

Home News Features A&E Op-Ed Sports
Staff

Best study spots on campus; Edinboro University edition

FEB 25 WRITTEN BY ALEXANDER BEATTY - STAFF WRITER

Whether you need complete silence or a little noise, the Edinboro campus has plenty of spots for students to study despite the continued closure of the Baron-Forness Library.

Here are some of the best spots on campus from the student body.

Noise:

Home News Features A&E Op-Ed Sports
Staff

- Some tables on the middle floor have a nice view of the lake.
- Ross Hall
 - The benches outside of the classroom provide just enough noise from students walking through.
 - Across from the POD Express provides noise from the sky bridge.
- Van Houten Marketplace
- Temporary Library – There are available printers, along with several student work stations and computers.
- The field between Doucette Hall and Loveland Hall
 - On nice weather days, it's a lovely place to read and provides a nice combination of nature noise and silence.
- The Highlands Residence Halls common areas/lobby
 - Whether it be the nooks by the windows or the sofas in the middle, there's plenty of comfort and space to stretch out and learn in your own style, not too far from your dorm room.

Silence:

- The second and third floor of Pogue Student Center
 - It's quiet and empty for most of the day and evening.
- Student lounge on the first floor of William P. Alexander Music Center
 - It's small but nice.
 - Also functions as small library.
- Student room on the ground floor of Hendricks Hall
- Student lounge in Compton Hall

Home News Features A&E Op-Ed Sports

Staff

- It's pretty quiet as the day goes on.
- Top floor of McNerney Hall
- An empty space with very few distractions.

The third floor of the Frank G Pogue Student Center, the Cafe in Pogue, and Ross Hall seem to be the most popular spots to study on campus. Both locations offer quiet and noisier spots to study. Since each student has their own mindset and unique way of learning information, it's vital to have a wide variety of learning/studying spaces for everyone to get a fair chance at absorbing their education and applying it.

Always remember to give your eyes and brain a break – cramming information isn't beneficial. Breaks increase energy and the ability to focus. Studying may be important, but your health is more important.

Alexander Beatty, Staff Writer | @EdinboroNow

EDINBORO UNIVERSITY

Alexander Beatty - Staff Writer

Alexander Beatty (he/they) is a junior Journalism student at PennWest Edinboro with minors in Communication Studies and Digital Media Production. They are a staff writer of PennWest Edinboro's student newspaper, The Spectator. He can be reached at ab192298@pennwest.edu.

< An account of a 25-year-old grad student

Oscars 2022: The good, the bad, and the well deserved >