Thank You Clarion

Kathryn Mary Jarzab ('07) is a mathematics teacher for the Corry Area School District, Corry, Pa. She is in her third year of teaching at both the high school and middle school. She is the middle school cross country coach and volunteers as a timer and assistant for the track team.

What have you been doing since graduation?

I started my job search by attending an educators' career fair. I stood in line for hours waiting for the chance to interview with Pennsylvania school districts. Representatives from school districts outside of Pennsylvania approached the line and begged us to come over to their tables. They had numerous teaching positions to offer and bonuses. I learned that Clarion graduates are highly sought after by school districts throughout the United States.

Ultimately, I chose to continue searching for a Pennsylvania teaching position because it was the right and fair thing to do; to "give back" to my home state and Pennsylvania-based scholarship donors the optimum benefit of the education and skills that I acquired through their support provided in the form of several Pennsylvania-based grants and local scholarships.

I found myself in the enviable position of choosing from among several job offers. I chose a mathematics teaching position with Corry Area School District. I also returned to college, earning a master's degree in education from Gannon University on Dec. 13, 2009.

My passion for running, which I acquired at Clarion, has developed into a life-long sport. I participate in a variety of running events and, on April 19, I will run in the Boston Marathon.

How important was it for you to receive scholarship support as a student?

How important is it for a long-distance runner to have on hand a generous supply of water to hydrate his/her body over the exhausting course of numerous, energy draining miles? That's how important it was for me to receive scholarships to alleviate the high cost of a college education. Realizing that I would need thousands of dollars more than my parents could provide or I could work for at my minimum wage jobs, I turned toward seeking out and applying for scholarships. In researching scholarships, I discovered that the benefactors were outstanding individuals in their own right, heroes in their own careers and communities and, frequently, graduates or associates of Clarion University with a desire to "pay it forward" by providing scholarships to students as a way of saying "thank you" to Clarion University.

How did receiving scholarships impact your time as a student and now in your career?

Thinking about the outstanding individuals who funded the scholarships that I received, I felt a deep and sincere obligation to never fail in fulfilling the expectations that they must have held in selecting me as a scholarship winner. Most of my time as a student was devoted toward achieving and then maintaining my 4.0 academic record, and toward practicing and earning an outstanding level of performance as a runner on the Clarion Track and Cross Country teams.

Winning scholarships actually helped me to save valuable time that I could then devote directly toward my studies. Having more time that I could spend on my school work enabled me to achieve excellent grades and a high degree of success in my field.

What would you like to say to the donors whose scholarships you received as a student?

Certainly an enormous, bolded, all in capital letters, THANK YOU is at the top of my list. You tossed me a life-saving ring when I was in over my head and drowning in college debt. You buoyed my spirits to move ahead, worry free, with my educational goals. In addition to the financial assistance, you gave me gifts that I will carry with me for a lifetime. The honor of being chosen as the recipient of your scholarships has inspired me to work harder, climb higher, run faster, dream bigger and dance longer to the waltz of wishes that can and do come true with the help of sponsors as kind, caring and generous as you! May God, who sees every good deed, reward and bless you abundantly not only for helping me, but for every student whose education was made possible because of the largesse of your scholarships.

Open House Welcomes Science And Technology Center

Clarion University President Dr. Joseph P. Grunenwald and Clarion University Foundation, Inc. President Charles P. Leach Jr. welcomed donors to an open house for the new $34 million Science and Technology Center Saturday night Jan. 30, 2010.

In addition to demonstrations by faculty and students, tours were provided of the new facility. Clare Heidler, retired director of facilities, also featured the many environmental efficiencies and savings in the building, designed for Silver LEED Certification, in the tour and a video presentation. (Heidler video available at www.clarion.edu/heidlervideo.)

Special recognition of local support efforts was reflected in a donor wall that highlighted major contributors in support of the facility.

Opening June 1, 2009, the Science and Technology Center houses the departments of anthropology, geography and earth science; biology; chemistry; mathematics; and physics. The 98,000-square-foot building has seven classrooms, two seminar rooms, 40 laboratories, and 55 offices. It is connected to the 8,000-square-foot Donald Peirce Planetarium and Auditorium, the only part of the previous science center to be retained.

