REVIEW

By CHRISTOPHER FLYNN

Bright costumes and eight-foot tall phallics dominate the current College Players production of "Lysistrata" by Aristophanes.

The cast for Lysistrata is summed up in one word; large. There are 23 members and this is where the problems begin. The movement of the first act is somewhat tedious. Hopefully, this problem which I noticed on Wednesday night was just the nervousness of the many new faces on the Price Auditorium stage, and will wane during the three night run as the actors move into the groove of the play. I cannot blast the play to pieces, however; the second act ran quite smoothly, and contained some side-splitting humor. Especially the scene between Myrrhine (Frances Arndt) and Kinesias (Greg McCracken). The desperate man tries but, unsuccessfully, to satisfy his most hardened desire.

And "old" face which should be very familiar to many in the audience is Rick Kline as the Commissioner. Kline's performance is, as always, fabulous; his ability to embellish a character with mannerisms which are very personal and unique, make him a constant joy to watch.

Barb Paladino's (Lysistrata) performance is helped along by her powerful, attractive build. The role of Lysistrata would be difficult even for the most talented actress. She seemed tense in the opening scene. Opening a play with a lengthy monologue is difficult for anybody. Her performance improved greatly by the second act as she relaxed and became more comfortable with her surroundings.

Others who are of notable mention are: both choruses, who trade remarks, blows and kisses. Also Jodi Manning as an extremely attractive Peace, and Paul Silbey as the anxious Ambassador from Sparta.

Although "Lysistrata" is 2500 years old it has withstood the test of time, because its content and message are universal.

The College Players announced the choice of their Spring Production at a board meeting on Monday, Dec. 11. The mainstage production for Spring 1979 will be "Lysistrata," by Aristophanes, a comedy in which the women of Greece initiate a unique anti-war protest—withholding sex from their men.

"Endgame" and "Symbiosis" have been chosen as the two spring studio productions, to be presented on campus in the same evening.

Auditions for these plays will be held at the beginning of the spring semester, and will be announced at that time in the Eagle Eye.

Openings for the Spring Children's Show are still open. Proposals should be submitted by the end of January.

AUDITIONS!

Auditions continue tonight and tomorrow night at 7:00 pm. for the British farce "Habeas Corpus", to be directed by Dr. Robert Kidder. The show will go before the campus Nov. 9, 10, and 11 on the Price Auditorium stage.

For those who want to work on a smaller scale, the Theatre Department will be presenting "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" October 23-27 in the studio theatre in Sloan. The play is to be directed by student Gwen Hummel, who will be holding auditions on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 14 and 15 at 5:30 pm. All auditions will be held in Sloan 321.

SO YOU WANT TO DIRECT A PLAY....

The College Players are seeking directors for some upcoming play slots. The travelling children's show slot, December 4-8, is still open, as are several slots for spring productions, including the mainstage play. Students who wish to direct are invited to submit proposals to the College Players. These proposals should contain a synopsis of the play and its characters, an account of your concept of the staging of the play, and an estimate of the cost of staging. Proposals can be turned in to Dr. Denys Gary in Sloan.
