Elwell Hall. She cleans the bathrooms for three wings, orders supplies, meets with her supervisor, and discusses work orders with the dean of Elwell. She and the other custodians clean the ROTC room, the basement recreation room, and the child care center.

"I enjoy my work," says Stine. "I enjoy the people I work with, and I like coming in and seeing the students." Stine talks to the girls and gets to know them fairly well. "They are very nice to me, and I believe the bathrooms should be kept clean for the girls. If there were no students, I wouldn't have a job here."

Stine does more than clean for the girls. "About 10 years ago, around Easter, I crocheted rabbits for the girls. I also used to make sleds for them out of popsicle sticks at Christmas," she says. Stine still sends the girls on her wings greeting cards for holidays.

Stine notices some changes that have occurred at the college through the years. "When I first came here, we made the beds for the girls," recalls Stine, "but the president decided the students could make their own beds." At one time the custodians "used to clean the dean's apartment" too, she says.

As for changes in the students, Stine says, "Students today are more concerned about their personal appearance now than they used to be." However, she adds, "Students years ago were more careful not to leave cigarettes on the floor. They knew they could be fined by the housemothers. For instance, students used to be fined if irons were left where they weren't supposed to be."

Although the college has changed,

Stine says "the students have always been so pleasant. I can't remember any of them ever giving me a hard time about anything."

Stine has been married to Monroe Stine, a retired employee of the Magee Carpet Mill, for 42 years. Their son works for Perkins Diesel in Detroit, Mich., and their daughter writes a newspaper column for the Press-Enterprise. Stine also has four granddaughters.

"I have mixed feelings about retirement," says Stine. "I know I'll miss my fellow workers and the students. I enjoy working in the dorm more than cleaning offices because I get to know the girls. Sometimes I'll think of a certain girl and wonder where she is and what she's doing."

During her retirement, Stine will get to devote more time to crocheting and baking, two of her hobbies. "I enjoy being a homemaker and making things," says Stine. "I want to make some quilts, too."

Stine plans to do more than crocheting during her retirement. She says, "I also want to take time to visit people in nursing homes. They seem so lonely and forlorn, and it would be nice for them to have someone to talk to."

Arlene Stine is not content with just doing her job. She cares enough to do more than she has to. When she retires, BU students will lose more than a custodian — they will lose a friend.

BU student hears with her eyes

CHARLENE MILAZZO

An 18-year-old girl walked into her first college class in a large auditorium. Although the professor spoke loudly, he rarely looked up or spoke directly to his audience. Because of his actions, this girl was unable to understand him.

"It was a bit scary at first," recalls Katie Donovan, one of the 14 hearing-impaired students at Bloomsburg University (BUP). "Because there were so many students, I was unable to sit close enough to the professor to be able to read his lips," she adds. This situation, along with others, often causes difficulties for hearing impaired students on campus.

BUP, however, has special services for its deaf students to help deal with these difficulties. "Although I've been deaf for a long time, it's sometimes hard to adjust," says Donovan. "I think the special services make it easier."

BUP offers deaf students interpreters, notetakers, and tutors to try to eliminate some of the difficulties. There is also a support group on campus, the Bloomsburg Association of the Hearing Impaired. This group not only gives support to hearing impaired students, but also tries to make hearing students aware of their problems. Donovan is the treasurer of this organization.

All tutors, interpreters and notetakers are paid for by the university. If a hearing impaired student communicates only through sign language, an interpreter is provided. Also, many students take notes for their hearing impaired classmates. "I have a notetaker," says Donovan. She explains, that a special paper is provided by the Department of Communications Disorders. Tutors are also available for hearing impaired students if outside help is needed.

Donovan, from Media, Pa., has been deaf since birth, a result of being a rubella baby. Her parents enrolled her in a special school when she was 18-months-old. There she learned to read lips and by the age of four was speaking. Donovan's family has always been supportive of her. However, she is treated the same as her brothers and sisters. "I don't receive special treatment in my house," admits Donovan. Donovan believes her childhood was normal in spite of her deafness. "My deafness never interfered with my making friends," she says.

Donovan was mainstreamed into public schools beginning with the sixth grade. "I am a strong believer in mainstreaming," says Donovan. She believes it helps the students to feel less alienated. Donovan admits that her lip reading limited difficulties in high school. Donovan's high school offered her hearing therapy along with her academic classes. This therapy gave extra help if needed, and made sure that classes were going well. Donovan rarely had problems with students. She explains, "Most students are understanding to my problem."