The day's attractions included thirty-minute presentations and demonstrations by Clarion University faculty members in various laboratories: Dr. Douglas Smith, biology, molecular and cellular laboratory suite; Dr. Kurt Regester, biology, faculty research museum; Dr. Jon Touster, chemistry, and Dr. Dan Clark, chemistry, organic chemistry laboratory; Dr. Tony Vega, earth science, GIS/cartography laboratory; Dr. Sharon Montgomery, physics, planetarium; Dr. Jon Beal, mathematics, computational laboratory; and Dr. Bruce Smith, science education, and Karen Spuck, Science in Motion, science education laboratory.

VIDEO REPORT AT WWW.CLARION.EDU/STCVIDEO

Pendulum On Permanent Exhibit In Science And Technology Center

One of the most memorable features of the recently demolished Peirce Science Center at Clarion University was a pendulum. For much of that building's 40-plus year existence, the pendulum, suspended through three floors of the building, swung with the earth's movement.

The new $34 million Science and Technology Center, opened in 2009, did not have a place for the pendulum to be operational. For the countless alumni, who passed the campus' ultimate swinger every time they went to class in Peirce, it is now preserved.

A customized case in the Science and Technology Center, purchased through PEMCO, is now housing the top-shaped pendulum in a miniature reproduction of its original home in Peirce.

The pendulum was part of Peirce Science Center's construction in 1968, but did not work due to a flaw in the design of the pendulum manufacturer. The designer died and the company was unable to supply the original design so it could be made to work.

It was a student, Richard Burns ('81), who got the pendulum to work for the first time.

The pendulum swung for several years before a leak in the roof damaged its electronic system and it stopped.

Burns, then an engineer for Ball Aerospace in Colorado, came to the rescue again in 1988. His father, Ed, at that time an electrical foreman with the Clarion University maintenance department, contacted his son after the roof leaks were repaired to look at the system again. The younger Burns redesigned the electrical system and the pendulum continued its freewheeling way.

Now the pendulum will remain an intriguing scientific knowledge for all who visit the Science and Technology Center.

“I came to Clarion because it had a strong, hands-on communication program.”

Emmy Winner Jim Weaver Covers Major Sports Events

Jim Weaver ('95), an Emmy winner, has been involved with many of the top sporting events in the United States.

Weaver recently worked on his seventh Super Bowl, which was the fifth for NEP Broadcasting of Pittsburgh, Pa. NEP is a mobile television service provider of equipment and television broadcast engineering services, which are packed into tractor trailers and driven to events across the country.

“We televise sports, entertainment and news,” said Weaver. “My upcoming assignments included the NCAA Basketball Tournament and Master’s Golf Tournament for CBS, Heads Up Poker for NBC, golf for NBC Sports, NASCAR for Turner Sports and ESPN, and then the NFL for CBS in the fall.”

For Super Bowl XLIV, NEP provided three trucks for CBS’ coverage. Weaver is the engineer in charge of the award-winning Supershooters, known throughout the industry as the gold standard in TV production, providing state-of-the-art mobile broadcast facilities, supported by the highest level of technical expertise and production services.

NEP Supershooters designs, builds and maintains its own facilities, creating customized mobile production units to match specific client needs and to provide complete customer satisfaction. It operates 20 high definition mobile units, five standard definition units along with two standard definition units based full-time in Hawaii. The Supershooters fleet is rounded out by the industry’s most diverse fleet of B units or support trucks that provide everything from cables to work space to equipment for editing, graphics and effects audio mixing.

For Super Bowl XLIV, NEP provided trucks for the CBS coverage. Weaver served as the engineer-in-charge of the mobile broadcast services for the game broadcast, bringing a high level of technical expertise and overseeing production services.

Originally from Oil City, Pa., Weaver came to Clarion with one intention, to go into broadcasting. He had worked for Venango Video in Oil City, gaining some early communication background before coming to college.

“I came to Clarion because it had a strong, hands-on communication program,” said Weaver.

Dr. Al Larson and the late Dr. Henry Fuego helped me to succeed. I was a teaching assistant for Dr. Larson.”

Weaver worked for TV5, doing a great deal of sports coverage, the ALF Parade, and many television shows. Graduating with a degree in communication in 1995, Weaver spent three years as a freelancer doing audio and video work for a variety of companies.

