Lois Long Directs One-Act Comedy
Debs Play to Large Audience;
Short Children's Play Next

The first student-directed play of the year, "Indian Summer," was presented on April 11, under the leadership of Lois Long. This one-act comedy, which takes place in France, was written by Henri Mellohac and Ludovic Halevy, and was translated into English by Barrett H. Clark.

The cast was composed entirely of Debs, who did excellent work. Adrienne, the very delightful young woman and coquette who came to visit her supposed aunt, Mme. Lebreton, was ably portrayed by Jane Shull. Monroe Hurwitz was rather humorous and eccentric as old M. Briqueville, who was gullible enough to fall in love with Adrienne. The part of Noel, Adrienne's husband, was acted by Robert Bowes. Mary Jane McKeever, who played the part of Mme. Lebreton, was very interesting as M. Briqueville's housekeeper.

The committees for the play, such as staging, properties, make-up, etc., were largely composed of Debs, under the leadership of In-