Donovan is willing to help people understand about deafness. She has been asked into many hearing impaired classes to help students in that major. "I think these panel discussions help students understand the problems of hearing impaired students," says Donovan. She believes this helps eliminate some of the problems and improve communication between hearing and nonhearing students.

Donovan is a sophomore majoring in elementary education with a concentration in teaching of the hearing impaired. She believes she can be helpful to these children because she personally knows what they are going through.

Prof. Judith Hirshfeld, assistant professor of communication disorders and special education, is Donovan's advisor. Hirshfeld believes the largest problem for some hearing impaired students is the need for interpreters. These interpreters use sign language which can sometimes be distracting to hearing students. "Many oral students have difficulties understanding professors," says Hirshfeld. She explains that dialect, beards, and mustaches make it difficult for students to read lips. Donovan admits she sometimes has problems with reading professors' lips. "But, if I sit close enough I usually don't have any problems," she adds.

Another difficulty for Donovan and other hearing impaired students is the residence halls. Donovan lives on the first floor of Montour Hall. "My floor is equipped for a hearing impaired student," explains Donovan. "The fire alarm has a strobe light connected to it, and my phone has an adaptor which increases the volume of a person's voice," she says. For hearing impaired students who are totally deaf, a T.D.D., Tele-Communication Device, is needed by both parties. Donovan explains that this is similar to a computer terminal which types out what both parties are saying.

There are problems, however, for deaf students that the university has no control over. Relations with other students are sometimes difficult. Donovan explains some students are hesitant or are not willing to put forth the effort it takes with hearing impaired students. "I feel fortunate to be able to read lips," says Donovan. "Not many hearing students know sign language," she adds.

Donovan visited many campuses before deciding on BUP. "I think Bloomsburg has a lot to offer its hearing impaired," she says. Donovan says she feels comfortable at Bloomsburg and has made many friends. She believes the students and faculty are understanding and supportive of her and other hearing impaired students.

Orientation will become friendlier and more personal for new students this summer than it has been in the past, according to Sandra Walker, recently appointed orientation coordinator at BU.

Walker is taking over John Scrimgeour's position. Scrimgeour formerly coordinated orientation in addition to serving as a counselor for the university. Walker replaced Scrimgeour so the orientation coordinator could be devoted solely to orientation. Scrimgeour is still working with Walker teaching her the various aspects involved in organizing orientation.

Walker is planning several additions to the orientation program.

The biggest change is there will be fewer OWLS (Orientation Workshop Leaders) than there were in the past. Walker will hire only 15 OWLS; each OWL will be responsible for about 16 students during each orientation.

OWLS will answer any questions the incoming freshman have, familiarize the students with the members, according to Oxley. This year there will be a drum major, Cindy Hepler, who along with directing the band, will work along with Oxley and the band-front captains to design the half-time shows.

Oxley believes that support for the band from all of the University is important. He feels that if not supported with membership, it should be supported morally.

Oxley said, "If people want a first-class band, they must treat members in a way that befits a first-class band."

To become a member of the Maroon and Gold Marching Band, one must have had previous experience in a high school band. Those who wish to participate in the band-fronts must audition Saturday, March 2, auditions for new students will be held during summer orientation. Also, all members are required to attend band camp three days before the 1985 fall semester begins.

The band plans to perform at four home games, two away games, and the championship game if the Husky football team attends.

University and try to ease the nervousness many new students feel. In the fall each OWL will continue to contact and give guidance to the students he or she was responsible for in the summer.

Another addition to the orientation program is the publication of "B-U-NIQUE," a newsletter that will be mailed to incoming freshman. The first issue of "B-U-NIQUE" is scheduled to be available at the end of this week. It will be sent to all students who have been offered admission to BU.

The first issue of "B-U-NIQUE" will include articles such as a student's explanation as to why she chose BU, advice on how to prepare for college and a column for parents that addresses many questions and concerns they may have.

Walker explained that the purpose of "B-U-NIQUE" is to make prospective Bloomsburg University students and their families more informed about the university and to "fill in the gaps" students may feel between high school and college.

Walker also plans to promote a Big Brother/Big Sister program, provide additional services to foreign students in an attempt to make them feel more comfortable and to develop more programs for non-traditional and graduate students.

Walker has been director of remedial reading at Central Columbia Schools for the past three years. She received her master's degree in reading at BU in 1975.

Conference meet this weekend

Tankmen to compete

Seven members of the Bloomsburg University men's swimming and diving team will be competing in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference Championships on Thursday through Saturday, Feb. 28-March 2, at Clarion University.