In 1997, Weaver joined ESPN for three years. His work was recognized in 1998 with a National Sports Emmy in the Technical Team Remote category for his work on the ESPN Summer X Games.

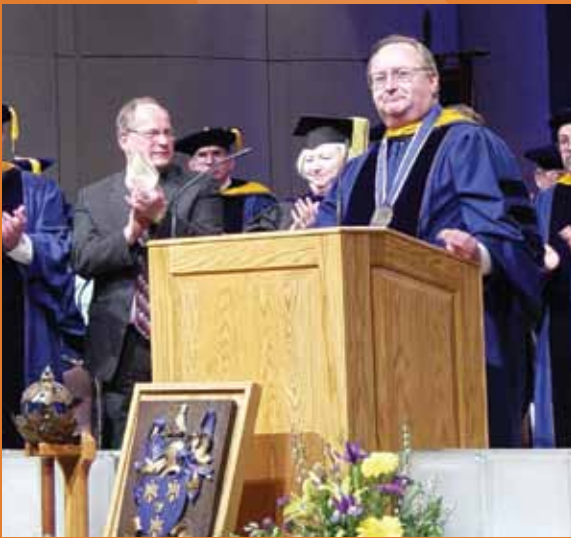

Weaver was hired by NEP Broadcasting, the leading international provider of outsourced teleproduction services critical to the delivery of live sports and entertainment events, in 2000.

“I am happy where I am,” said Weaver. “I am on the bleeding edge of technology. Many of the things people see now I tested many years ago. We are now venturing into 3-D telecasts, expanding our reliance on hard drive based technology, as opposed to video tape, and continuing to improve our audio and communications capabilities.”

Weaver resides in Bluemount, Va., with his wife, Eileen (Withey '93, M.S. '95), and daughter, Emily, born September 2008. Eileen was the Outstanding Graduate Student in communication in 1995. She is currently working for Human Technology Inc., McLean, Va., as a program manager, overseeing her team’s design, development and implementation of traditional and technology-based training curriculums for various federal agencies including the Federal Aviation Administration, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and U.S. Census.

The Clarion University Foundation, Inc. provides $4.2 million in annual support to Clarion University, while the university funds the foundation $282,265 in support of its operation, according to a report by Harry Tripp, vice president for student and university affairs, to the Clarion University Council of Trustees.

It is a return that includes scholarships and grants, campus activities and programs and fundraising and support services. The university's portion includes facilities costs, support services and administrative overhead.

Arnold Avenue Named To Honor Trustee

A twelve-year campaign to honor one of the founding trustees of Clarion University by a current trustee recently came to fruition with the renaming of Ninth Avenue in Clarion Borough, to Arnold Avenue.

Trustee Dr. Syed R. Ali-Zaidi of Shippensburg, Pa., championed the recognition of George W. Arnold (1820-1907) after his research showed Arnold played a pivotal role in the birth of what is now Clarion University of Pennsylvania.

The street was named Arnold Avenue in the past, according to historical maps, but was changed at some point to Ninth Avenue. The street's main occupants are Clarion University buildings such as Founder's Hall, Eagle Commons, Carrier Hall, and Still Hall.

Seven Receive Equity Awards

Seven individuals were recognized with awards when Clarion University concluded its observance of Equity Week at its 15th Annual Equity Dinner and Awards Ceremony.

The award recipients included: 2009 Equity Award—Dr. Robert Girvan, professor of sociology; Special Equity Leadership Award: Dr. Joseph P. Grunenwald, president; Special Equity Award: guest speaker Florence Shutsy-Reynolds and the WASP; Outstanding Student Award: Jermaine Merrill of Daisytown, Pa., a senior art/communication major; Outstanding Faculty Award: Dr. Sandra Trejos, professor of economics; Outstanding Supporter Award: Geovanni Miller of Pittsburgh, Pa., a senior sociology/psychology major; and Outstanding Community Award: Betty McKisson of Strattanville, Pa., a certified registered nurse practitioner (CRNP), now the operator of her own wellness clinic in Clarion and who previously worked at Keeling Health Center.

