IF YOU ARE WONDER- ING WHAT TO DO, EDINBORO MAY HELP YOU

¶ What are you going to do next year?

¶ The State of Pennsylvania has a new and attractive field of labor, with adequate salaries, open to you. By making Art a required subject in all the Elementary Schools of the State, there is opened up an extensive sphere of new activity in the teaching profession.

¶ Pennsylvania needs hundreds of departmental teachers of Art, of city and county supervisors of Art and of Art instructors in the High Schools of the State.

¶ The State has established, at Edinboro, a department for the training of Artists who are to carry on this work. It has placed there the finest studios and equipment to be found in any of the State schools. It has competent instructors. Its jurisdiction is the entire Western half of the State. Edinboro is not a school of Commercial Art.

¶ Pennsylvania needs you, provided you have a vital interest in Art, to help inculcate that civic and aesthetic attainment which has been so regrettably lacking in many of the communities of the Commonwealth. Therefore, it offers you, at Edinboro, free instruction in a three-year course for the training of Art teachers and supervisors. Your only expenditure is for room, board, and a small registration fee.

¶ Full credit in this course is given for work done in other schools, in so far as it complies with State requirements.

¶ Full credit will also be given for work done during Summer Session at Edinboro.

¶ At the end of your course you will be trained for a real profession and you will find a real job waiting for you with real money. You will be able to hold your head high and you will receive the esteem of those whom you serve.

¶ Your profession will never be overcrowded. The supply of Art teachers in the State of Pennsylvania cannot equal the demand. Your standing in society will be immutable.

¶ You will enjoy all the privileges and pleasures of college life. Edinboro has an unexcelled campus, gymnasium, and lake, with boating, canoeing, swimming, fishing and skating. It has comfortable dormitories and excellent eats. Its social life will interest you. Its tennis courts and athletics will keep you in trim. Let Edinboro be your home for the next three years. Edinboro