According to head coach Eli McLaughlin, whose team finished the 1984-85 campaign with a 4-8 record, among those qualifying for the meet is senior captain Rick Fenton who will swim in both the 200 yard and 400 yard individual medley events as well as the 200 yard breaststroke.

In addition, six freshmen will join Fenton including Jerry Sharrtillo (100 yd., 200 yd. and 500 yd. freestyle events, plus the 400 yd. and 800 yd. freestyle relays); Richard Sheldon (50 yd. and 100 yd. freestyle events, 400 yd. and 800 yd. freestyle relays, 100 yd. butterfly and 400 yd. medley relay); Tyler Howell (100 yd. butterfly, 100 yd. backstroke, 100 yd. freestyle, 400 and 800 yd. freestyle relays, and the 400 yd. medley relay); Mark Koenig (100 yd. butterfly and all three relays); Ed McElhiney (100 and 200 yd. breaststroke events and the 400 yd. medley relay); and John Schneider (100 and 200 yd. breaststroke events).

Host Clarion is the favorite to win its 15th consecutive PC championship while Shippensburg, Edinboro, Indiana (PA), Slippery Rock and Kutztown should all battle for spots in the top six. West Chester and East Stroudsburg join the Huskies in rounding out the nine-team field.

Fieldhouse Due New Scoreboard

BLOOMSBURG — In the near future, fans attending athletic contests in Bloomsburg University's Nelson Fieldhouse will find it much easier to follow the action on the basketball court and wrestling mats.

Thanks to a gift from the four corporations of Coca-Cola, Pepsi Cola, Purdue Farms Inc., and United Penn Bank, the university will be getting one of the most modern scoreboards in northeastern Pennsylvania.

The current four-sided scoreboard was placed in the gymnasium in 1972 and has been utilized by the men's and women's basketball teams and the wrestling team. The latter, however, only used the overhead scoreboard for team scores. All other information pertaining to the bouts was flashed on floor scoreboards, which has been an inconvenience for spectators.

The new four-sided unit will be a sophisticated micro-computer controlled Nevco scoreboard suspended from the center of the gym. All aspects of scoring, plus additional information, will appear. Illuminated sponsor boards will hang from the lower portion of the unit.

"It has been difficult getting replacement parts for our current scoreboard," states Roger Sanders, director of athletics. "At times, we had some problems which also caused inconveniences for the spectators. With this new installation, fans will enjoy the events more and it will greatly add to the overall appearance of our facility."

On February 20th, the Men's Intramural Wrestling Championships were held in Nelson Fieldhouse. The contest was staged right before our University Varsity Wrestling Team took on East Stroudsburg University.

Darrel Sugita won the 118 pound class, while Nate Williams won at 126 pounds. At 142 pounds, Nelson Fritz came from behind. Fritz was losing 4-0 after the first period to pin Mike Underkoffler in 4:23. In the Semi's, John Hourani was tied with Fritz 2-2 in the third period, before he became a victim of a pin!

The 150 pound class was won by Mike Cuddy, but not after Mike Rexrode gave Cuddy a 5-1 hard fought battle.

The 158 pound class was by far the most competitive class. Ed Savage reached the finals by slipping past Mark Zvitkovitz 2-1 in the semi's. Greg Aumand, the other semi-finalist winner, defeated Tom Martin only 4-2. That set the stage for the Savage-Auman match. Auman wrestled superbly and soundly defeated Savage 11-2.

At 167 pounds, Dan Comfort and Russ Warner were tied at 0-0 half way through the second period. Then an unfortunate dislocated elbow was suffered by Warner ending the match. Comfort thus won by default.

At 177 pounds, after Tony Liott defeated Leo Harris 16-4, he had his hands full with Tim Smith. Smith opened up a 4-0 lead and held on to defeat Liott 4-2.

At 190 pounds, after both men pinned their opponents in the Semi-finals, Brad Goodrich and Jay Drumheller reached the finals. In the semi-finals, Kevin Shorten and Bob Kelley were the victims pinned by Goodrich and Drumheller respectively. In the finals, Goodrich held on to defeat Drumheller 8-5.

In the unlimited class, John Fulmer and Dave Michaels found themselves up against each other. The result was Michaels to run away with a 13-3 victory.

Huskies kick off EWL tourney today

The Eastern Wrestling League will celebrate its 10th year of existence when the seven teams gather at Lock Haven University today and tomorrow for the EWL Championship Tournament.

Penn State, which has won six of the first nine tournament titles including the last three, will battle a field that includes Bloomsburg, Clarion, Cleveland State, Lock Haven, Pittsburgh and West Virginia.