Clarion University President Joseph Grunenwald received the Director's Award from the Robert D. Lynch Student Leadership Development Institute (SLDI) of the Pennsylvania Black Conference on Higher Education. The award was presented at the organization's 23rd annual conference held in Altoona, Pa. SLDI Director Albert Jones said Grunenwald was selected for the award for his many years of support for SLDI and students in their pursuit to become future leaders.

Printer Changes Saving Money

Clarion University is looking for budget savings one printer cartridge at a time. Printer cartridges, the type used in all desktop printers, appear to be a small budget item when purchasing decisions are being made. Clarion University discovered that on a large scale the commonly used product results in thousands of dollars in purchases each year, leading to an effort to curb the expense by moving to centralized print devices.

Led by President Joseph

Grunenwald, the administrative offices in Carrier Hall are showing the way for campus. Most all of the desktop/personal printers, including those in the president's office, have been removed. A Ricoh central printer/copier/scanner, for use by the entire floor has replaced the personal printers. One centralized networked printer will serve as backup per department.

Rein Pold, director of purchasing, reported that there were roughly 540 print devices (mostly Hewlett Packard) on campus, which used $60,000 a year in print cartridges. Clarion spends $12-15,000 per year to purchase printers and an additional $4-5,000 per year to maintain the devices. The cost to print from these devices is $.06 to .12 per black and white copy and $.15 to .32 per color copy.

During 2009, a switchover started. Ricoh Equipment installed 27 color/black and white and 44 black and white only copiers on campus. The copy volume during the first year for these 71 machines was almost six million black and white copies and 250,000 color copies. Factoring in the cost of toner, maintenance and other supplies, the cost per copy was $.03 to .035 per black and white copy and $.08 to .09 per color copy.

Todhunter Receives Honorary Degree At Commencement

Four hundred and thirty-seven Clarion University students received their degrees and Neil Todhunter, retired president of UPMC Northwest, received an honorary Doctor of Public Service degree, during Clarion University's Fall 2009 commencement ceremonies, Dec. 19. Awarded during the ceremony were 275 bachelor's degrees, 148 master's degrees and 14 associate degrees. Ann Vogan of Fertigs, Pa., who received a Bachelor of Science in Rehabilitative Sciences degree, was the student speaker.

Barnes Selected To Participate In Genome Institute

Dr. William Barnes, professor of biology, was selected to collaborate with the Department of Energy's Joint Genome Institute (JGI) in The Undergraduate Research Program in Microbial Genome Annotation. One of the major initiatives at JGI is the GEBA project (A Genomic Encyclopedia for Bacteria and Archaea), which aims to sequence 100 bacterial and archaeal genomes based on the phylogenetic positions of organisms in the tree of life. The long-term goal of the GEBA project is to generate reference genomes for every major and minor group of bacteria and archaea. That could represent something on the order of 5,000 genomes.

Williams Observing 80th Anniversary Of Graduation

Margaret (Summerville '30) Williams will look back nostalgically when Clarion University holds its convocation in May 2010. That annual event will mark the 80th anniversary of her graduation from Clarion.

Now 99-years-old, Williams lives in Natrona Heights, Pa., with her son and daughter-in-law, Joseph and Kathy Baird. Her grandson, Eli Baird ('01), received his degree in elementary education from Clarion and teaches fourth grade for Kentucky Avenue School in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Originally from Corsica, Pa., Williams said, "My father and two of my brothers were teachers, it seemed a natural progression for me to be a teacher too."

Because her secondary education was in a one-room schoolhouse, Corsica Union, Williams was able to skip two grades and enroll in the then Clarion State Teachers College at 16 years of age. College degree programs were only two years at that time and she graduated in 1930 at the age of 18.

She lived off-campus both years, spending the first year as a companion to a woman living on Fifth Ave.; and her second as a babysitter and housekeeper for a dentist, who lived on Wood Street. In between classes and her off-campus duties, she found time to participate in Art Club, serving as its president, Hostess Club, Y.W.C.A., Vested Choir and basketball. She recalls fondly, music professor Harry Bland.

Following her graduation, Williams accepted a position in Har-Brack, now Highlands, School District. Over a 25-year teaching career, she taught everything from kindergarten to eighth grade.

Because of state regulations at that time, Williams had to give up teaching when she married John Baird in 1943. When those restrictions changed, she returned to the classroom in 1965.

John Baird died in 1978 and Margaret later married the late M. Moore Williams and resided in Houston, Texas, from 1981-2008.

Williams returned to Clarion several times over the last 80 years for class reunions, her grandson's graduation in 2001, and most recently during the summer of 2009.

"There have been great improvements and new buildings," she noted, but was pleased to find that Hart Chapel was still untouched among the buildings from her time period on campus.

Williams ensured her legacy by having a brick including her name and graduation year placed at the Gemmell Student Complex. Her brick is the oldest placed by a living alumna.

Teaching runs deep in Williams' family. Son, James Baird, and his wife, Rosalyn, both retired as teachers in Fairbanks, Alaska; son John Baird's wife, Linda, was a lifelong teacher in Coffeeville, Miss., where they continue to reside; son Joseph, an engineer, never formally taught, but thought he was at his best when giving instruction in work-related procedures, such as quality control; and grandson Eli's wife, Melissa, is also a teacher.

Boyer Energizes Students With Technology

Pincipal Ted Boyer ('92) saw firsthand last year how a big jolt of technology could academically energize his seventh-graders at A.I. du Pont Middle School in Greenville, Del.

"We had the highest amount of academic growth last year among the seventh-grade students during formal assessments," he said. "Students were more actively engaged in the instruction process."

Boyer expects even bigger gains this year when hundreds of laptop computers and other electronic teaching tools are spread school-wide to include the sixth and eighth grades, as A.I. duPont Middle completes the next step in a program that taps into a $300,000 federal grant to engage students through teacher training and technology.

The Red Clay Consolidated School District applied for the grant. The program is run by a nonprofit, independent business unit of the University of Missouri that started with 12 classrooms about 10 years ago and has grown to 3,500 classrooms in 10 states and Australia.

Because it started in Missouri, the program is known as enhancing Missouri's Instructional Networked Teaching Strategies, or eMINTS.

Although schools that run the gamut from public to private use the program, about 70 percent of them have high populations of economically disadvantaged children because the grants they apply for often stipulate that the funding should be earmarked for that purpose.

"That was the case at A.I. duPont Middle," said Carolyn Zogby, director of curriculum and instruction at Red Clay.

The program shows teachers how to use real-world teaching strategies that students can relate to through technology.

Two eMINTS representatives came to Delaware to train teachers and others in June so they could pass that knowledge on to others. A.I. duPont Middle School librarian Susan White attended the session, and she will help train the sixth- and eighth-grade teachers this year.

Technology for the seventh-graders last year included a laptop computer for each of the 160 students and 10 teachers, wireless access and interactive whiteboards in two classrooms that all students could have access to on a rotating basis, Boyer said.

All teachers in the grade also received LCD projectors for their classrooms. And all of the teachers who didn't get the interactive whiteboards received an AirLiner wireless slate that works like a large handheld Etch A Sketch board and allows whatever the teacher writes on it to be transcribed simultaneously onto a screen in the classroom, he said.

Boyer said the school started with the seventh grade last year because it was the largest class.

The district expects funding to provide the same technology tools for the sixth- and eighth-graders this year.

'Scholarship' More Than One Meaning

One of the interesting things about the English language is that a word can have more than one meaning. Take for example "scholarship." After a bit of Internet surfing I found the following definitions:

1. a sum of money or other aid granted to a student, because of merit, need, etc. to pursue his or her studies.
2. learning; knowledge acquired by study; the academic attainments of a scholar.

RON LUCAS '82
Alumni Board of Directors

So, why talk about scholarship? As a member of the Alumni Association Board of Directors, I have the privilege of being a member of the Finance and Scholarship Committee. In that capacity I have an opportunity to help provide scholarships (from the first definition) to students at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. In these days of a slowly recovering economy and ever increasing college costs, these "sums of money or other aid" have become a major contributor in allowing students to attend college and pursue their scholarship (from the second definition).