Two sessions are set for each day with the opening round to begin at noon today with the semi-finals and first round consolations slated for 7 p.m. The semi-final and final consolations start at noon on Saturday and the championship finals get underway at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Roger Sanders' Bloomsburg University squad enters the tourney with a 15-5 overall mark and the Huskies were a 3-2 in EWL dual match action. Pre-tournament indications point to Penn State as a slight favorite with the Huskies, Lock Haven and West Virginia all having a good shot at team laurels. Clarion, Cleveland State and Pittsburgh probably do not possess enough depth to win the team honors but several individuals from each team will play a role in the final outcome.

Sanders commented, "This could be the most competitive tour-

Rocky Bonomo takes an unblemished 32-0 record into this weekend's Eastern Wrestling League Championship Tournament where he is the defending champion at 126.

Ken Wajda

namment-in the history of the league with any one of four teams having a shot at the title. We're going to need as many finalists as possible and high places out of everyone else."

Ricky Bonomo will return to the lineup for the first time in almost a month at 118. The sophomore wrestled to a 26-2 record before injuring his knee in the East-West All-Star Classic on February 4.

The other half of Bloomsburg's talented leadoff brother combination, Rocky, takes a 32-0 mark into the 126 lb. bracket where he is the defending champion. Bonomo joined his brother at the East-West meet where he dropped his only match this season, but the loss does not blemish his record because the affair is considered an exhibition.

Senior co-captain Jon Moser takes a 23-11 mark into the tournament at 134 lbs. and one of three freshmen in the Huskies' lineup, Marty King at 142 lbs., has a 30-7-1 slate.

Another freshman, Mike Rudolph, with a record of 20-13, will be at 150 lbs. and sophomore Roger Leitzel will replace Dan Klingerman at 158. Leitzel has an 11-11 record while Klingerman, who returned from a knee injury to win the Pennsylvania Conference crown at that weight, has dropped five of his last six outings to fall to 15-13 overall.

Bruce Wallace, who has been struggling lately losing his last three bouts in a row, has a 14-6-1 record at 167 lbs.

Sophomore Darrin Evans, who has been outstanding in recent matches winning nine of his last 10 bouts, will be at 177 lbs. with a record of 27-5-1. Evans has scored three technical falls and two falls in his last five times on the mat.

Bloomsburg's other senior, co-captain John McFadden, will represent the Huskies at 190, where he has posted an 18-6 mark and the final freshman among the starters is heavyweight Ron Ippolite. He has notched 18 victories against eight losses.

The Bonomos and McFadden are the only 1984 placemen returning for the Huskies as Rocky won the lone title; Ricky and McFadden were second and third respectively.

A total of six returning champions will be in the field including four wrestlers defending titles from a year ago. Along with Rocky Bonomo are Penn State's Chris Bevilacqua (150), Clarion's Jim Beichner (190) and Rick Petersen (Hwt.) of Lock Haven. Penn State's Steve Seftor (Hwt.) is a previous two-time champion and Doug Haines of Pittsburgh won the 150-pound title in 1982.

The addition of four more individual national qualifying positions, which includes the champion and runnerup at each weight in addition to seven "wild card" selections, brings the total to 27 wrestlers who will go on to the NCAA Division I Championships in Oklahoma City on March 14-16.

"It should be a great tournament and we're certainly capable of winning it," stated Sanders. "If our kids at 150, 158, 167 and heavyweight can come through and the other weights do what they're capable of, we'll be in good shape."

Roundball wrap-up

SARAH E. HACKFORTH
Sports Editor

Another basketball season is over. This was by far not one of the better seasons BU fans have seen. The men just barely got over the .500 mark with a 15-12 season and the women again posted another losing season with a 6-17 record.

Men's head coach Charlie Chronister posted his 250th win this season and the Huskies posted their 19th straight winning season. Fourteen of those under Chronister.

Junior Glenn Noack his one thousandth point during the second half of the Shippensburg game. Noack ends the year in the number nine slot of the BU all-time scoring list with 1,096 points. The junior was tenth in the PSAC averaging 15.2 points a game. He scored 410 points this year and also has the highest free throw percentage in the conference, 88.3 percent. He shot 51.8 percent from the floor to place him 12th in PSAC.

Senior Wes Wright ends his career with 762 points to put him 20th on BU's all-time scoring list. Wright was 22nd in the conference for scoring, averaging 12.6 points a game and 15th in the PSAC for rebounding with 7.4 per game.

On the women's side of the court the Lady Huskies, despite a poor season, posted three players in double figures.

Jeanne Radcliff scored 614 points during her four years at BU to make her the 3rd all-time scorer.