On a personal note, both my son, Gregory, and I have been recipients of scholarships. In my case, a modest departmental scholarship came at a critical time in my college career and literally made the difference as to whether I had textbooks that semester or not. Gregory's scholarship has made his studies at Bloomsburg University less of a financial burden on him my wife and me. Because of the generosity I experienced when I was a student at Clarion those many years ago, several years ago I decided that I wanted to provide a scholarship at my alma mater. I had many reasons for wanting to do this. First, I wanted to repay the generosity I had experienced as a student. Second, I wanted to do something for students that were in similar circumstances to those I experienced—i.e., less than affluent. Finally, I wanted to do something that would continue to help students now and into the future. Endowing a scholarship allowed me to accomplish all of my goals.

Unfortunately, there is never enough scholarship money available to help all of the deserving students. To help bolster scholarships at Clarion University, the foundation has a number of initiatives and events planned. Recently, a $5-million, multi-year initiative has begun to support honors, athletic and unrestricted scholarships. The goal of this initiative is to establish and enhance scholarships that will provide long-term support for students in these groups. On Saturday, April 24, the 2010 Extravaganza & Alumni Association Distinguished Awards event will be held at the Duquesne Club in Pittsburgh. This evening of entertainment and celebration will provide financial support to the various scholarships provided by the Alumni Association.

Please consider supporting scholarships at Clarion University through one of these planned activities or by making a personal gift to the university. When you give to Clarion, you are not giving to the university itself but rather to the students. When you give to support scholarships, you not only give to current students but to future "generations" of students.

Together we can support scholarships at Clarion University and thereby support our students' scholarship, now and into the future.

MCDONALD

McDonald Promoted To Administrative Intern

Sean McDonald ('97) was promoted to administrative intern at Gainesville Middle School in Woodbridge, Va.

He graduated from Clarion University with a degree in English. He credits Clarion University's education opportunities for much of his success. He continued his education at George Mason University, earning degrees in reading and educational leadership.

Prior to his new position, McDonald was hired as a teacher on administrative assignment. He also spent time as a reading specialist, where he redesigned the reading strategies program to make it more appealing to students who needed reading support.

On Nov. 27, 2009, McDonald was featured in an article in Bull Run Observer newspaper, Manassas, Va. In the article by Jan Davis, McDonald stated that he knew from an early age that education is key. He also mentions his appreciation for the teachers, professors and administrators that influenced him in the past and present. He decided to give back through teaching.

"Each one, reach one, teach one," McDonald is quoted in the article.

As an administrative intern, McDonald supervises related arts and encore teachers. "I assist with professional learning, team planning and developing instructional strategies, monitoring assessments and working with students with special needs," he explained in the Bull Run Observer article.

He sees a lot of success through Gainesville Middle School. "It is great to be part of an innovative team, which is helping students rise to the next level of excellence in their achievement," he is quoted in the article.

McDonald lives in Woodbridge, and spends much of his time with his wife, Antoinette (Parker '00), and their children, Seani and Sean. Together, they enjoy traveling as a family.

McDonald continues to move forward and aim toward achieving excellence. In his new position, he plans to learn as much as possible in instructional leadership. In the future, he hopes to be appointed to U.S. Secretary of Education.

Clarion Honors 131 Athletes, Golf Team, Girvan, Grunenwald And Thomas

Clarion University honored a record 131 scholar athletes, three individuals and the men's golf team during the 20th Annual Bob Carlson Scholar Athlete Luncheon held in the Gemmell Student Complex Multi-Purpose Room, Friday, Feb. 5.

The total number of student athletes recognized represents 39 percent of Clarion University students participating in athletics, the highest mark since the luncheon was started in 1991. The cumulative Quality-Point Average (QPA) for all student athletes for the previous two semesters was 2.91.

"This is an opportunity to say what is really good about our university and we know it," said Clarion University President Joseph Grunenwald. "We are celebrating good athletes and good people. By inviting a faculty member who support you in class and in athletics it demonstrates they understand and appreciate what you do."

Receiving special recognition from Clarion University's Student Athlete Advisory Committee (SAAC) were: Dr. Robert Girvan, Faculty of the Year Award, and President Grunenwald for his contributions to Clarion University athletics. Chad Thomas received the Extra Effort Award.

Girvan, a professor of sociology, received his award from Rich Eckert, president of the Student Athlete Advisory Committee. The award is voted upon by Clarion University's student athletes.

Athletic Director Dave Katis ('85, '88) presented the award to President Grunenwald on behalf of SAAC and the entire athletic department for Grunenwald's support for athletics during his distinguished career as a faculty member and administrator. Grunenwald has announced he will retire in June.

Katis also presented the Extra Effort Award to Chad Thomas from Clarion University's Office of Student and University Affairs. Thomas helps intercollegiate athletics in a wide-ranging fashion from team building to helping with pre-game setups for football and basketball games.

The men's golf team, coached by Marty Rinker, received the rotating Carlson Cup, named in honor of former Clarion University Athletic Director Bob Carlson, presented to the team that has shown the greatest improvement in QPA during the last calendar year.

The luncheon recognizes student athletes for achieving a cumulative QPA of 3.20 or higher; or had two consecutive semesters of a 3.2 QPA or higher; or had two consecutive semesters of a 3.2 QPA or higher in the spring and fall terms of 2008. Freshmen and transfer students who achieve a 3.2 QPA or higher in the fall term of 2009 are also eligible for the award. Each athlete achieving this level is asked to bring a faculty member or university individual who has influenced their career to the luncheon.

Dr. Kevin Roth (MBA '81), faculty athletic representative, introduced the athletes, who received a certificate from Grunenwald and Katis, and introduced their guest.

Orozco Named Athletics Development Officer

Federico “Fred” Orozco is the new athletics development officer for the Clarion University Foundation, Inc. He started his new position Feb. 15, succeeding Ken Nellis, who left Clarion for another position.

“I will be seeking major gifts through the Clarion University Foundation, Inc. to support the Clarion University athletic programs,” said Orozco. “I am looking forward to learning about support from the community for the foundation and how I can enhance this support.”

A native of Arizona, Orozco moved to Pennsylvania in 2008. It was a return home for his wife, Anita, an Ellwood City native.

“I like non-profit fundraising and I am comfortable in that arena,” said Orozco. “This opportunity to support Clarion University presented itself and I felt it was a good fit for me.”

Orozco reports that media relations and marketing are a family trait. He is descendent from Mexican immigrants and his grandfather was the first Spanish speaking radio announcer in Tucson, Ariz.

“He was a natural at it,” Orozco said about his grandfather. “He got to meet Elvis Presley and was friends with Senator Barry Goldwater. I never had an interest in being in radio, but I liked the media and I still like the environment.”

Orozco worked in general broadcasting before going to the University of Arizona at Tucson, where he earned a bachelor’s degree in media relations with a minor in marketing. Following his graduation, he was marketing and promotions director for Journal Broadcast Group from 1994-98; development director for United Way & Big Brothers Big Sisters, 1998-2001; executive director of the Tucson Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, 2001-05; and director of media relations for VMS VOICETRAK, 2005-08; all in Tucson, Ariz.

In these positions, he managed donor relations, event planning, media and public relations, market research and analysis, event planning, budget preparation/administration, legislative affairs and leadership.

“The media changed and I changed too,” he explained. “When I joined United Way & Big Brothers Big Sisters that started my path with non-profits.”

The Orozco’s reside in Petrolia, Pa. Anita works in human resources for Sonneborn in Petrolia. They have two grown children, Matthew of Los Angeles, Calif., and Jenna of Tuscon, and two children at home, Jacinto, seven, and Benjamin, three.

OROZCO

‘Evening Peace’ Premiere Benefits Scholarships

The premiere of the original composition “Evening Peace” brought a night of outstanding music to Clarion University while benefitting students enrolled in the Honors Program. The concert, held Nov. 13, 2009, at the Walter Hart Chapel, marked the opening of a scholarship fundraising campaign to benefit the Honors Program.

The Clarion University Honors Program, initiated in 1986, has become a motivator in the university community for producing scholars and leaders. It provides an academic opportunity for students whose intellectual and creative interests and abilities are beyond conventional university offerings, and gives students the opportunity to enrich their education through specially designed courses and extracurricular involvement.

“This was a good beginning for the campaign,” said Brooke Murray, assistant director of alumni relations and annual fund for the Clarion University Foundation, Inc. “We were pleased with the support for both the premiere of such an outstanding composition and for the Honors Program.”

“Evening Peace” is the third collaboration between Dr. P. Brent Register, professor of music at Clarion University and assistant director of the Honors Program, and artist John Digby. The composition is a song cycle using text from 10 poems by the eighth-century Chinese poet, Tu Fu. Digby’s translations, or “improvisations” as he prefers, of these poems reflect a variety of moods, metaphor, innuendo and often delve into a place of shadows before resurfacing back into light.

‘Fly, Eagles, Fly’

Endowed Scholarship Campaign

Clarion has a well deserved reputation for helping students realize their dreams. In continuing the tradition, the “Fly, Eagles, Fly” Endowed Scholarship Campaign is currently underway. The “Fly, Eagles, Fly” campaign, while designed to encourage scholarship support for all Clarion students, is focused on providing opportunities for students committed to the rigorous professional preparation of the Honors Program and accomplished student athletes who participate in Golden Eagle athletics.

Building on our reputation, Clarion University is preparing for the future because we expect to be around, doing what we do, for generations to come. We plan to be here another hundred years and more, perpetuating the same values you now appreciate and support.

You can help! A scholarship is a public affirmation of the value of education and serves as a reward for hard work and academic achievement. More than ever before, scholarship aid is a critical determining factor in a student’s university choice. For those that choose Clarion, scholarship opportunities provide a solid foundation for students to build careers and prepare for their life’s work.

You can become one of many to support an existing fund or establish a new endowment fund with Clarion University Foundation, Inc. You can create an endowment in your own name or you can memorialize a loved one or someone else who has strongly impacted your life for good, such as a teacher, a coach, a spouse, parent, child or a trusted friend.

Endowments can be established with Clarion University Foundation, Inc. now, during life. You can use cash, securities and real estate – almost anything of value. Or you can arrange for an endowment to be established through your will at the time of death.

Some people do both. They establish an endowment now so they can watch it grow and

Half Scholarship Endowment	$250,000

Or you can help with a gift of any amount to an existing scholarship endowment.

Commitments can extend over a five-year period and may also have tax benefits for you.

enjoy the satisfaction of seeing their fund benefit others. They may add to it periodically and possibly encourage family members and friends to get involved. Then, through their wills, they make provision for a final and often larger contribution.

One reason for establishing an endowment now is to have in place a means whereby friends and loved ones can tangibly express their thoughtfulness during bereavement. Being able to give to something permanent that represents your ongoing influence can mean a lot to them.

When you establish an endowment, you accomplish several things: You express confidence in the future of Clarion University; you create a lasting legacy; you encourage present and future leadership; and you make a difference!

DO IT NOW

With a little planning, you can fund a scholarship endowment now and can enjoy watching it grow and benefit Clarion students.

LATER

While it may not be feasible to start a fund now, your estate will likely have enough resources at your passing.

OR NOW and LATER

Start it now, add to it over time and make a final gift through your estate plan.

“FLY, EAGLES, FLY” AND LEAVE BEHIND YOUR LEGACY.

Association Board of Directors

The path to Clarion University's future is paved in part by its generous supporters. Because of your support last year, more talented students were able to achieve their educational goals with the aid of scholarships. We were able to provide better resources to encourage our faculty to pursue research opportunities, and continue to build on our academic reputation and strengthen our athletic programs.

Our boards have made a commitment to supporting Clarion University annually, and we are encouraging the support of our alumni and friends. For all who have already made a gift to the annual fund, we extend our heartfelt gratitude. For those of you who have not, please consider joining us this year. It's a great time to begin!

THANK YOU For Exceeding The Kresge Challenge!

On June 30, we met and exceeded a challenge from the Kresge Foundation – a national, private foundation – raising $3.4 million toward the construction of a new $34 million Science and Technology Center at Clarion University. We received a $400,000 grant from Kresge for meeting the challenge grant. The new Science and Technology Center replaced Peirce Science Center and was dedicated in January 2010. The new building is a model in sustainability and a perfect environment for students to learn and take advantage of research opportunities.

Clarion Fund Contributions

Contributions to the Clarion Fund are critical to the university because they are unrestricted gifts that can be used where they are most needed. Gifts to the Clarion Fund provide resources to help recruit top faculty, create scholarship programs and enhance the intellectual life of the university. These gifts help Clarion University to meet unexpected challenges, take advantage of unique opportunities and meet the day-to-day challenges of modern higher education.
